A Letter from Gilbert Potter, of Huntington, of the 10th instant, which was read yesterday, was again read, and is in the words following, to wit :

"Huntington, December 10, 1775.

"Sir : This you will receive by Major Brush, who is appointed by the Committee of this town to lay before the Congress the state of the town; and, as there is a number of commissions wanted, should be glad they may be sent up by the Major, for the following gentlemen, viz : For the Second Company : Jonathan Titus, Captain; Joshua Rogers, First-Lieutenant; Thomas Brush, Second-Lieutenant. For the Third Company : Joel Scudder, Captain; Nathaniel Buffett, First-Lieutenant; Epinetus Smith, Second-Lieutenant; John Heart, Ensign.

"And as Mr. Brush is acquainted with the state of the town, as to their slackness in military preparations, as also that we have great reason to believe all methods are used by our neighbours to make them indifferent in this great contest, we not only beg your advice, but assistance; for it is my opinion if there is not a sufficient number of men immediately sent to effectually subdue Queen's County, and to intimidate the people amongst us, a great many from here will be in a little better ruffell than the Rebels of Queen's County, which we have great reason to believe is making interest with our slaves and other servants.

"Sir, I should have wrote to the President, but hearing of your not making a House. You will be pleased to communicate this to Congress.

"I would further add, I have exerted myself in my station; but if nothing is done by your House, I must be obliged to desist. But as to myself, as an individual, I am determined to live and die free.

"I am, sir, your most humble servant,

"GILBERT POTTER.

"To John S. Hobart, Esq., in Provincial Congress."

"The said deponents further saith, that they saw Jacob Nostran, who told them, the said deponents, that there was a great quantity of powder, ball, small-arms, and some cannon, which came from the Asia, man-of-war, with the Lieutenant of the man-of-war and some other officers, and landed at Rockaway; and that it was carried to Captain Hulate's, who came from on board the Asia with the said stores, and that he, the said Jacob Nostran, mounted guard over the said military stores the night before.

"And the said deponents further saith, that they were at the house of Isaac Denton, Sen., at Rockaway, who told them, the said deponents, that there was a vast quantity of powder and ball, and a plenty of small-arms, and some cannon at Captain Hulate's, which came from on board the Asia, man-of-war, and that Captain Hulate and the Lieutenant of the man-of-war came with it; and that he, the said Denton, had some of the powder, which cost him nothing, and that whenever they wanted more they could have it by making application for it; and that he, the said Isaac Denton, mounted guard over the said military stores the night before; and that he, the said Denton, would fight against the country while he could see a damned Whig left.

"And the said deponents further saith, that they saw Benjamin Eldred, and a number of others, who told them much to the same effect.

"The said deponents further saith, that on the 2d instant they saw William Nostran, of Hempstead, who told them, the said deponents, that the Captains of the several Companies met at Captain Hulate's on Thursday last, to take, each of them, a quantity of powder to distribute in their several Companies, and that they expected a number of people from Connecticut to land at Huntington and march amongst them; and that upon the arrival of the Connecticut people, they expected intelligence would be given by some person from Huntington to John Hulate, Esq., and that he, the said John Hulate, would carry intelligence immediately to Hempstead, and that there they would fire a cannon to alarm the country in general to oppose them.

"The said deponents further saith, that they saw William Nostran and John Smith, of Hempstead, who told them that there was a man who belonged on board the Asia, called a Gunner, left amongst them to work the cannon. On Monday next they were to meet, to agree where to place their cannon. And further saith not.

"SAMUEL NOSTRAN,

"ISAAC LOOSE.

"SAMUEL NOSTRAN.

"Sworn to before me, "JESSE BRUSH."

And on reading the motion, or introduction, a second time, Mr. Hobart moved, and was seconded by Mr. Gilbert Livingston, in the words following, to wit:

I move for the following amendment to Mr. Smith's motion, viz: that after the words "Governour Tryon," the remainder be struck out, and the following be substituted in its stead:

"Paper of the 4th instant, containing his sentiments on the present convulsed state of this country, and addressed to the inhabitants of New-York, and express the sense of the Colony upon the same, in the following Resolves :

"Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that none of the people of this Colony have withdrawn their allegiance from His Majesty, or desire to become independent of the Crown of Great Britain, or to change the ancient form of Government, under which this Colony hath grown up from its infancy to its present state.

"Resolved, secondly, That this Colony has, in conjunction with the other United Colonies, taken up arms, not to oppose that just and equal rule to which, by the British Constitution, and their respective established forms of Government, they were subject, but solely for the defence of their most undoubted rights and privileges, against the arbitrary and tyrannical encroachments of His Majesty's Ministers.

"Resolved, thirdly, That though, for the same valuable purpose, this Colony in conjunction with the other United Colonies, had recourse to the appointment of Committees and Congresses, for the more orderly and effectual redress of their numerous and heavy grievances, yet it is by no means the desire or design of its inhabitants to disuse, much less to oppose or obstruct the ordinary course of Government or legislation; but that, on the contrary, they highly esteem, and will not willingly cede their right of being represented in General Assembly.

"Resolved, fourthly, That this Congress are of opinion, that the neglect to convene the Legislature of the Colony, since the last winter session, and the probability that the ordinary season for their sitting will pass without a session, furnishes, at this critical juncture, ground of uneasiness to the good people of this Colony.

"Resolved, fifthly, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that there is not the least danger of insult or interruption to either of the branches of the Legislature, should an Assembly be called, but that, on the contrary, it would be extremely agreeable to the inhabitants of this Colony, to the end, not only that the ordinary business of the country may be despatched, but also that their sense may be expressed, as well by their Representatives in Assembly as in Congress, on the present unhappy controversy between Great Britain and the United Colonies."

Debates arose on the said motion for an amendment, and after long arguments thereon, and the question put on Mr. Hobart's motion, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, to wit :

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.
2 Dutchess.	2 King's.
2 Tryon.	—
2 Westchester.	2 votes.
4 New-York.	—
2 Suffolk.	Orange divided.

Colonel McDougall informed the Congress that Captain Ledyard, with his Company, (which is incomplete,) is in New-York, and has been of use in sundry duties here since he came down from the Fort in the Highlands, and requested the opinion of this Congress, whether he should send him with his Company up to the Fort, or detain him here. Thereupon, Ordered, That Colonel McDougall detain Captain Ledyard here, or give him such other directions as he shall think proper.

Mr. Hobart, on application, obtained leave of absence, the County of Suffolk having a representation without him.

A Letter from Colonel Mulford, dated the 9th instant, mentioning the places appointed for the rendezvous of his Regiment, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit :

"Easthampton, December 9, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: Your letter of 28th October have received, and according to your order shall give orders to my regiment to be equipped and ready to march to the place of rendezvous on any alarm. As the situation of the regiment is such that it will be ill-convenient to have the rendezvous at one place, think it best to have it at two places, namely: Southampton town, and at Captain John Hulbert's, in Bridgehampton.

"I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
 "DAVID MULFORD.

"To Colonel Nathaniel Woodhull, President of the Provincial Congress, in New-York."

The Congress then resumed the consideration of the amendments to Mr. Smith's motion of the 8th inst., which were moved for and are contained in Mr. Hobart's motion of yesterday, and the same were read; and being read paragraph by paragraph, the first paragraph being read, is in the words following, to wit :

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that none of the people of this Colony have withdrawn their allegiance from His Majesty, or desire to become independent of the Crown of Great Britain, or to change the ancient form of Government, under which this Colony hath grown up from its infancy to its present state.

The second paragraph being read, is in the words following, to wit :

Resolved, secondly, That this Colony has, in conjunction with the other United Colonies, taken up arms, not to oppose that just and equal rule to which, by the British Constitution, and their respective established forms of Government, they were subject, but solely for the defence of their most undoubted rights and privileges, against the arbitrary and tyrannical encroachments of His Majesty's Ministers.

Mr. Roosevelt then moved, and was seconded, for the following amendment, to wit :

That all that part of the first proposed Resolution, which is from the word "Majesty" to the end, and also the whole of the proposed second Resolution, be obliterated, and the following substituted in its stead, to wit :

"Resolved, secondly, That the supposed present "turbulent state" of this Colony arises not from the want of a proper attachment to our Prince, and the establishment in the illustrious House of Hanover, nor from a desire to become independent of the British Crown, "or a spirit of opposition" to that just and equal rule to which, by the British Constitution and our ancient and established form of Government, we are subject, but solely from the inroads made on both by oppressive acts of the British Parliament, devised for enslaving His Majesty's liege subjects in the American Colonies, and the hostile attempts of the Ministry to carry those acts into execution."

And the same being read a second time, was unanimously agreed to, and ordered accordingly; therefore,

Resolved, unanimously, That it is the opinion of this Congress that none of the good people of this Colony have withdrawn their allegiance from His Majesty.

Resolved, secondly, That the supposed present "turbulent state" of this Colony arises not from the want of a proper attachment to our Prince, and the establishment in the illustrious House of Hanover, nor from a desire to become independent of the British Crown, or "a spirit of opposition" to that just and equal rule to which, by the British Constitution and our ancient and established form of Government, we are subject, but solely from the inroads made on both by oppressive acts of the British Parliament, devised for enslaving His Majesty's liege subjects in the American Colonies, and the hostile attempts of the Ministry to carry those acts into execution.

The third paragraph being read, is in the words following, to wit:

Resolved, thirdly, That though, for the same valuable purposes, this Colony, in conjunction with the other United Colonies, had recourse to the appointment of Committees and Congresses for the more orderly and effectual redress of their numerous grievances, yet it is by no means the desire or design of its inhabitants to disuse, much less to oppose or obstruct the ordinary course of Government or legislation, but that, on the contrary, they highly esteem and will not willingly cede their right of being represented in General Assembly.

Mr. Scott moved, and was seconded, that the words "for the same valuable purposes," and the words "Government or," be obliterated, and the words "and Congresses" transposed and placed before the word "Committees;" and the same was unanimously agreed to, and ordered accordingly.

Colonel McDougall then moved, and was seconded by Mr. Sands, that the words "on the contrary," and the words "and will not willingly cede," be obliterated; and the same was unanimously agreed to, and ordered accordingly.

The said third proposed Resolution, as thus amended, was again read, and agreed to, nem. con.; therefore,

Resolved, thirdly, That though this Colony, in conjunction with the other United Colonies, has had recourse to the appointment of Congresses and Committees, for the more orderly and effectual redress of their numerous and heavy grievances, yet it is by no means the desire or design of its inhabitants to disuse, much less to oppose or obstruct the ordinary course of legislation, but that they highly esteem their right of being represented in General Assembly.

The fourth proposed Resolution being read, Mr. Hobart moved, and was seconded, that the whole fourth paragraph be expunged. The same was unanimously agreed to, and ordered accordingly.

The fifth proposed Resolution being read, is in the words following, to wit:

Resolved, fifthly, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that there is not the least danger of insult or interruption to either of the branches of the Legislature, should an Assembly be called, but that, on the contrary, it would be extremely agreeable to the inhabitants of this Colony, to the end, not only that the ordinary business of the country may be despatched, but also that their sense may be expressed, as well by their Representatives in Assembly as in Congress, on the present unhappy controversy between Great Britain and the United Colonies.

Mr. Herring moved, and was seconded by Mr. Sands, for the following amendment, to wit: That all that part of the fifth paragraph, which follows the word "called," be obliterated.

Debates arose on the amendment moved by Mr. Herring; and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative, in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.

- 2 Ulster.

A Letter from John Jay, Esq., dated the 26th November last, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Philadelphia, November 26, 1775.

"SIR: I have the honour of transmitting to you the enclosed Resolutions of Congress, relative to the Island of Bermuda.

"We have not yet had the pleasure of hearing that you had made a House, and are not without some anxiety on that head. In a few days we shall write you collectively, and should be glad frequently to be informed of the state of the Province.

"The New-England exploit is much talked of, and conjectures are numerous as to the part the Convention will take relative to it. Some consider it as an ill compliment to the Government of the Province, and prophesy that you have too much Christian meekness to take any notice of it. For my own part, I do not approve of the feat, and think it neither argues much wisdom nor much bravery; at any rate, if it was to have been done, I wish our own people, and not strangers, had taken the liberty of doing it. I confess I am not a little jealous of the honour of the Province, and am persuaded that its reputation cannot be maintained without some little spirit being mingled with its prudence.

"I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

"JOHN JAY.

"To Colonel Nathaniel Woodhull, at New-York."

The Resolutions of the Continental Congress of the 22d of November, relative to the Island of Bermuda, and therein enclosed, were also read and filed, and are in the words following, to wit:

"In Congress, November 22, 1775.

"The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report from the Committee of the Whole, which was agreed to as follows:

"The Committee of the Whole, to whom were referred the several Petitions from the Island of Bermuda, representing the distress to which they were exposed by the Non-exportation Agreement, and praying to be relieved in such manner as the Congress may deem consistent with the safety of America, report that they have considered the same, and thereupon came to the following Resolutions:

"That the inhabitants of the Island of Bermuda appear friendly to the cause of America, and ought to be supplied with such and so great a quantity of the produce of these Colonies as may be necessary for their subsistence and home consumption; that, in the opinion of this Committee, they will annually require, for the purposes aforesaid, 72,000 bushels of Indian Corn, 2,000 barrels of Bread or Flour, 1,000 barrels of Beef or Pork, 2,100 bushels of Peas or Beans, and 300 tierces of Rice, and that they be permitted to export the same yearly.

"That the said inhabitants ought to pay for the above annual allowance in Salt; but it is not the design of this Resolution to exclude them from the privilege of receiving American produce, to any amount, in exchange for Arms, Ammunition, Saltpetre, Sulphur, and Field-Pieces, agreeably to a Resolution of Congress, passed the 15th of July last.

"That, to enable such of these Colonies, as can conveniently furnish the Island of Bermuda with the above-mentioned allowance, to divide whatever advantages may result therefrom, in proportion to their respective shares of the general expense, it is further the opinion of this Committee:

"That the Colony of South-Carolina supply them with 300 tierces of Rice.

"That the Colony of North-Carolina supply them with 16,000 bushels of Indian Corn, and 463 bushels of Peas or Beans.

"That the Colony of Virginia supply them with 36,000 bushels of Indian Corn, and 1,050 bushels of Peas or Beans.

"That the Colony of Maryland supply them with 20,000 bushels of Indian Corn, and 532 bushels of Peas or Beans.

"That the Colony of Pennsylvania supply them with 1,200 barrels of Flour or Bread, and 600 barrels of Beef or Pork.

"That the Colony of New-York supply them with 800 barrels of Flour or Bread, and 400 barrels of Beef or Pork.

"That the Conventions or Committees of Safety of the above-mentioned Colonies ought to superintend the said exportation, provide against frauds, and take care that, in exchanging the said commodities of Salt and Provisions, no undue advantage be taken by either party of their mutual wants. And, further, that no Vessel employed in this business ought to load without their permission; and that when they shall, in pursuance of these Resolutions, permit any of the said Vessels to load, they do give notice thereof to the Committee of Inspection of the County, City, or Town, where such Vessel shall load, and inform them that the same is done under the authority and by order of this Congress.

"Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing Resolutions be transmitted to the several Conventions, Assemblies, or Committees of Safety of the United Colonies, and to the Island of Bermuda; and that the inhabitants of the latter be informed that the Congress will afford them other necessities, such as Lumber, Soap, and Candles, whenever the quality and quantity of each of those articles, used in the Island, shall be ascertained.

"That Edward Stiles be permitted, under the direction of the Committee of Safety of the Colony of Pennsylvania, to send the Brig Sea-Nymph, Samuel Stobel, Master, with 4,000 bushels of Indian Corn, 300 barrels of Flour, 100 barrels of Bread, 20 barrels of Pork, 8 barrels of Beef, 30 boxes of Soap, and 15 barrels of Apples, to Bermuda, for the immediate supply of the inhabitants; and that the said cargo be considered as part of the annual allowance aforesaid, for the year ensuing.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

Mr. Scott moved, and was seconded, that a Resolution be entered into, in the words following, and added to those agreed on this forenoon, to wit:

Resolved, nevertheless, That it is the opinion of this Congress that nothing of a salutary nature can be expected from the separate declaration of the sense of this Colony on the Resolution of the House of Commons on the 20th February last; and that as the motion whereon the scheme was grounded was confessedly framed to disunite the Colonies, it would be highly dangerous to, and totally inconsistent with the glorious plan of American Union, should this Colony express their separate sense on the above-mentioned supposed conciliatory proposal on the part of Great Britain.

Debates arose on the said motion, and the question put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.

Therefore, Resolved, nevertheless, That it is the opinion of this Congress that nothing of a salutary nature can be expected from a separate declaration of the sense of this Colony on the Resolution of the House of Commons of the 20th February last; and that as the motion whereon the same was grounded, was confessedly framed to disunite the Colonies, it would be highly dangerous to, and totally inconsistent with the glorious plan of American Union, should this Colony express their separate sense on the above-mentioned supposed conciliatory proposal on the part of Great Britain.

Colonel McDougall moved, and was seconded, that a Resolution be entered into in the words following, to wit:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that this Colony is fully and effectually represented in the Continental Congress for the purpose of expressing the sense of its inhabitants on any overtures for a reconciliation, and that the Continental Congress has fully and dispassionately expressed the sense of the inhabitants of this Colony on the above-mentioned Resolution of the 20th of February last.

Debates arose on the said motion; and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative by all the Counties present, Mr. Roosevelt dissenting against the vote of New-York, and Captain Cuyler against the County of Albany.

Therefore, Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress that this Colony is fully and effectually represented in the Continental Congress for the purpose of expressing the sense of its inhabitants on any overtures for a reconciliation, and that the Continental Congress has fully and dispassionately expressed the sense of the inhabitants of this Colony on the above-mentioned Resolution of the 20th of February last.

Several citizens at the door, to give information of sundry matters to the Congress, were admitted. They informed the Congress that they had discovered a parcel of Sheep, Swine, and Poultry, at Myford's Tavern, at one of the Ferries, which they have reason to believe is intended for His Majesty's ship Asia, or for being shipped and exported contrary to the Resolutions of the Continental and of this Provincial Congress; and that they had apprehended there, three very suspicious persons, with many memorandums about them relating to their being on board the ship Asia. Thereupon, a warrant was made to Major Malcom, in the words following, to wit:

Whereas, information has been given to this Congress that a number of Sheep, Hogs, and Poultry, are in the house, barn, and enclosures of John Myford, Innkeeper, at one of the Ferries in Brooklyn, and intended to be shipped and exported contrary to the Resolutions of the Continental and of this Congress:

Ordered, That Major Malcom, with such guard as he may think necessary, proceed to the said John Myford's, and take and secure the said Stock in such manner as he may think most safe, and that he apprehend the said John Myford and keep him in safe custody, and report his proceedings in the premises to Congress to-morrow morning.

Ordered, That the five Resolutions of this Congress, made and entered into as amendments to Mr. Smith's motion, and on the consideration of Governour Tryon's paper of the 4th instant, be fairly engrossed together, and brought to the Congress to-morrow morning.

The Congress then adjourned till ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Die Veneris, 10 ho. A. M., December 15, 1775.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Nathaniel Woodhull, President.

For New-York.—Mr. Beekman, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Inlay, Colonel McDougall, Mr. Sands, Mr. Ray, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Scott.

Albany.—Colonel Rensselaer, Captain Cuyler, Captain Bleecker, Mr. Gansevoort.

Dutchess.—Mr. Gilbert Livingston, Mr. Humphreys, Mr. Schenck.

Orange.—Mr. Herring.

Suffolk.—Colonel Woodhull, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Tredwell, Captain Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

Westchester.—Colonel G. Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Mr. Ward.

King's.—Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Covenhoven.

Tryon.—Mr. John Moore.

The engrossed copy of the five Resolutions of yesterday, made and entered into as amendments of Mr. Smith's motion, and on the consideration of Mr. Tryon's publication of the 4th instant, were read; and Ordered, That they be published.*

Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Covenhoven, and Captain Cuyler, dissent to the two last Resolutions, and dissent to the publication of any of the said Resolutions.

Major Malcom, attending at the door, was admitted. Major Malcom delivered in his Report in writing of his proceedings on the Warrant issued to him yesterday evening; which was read and filed, and is the words following, to wit:

"In obedience to the order of Congress last night, I went with a party of men, in two boats, to the house of John Myford, for whom we made a strict search, but found him not. I found eight sheep, which, as it was difficult to bring over the river, I gave in charge to Captain Sebring, of the Light-Horse, and herewith deliver his receipt for them. There were two men, Hunt and Oakly, from East-Chester, in the house, who refused giving any account of themselves, and being in a suspicious house, I brought them to town prisoners. The Delegates from Westchester, Messrs. Droke and Ward, answered for their appearance at five o'clock this afternoon, when, if the Congress think proper, they shall be brought up for examination.

—WILLIAM MALCOM.

"To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York."

* IN PROVINCIAL CONGRESS, NEW-YORK, December 14, 1775.

On motion, the Congress, taking into consideration his Excellency Governor Tryon's paper of the 4th instant, directed to the inhabitants of New-York, came into the following Resolutions:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that none of the people of this Colony have withdrawn their allegiance from His Majesty.

Resolved, That the supposed present "turbulent state" of this Colony arises, not from the want of a proper attachment to our Prince, and the establishment in the illustrious House of Hanover, nor from a desire to become independent of the British Crown, or a spirit of opposition to that just and equal rule to which, by the British Constitution, and our ancient and established form of Government, we are subject; but solely from the inroads made on both by the oppressive acts of the British Parliament, devised for enslaving His Majesty's liege subjects in the American Colonies, and the hostile attempts of the Ministry to carry these acts into execution.

Resolved, That though this Colony, in conjunction with the other United Colonies, has had recourse to the appointment of Congresses and Committees for the more orderly and effectual redress of their numerous and heavy grievances, yet it is by no means the desire or design of its inhabitants to disuse, much less to oppose or obstruct the ordinary course of legislation, but that they highly esteem their right of being represented in General Assembly.

Resolved, nevertheless, That it is the opinion of this Congress that nothing of a salutary nature can be expected from a separate declaration of the sense of this Colony on the Resolution of the House of Commons on the 20th of February last, and that, as the motion whereon the same was grounded, was confessedly framed to disunite the Colonies, it would be highly dangerous to, and totally inconsistent with the glorious plan of American Union, should this Colony express their separate sense on the above-mentioned supposed conciliatory proposal on the part of Great Britain.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress, that this Colony is fully and effectually represented in the Continental Congress, for the purpose of expressing the sense of its inhabitants on any overture for a reconciliation, and that the Continental Congress has fully and dispassionately expressed the sense of the inhabitants of this Colony on the above-mentioned Resolution of the 20th of February last.

A true copy from the minutes:

ROBERT BENSON, Secretary.

He also delivered in the receipt of Isaac I. Sebring, an officer of the Light-Horse, which was read and filed.

Ordered, That the Deputies of Westchester County be a Committee to examine the persons taken by Major Malcom on oath, and to liberate them, or order them into confinement, as they may think proper.

The Memorial of John Norberg, Esq.,* together with the several Certificates attending the same, were read; and the Memorial and Certificate of B. Romans were filed. It appearing thereby to this Congress that Captain Norberg is in such a state of health as that tenderness and humanity to him demand our consent to his going to Great Britain, for the restoration of his impaired constitution; and it also appearing to the Congress that Captain Norberg has with the strictest honour behaved towards the inhabitants of the American Colonies, as a soldier and a gentleman, Resolved, That Captain Norberg be permitted to go to Great Britain, with all or any such of his effects as he may choose to remove; and it is hereby recommended to all persons in this Colony not to interrupt Captain Norberg in his removal with his said effects.

Colonel McDougall moved, and was seconded by Captain Cuyler, that each of the Delegates who have represented this Colony, and now represent it in Continental Congress, be allowed for his services, in his quality of Delegate, five dollars per day, for each day he shall have been, or may be, from his place of abode, on the publick service.

Mr. Hobart moved, and was seconded by Mr. Strong, for the following amendment to Colonel McDougall's motion, to wit: That the words "five dollars" be obliterated, and the words "three dollars" inserted.

Debates arose on the said proposed amendment, and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the negative, in manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative or Amend- ment.	For the Negative or against the Amendment.
2 Suffolk.	2 Dutchess.
2 Ulster.	3 Albany.
2 King's.	4 New-York.
2 Tryon.	2 Westchester.
10 votes.	11 votes.

Ordered, therefore, That the said proposed amendment be rejected.

Mr. John Moore then moved, and was seconded by Mr.

* To the most respectable Gentlemen of the Provincial Congress, New-York:—I beg leave to present to the most respectable Congress this circumstance: I am a native of Sweden, and have been persecuted for that. I have been against the French faction there. I have been in His Britannic Majesty's service since January, 1758. I have been twice shot through my body here last war in America, and I am now sixty-five years old, reduced by age, wounds, and gravel, which may be seen by Doctor Jones's certificate. In 1773 I got permission in Ja-maica to go to London, where I petitioned to be an invalid officer, but, as a foreigner, I could not enjoy a commission in England or Ireland. His Majesty was graciously pleased to give me the allowance for Fort-George, (seven shillings sterling per day,) with liberty to live where I please in America, because the fort has been abandoned this eight years, and only two men remain there, to assist any express going between New-York and Canada.

I arrived here in New-York last year, in September, with intention to live in New-York. As I heard nothing else than disharmony amongst gentlemen, which was not agreeable to my age, I resolved to go to Fort-George, and live there in a little cottage as an hermit, where I was very happy for six months.

The 12th of May last Mr. Romans came and took possession of Fort-George. Mr. Romans behaved very genteel and civil to me. I told him that I did not belong to the army, and I may be considered as a half-pay officer or invalid, and convinced him that I was plagued with gravel. Mr. Romans gave me his passport to go to New-Lebanon to recover my health; and he told me that, in regard to my age, I may go where I please.

As I can't sell any bill for my subsistence, and I can't live upon wind and weather, I therefore beg and implore the most respectable Congress's permission to go to England; and I intend to go to my native country. I could have gone away, surely, as well as some others have done; but I will not, upon any account, do such a thing. I hope the most respectable Congress will not do partially, to refuse me; because Major Etherington, Captain Brown and Captain Kelly, who are in the army, have been permitted to go to England; and it may happen they return here again on actual service, which old age and infirmities render me incapable of.

As it is the custom amongst the Christian nations and the Turks, that they give subsistence to every prisoner according to their rank, should the most respectable Congress have any claim upon me to be a prisoner here, I hope they will give me a subsistence from the 12th of May last, according to my rank as Captain. I implore the favour of the most respectable Congress's answer.

I have the honour to remain, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
NEW-YORK, December 21, 1775. JOHN NORBERG.

Humphreys, for the following amendment to Colonel McDougall's motion, to wit: That the words "five dollars" be obliterated, and the words "four dollars" inserted in its stead.

Debates arose on the said last proposed amendment, and the question being put thereon, it carried in the affirmative in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.
2 King's.	4 New-York.
2 Westchester.	3 Albany.
2 Dutchess.
2 Ulster.	7 votes.
2 Suffolk.
2 Orange.
14 votes.

Resolved, therefore, That each of the Delegates who have represented this Colony, and now represent it in Continental Congress, be allowed for his services, in his quality of Delegate, four dollars per day, for each day he shall have been, or may be, from his usual place of abode on that service; and Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, or the Treasurer for the time being, be directed, and he is hereby directed and authorized, to pay unto each of the Delegates who represented this Colony at the late Continental Congress, and to each of the Delegates of this Colony for the time being, or his legal representatives, four dollars per day, for every day that he hath been, or shall be, from his usual place of abode on that service.

Dutchess.—Mr. Gilbert Livingston, Mr. Humphrey, Mr. Schenck.

Ulster.—Mr. Cantine, Mr. Wynkoop.

A Letter from Mr. John Dennis, of the City of New-Brunswick, dated November 28, 1775, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"City of New-Brunswick, November 28, 1775.

"SIR: By your orders received by Abraham Clark, I sent you six quarter-casks of powder, which was all I could collect. The persons I had it from are impatient, and beg the powder may be returned, as our inhabitants are destitute of that article.

"Your assistance will be duly acknowledged by your obedient, humble servant, JOHN DENNIS.

"To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., at New-York."

William Sutton, Esq., of Westchester, attending at the door, was admitted, and informed the Congress that he has been obliged, for fear of injuries, to leave his place of abode, and made the requests and engagements contained in a Protection given to him, which is in the words following, to wit:

"William Sutton, Esq., of Westchester County now appears before this Congress, and requests protection to return to his house, and engages to apply to, and deliver himself up to the Committee of the County of Westchester, at their next meeting, and at any other time when they shall send for him, to answer all such charges as may be made against him, and abide the judgment and determination of the said Committee; and Mr. Joseph Bull, now present, engages that the said William Sutton shall go to Westchester County and deliver himself up to the said Committee, at their next meeting. Therefore, to return to his house in safety, and submit himself to the Committee of Westchester County, and that in the interim his boat be considered as under the protection of this Congress."

"Ordered, That the said William Sutton be permitted

The Agreement made and entered into between Colonel Alexander McDougall and Peter T. Curtenius, on behalf of the Provincial Congress of the one part, and Cornelius Atherton of the other part, on the 3d of November last, for the making of Muskets and Bayonets, was read, and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

Curtenius*, jointly and severally, and to and with the survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor, that he, the said Cornelius Atherton, his executors or administrators, shall and will with the utmost diligence make, finish, and deliver to the said Alexander McDougall and *Peter T. Ordered, That the Treasurer of this Congress advance and pay to Colonel McDougall and Peter T. Curtenius, or their order, the sum of three hundred and fifty Pounds, agreed to be advanced to the said Cornelius Atherton, as soon as the said Cornelius shall have given such security as is mentioned in the said Contract.

And Mr. Scott and Mr. Hobart, who were named a Committee for that purpose, reported a draft of powers for a Committee of Safety, which were read, amended, and approved of, and many additional powers to the said Committee of Safety were moved for, and approved of, agreed to, and added thereto.

The Congress then proceeded to name and appoint the Members of the said Committee of Safety.

Thereupon Mr. Gansevoort moved, and was seconded by Mr. Rensselaer, for the sense of Congress, whether one of the Deputies of the County of Albany now present, may be permitted to serve as a member in the Committee of Safety, until one other Deputy of the said County shall relieve him; the said Deputy who shall come to relieve the other to continue as the member of said Committee until the Congress shall meet again.

The question being put on said motion, it was carried in the negative.

The Congress then named and appointed Colonel Alexander McDougall, John Morin Scott, William Allison, Peter R. Livingston, Morris Graham, Abraham Brasher, John Leffertse, Comfort Sands, James Beckman, John Inlay, Pierre Van Cortlandt, and Samuel Brewster, to be a Committee of Safety, and any seven or more of them to be a quorum.

Ordered, That the said powers of the Committee of Safety, as now agreed to, and resolved on, be considered as perfect powers to the said Committee, so far as they are agreed to, and that they be engrossed, and taken up for further additional powers, if necessary, to-morrow morning.

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety, hereby appointed, do continue to be invested as a body, distinct from Congress, with all the powers above-mentioned, until the said Committee shall be dissolved by order of this Congress, or until the second Tuesday of June next, unless a future Congress of this Colony shall be sooner convened.

Dissentients to that part of the last Resolution contained in the words "or until the second Tuesday of June next:" Colonel Rensselaer, Mr. Gansevoort, Captain Cuyler, Colonel Brasher, Colonel Graham, Mr. Schenck.

Mr. Gansevoort, seconded by Mr. Rensselaer, moved in the words following, to wit:

That if it should so happen that any member, appointed as one of the Committee of Safety, should be prevented, either by sickness or other unforeseen accident, from attending the said Committee, whereby the publick business may be delayed, that his place may be supplied by one other of the Deputies of the County where such member of the Committee of Safety resides, to be appointed by the General Committee of the same County.

Debates arose on the said motion; and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the negative, in the manner following, to wit:

For the Negative.

Suffolk,	Westchester,
Dutchess,	New-York,
Orange,	Tryon.
Ulster,

Albany equally divided.

Ordered, therefore, That the said motion be rejected.

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety be, and hereby are fully empowered to issue orders to the respective Counties in this Colony, to elect Deputies for a Provincial Congress of this Colony, to meet on the second Tuesday in May next; the said Committee, by their order, appointing the day of election in each County to be at least twenty-one days before the said second Tuesday in May next.

The Congress then proceeded to take into consideration the emission of the Paper currency agreed to be issued by the late Congress; and after a considerable time spent therein, the following Resolutions were unanimously agreed to, to wit:

Resolved, That the periods of sinking of one hundred and twelve thousand five hundred Dollars, by two payments—the first of fifty-six thousand two hundred and fifty Dollars on the first day of March, 1776, and the remaining fifty-six thousand two hundred and fifty Dollars the first day of March, 1777, agreeably to the Resolve of the late Provincial Congress of the second day of September last past—be altered; and that the said first sum of fifty-six thousand two hundred and fifty Dollars be sunk on the first day of March, 1777, and the remaining fifty-six thousand two hundred and fifty Dollars on the first day of March, 1778.

And whereas, the late Provincial Congress directed that the Bills, by them ordered to be emitted, should be signed by at least three persons, and it appears that there is not room sufficient on each of the said Bills for three signers; therefore,

Resolved, That any two of the said signers be sufficient to sign each of the said Bills.

And whereas, this Congress have applied to the Continental Congress to lend this Colony the sum of one hundred and twelve thousand five hundred Dollars; if the Continental Congress shall make that loan to this Colony,

Resolved, That in such case the Committee of Safety are not to take any measure towards issuing the Money above-mentioned; and that the sum so lent shall be sunk in equal moieties at the respective periods last above-mentioned.

Mr. Palmer, from the Committee who went up to the Fortifications in the Highlands, delivered in the Report of the said Committee, together with a Draft or Plan to explain the same.

The said Report was read; and being read a second time, is in the words following, to wit:

"Fort-Constitution, December 14, 1775.

"The Committee appointed by an order of the Provincial Congress, bearing date the 7th instant, to repair to the fortifications in the Highlands, and endeavour to accommodate the difference subsisting between the Commissioners for erecting said fortifications and the Engineer—and in case they should not be able to accommodate the said difference, to give such directions as they should think necessary for expediting the works of the said fortifications, in such manner as they should judge best for the publick service, and make report as well of the true cause of such difference as of all necessary facts relating to the same, and of such directions as they shall have given for expediting the said work—do Report:

"That after examining into the matters of complaint from both parties, they are of opinion that Mr. Romans must either have mistaken the charge committed to him by the honourable Committee of Safety, by request of the Commissioners, or, as appears from his conduct, has assumed powers with which he knew he was not intrusted; as it appears that the Commissioners objected to the manner of erecting some works that are nearly finished, and refused their consent to the erecting of others begun, especially that called the Grand Bastion, in which we think they judged right; which, nevertheless, he was determined to carry on, declaring that they had no vote nor authority in any matters at the Post more than to furnish stores and workmen, and pay them. On the other hand, the Commissioners, from the authority with which they conceive the honourable the Provincial Congress had invested in them to erect fortifications, thought themselves responsible, in a great degree, for the misapplication of the publick moneys appropriated for that use; in which we also think they judged right; and, therefore, that Mr. Romans was to blame in refusing to consult the Commissioners on every matter of importance, before he attempted to carry it into execution. For further particulars, relative to this report, we refer the honourable House to the copies of the directions given to the Commissioners and Engineer.

"2d. That on observing the situation of the works erected and planned by the Engineer, we do further report, that with respect to the battery nearly finished with marling, &c., we find that none of the cannon can be pointed so as to obstruct any vessel in her passage up, until she passes the West-Point, one hundred or one hundred and fifty yards; and when she has passed the aforesaid battery, none can be brought to bear on her any distance up the river, especially should she border on the east shore. Upon the whole, we are of opinion no vessel would be under the command of the battery more than half the reach from the West-Point to the point of Marte-laer's Rock.

"With respect to the Grand Bastion, (so called,) we do further report, that on examination of the work still to be erected to finish the same, we find two lines which, together, will consist of a wall of three hundred feet in length, thirty feet on an average in height and in breadth, and eighteen feet high, together with another wall of like dimensions as to height and breadth, and will consist of two hundred feet in length, which is to encircle the block-house and join the former, which in its area is to contain bomb-proof arches of brick, and a grand magazine, which is to cover men in time of engagement, as the Engineer informed us; all which we conceive will be impracticable to complete in season, even should the expense be approved of, which in our opinion would not amount to less than eight or ten thousand pounds, and, when completed, would not affect any vessel until she came abreast with the West-Point.

"The Committee do further report, that they are of opinion, that instead of erecting the above described work, it would better answer the use and safety of the post for the present, to throw up a breastwork in the hollow of the above-mentioned area, facing the West-Point, sufficient to contain four or six cannon, and also, to erect a Barbet battery on a gravel hill, marked on the late draft of Mr. Romans, (H.) sufficient to mount eight large cannon, eighteen pounders, two of which, to be mounted on a short curtain facing the reach above the West-Point; the breastwork to be composed of timber, filled in with earth, with a good platform; the advantage of which will fully appear by the river draft. When this is completed, we would recommend, that a low constructed block-house be erected on an eminence abreast of the West-Point, which will serve to keep up a line of communication between the last mentioned battery and the other works.

"3d. With respect to the state of the barracks, the Committee do further report, that they find one of eighty by twenty feet, of one story, and one of one hundred by twenty feet, one-and-a-half story high, both which when cleared of workmen and labourers, will contain about three hundred men. The foundation of another barrack, eighty by twenty feet, two story high, and when completed, will contain one hundred and sixty men; this latter barrack we find will be well covered by the eminence on which stands the block-house; the former stands much exposed to the fire of the enemy, as soon as they open the West-Point, especially the one of one hundred feet, nor would it be fully covered, in our opinion, was the expensive Grand Bastion aforesaid completely finished, agreeably to Mr. Romans's plan.

"After going through with the business above reported, we went down the river in the barge as far as Pooploop's Kill; on our way, about three and a half miles below the fortress on the west side of the river, a landing place of easy access from the river to the height of the land above, which may be occupied by an enemy to our damage. We then proceeded, and took a view of the height and situation of the ground forming the north chop of Pooploop's Kill, which projects itself so far into the river that the distance across to the other shore does not exceed one hundred perches. We are clearly of opinion, that this is by far the most advantageous situation in the Highlands for a fortification, as one erected on this point would command the reach of the river downwards to the point of the Dunderbarragh, being the distance of nearly three miles, and from the same point the reach upwards may be commanded as far, and is environed in its adjacent and contiguous situations with marshes and inaccessible mountains, which renders it impracticable for the enemy to land. We are, therefore, of opinion, that a battery of sixteen or eighteen guns ought to be erected on this point, and that barracks be erected there to make it a post of about one hundred and fifty or two hundred men.

"FRANCIS NICOLL,
"JOSEPH DRAKE,
"THOMAS PALMER."

The same Report being read, and the question being put thereon,

Resolved, That the Congress does agree with their Committee in the said Report; and ordered that Mr. Palmer draw up such further directions relating to the Fortifications necessary to be made in the Highlands, as may be necessary to be directed and resolved on by this Congress, and report the same with all convenient speed.

Whereas, by a Letter of the twenty-eighth ultimo, from James Duane, Esq., one of the Delegates of this Colony at the honourable the Continental Congress, this Congress is informed that an order had passed in their favour for fifty thousand Dollars; and by a paragraph of a Letter from Philip Livingston, Esq., another of the Delegates of this Colony, the President is informed that the said money is ready to be paid to an order of this Congress on the Delegates of the Colony of Pennsylvania; and that to send some proper persons for the said money will prevent the expense of a guard to conduct it; therefore,

Ordered, That Messrs. Abraham Brasher and Thomas Palmer, two of the members of this Congress, proceed to Philadelphia to receive the said sum of fifty thousand Dollars from the Pennsylvania Delegates, and to bring or remit the same to this Congress; and

Resolved, That a copy of this Entry, Order, and Resolve, signed by the President, pro tem., and attested by the Secretaries, be a draft or voucher from this Congress to the Pennsylvania Delegates for payment thereof; and that the receipt of the said Abraham Brasher and Thomas Palmer be a sufficient discharge from this Congress to the Pennsylvania Delegates for the same.

"In Provincial Congress, New-York, December 18, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: We take the liberty to enclose you the copy of a letter we thought proper to write to Governour Trumbull, [on the 12th inst.] on the subject of a late inroad made by some of the inhabitants of Connecticut into this Colony, and also a resolve of thanks for the friendly assistance given by them on another occasion, at the request of the Committee of Westchester. By the first of these, we conceive we have done what was necessary to support, in a friendly manner, that honour and independency, with respect to every particular Colony, which we think necessary, not only for our internal security, but also for maintaining our proper weight, as a Colony, in the scale of Continental Union. By the other, we show our readiness to receive any assistance from our neighbours, when properly afforded on requisition, and suitably to acknowledge such assistance.

"You will observe, gentlemen, that to prevent those jealousies which the introduction of parties of armed men from any neighbouring Colony, unless properly requested, will naturally beget, we give his Honour, the Governour of Connecticut, notice, that we intend to apply to the Continental Congress for a regulation on that head. Such a regulation we think necessary for supporting the cause of liberty, and to prevent its enemies from improving the want of security arising from inroads by our neighbours, to the prejudice of the common interest.

"We therefore request your endeavours to procure such a regulation, by authority of the Continental Congress, and are, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient servants. By order.

"To the New-York Delegates in Continental Congress."

Ordered, That Major Malcom be requested to authorize and desire Captain Waldron to sell the Sheep taken at Brooklyn Ferry for the best price he can, and to retain the expense of keeping them in his hands, and pay the balance to the Treasurer of this Congress.

Ordered, That Colonel Rensselaer, Major Lockwood, Mr. Tredwell, and Mr. Scott, be a Committee to revise and amend the Militia Law, or Regulations for the Militia of this Colony, made and published by this Congress, and they report thereon with all convenient speed.

A Return from Lewis Dubois and Michael Wygant, two of the Committee of New-Marlborough Precinct, in Ulster County, dated the 6th instant, was read. They certify, that there was chosen on that day, agreeably to the rules of the honourable Congress, the following Officers for the South-east District of New-Marlborough: Stephen Case, Captain; Matthew Wygant, First Lieutenant; John Bond, Second Lieutenant; Alexander Cropsey, Ensign. And Mr. Palmer informed the Congress that Stephen Case, who had been First Lieutenant, was elected in the place of Caleb Merrit, who had resigned; that Matthew Wygant and John Bond were promoted by election; and Alexander Cropsey, elected in the stead of the Ensign, promoted; and the Commission of Caleb Merrit, who resigned, was returned to the Secretaries.

Ordered, That Commissions be issued to those gentlemen accordingly.

Ordered, That Colonel McDougall be authorized, and he is hereby authorized, to purchase such a quantity of Cartouch Paper as he may think necessary for the use of this Colony, and to lodge the same with Peter T. Curtin, the Commissary, to be distributed to the Counties.

Whereas, Mr. Isaac Belknap, of Newburgh, in Ulster County, on the 2d day of September last past, was, upon sufficient information of his merit, nominated in Congress to the office of Quartermaster of the Regiment whereof Jonathan Hasbrouck, Esq., is Colonel, and ordered to be put into commission in that office, but by some mistake the name of another gentleman was inserted in the said Commission,

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress that the said Mr. Isaac Belknap is fully qualified to fill the said office; and, to testify a proper sense of his merit, that it is the sense of this Congress that he be preferred to the first suitable vacancy that may offer in the Militia or Minute-Men of the southern part of that County.

The Committee appointed to plan a voyage or voyages for one or more vessels, delivered in a Report, which was read, and after some time spent therein, and some advices given thereon, it was returned to the said Committee for their further consideration.

The Return of the Committee of Cornwall Precinct, in Orange County, signed by Thomas Outwater, Chairman of the County Committee, was brought into Congress by Jeremiah Clarke, Esq., and read. It is thereby certified, that at a meeting of the Freeholders and Tenants of the Precinct of Cornwall, in the County of Orange, held at the house of John Brewster, in Blooming-Grove, on Tuesday, November 7, 1775, agreeably to certain Resolves of the honourable Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York, for the purpose of dissolving the Congress then sitting, and also for electing a new Congress, to serve until the 10th day of May next coming, at which time the Freeholders and Tenants legally qualified, did unanimously choose the bearer, the said Jeremiah Clarke, for one of the Deputies to represent the County of Orange in Provincial Congress, agreeably to the Resolves aforesaid; and did also, at the same time, unanimously agree, that any two of the Deputies chosen to represent the said County for the purposes aforesaid, should be a quorum to represent the said County in Congress.

The same being read and approved of, by order was filed; and Ordered, That Mr. Clarke take his seat.

Agreed and Ordered, That Mr. Jeremiah Clarke be appointed, and he is hereby appointed, a member of the Committee of Safety, in the stead of William Allison, Esq., and that Mr. Allison's name be struck out of the said Committee, and Mr. Clarke's there inserted.

Ordered, That the Secretaries purchase five hundred copies of the Proceedings of the Continental Congress, in Low Dutch, and that Colonel Brasher purchase five hundred copies thereof, printed in the German tongue, to be distributed gratis in the different parts of this Colony; and if there are not any copies of the Proceedings of the Continental Congress in the German language, that Colonel Brasher purchase five hundred copies of any other publication in the German tongue, which are instructive on the present controversy between Great Britain and the Colonies, that they may be distributed gratis.

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety appointed by this Congress be authorized, and the said Committee hereby is authorized, to cause such a collection to be made of the sundry acts of Parliament complained of as grievances to the Colonies, with remarks thereon, as they may think useful, to inform the people of this Colony; and to have such a number thereof as they may think proper published and dispersed through the Colony gratis.

Mr. Clowes obtained leave of absence, Orange County being fully represented without his attendance.

Present: John Herring, Esq., President, pro tem.

For New-York.—Mr. John Van Cortlandt, Mr. Van Zandt, Colonel McDougall, Captain Rutgers, Mr. Scott, Mr. Ray, Mr. Sands, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Inlay.

Albany.—Colonel Rensselaer, Capt. Cuyler, Mr. Bleecker, Mr. Gansevoort.

Dutchess.—Mr. Schenck, Mr. Humphreys.

Orange.—Mr. Herring, Colonel Hay, Mr. Clarke.

The Committee appointed to employ two or more vessels for a voyage to Europe, reported that they think it necessary to load two vessels with wheat, on account and risk of this Congress, for some port or ports in Europe, on the customary freight; that the owners run the risk of the vessels out, and be allowed three pence sterling per bushel extraordinary for such risk. That the common freights of such vessels are as follows, to wit:

For any port without the Straits, as far as Gibraltar, thirteen pence sterling per bushel; to Malaga, fourteen pence; to Alicant, fifteen pence; to Barcelona, sixteen pence; to Marseilles, seventeen pence.

That the said Committee had agreed to let one of the two vessels return with the return cargo to St. Eustatius, or St. Martinus, for one hundred pounds currency; and that the said Committee would give directions that the said goods brought in return, as soon as they arrived in the West-Indies, be shipped on board of different vessels, to bring them to the Continent, which the Committee conceive to be the most advantageous method. That the Committee have proposed to direct the whole property adventured to be invested in Gunpowder; and if Gunpowder is not to be purchased, to be invested in Saltpetre; if neither Saltpetre nor Gunpowder is to be had, then to be laid out in good Muskets. And if none of the before-mentioned articles are to be got, or not sufficient to expend the value of the cargoes adventured, then the property, or so much thereof as shall remain unexpended in those articles, to be laid out in goods of the following kinds, viz:

Russia Drilling; Raven's Duck; Osnaburghs; Coarse Linens, from twelve to fifteen pence sterling per yard; Sheetings, from ten to twelve pence sterling per yard; Coarse Thread Hose, from twenty to twenty-five shillings sterling per dozen; Coarse Tandem Silesias, from seventeen to twenty shillings per piece; Vittery, fit for soldiers' shirting, or any other articles they may think will be wanting.

The said Report being read a second time, and approved of, the Congress unanimously agreed that the said Report stand confirmed, and that the Committee carry the said Report into execution; and

Resolved, That John Vanderbilt, Comfort Sands, and Jacobus Van Zandt, and each and every of them, shall be fully indemnified by this Congress, or the Committee of Safety, or the Congress of this Colony for the time being, against any bonds which they, or either of them, will be under the necessity to enter into at the Custom-House in New-York, for the said vessels and cargoes; and that in case any costs or damages shall accrue, by means of entering into such bonds, that all such costs and damages as may arise, happen, or accrue, by means thereof, shall be borne by this Colony; and Ordered, That the Treasurer of this Congress pay to Jacobus Van Zandt, Comfort Sands, and John Vanderbilt, the sum of five thousand Pounds, in part to enable them to load the said vessels.

Mr. Palmer, in pursuance of the direction of this Congress of yesterday, delivered a further Report respecting the Fortifications in the Highlands; which was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

That after the Committee had finished their Report in writing, which has been delivered in, it was agreed by Colonel Nicoll and Colonel Drake, that Mr. Palmer should deliver in their said Report; and that after the same should be read, Mr. Palmer should further report to this Congress, as their unanimous opinion with him, that the Fortifications erected, and those pointed out by them to be erected on Martelaer's Point, will not be sufficient for the security of the post, because of two large eminences overlooking the works, situate, the one within less, and the other not more than, half a mile from the works, and so situated that an enemy might improve them much to our damage. That they were, therefore, jointly of opinion that a Redoubt ought to be erected at each of those places for the security of the garrison. And that the Committee were further agreed in opinion, that it was the indispensable duty of Mr. Romans accurately to have observed those matters in his first report to the Continental and Provincial Congresses, which the Committee told him when there on the places, to which Mr. Romans answered, he had pointed out the necessity of the one, and the other he had but lately thought of.

The said Report being read, this Congress agrees thereto, as to the Redoubts necessary to be erected on the said two eminences.

Ordered, That a copy of this Report, with a certified copy of the Report of the same Committee made yesterday, be transmitted to the honourable the Continental Congress for their perusal, and that their directions may be obtained thereon; and Ordered, That Colonel Brasher and Mr. Palmer carry those copies to the Continental Congress.

And, as Captain John Grenell has for some time past been on duty, and commanding on the said Fortifications, and may for the present be spared, an older officer being now there, and it is conceived he may also be able to give useful information relating to the places necessary to be fortified, in order to obstruct the navigation of Hudson's river,

Ordered, That Captain Grenell do attend the other two gentlemen to Philadelphia for that purpose.

Ordered, That George Clinton, Esq., be appointed Brigadier-General of the Militia of Ulster and Orange Counties, formed into one Brigade, and that a Commission be issued to him accordingly.

The Congress adjourned to ten o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Die Mercurii, 10 ho. A. M., December 20, 1775.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: John Herring, Esq., President, pro tem.

For New-York.—Mr. Beekman, Mr. Roosevelt, Colonel McDougall, Captain Rutgers, Mr. Ray, Mr. Sands, Mr. Imlay.

Albany.—Colonel Rensselaer, Capt. Cuyler, Mr. Gansevoort, Mr. Bleeker.

Doctor Paul Spooner, from Cumberland County, appeared in Congress, and produced the following credentials, to wit: First, a Certificate from the Committee of that County, dated at Westminster, on the 1st day of December last, and signed by John Barrett, the Clerk,* whereby it is certified that the Committee of the said County had proceeded in the election of Deputies, pursuant to the Resolves of the Congress, for the Colony of New-York, of the 18th October last; and it is thereby further certified, that Major William Williams and Doctor Paul Spooner, are chosen by the County to represent the people thereof, in this Provincial Congress, at the City of New-York. The said Committee thereby also recommend a Brigadier-General, and their other Field and Staff Officers, for the Militia of the said County.

Mr. Spooner also produced another Certificate of the County Committee, bearing date on the 30th of November last, and signed by John Barrett, their Clerk, whereby it is certified that the Deputies chosen to represent the County of Cumberland, at this Provincial Congress, in the City of New-York, are thereby qualified, and have full power to act in the said Congress singly, in as ample and full a manner, when but one is present, as both, when both are present at the said Congress.

The said Certificates being read, and approved, were ordered to be filed; and Ordered, That Mr. Spooner take his seat.

* MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: We, the Committee of Safety for this County, have proceeded in the election of Deputies, pursuant to the resolves of the honourable Congress for the Colony of New-York, of October 18, 1775: And this certifies, that Major William Williams and Doctor Paul Spooner, are chosen by this County, to represent the people thereof, in the honourable Provincial Congress, at the city of New-York. Also, we, the Committee of Safety for this County, have presumed to nominate Colonel James Rogers to be the Brigadier for Cumberland, Gloucester, and Charlotte Brigades.

Moreover, according to the directions of the honourable Provincial Congress of New-York, (as are transmitted to us,) per our Delegate, Major Williams, we have recommended that the following gentlemen, belonging to this County, be speedily commissioned by said Congress, viz: Lower Regiment in the County: Major William Williams, first Colonel; Major Jonathan Hunt, second Colonel; Lieutenant John Norton, first Major; Olliver Lovell, second Major; Arad Hunt, Adjutant; and Samuel Fletcher, Quartermaster.

Upper Regiment: Captain Joseph Marsh, first Colonel; Capt. John Barrett, second Colonel; Lieutenant Hilckiah Groat, first Major; Captain Joel Matthews, second Major; Timothy Spencer, Adjutant; Amos Robinson, Quartermaster.

Regiment of Minute-Men: Captain Job Hoisington, first Colonel; Seth Smith, second Colonel; Joseph Tyler, first Major; Joel Marsh, second Major; Timothy Phelps, Adjutant; Elisha Hawley, Quartermaster.

The honourable Provincial Congress complying with our request, as speedily as possible, will much oblige your most obedient, humble servant. Signed by order of the Committee of Safety:

JOHN BARRETT, Clerk.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY, WESTMINSTER, December 1, 1775.

A Letter from Mr. William Bedlow, dated at Fort Constitution, on the 14th December instant, on the subject of the pay of the Commissioners, was read, and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Fort Constitution, December 14, 1775.

"SIR: About the latter end of October, Mr. Richard Yates, delivered into the honourable Provincial Congress, a letter requesting they would be so kind as to fix what they should judge, I with my brother Commissioners on service here should merit per day; as that was at the very latter end of the last session, I suppose through the hurry of business was not thought on.

"Permit me now to request the favour of you to make this application known to this honourable Provincial Congress, in hopes they will let the Commissioners here know what they are to have. This will lay us under grateful obligations to you and them; in particular him, who is with respect, sir, your humble servant, WILLIAM BEDLOW.

"To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq."

The Congress took into consideration the subject-matter of the said Letter, and after some time spent thereon,

Resolved, That there be allowed to each of the Commissioners employed in erecting the said Fortifications on the banks of Hudson's river, in the Highlands, ten shillings per day, for every day that he has been or shall be employed in that service.

And to prevent any expense that may by any means be avoided:

Agreed, That only three Commissioners for the present be continued in that service, to wit: Mr. John Berrien, in New-York, and two at the Fortifications.

And as Messrs. William Bedlow and Thomas Grenell were first employed in that service, Ordered, That they be continued; and if Mr. Grenell's state of health should become such as to prevent his attendance on that service, that, in his absence, his place be supplied by Mr. Jonathan Lawrence.

Mr. John Broome, Chairman, pro tem., of the Committee of the City of New-York, attending at the door, was admitted. He delivered in the several Papers hereafter mentioned, which were read, and Mr. Broome withdrew.

The first matter delivered in by the said Chairman of the Committee, is an application for the loan of Money, which being read and filed, is in the words following, to wit:

"New-York Committee Chamber, December 19, 1775.

"The Chairman having informed the Committee that there were several demands upon this Board, which have been due some considerable time, requested they would take them under consideration, and concert some means for discharging them:

Ordered, That the Chairman be authorized to apply to the Provincial Congress, for the loan of one thousand Pounds, (subject to no interest,) and to give a receipt for the same, and to engage that the same shall be repaid out of the first moneys that shall be raised by way of a tax in this City and County, for defraying the necessary charges incurred for the publick service in defending our rights and privileges.

JOHN BROOME, Chairman, pro tem."

The Congress took the said application of the City Committee in consideration, and are unanimously of opinion, that the small supply of Money expected speedily to be received in the Treasury of this Congress, and their present heavy debts, will not admit of making a loan of one thousand Pounds; but that to relieve the necessities of the Committee, an Order be made on the Treasurer of this Congress, for the sum of five hundred Pounds, payable to the Chairman.

Therefore, Ordered, That Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, send to Mr. John Broome, as Chairman, pro tem., of the Committee of the City of New-York, or to the Chairman for the time then being, the sum of five hundred Pounds, and take such receipt and engagement for the same as proposed by the said Committee in their application to this Congress for a loan.

Mr. Broome also delivered in a list and arrangement of the Officers of Colonel Heyer's Regiment, which was read and approved of, and filed; and,

Ordered, That Commissions be issued accordingly.

Mr. Broome also delivered in a list of Officers of three beats of the Militia of the City of New-York.

Ordered, That Commissions be issued accordingly.

The case of John Blackler, referred to this Congress from the Committee of the City of New-York, and a Letter from the said John Blackler to Governor Tryon, which were this morning delivered by Mr. Broome, as Chairman, pro tempore, were read.*

A Letter from the Committee of Richmond County, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Richmond County, December 15, 1775.

"MR. PRESIDENT, SIR: Your favour of the 2d of December, we hereby acknowledge came safe to our hand, and with the majority of the Committee considered the contents. We agreeably to your request, have caused by advertisement the freeholders and inhabitants in our County to be convened on this day, in order that their sense might be taken, whether they would choose Deputies to represent them in Provincial Congress or not; accordingly, a number of the said freeholders and inhabitants did appear; a regular poll was opened, and continued till six o'clock, at the conclusion of which it appeared that a majority was for the present for sending no Deputies.

"Our former conduct in sending of Deputies, to represent us in Provincial Congress, was elevated with encouraging hopes of having, ere this, obtained the so much desired point in our view, namely, a reconciliation with Great Britain. But with anxiety, we express it, that the hopes of obtaining so desirable an event is now almost vanished out of our sight, and instead of which, we behold with horror every appearance of destruction that a war with Great Britain will bring upon us. Under these apprehensions, and in our particular situation, we hope you will view us, and when candidly considered, we trust will furnish you with sufficient reasons for the present to forbear with us.

"We wish and pray that if yet any hopes of reconciliation is left, that measures might be adopted, if possible, to obtain that desirable end, in wishing of which we conclude ourselves, your most obedient and humble servants,

"JOHN TYSEN,
"CHRISTIAN JACOBSON,
"DANIEL CORSEN,
"PETER MERSEREAU,
"JOSEPH CHRISTOPHER,
"LAMBERT MERRELL,
"JOHN POILLON."

"To Nathaniel Woodhull, President of the Provincial Congress, New-York."

"P. S. Should the Congress think it necessary for further information of the state of our County, they will please to order two of our Committee to appear before them for that purpose."

* COMMITTEE CHAMBER, NEW-YORK, December 19, 1775.

John Blackler having been confined for some time at the upper barracks, was, this evening, examined before this Board. It appeared by his confession that he had been several weeks on board the Asia, man-of-war; that his intention was to procure a passage to Boston, and from there to England, and for that purpose requested the assistance of Governor Tryon; that he did not intend to enter in the Ministerial army, unless he could get the office he formerly had, (a Lieutenant,) which was a thousand to one against him; that upon the whole, his intention was to go to England, by the way of Boston, as he could not readily get one from this place; that he did not desire a commission in the army, (meaning the Ministerial army); that he took refuge on board the Asia to avoid being taken and confined for debt.

The Committee taking into consideration Mr. Blackler's case, are of opinion, that the law passed by the late Provincial Congress for this Colony does not authorize this Board to determine thereon. The question being then put, whether Blackler be remanded to the guard-house, and a state of his case be represented to the Provincial Congress? Carried unanimously in the affirmative. By order of the Committee:

JOHN BROOME, Chairman, pro tem.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Accept of my most grateful acknowledgments for those favours conferred on me, and rest assured I shall endeavour to make it my study to convince your Excellency, your kind recommendation was bestowed, though on an unfortunate, yet a deserving object. Since I have been on shore, I have, through the interest of my friends, been furnished with necessaries for my passage to Boston, with some letters of recommendation to gentlemen there. I now, as the last request, which I am almost afraid to make, beg your Excellency would assist me with some small pittance, only to serve me a few days after my arrival. Indeed, sir, I would not solicit it, but dire necessity obliges me. May every happiness attend your Excellency, is the most ardent wish of your Excellency's very obedient, humble servant,

JOHN BLACKLER.

To His Excellency Governor Tryon.

After sundry proposals mentioned, relating to the people of Richmond County, the further consideration thereof is deferred until the state of Queen's County is taken into consideration.

Captain Skidmore, of Queen's County, attending at the door for an Order for the Arms of such men in his company as have not been sent into the Continental service, Ordered, That Peter T. Curtenius deliver to Captain Skidmore such Arms of the people of Queen's County as remain in his custody, and were received from the men belonging to Captain Skidmore's Company, to wit: From William Mills, Dirck Amerman, John Stanson, alias John Stiene; and that Mr. Curtenius pay to Jonah Roades, Cornelius Loosie, Mary Mills, Peter Fredericks, and Fredrick Amerman, respectively, the appraised value of the Arms received of them respectively, and sent into the publick service.

A draft of a Letter to the Delegates of this Colony at the Continental Congress, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, December 20, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: A dispute having unhappily taken place between the Commissioners appointed to superintend the work at the Fortifications in the Highlands and the Engineer, which we apprehended might retard the works necessary to be done, we thought proper to depute a Committee of three of our body to repair to the said Fortifications, and endeavour to accommodate the said difference; and in case they should not be able to effect that, to give such directions for expediting the necessary work as they should judge best for the publick service. In consequence whereof, Messrs. Palmer, Nicoll, and Drake, who were appointed the Committee, went to the place, and have reported their proceedings and sentiments in the premises, a copy of which we now enclose you for the consideration of Congress. We beg leave to suggest to you that the report of the Committee respecting the expediency of erecting a Fortification on the eminence at Pooploop's Kill, demands your most serious attention.

The bearers hereof, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Palmer, and Captain Grenell, are appointed by this Congress to lay a state of the above matter before the Continental Congress; and if it should be approved of, we are of opinion that no time ought to be lost in carrying it into execution.

We have drawn on the Pennsylvania Delegates for fifty thousand dollars, (you have procured an order for,) in favour of Colonel Brasher and Mr. Palmer.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, pro tempore, and transmitted.

Doctor Spooner delivered in sundry Letters and Papers, which were read and filed, and are as follows, to wit:

A Letter from Colonel James Rogers, of Cumberland County, of the 14th September last, whereby, for political reasons, he declines the office of Brigadier-General of the Militia.

A Paper, signed by the inhabitants of the Township of Putney, in Cumberland County, dated the 6th of December instant,* stating objections against the gentlemen named

* PUTNEY, December 6, 1775.—SIR: We, the inhabitants of Putney, beg leave to signify to you, that the proceedings of the late County Convention, first the Congress, secondly as a Committee of Safety for the County, sir, we humbly conceive, have discovered such a spirit of ignorance or tyranny, that we are apprehensive that our liberties, which we are contending for, are in danger, and like to be wrung out of our hands by nine or ten arbitrary men, who seem to be engaged in counteracting these our Resolves, in irritating the minds of the people with their inconsistent and impolitic proceedings, discovering that they are set upon making such a choice as will be disagreeable to the body of the people; and in particular in the last choice, in choosing men that could by no means be recommended by the body of the people; and, particularly, some whom large objections were made against; and good evidence could be procured against them, that they ever have discovered an inimical spirit to the liberties of America—now, all this doth sufficiently prove, that our liberties are, or near, at an end, unless we exert ourselves for our defence. We, therefore, pray that the sense of the people may be had before the choice of Field-Officers go to New-York; for why should we be deprived of our rights, and have men imposed upon us that we have reason to fear are not friends, and to have in the County concerned, a multiplicity of inconsistent Resolves, which they themselves have made void; and have never had the goodness to consult their constituents, for the peace of the County. Now, sir, this we esteem as an infringement on our rights, and are determined never to submit to tyranny, for which our country now bleeds. We pray, therefore, that you would not make return of this choice, if you have regard for the peace of the County. We must let you know, that if this plan stands good, we will join with our brethren, and send our Protest to New-York.

and recommended by the County Committee for Field-Officers of the Militia of that County.

A Paper, signed by a number of the inhabitants of Westminster, dated 7th of December instant,† setting forth similar objections to the same gentlemen as Field-Officers of the Militia of that County.

A Paper signed by the inhabitants of Fulham, dated the 13th December instant,‡ setting forth similar objections to the same gentlemen, as Field-Officers of the Militia of that County.

A Paper, subscribed, containing the Association of all the males in Townshend, in Cumberland County.

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety consist of thirteen members; and that Doctor Paul Spooner be added, to be a member of the Committee of Safety.

The Congress being informed that John Abeel had declared, that William Bayard had informed him and others that the Deputies who compose this Congress had agreed to pay themselves four dollars per day each, while they attend the Congress:

Ordered, That John Abeel attend this Congress at four o'clock this afternoon.

The Congress adjourned till 3 o'clock, P. M.

To Colonel Williams, of Dryer, and Mr. Paul Spooner, to be communicated to the honourable Provincial Congress at the City of New-York.

† WESTMINSTER, December 7, 1775.—SIR: We, the subscribers, inhabitants of Westminster, beg leave to inform you that the late choice of Field-Officers is esteemed very unhappy by us, as the manner in which they were chosen was an infringement on the rights of the people, as there was not but a part of the Committee there, and those that were there had no instructions from the body. To proceed as they did, and for this town in particular, in choosing John Norton, who could not have had a majority of votes in this town, or in any town where he is known, as his language hath always discovered a spirit of disapprobation of the proceedings of the Colonies, as could have been proved, if the Committee had not deprived the complainants of the right of an Englishman, to have time to collect evidence. This, with the election of others, who we have reason to fear . . . * determined, get into office without the vote of the people, depriving us of the privileges that we are now contending for. We, therefore, pray that this choice may not be sent to York, for why should we have men imposed on us by nine or ten arbitrary men? Sir, we deal plainly, that we cannot submit to be governed by such men as we have reason to fear would betray us into the hands of the enemy. And if the County cannot have their rights, we must join with our neighbours in sending a protest against all the illegal proceedings, to York. We hope you will consider of the sad nature of division, and exert yourself to heal the breach in the County.

We shall depend on your goodness, and with esteem, subscribe ourselves, your humble servants.

Sir, we are sorry to trouble you in this manner. Necessity calls for it, as tyranny appears so evident in the late County Convention, that unless a stop is put to it, the County is ruined.

To Colonel Williams and Mr. Paul Spooner, to be communicated to the Provincial Congress, at the City of New-York.

‡ FULHAM, December 13, 1775.—HONOURABLE SIR: We, the inhabitants of Fulham, beg leave to inform you that the late choice of Field-Officers we esteem such an infringement on the rights of the people, and not

The Congress took into consideration the case of John Blackler, and thereupon, Ordered, That he be kept in confinement until the further order of this Congress.

The Congress then took into consideration the necessity and advantage of a small Armed Vessel, to be maintained in the East River or Sound, to prevent persons inimical to the liberties of the American Colonies supplying the Ministerial Army and Navy with Provisions:

Ordered, That Colonel McDougall and Captain Rutgers be, and hereby are appointed a Committee to purchase a proper Vessel for that purpose, and to have her properly armed and fitted out; and ordered that those gentlemen do not expend on the purchase and outfit of such Vessel more than the sum of six hundred Pounds.

The Committee appointed to prepare amendments to the Resolves for regulating the Militia of this Colony, brought in their Report, which was read; and according to order, being read a second time, and many amendments made thereto, was agreed to, and resolved on, and is in the words following, to wit:

Appendix to the Rules and Orders for regulating the Militia of the Colony of New-York.

1st. As the desire of promotion in the publick service is extremely laudable, and therefore should be so far encouraged, as may be consistent with the safety of the publick, and at the same time may not be construed into a design of countenancing promotions, of course it is earnestly recommended to every Company to have a regard in elections, to promote to offices according to rank, so far as may be consistent with true merit and ability to serve the publick.

2d. That wherever a sufficient number of Minute-Men do not voluntarily turn out of one Regiment of the Militia of this Colony, to complete the proportion in the aforesaid Rules and Orders required, the deficiency be made up by lot from those companies in which such deficiency shall happen.

3d. That the Militia of the Counties of Dutchess and Westchester be two separate Brigades.

4th. That when any person shall think himself aggrieved being the vote of the body of the people, nor yet the vote of the Committee as a body, and several of the men being much suspected of being unfriendly to the liberties of America, and in particular, John Norton, who is universally known to be in opposition to the plan of liberty, sir, we think the precedent to be bad in having men chosen by individuals; and much more to have men to lead us to the place of action whose goodness is suspected. We, therefore, in duty to our country, ourselves, and posterity, do humbly pray that those men in nomination may not be in nomination, and may not be recommended for commissions till the sense of the body of the County be known. For why should nine or ten men presume to personate the body, without any instructions from the body of the people of this County. Sir, we pray that you would not carry the choice, which we esteem so illegal, to New-York, as we have a value for your honour. Sir, we must be plain in our relation to you, and tell you, that unless the inconsistent and impolitic proceedings of the last County Convention can be looked into, and redress had for the many infringements which we have received from them, we must send our protest, by way of remonstrance, to New-York, to the Provincial Congress. Sir, we are unwilling to enter on this, but for our future safety must do it; and hope that you, by your timely interposition, will prevent so unhappy a task. Sir, we look upon the whole nomination as illegal, and we must enter our protest against the whole; for there was but nine out of twenty-one, and seven out of that body were in nomination.

Sir, trusting in your goodness, we hope you will give a true representation to our brethren, the honourable Provincial Congress at New-York.

Sir, we remain your most sincere and true friends, the true Sons of Liberty, with respect to his being fined in consequence of the above-mentioned Regulations, the Committee of the City, Town, Manor, Precinct, or District, where the cause of complaint ariseth, upon complaint made to them, shall have power to hear and determine the matter; and if said complaint shall appear to be groundless and vexatious, the complainant shall forfeit a sum equal to the fine in dispute, to be levied upon his goods and chattels by warrant from the Chairman, directed to a Sergeant of the company; the said forfeiture to be applied in the same manner as the fines in the before-said Regulations are applied; and that no man shall be fined for want of powder and ball who shall produce a receipt from his Captain of his having deposited in his hands six shillings and nine pence for the purchase of those articles.

5th. That beside the stated meetings of the companies of the Militia, it be recommended to the commissioned and non-commissioned officers to use all possible diligence to perfect their companies in the military art, by inviting them together in small parties as often as they conveniently can meet.

6th. That although persons above fifty years of age are not required to be enrolled in the Militia, yet it is most earnestly recommended to them that they be respectively provided with arms, accoutrements, and ammunition, as though they were required to be enrolled.

7th. That it be earnestly recommended to every man in the Militia to provide himself with a bayonet, properly fitted to his musket or fire-lock.

8th. That no new troops of Horse be formed, unless an augmentation be recommended by Congress or the Committee of Safety.

9th. That all persons incurring the penalties for non-attendance and disobedience of orders, specified in the twelfth clause, shall for every default incur the forfeitures therein annexed to the first default, notwithstanding their being held up as enemies of their country.

10th. That the Minute-Men meet in their respective companies on the first and third Mondays in every month, and pass through the necessary military exercise, under their proper officers; and that for the second meeting in every month, the officers and privates be respectively allowed the pay of the Continental troops, agreeably to the new establishment; provided that the commanding officer of each Minute company, who shall be present at the muster and exercise of each respective Minute company, do deliver to the Committee of the City, Town, Precinct, or District, in which they shall so meet to exercise, a muster-roll of the commissioned and non-commissioned officers and privates of their respective companies, who did actually appear and exercise until they were dismissed by the commanding officer, sworn to by the officer who was present and commanded for the day; and that beside these regulations, it be recommended to them to meet in such subdivisions of each company, under a proper officer, as will be most convenient for their frequent meeting.

11th. That if any officer should omit to meet and exercise his men upon the days appointed, or shall, through favour or affection, neglect to levy any fines in the said Rules and Orders for regulating the Militia required to be levied, he shall forfeit for every such neglect the sum of forty shillings, to be levied and applied as is directed in the twelfth clause of the before referred-to Regulations.

12th. Resolved, That the officers of the Minute companies, that are already chosen, do continue their offices till the further orders of this or some future Congress.

The Congress took into consideration the state of Queen's County; and after some considerable time spent thereon, it was postponed till the afternoon.

The Congress then proceeded to fix and determine the rank of the Militia Officers of the several Counties in this Colony, in order to enable the Committee, appointed for that purpose, to form and report a General Regulation for the Militia of the Colony; and after some time spent thereon, the Congress determined the Officers of the respective Counties to have rank in the following order, to wit: 1st. New-York; 2d. Albany; 3d. Suffolk; 4th. Ulster; 5th. Westchester; 6th. Orange; 7th. Dutchess; 8th. King's; 9th. Queen's; 10th. Richmond; 11th. Tryon; 12th. Cumberland; 13th. Charlotte; 14th. Gloucester.

Ordered, That Charles Dewitt, Esquire, be appointed Col. Andreas Dewitt, Jun., Lieutenant-Colonel, Christopher Tuppen, first Major, Cornelius E. Wynkoop, second Major, Oake Sudam, Adjutant, and Cornelius S. Elmen-dorph, Quartermaster, of the Northern Regiment of Minute-Men in Ulster County, and that Commissions be issued to those gentlemen accordingly.

The Congress then resumed the consideration of the state of Queen's County and of Richmond County; and after some considerable time spent thereon, came to a determination and Resolutions, in the words following, to wit:

Whereas, on the 13th inst., on information that a number of disaffected persons in Queen's County had been supplied with Arms and Ammunition from on board the Asia, ship-of-war, and had been arraying themselves in military manner to oppose the measures taken by the United Colonies for the defence of their just rights and privileges, and thrown out many threatening expressions against sundry persons residing in that and the neighbouring Counties, it was resolved by this Congress, as their opinion, that such conduct is inimical to the common cause of the United Colonies, and ought not by any means to be suffered, but that measures should be immediately taken to put a stop to it; and it was therefore ordered, that the inhabitants of the said County should appear by a Committee before this Congress on Wednesday then next, at ten o'clock in the morning, to give satisfaction in the premises; with which order the said inhabitants of Queen's County have not complied: And whereas, the persons above-mentioned, and their adherents, have opposed the election of Representatives for that County in this Congress, on a poll opened for that purpose, whereby that County remains unrepresented in this Congress: And whereas, a prevailing party prevented the election of Delegates for the County of Richmond, at a late poll there opened for that purpose, by means whereof the said County is not represented in this Congress: And whereas, the poll-list for Queen's County has been returned to this Congress, whereby the persons opposing such representation as aforesaid, and appearing to this Congress to be inimical to the interest of the United Colonies, may be ascertained:

Resolved, first, That such inimical persons as aforesaid, have been guilty of a breach of the General Association, and of an open contempt of the authority of this Congress, as effectually representing the majority of the inhabitants of this County.

Resolved, secondly, That the inhabitants of the County of Richmond, by neglecting to elect Representatives in this Congress, have been guilty of a breach of the General Association.

Resolved, thirdly, That the Committee of the said County of Richmond do, and shall, within fifteen days after the publication hereof, return to this Congress, or the Committee of Safety, a list of the names of those who oppose a representation of the said County in this Congress, to the end that the delinquents against the common cause in that County may be ascertained; and that in default thereof the whole County of Richmond be deemed delinquent.

Resolved, fourthly, That the said delinquents in the said two Counties respectively, and each and every of them, be, and hereby are, entirely put out of the protection of this Congress.

Resolved, fifthly, That all friendly and commercial intercourse between the said persons, so put respectively out of the protection of this Congress, and the other inhabitants of this Colony, ought to be, and the same, as far as can be effected by the recommendation of this Congress, hereby is, and shall continue to be, totally interdicted until further order of this Congress or the Committee of Safety.

And to the end that no persons may plead ignorance of the foregoing Resolves, and this Order,

It is Ordered, The same, together with a list of such delinquents as aforesaid, in each of the said Counties, be, without delay, respectively printed and dispersed in Handbills, and inserted in all the publick Newspapers of this Colony.

A draft of a Letter to the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress was read, and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, December 21, 1775.

Ordered, That copies of the foregoing Resolves and Orders be enclosed in the following Letter to the Delegates of this Colony in Continental Congress.

GENTLEMEN: We take the liberty to enclose to you a copy of our proceedings respecting the delinquents in Queen's and Richmond Counties. We apprehend we have proceeded against them as far as a prudent regard to the present circumstances of the capital of this Colony, and the safety of the Colony in general, as far as it depends upon the security of its capital, will permit; and for this assertion we beg leave to suggest the following reasons, to wit:

1st. The power which the King's ships have for destroying the property in this city.

2d. Our being almost utterly destitute of powder for a defence of the city, were it in other respects defensible against naval force.

3d. The great probability that an array of troops against the above-mentioned delinquents, by authority of this Congress, even were we sufficiently provided for the purpose with powder, would bring on a firing upon the city.

4th. We are now expediting vessels for the importation of powder, &c. This object, should it be known, would necessarily incense the Navy; we may lose, as well, the opportunity of supplying the inhabitants of this city with the necessities of life, in a severe season, which necessities it is well known, we are almost entirely supplied with by water.

If, in the judgment of the Continental Congress, the delinquents in the above-mentioned Counties ought to be further dealt with, we flatter ourselves, that, however ready we are to sacrifice the property of this capital in the defence of the common rights of America, the above reasons, and such others as may occur to you, will have their weight with Congress, to shew the impropriety of employing any of the inhabitants of this Colony, and particularly of this city, in active service against the said delinquents, if others can be employed for the purpose. Their opposition to the common cause is of dangerous example, and therefore, ought, in our opinion, to be quelled, if by prudent means it can be done; for we have little reason to believe, that should they by any means be induced to send delegates to this Congress, their true characters would be no other than that of spies of our conduct.

We desire you to communicate this and the enclosed without delay, to the Continental Congress; and are, gentlemen, with great respect, their and your most obedient servants.

By order.

To the Gentlemen in delegation for the Colony of New-York, in Continental Congress.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, pro tem., and transmitted.

Ordered, That in case the Continental Congress shall rise without having made any determination on the above subject, that the Committee of Safety be empowered, and in such case hereby is empowered, to write to the Committees of the neighbouring Colonies respectively, as the case may require, informing them of the inimical conduct of the inhabitants of the aforesaid Counties, to the security of the United Colonies, whereby they have forfeited the protection of this Congress, and therefore, that the Committees aforesaid, be at liberty to take such measures with the enemies of America in those Counties, as they shall judge necessary to put it out of their power to assist our common enemy; provided, the innocent and helpless be not injured in life or property, nor the lives or property of the guilty unnecessarily or wantonly destroyed; and to this end that they enclose in said letter or letters a list of the delinquents.

The Committee appointed to form a Regulation or Arrangement for the Militia of this Colony, delivered in their Report, which was read; and the same being read a second time, paragraph by paragraph, and many amendments and additions made thereto, and finally agreed to and resolved on, is in the words following, to wit:

11th. The rank of some of the Battalions or Regiments and Companies in some of the Counties being settled either by the Colonel already chosen or appointed, or by the General Committee of the County, it is recommended that the several Committees in this Colony, where such arrangements are not already made, do follow the example in arranging the Battalions and Companies within their respective Counties, and transmit a copy of such arrangements to the Secretary of the Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety, for the time being.

Resolved, That the Militia of Orangetown and Precinct of Orange, be formed into, and constitute one Regiment; and that the Militia of Haverstraw Precinct be formed into, and constitute another Regiment, any thing in the former Resolutions of the Provincial Congress of this Colony to the contrary notwithstanding.

Resolved, (with the consent of the Members of Ulster County now present,) That Ulster County Jail, or such part thereof as may be necessary, be used and taken as the Jail of this Congress, and for the confinement of any such prisoners as may be ordered to be confined by this Congress or their Committee of Safety; that such prisoners as shall be there confined, shall be confined at their own expense, respectively; but if they are unable to pay the expense, then that they be confined at the publick expense of this Colony.

And Ordered, further, That John Blackler be sent to Ulster County Jail, and there confined until the further order of this Congress, or their Committee of Safety.

A Letter from General Washington, of the 17th December, instant, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

“Cambridge, December 17, 1775.

“SIR: I yesterday received the enclosed information from several persons who lately came out of Boston, which I thought it my duty to transmit to you.

“Whether these troops are embarked, I cannot undertake to say; but if they are, it is more than probable that their destination may be very different from what they gave out in Boston, and that they were only used as a feint. It is certain that several ships sailed from thence yesterday morning.

“I am, sir, your humble servant,

“GEORGE WASHINGTON.

“To the President of the Honourable Convention at New-York.”

The information therein enclosed was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

“Chelsea, December 16, 1775.

“Last evening eight men came in a boat from Boston to our guard at the ferry. They say that one regiment of Foot and three companies of Light-Horse were to sail for Halifax this day, and that the troops were putting water on board the transports.”

“Dorchester, December 16, 1775.

“This morning eight large and two small vessels, taken for tenders, sailed out of Boston harbour. By their firing they appeared to be going a voyage to sea.

“Mr. Joshua Pies came out of Boston last night, and informs that a regiment of Foot and some companies of Light-Horse were preparing to embark for Halifax.”

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of this Colony, appointed by this Congress, be empowered to apply one thousand Pounds to the relief of such indigent poor of the City of New-York for whom the Corporation may not have made provision, and that it be determined by this, or some future Congress, to what account this sum shall be placed.

Whereas, discontents have arisen in the minds of many of the citizens of New-York, by a practice of some of the inhabitants to visit the King's Ships of War, which, if continued, may be productive of disorder among the citizens, and disputes between them and the officers and men belonging to such ships, which this Congress wish to prevent, therefore,

Resolved, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of this Colony to refrain from going on board of any of the King's Ships or Vessels of War, without leave of a Committee of a County in this Colony, or the Committee of Safety, or their respective Chairman, until the further order of this or some future Congress.

Whereas, sundry persons, whose conduct in the neighbouring Colonies, of which they were respectively inhabitants, has been unfriendly to liberty, and occasioned their removal into this Colony; and should such removals continue, the number of disaffected persons in this Colony will be increased, and the same be disreputably considered as an asylum for enemies to the liberties of America,

Resolved, That every person, not an inhabitant, entering into this Colony, shall be furnished with a Certificate from the Committee of the jurisdiction wherein he last resided, that he is friendly to the liberties of America, or be subject to be dealt with as a person inimical thereto.

Resolved, That the Committee of Safety be empowered, and hereby is empowered, to purchase and secure, and lodge in places of safety at the publick expense, as much Pitch, Tar, and Turpentine, as the said Committee may think necessary for the publick use and publick safety.

A Return from William Smith and Josiah Smith, two of the Committee of Suffolk County, and members of the sub-Committees of St. George's and Meriches, which was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

“Manor St. George, December 15, 1775.

“GENTLEMEN: There has inlisted, as Minute-Men, seventy able-bodied men, within the bounds of Brookhaven, Smithtown, Manor St. George, and the Patentship of Meriches, who have chosen Daniel Roe, of Brookhaven, their Captain; Hugh Smith, of Meriches, their First Lieutenant; Caleb Brewster, their Second, of Brookhaven; and their Ensign Ebenezer Phillips, of Smithtown. And, as Hugh Smith and David Fanning, the First and Second Lieutenants of the Third Company in Brookhaven, whereof Nathan Rose is Captain, have inlisted in the Minute service, the Company have chosen John Smith, of the Manor St. George, their First Lieutenant; William Baker, of Brookhaven, their Second Lieutenant; and Doxey Lane, of the Manor of St. George, their Ensign.

“The choice of each of the above companies was made in presence of us, the subscribers, who are of the Committee.

“The Minute-Men, (who there appears to be great need of to still intestine disaffection to our common cause,) want powder, balls, guns, drum, colours, and other necessities, which here are not to be had; and, if to be bought, a great part of the company are not able to purchase. Your supply or direction in these points will be agreeable to your humble servants,

WILLIAM SMITH,
JOSIAH SMITH.

Ordered, That Commissions be issued to those gentlemen accordingly.

The first paragraph of the powers of the Committee of Safety, relating to Militia Commissions, was read and explained, and sundry debates thereon; and, thereupon Resolved and agreed, That the Committee of Safety have the same powers, as to the nomination and election of Officers, and the granting and refusing of Commissions to Officers of every rank, as this Provincial Congress while sitting.

Mr. Sands, from the Committee appointed to plan and report a voyage to the West-Indies to obtain Ammunition, delivered in a Report of such voyage, which was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

The sub-Committee appointed to employ a sloop for the Island of Martinico, Guadaloupe, or St. Eustatia, report, that they think it necessary to load her with Provisions, on account and risk of this Congress, and proceed first to said French Islands, in order to get permission to sell her cargo there. If no permission should be granted at any of the French Islands, he proposes to dispose of said cargo at St. Eustatia, or any other Dutch, Danish, or French port. We also report, that a vessel can be had on the following conditions, viz:

A vessel that will carry about forty tons provisions, is entitled, for common freight - - - - - £150
Insurance on a vessel valued at £700, at ten per cent., including allowance for common risk, - - 70
One month's hire, in going from Island to Island to dispose of her cargo, and to obtain the Powder, 60

We further report, in case this Powder is to be had, and this vessel is to return with the same, that she be allowed for her common freight home, the sum of - - - £100

Insurance on said vessel to run all risks of vessel, valued at £700, at twenty per cent., - - - 140

We further propose, in case there should be opportunity to ship the said Powder in any other fast-sailing vessel, that privilege be granted for the same, and the above vessel be discharged. This plan we conceive will be much to the Congress's advantage, as it may be freighted home for less than half what must be paid this vessel; but in case there should not be an opportunity to ship it home in another vessel, that then this vessel agree to bring it for the above sum of two hundred and forty pounds.

Resolved, That this Congress does agree to the above Report, and direct the said Committee to carry the same into execution, at the risk and on the behalf of the Congress of this Colony; and the Congress agrees to allow the sum of two hundred and eighty pounds for the outward bound voyage of the said vessel, or so much thereof as shall become due, and two hundred and forty pounds for her freight and insurance back to this Colony, if she should return with Arms and Ammunition.

A Letter from Johannes Hardenbergh, Esq., of the 15th instant, directed to this Congress, was read. He therein mentions that he had had a meeting with sundry gentlemen therein mentioned, and requests commissions for Colonel Abraham Hasbrouck, as Colonel; Johannes Snyder, Lieutenant-Colonel; and Jonathan Elmendorph and Adrian Wynkoop, Majors.

A Letter from the Committee of Kingston, dated on the said 15th day of December, instant, was also read. The said Committee thereby request, that the Committees of Kingston and Hurly may be permitted to nominate and recommend proper gentlemen for Field-Officers for the said regiment.

ADVICES FROM AMERICA.

(London Gazette,) Whitehall, December 23, 1775.

This morning Brook Watson, Esq., arrived at Lord George Germain's office, from Quebeck, with despatches from Major-General Carleton, dated Montreal, the 5th of November, containing intelligence that General Carleton, not being able to collect a force that might be depended upon for the relief of St. John's, the Rebels had taken advantage of the defection of the lower class of Canadians to press forward their enterprise; and that the forts of Chambly and St. John's, upon Richlieu river, the latter of which had stopped the progress of the Rebels for above two months, had surrendered, and the garrisons were made prisoners upon capitulation.

By a letter from Lieutenant-Governour Cramahé, dated Quebeck, November 9, it appears, that a party of Rebels, under the command of one Arnold, had invaded the Province by the way of the river Chaudiere; and that part of them were actually arrived, and had taken post at Point-Levi, opposite to Quebeck.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO GOVERNOUR EDEN.

Whitehall, December 23, 1775.

SIR: The King being determined, in concurrence with his Parliament, to pursue the most vigorous measures for reducing his rebellious subjects in North-America to obedience, and for restoring legal Government, has given the royal assent to the enclosed act, which I am commanded by His Majesty to transmit to you, and at the same time to signify to you His Majesty's pleasure, that

The Congress took the said Letters into consideration, and, thereupon, Ordered, That the said Letters be referred to the County Committee of Ulster County. That the Chairman of the said Committee be directed by written notices to the members, to summon, or cause to be summoned, the whole County Committee, at some proper time and place, for that purpose, giving full notice of such meeting at least one week before the time of such meeting. And it is recommended to the said County Committee, to use their best endeavours to settle all disputes and difficulties about the Field-Officers in the most amicable manner, and to recommend such gentlemen to this Congress, or their Committee of Safety, for Field-Officers of that Regiment, as will be most fit to do the duty to each of them, respectively, belonging, and be most acceptable to the inhabitants and to the Militia to be under their command.

On motion,

Resolved, That besides the powers heretofore vested in the Committee of Safety, for appropriating and applying Moneys, they be authorized to appropriate and apply any sum, not exceeding fifty thousand Pounds, to be laid out in such manner as they shall think proper, for the defence and security of this Colony, and to be raised by drafts on the Treasurer of the Provincial Congress of this Colony; and in case of a deficiency of the said Treasury to answer the said purpose, such deficiency to be supplied by a vote or votes of the said Committee, on the credit of this Colony, to be made good by this or some future Provincial Congress.

Dissentients: Mr. Gansevoort, Colonel Rensselaer, and Mr. Paulding.

Resolved unanimously, and ordered, That if John Leffertse, Esq., should refuse to act as a member of the Committee of Safety, in such case Joseph Hallett be a member of the said Committee in his stead; and that, on the refusal of Mr. Leffertse, the Committee shall be, and hereby is, empowered to call on Mr. Hallett to take his seat; and,

Resolved and ordered, unanimously, That in case of the inability or refusal of Peter R. Livingston to attend the said Committee of Safety, and to take his seat as a member, Mr. Henry Oothoudt be a member of the said Committee instead of Peter R. Livingston; and the first of those two gentlemen who attends and acts as a member, shall continue the member of the said Committee, and not be changed for either of them.

you do exhort all persons upon whom the execution of this law shall depend, to pay a due attention thereto, and to use their best endeavours for carrying the provision of it into effect; and I trust, that when His Majesty's deluded subjects in the associated Colonies are better apprized of the fatal consequences to the conduct they have adopted, and see the determined spirit of the nation to maintain its constitutional rights, they will avail themselves of the means which the justice and benevolence of the supreme Legislature have held out to them, of being restored to the King's grace and peace, and that a happy and lasting reconciliation and union will be effected. And I have the satisfaction to acquaint you, that, in order to accelerate this desirable object, the proper steps have been taken for passing a commission, under the great seal, in conformity to the last section but one of that act; and that the Commissioner, or Commissioners, to be appointed for that purpose, will have full power to inquire into the state and condition of the Colonies, and to confer with proper persons upon such points as may be necessary for effecting a restoration of the publick tranquillity.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE GERMAIN.

To Deputy-Governour Eden.

Whitehall, December 23, 1775.

SIR: It was not till the 27th of November that your despatch to Lord Dartmouth, of the 27th of August, was received here, when I had the honour of laying it before the King; and I have it in command from His Majesty to express to you His Majesty's approbation of your zeal for the publick service, and of the unalterable attachment you have shown to his person and Government, from the first commencement of the unhappy disputes, which have involved His Majesty's faithful servants in the Colonies in difficulties and distress that are only to be equalled by the fortitude with which they are borne.

Your letter contains a great deal of very useful information, and your confidential communication of the characters of individuals, more especially such as come over into England, is of great advantage; and you may rest assured that every possible precaution will be used that no part of your letter shall transpire.

An armament consisting of seven regiments, with a fleet of frigates and small ships, is now in readiness to proceed to the Southern Colonies, in order to attempt the restoration of legal Government in that part of America. It will proceed, in the first place, to North-Carolina, and from thence either to South-Carolina or Virginia, as circumstances of greater or less advantage shall point out. If to the latter, it may have very important consequences to the Colony under your government; and, therefore, you will do well to consider of every means by which you may, in conjunction with Lord Dunmore, give facility and assistance to its operations.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
 To Deputy-Governour Eden.
 GEORGE GERMAIN.

The clause in the Act of Parliament, passed the 19th of December last, which ascertains the powers of the Commisioners, is in these words:

"Provided, That in order to encourage all well-affect-ed persons in any of the said Colonies, to exert themselves in suppressing the rebellion therein, and to afford a speedy protection to those who are disposed to return to their duty, it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons, appointed and authorized by His Majesty, to grant a pardon or pardons to any number or description of persons, with such exceptions therefrom as shall seem fit and reasonable, by proclamation in His Majesty's name, to declare any Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, or any County, Town, Port, District, or place, in any Colony or Province, to be at the peace of His Majesty; and from and after the issuing of any such proclamation, in any of the aforesaid Colonies or Provinces, or if His Majesty shall be graciously pleased to signify the same by his royal proclamation, then, from and after the issuing of such proclamation, this act, with respect to such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, County, Town, Port, District, or place, shall cease, determine, and be utterly void. And if any captures shall be made after the date and issuing of such proclamations, of any ships or vessels, and their cargoes, belonging to the inhabitants of any such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, County, Town, Port, District, or place, or of any ships trading to or from such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, respectively, the same shall be restored to the owners of such ships or vessels, upon claim being entered, and due proof made of their property therein; and the captors shall not be liable to any actions for seizing or detaining the said ships or vessels, or their cargoes, without proof being made that they had actual notice of such proclamation having been issued."

RECANTATION OF EZEKIEL BEACH.

Morristown, New-Jersey, December 23, 1775.

I, Ezekiel Beach, of the Township of Mendham, in the County of Morris, have heretofore by my words and conduct, been guilty of opposing the good people of this County in the measures by them adopted for preserving American freedom, particularly saying, "I had rather the Ministerial troops would conquer the Continental; and further declared, that the Parliament of Great Britain had a right to levy the oppressive taxes and acts upon America, particularly the act for changing the Government of Massachusetts-Bay; and further declared, that I would assist the Ministerial troops with provisions and other necessities, provided they would pay for the same;" and having, on the most mature deliberation, considered of such my conduct, do most heartily disapprove of the same, and do hereby promise, that for the future, I will observe as far as in me lies, the rules and regulations of the honourable Continental Congress, and the Provincial Congress of New-Jersey; and will use my best endeavours to promote and carry into execution every measure adopted already, or that may hereafter be adopted by said Congresses, for preserving the rights and liberties of this country, and will most cheerfully sign the Association adopted by said Provincial Congress when thereunto required; and do hereby desire, that in future the good people of this country would consider me as a friend to the same, which I hope to manifest by my conduct.

EZEKIEL BEACH.

Signed at Morristown, this 23d day of December, 1775.

Witnesses present,

THOMAS MILLEDGE,
 CORNELIUS LUDLOW,
 PETER LATTEN.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO CONFER WITH GENERAL SCHUYLER.

[Read December 23, 1775. Referred to Mr. Dickinson, Mr. McKean, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Hooper, Mr. Jefferson, Mr. Langdon.]

Report of the Committee directed to repair to TICONDEROGA and confer with General SCHUYLER about several matters relative to the publick service, to take survey of and Report the state of the Fortification in the Highlands, and to use their endeavours to procure an accession of the CANADIANS to an union with these Colonies.

Your Committee beg leave to Report, that agreeable to the directions of Congress, they repaired to the fortress in the Highlands on the 17th day of November. For the state in which they found it, and their observations thereupon, they refer the Congress to their letter of the 22d day of the same month; but they cannot help again recommending, with the utmost earnestness, the sending some persons, well acquainted with fortification, to take a survey not only of the works but of the whole river, from Teller's Point to the north end of the Highlands, as your Committee are persuaded that the fortress now erecting will by no means be sufficient to secure Hudson's river, if it should be attacked by any considerable force. Your Committee beg leave, further, to hint at the propriety of obstructing the channel, at least lessening the depth of water; since they have been credibly informed that the river carries twenty-five feet of water to within twelve miles of Albany; and, although it is out of their department, they cannot but wish to turn the attention of Congress to such obstructions in the Narrows during the winter season, (when our enemies' ships will be out of our ports,) as will effectually secure the whole Province of New-York. Though they are by no means satisfied of its practicability, yet they would submit it to the Congress, whether it may not be worth their inquiry.

Your Committee further report that they met with General Schuyler on the 28th day of November, at Ticonderoga, and spent some days with him, in conferring on the subjects about which they were directed to inquire; that they learned from him the following facts: That General Montgomery, in order to overcome the scruples of the troops, and to induce them to follow him to Montreal, about which they hesitated, on account of the advanced season, was under the necessity of engaging that, after the reduction of that place, those who chose it should be at liberty to return; that, in consequence of this promise, Colonel Warner, with his Green-Mountain Boys, returned, though the term of their enlistment did not expire till the first of January; that about one regiment of the York troops have been, and are still, employed at Crown-Point, Ticonderoga, at the different posts between that and New-York, and as batteaus-men on the lakes; that the remaining three regiments, together with Captain Lamb's company of artillery, did not, at the beginning of the campaign, exceed eighteen hundred men; that their numbers had been considerably lessened by death, sickness, desertion, and escorts for prisoners; and that, though few of the remainder had accepted of the permission to return, yet there were not left above one thousand men in Canada, who, from the best information your Committee could receive from the General, or otherwise, have, for the most part, reinlisted; that of the troops from the several New- England Governments who went into Canada, all had returned before your Committee arrived at Ticonderoga, except about two hundred, who had reinlisted. Their departure, before the expiration of their term, was occasioned by their fear of being detained in Canada by the severity of the weather, and the reasonableness of allowing them to return to their respective homes before they were discharged. That Colonel Arnold had with him about five hundred and fifty men, the rest of his party having left him on his way into Canada, so that the whole number of troops now in that Province may be about seventeen hundred men, without making any deduction for non-effectives. But of these facts we are by no means fully certified, as General Schuyler has no returns of the numbers; we offer them as reports, collected from such officers who have returned; and we hope, however, shortly to have a more accurate account, as the General has wrote for it to General Montgomery.

As absolute necessity had obliged General Schuyler to direct the reinlistment of the troops in Canada before he received any other direction on this head than what was contained in your General Orders, your Committee found that work in a great measure concluded by General Montgomery, though not in such a manner as to be strictly conformable to the intentions of the Congress, the Generals having construed your promise in your first letter on that subject, "that you would see the troops furnished with clothing," in its literal sense, procured clothing at Montreal, which they delivered as a bounty, without making any deduction for it from their wages. Whether, without this, they could have been reinlisted, your Committee have not been able to learn, but are convinced of the impossibility of their remaining any longer in that country in the situation they then were, some of them being half naked; and those of the New-York troops who were best clad having only a coat nearly worn out and linen underclothes.

Your Committee would also further submit it to the Congress, whether it would be quite equitable that, in a country where the soldiers require a double quantity of clothing, they should be obliged to pay for it, especially when we consider that their duty has been, and still is, inconceivably more severe than the rest of the Continental army have experienced. Your Committee have, however, endeavoured, as far as lay in their power, to remedy this mistake, though they fear their endeavours will prove ineffectual; they have directed General Montgomery not to publish the resolution of the Congress relative to the two months' pay, which was proposed as a bounty to those soldiers who reinlisted, but to apply the same towards clothing the troops. Your Committee are apprehensive, however, that their direction will come too late, as General Schuyler had sent a copy of that part of the instructions to General Montgomery some time before your Committee arrived. If this should unhappily be the case, your Committee are of opinion that the promise made to the troops by the General should be literally complied with, with which opinion they have taken the liberty to acquaint General Montgomery by letter, the copy of which is enclosed.

Your directions with respect to raising a Canadian Regiment had been complied with before the arrival of your Committee, and the command given to Colonel James Livingston. It is, however, much doubted whether he will be able to complete early, as the bulk of the Canadians are farmers, and, though prompt at a short desultory war, yet have some reluctance to more permanent engagements.

Your Committee have endeavoured to learn the inclinations of those troops who are employed upon the Lakes, at Ticonderoga and Fort-George, with respect to their reinlistment, and, from what they can learn of their sentiments, few of them will enter into the Army again, at least not immediately, and express a disgust at the service; which arises chiefly from their having been employed rather as labourers than soldiers. Your Committee cannot but observe, that a number of bateaus-men, hired for that purpose, and consisting of persons acquainted with the service, would have saved the Continent a considerable sum of money, and greatly expedited business, and would recommend, if our operations in Canada continue another year, the empowering the General or Quartermaster to hire so many as they may deem necessary.

Your Committee found that the directions of Congress with respect to provisions were already complied with, and have the pleasure of assuring them that the quantity taken in Canada will be sufficient for the subsistence of our troops there till Spring, after which they must be supplied from the Province of New-York, or the adjacent Colonies, with every article except bread, which can be procured in Canada.

Your Committee have directed the immediate transportation of the cannon from St. John's and Ticonderoga, which are not wanted for the defence of those places; and the boats on Lake-George are now employed in bringing over those that lay at the landing, it being impracticable to move the rest till there is snow enough to admit of their being carried on sleighs. Mr. Knox is gone to Ticonderoga to choose such cannon as will be wanted at Cambridge, and your Committee have directed those that remain to be transported to Albany as soon as the snow shall render it practicable. There are a number of iron wheels for carriages at Ticonderoga; such as are not wanted there your Committee have directed to be sent to Albany.

Though General Schuyler had, before he received the direction of Congress, endeavoured to purchase the arms of such as quitted the service, yet he has been able to procure but few; those obtained of the New-York force are the property of that Province, and must be accounted for to them; such as are at Ticonderoga, which may be between four and five hundred, are ordered down to Albany in order to be refitted. Your Committee beg leave to observe, that much would be saved to the Continent by the appointment of some person in each army, who should have the inspection of the arms, take a list of them when sent to Armourers, and see that no more was charged as done than what they really wanted; and have, accordingly, recommended the nomination of a Conductor of Artillery to the General, till the pleasure of the Congress was known.

Your Committee would further observe, that their inspection of the barracks, and the complaints of the men, have convinced them that they have suffered greatly for want of bedding, the small blankets they have received being insufficient to keep them warm in this severe climate. They have, therefore, recommended that the damaged tents at Ticonderoga should be cut up, and sacks made for the cribs in the barracks, one for every two men. And would further propose to the Congress, that all the rest of the tents, which are nearly worn out, which is the case of most of those used at St. John's, where the soldiers were under a necessity of slitting and making fires in them, be immediately made up into sacks for the different garrisons, and canvass purchased in Canada for replacing the tents. Your Committee and the General see in a strong point of view the necessity of a Barrackmaster and Storekeeper to each garrison, and would recommend their appointment.

Your Committee observe with concern, that infinite mischief has arisen from the want of regimental Paymasters, which has induced a necessity of trusting large sums of money with Captains and other officers, some of whom are incapable of keeping accounts, and some others ought not, perhaps, to be trusted; and it frequently happens that, though the Colonies are in advance to the Captains, yet they are greatly in arrears to the men, who are hence disgusted with the service, and clamorous against their superior officers, besides that it confuses the accounts and imposes a duty on the Captains for which no allowance is made them. Your Committee, therefore, recommend the immediate appointment of a gentleman properly qualified for this office in every regiment, with a salary which will induce men of character to undertake it.

Your Committee, upon conferring with General Schuyler, are inclined to believe that the repairing of the fortification of Crown-Point would be very expensive, and, at the same time, of very little use; they would, therefore, recommend, that the whole labour which can be afforded be employed on Ticonderoga, but imagine very little can be done this Winter, unless a part of the new levies should be stationed there, in which case they might prepare the wood and have it ready against the Spring. But, as the preservation of that post will depend more upon its receiving early reinforcements than on any strength of its own, and as supplies by the way of Lake-George may be very easily intercepted, if the army of the enemy is much superior to the garrison, your Committee would recommend that a communication be opened between Skenesborough and Fort-Ann, which last is distant from Fort-Edward about twelve miles. This, we are informed, may be done without any considerable expense, by clearing Wood Creek, that empties itself into the Lake at Skenesborough, in which case the earliest assistance may be received from New-York and the adjacent Colonies, and that, too, in a way which the enemy cannot easily prevent. Your Committee have given no directions on this head, as there is sufficient time to take the sense of the Congress before any thing need be done.

General Schuyler is of opinion that four companies are necessary to garrison the posts of Ticonderoga and Fort-George, and that not less than three thousand men be kept up in Canada during the Winter, as well in order to be prepared for a Spring campaign, as to erect such works as may be necessary for the defence of that Province. In this opinion your Committee concur, and would recommend the immediate raising three regiments, including four companies, (for which warrants are already granted,) and sending them up in different detachments when they are properly equipped, in order to be forwarded over the ice as soon as the Lake [freezes,] which may be about the beginning of February.

Your Committee, finding that all matters relative to the Army in Canada had been settled before their arrival, and concluding, from the hurry of military operations in that Province, and the little assistance they could receive from General Montgomery while he was employed in a siege, that their journey there would be of little use to the publick, declined going into Canada, especially as, at this season, they could not have proceeded without the greatest difficulty and hazard. They, therefore, concluded, by a letter to General Montgomery, to inform the Canadians of the sentiments of Congress, when he should find a proper opportunity to communicate them, and to pave the way for the reception of any Committee that the Congress might think proper to send, when the ice should render the journey more practicable, and when it may probably be attended with salutary effects. A copy of which letter, marked No. 1, is annexed.

General Schuyler informs your Committee that he has made a return to Congress of the cannon and other stores at St. John's, Crown-Point, Ticonderoga, and Fort-George. They think it, therefore, unnecessary to trouble the Congress with them.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE,
JOHN LANGDON.

Ticonderoga, November 30, 1775.

SIR: The Congress having done us the honour to appoint us as a Committee to confer with the General and yourself, on the measures necessary to be taken for the reinlistment of the Army, as also to conciliate the affections of the Canadians, and to remove as far as in us lay, every objection that the good people of that Province might have to a union with the thirteen Colonies, who are struggling in the glorious cause of freedom; we arrived here a few days since in prosecution of that design, but are extremely happy to find, that General Schuyler and yourself have, in a great measure, by your prudence and foresight anticipated our business, and rendered a journey into Canada, in some measure, unnecessary at present, which indeed we rather decline, on account of the advanced season of the year, and the improbability of your being able to lend us any assistance, while the enemies of the natural rights of man continue their hostilities against our fellow-subjects in that Province, and confine your attention to those military operations which are necessary to procure their relief. We cannot help, however, expressing the ardent wishes of the Congress, that you would cherish the first dawning of liberty among a people who have early testified their sense of its value, if we may be admitted to judge from the assistance they afforded you in repelling its enemies; that you would assure them that the honourable the Congress have, through us, declared, that they hold their rights as dear as their own, and that on their uniting with them they will exert their utmost endeavours to procure for them and their posterity the blessing of free Government, and that security of their property which is derived from the British Constitution; that they hold sacred the rights of conscience, and will never disturb them in the free enjoyment of their religion. The honourable Congress recommend it to you to use your utmost endeavours to procure a free meeting of the people in their several Parishes, out of whom to choose a Provincial Convention, who will form such rules and regulations as the present exigencies may render necessary for their Province; from this body they hope that Delegates will be chosen to meet and co-operate with them in such measures as they shall think necessary for their mutual security, against the unjust violences of an arbitrary Ministry; if the unsettled state of the Province should prevent a free and full representation of the whole Colony, yet the honourable the Congress will acquiesce in the choice of such Towns, Parishes, and Districts, as may think it proper to send Deputies. Or if, previous to their meeting in Congress, they should have any difficulties which it is out of your power to remove, a Committee of Congress will, at any time, when the communication is more open, be ready to meet and confer with them on the subject, at Albany, Montreal, or any other place, which they may think proper to appoint. We need not mention to you the propriety of punishing, in the severest manner, any of our troops who should so far forget the duty that they owe to us and our worthy allies, as to offer the least injury, either to their property or persons. We know not your arrangement of the Army, but presume you have not in the distribution of commissions overlooked the merit of those who deserve well of their country, or suffered those to be advanced who have merited its censure. General Schuyler has enclosed our last instructions, which will show you the design of the Congress with respect to Quebeck, but which from your letter we find you have already in some measure anticipated. We also give you our sense with respect to the clothing and bounty to the troops; in the management of which, we must rely upon your prudence, and doubt not that the Congress will make good any engagements into which you may have found it necessary to enter. The other subjects of our conference with the General, some of which are mentioned to you in his letter, and others wanting the sanction of Congress, we think it unnecessary at present to trouble you with. The post being just about to depart, we cannot enlarge; if any other opportunity should offer, we may write you again before we leave this. We congratulate you upon the happy success of our arms, and hope shortly to hear that your prosperous endeavours has left no footing to our enemies in that country, from which they hoped to draw the most effectual supplies.

We remain with the greatest respect, your most humble servants,

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON,
ROBERT TREAT PAINE,
JOHN LANGDON.

To General Montgomery.

Your Committee having also taken into consideration the best ways and means for supplying the Continental Treasury with silver and gold, beg leave to Report, that the sum of $160,000 be laid out in the produce of these Colonies and exported, agreeable to the Resolves of this Congress, to proper ports in Europe and the West-Indies, and there disposed of for gold and silver, to be imported into the Continental Treasury as soon as may be.

By His Excellency, WILLIAM TRYON, Esq., Captain-General and Governour-in-chief in and over the Province of New-York and the Territories depending thereon in AMERICA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral of the same.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, the General Assembly of this Province stands prorogued to the first day of January next. I have thought fit, for His Majesty's service, to prorogue, and I do, by and with the advice of His Majesty's Council, further prorogue the said General Assembly to the first day of February next ensuing; of which all His Majesty's subjects concerned therein are required to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

Given under my hand and seal-at-arms, in the City of New-York, on the 23d day of December, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-Haven, December 23, 1775.

SIR: I received this evening General Washington's favour of the 14th instant, by the hands of Monsieurs Penet and De Piarne, two French gentlemen, who laid before him a plan for furnishing the Continent with military stores, which seems to promise success; but not thinking himself authorized to make a contract with them, hath prevailed upon them to go to Philadelphia, to lay their proposals before the Continental Congress, for their consideration and final determination.

The General requests me to supply them with such necessaries as they may want, and to have carriages provided for expediting their journey as much as possible; which is complied with, proper carriages and assistance is afforded them without delay, and hope their plan and services may be such as will meet with the approbation of your body, according to what, on consideration, the same may appear to merit.

I have received your favours of the 2d and 8th of December, instant. Apprehend men for the Continental service, to fill the regiments from this Colony, will be soon inlisted. The zeal and ardor of this people to promote the common cause is not abated. Our Assembly remains sitting.

There are no officers from St. John's arrived here, except Captain Hunter, of the sloop, Lieutenant Smith, of the Artillery, Dr. Sandon, with some of their dependants and servants, about a fortnight ago; and yesterday, Captain McKay, who is very desirous to be sent to the place where the rest are destined. If that be elsewhere, is it not best to send him to be with them, rather than to remain here? The prisoners from Canada, of whom Roger Sherman, Esq., can inform, are extremely desirous of liberty to return to Montreal on their parole, to submit to the direction and orders of the commanding officer of the army there. Is it not best to grant the request to them who are with us?

Monsieur Jean Orillat, the merchant, is escaped from us, with design, as is supposed, to get on board the Asia. The pursuers have not found him. He is likely, at present, to lie concealed not far from this place.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

The Honourable President Hancock.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO COLONEL CHURCH.

Cambridge, December 23, 1775.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to inform you that you may include Dr. Richmond in your Abstract as Surgeon, from the 21st of September, the date you mention. I am, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Colonel Thomas Church.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, December 23, 1775.

SIR: Notwithstanding the great pains taken by the Quartermaster-General to procure blankets for the army, he finds it impossible to procure a number sufficient. He has tried the different places to the southward without success, as what were there are engaged to supply the troops in each place.

Our soldiers are in great distress, and I know of no other way to remedy the evil than applying to you. Cannot some be got from the different towns? Most houses could spare one; some of them many. If your honourable House will please to take this affair under your immediate consideration, and by some means or other procure as many as can be spared from the house-keepers, you will do infinite service to this Army, and very much oblige your humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The same to the New-Hampshire Convention; the same to Governour Trumbull, Connecticut; the same to Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, December 23, 1775.

SIR: The bearer, Captain Samuel Jackson, comes with six prisoners, (a midshipman and five sailors,) put by Captain Talbot, of the Niger frigate, on board the brigantine Peton; which brigantine was taken by said frigate about eighteen days ago, near the Island of Bermuda, and ordered into Boston. This brigantine was retaken last Wednesday, by our people, and was brought into this port. Captain Jackson, the bearer of this, will acquaint your Excellency with the particulars, as he had a principal hand in retaking her. This Mr. Jackson is a zealous, active, worthy friend to his country, and has been principal in taking all the prizes which have been brought into this port by private vessels. Jacob Taylor, a friend and relative of this Mr. Jackson, was mate on board Captain Martindale, (who was taken by the enemy some time since, for which I am sincerely sorry,) has a large family, and in poor circumstances, which must suffer much unless some way can be devised for his redemption. I am very unwilling to give your Excellency trouble, and must ask your pardon when I, at the very earnest request of Taylor's friends and unhappy family, ask your Excellency whether it is not possible to exchange Mr. Curtis, the Midshipman, for Taylor, and when I entreat your Excellency to interpose in behalf of this miserable family, and of an unhappy man, who has conducted with dignity, and has been very active in the noble cause in which we are engaged, from the beginning.

I am your Excellency's much obliged, most humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq.

COLONEL HOBART TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Medford, December 23, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to the order of the late honourable Congress, Colonel Walker and I proceeded to this place, to pay our troops to the 1st of August. We were not particularly instructed how to pay them, but were directed to pay them in the same way that the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay pay their troops. In order to know their establishment, we waited upon the honourable Council, who favoured us with a copy, here enclosed, which is different from what we expected. Instead of paying billeting, they pay one penny per mile to the camp. The number of miles each man travelled is ascertained in their pay-rolls, and the sum due carried off against each man's name, and added to the whole amount of his wages. This, together with paying by lunar months, gives all our Captains the trouble of making new rolls, and our Colony the disagreeable necessity of paying more money than we expected.

They are very explicit in the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, in putting all their stoppages into their rolls, guns, blankets, &c., in order, as they say, that duplicates may be sent to the Continent to refund the money. If we are to be as explicit in our rolls, I am afraid they will be imperfect; for the amount of guns, blankets, &c., supplied by so many hands, and some of them so intricate, that it is almost impossible to find out the true state of the matter. However, I shall lose no time, nor spare no pains in my power, to put every thing in as clear and true a light as possible; and shall cheerfully observe your commands, and obey your instructions, as far as I am capable. Colonel Walker will give you any information about these matters, and in particular how much money it will take to complete our business. The great despatch with which the recruits were lately raised in our Colony, and the eager speed of their march to guard the lines against our unnatural enemies, has done great honour to New-Hampshire.

Gentlemen, I most heartily wish you the Divine influence and direction in the important matters before you; and am, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

SAMUEL HOBART.

To the Honourable Congress at Exeter.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, December 24, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 15th instant, came yesterday to hand, with copies and extracts of your late letters to Congress. I have with great attention perused them. I am very sorry to find, by several paragraphs, that both you and General Montgomery incline to quit the service. Let me ask you, sir, when is the time for brave men to exert themselves in the cause of liberty and their country, if this is not? Should any difficulties that they may have to encounter, at this important crisis, deter them? God knows there is not a difficulty that you both very justly complain of, that I have not, in an eminent degree, experienced—that I am not every day experiencing. But we must bear up against them, and make the best of mankind as they are, since we cannot have them as we wish. Let me, therefore, conjure you and Mr. Montgomery to lay aside such thoughts; thoughts injurious to yourselves, excessively so to your country, which calls aloud for gentlemen of your abilities.

You mention in your letter to Congress, of the 20th ult., that the clothing was to remain at Albany, as General Montgomery would provide the troops in Canada. I wish they could be spared for this Army, for we cannot get clothing for half of our troops. Let me hear from you on this subject as soon as possible.

The proofs you have of the Ministry's intention to engage the Savages against us are incontrovertible. We have other confirmations of it by several despatches from John Stuart, the Superintendent of the Southern District, which luckily fell into my hands, being found on board a sloop sent by Lord Dunmore, bound to Boston. She was taken by one of our armed vessels. These, with many letters of consequence from his Lordship, I have lately sent to Congress.

I hope soon to hear that Colonel Knox has made good progress in forwarding the artillery. It is much wanting for the works we have lately thrown up. I have wrote a letter, the 10th instant, to General Howe, respecting Mr. Allen, of which, and the answer, you have copies enclosed.

I am, with great regard, sir, yours, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Head-Quarters, December 24, 1775.

SIR: In obedience to his Excellency the General's directions, I am to desire that you will acquaint him, if you do not think, from the weather, (the information of the deserter you sent this morning to Cambridge, and all other circumstances,) that this night will be likely to prove favourable to the enterprise you mentioned yesterday to the General. If that is your opinion, it will be previously necessary for you to come and communicate the whole of your plan to the General, and receive his orders thereupon.

At gun-firing, it will be necessary to acquaint the Generals, Putnam, Heath, and Greene, with your intention, that no unnecessary alarm may create confusion, but that every thing may be conducted in a soldier-like manner, to succour, sustain, and, if necessary, cover the retreat of your party.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES, Adj't General.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan, Winter-Hill.

P. S. It is not necessary for you to come to Head-Quarters, unless you choose it; but be careful to acquaint the other Generals with your intention.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Camp, near Winter-Hill, December 24, 1775.

MUCH ESTEEMED GENTLEMEN: I do myself the honour of transmitting you, by Colonel Burnham, a Return of the Militia sent by you from New-Hampshire. The troops are exceeding good, their spirit much applauded, and your vigorous exertions in procuring and sending them so seasonably meets with just reward; namely, the thanks of the Army.

Colonel Burnham would have returned some time since, but one company did not arrive till yesterday, and he could not return till he had mustered them. He has been much engaged in taking care of the troops, and has been of singular service to them and me. I wish you to make him up in your bill, and forward the same for payment before the time of inlistment is expired.

Gentlemen, I am, with much respect, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety.

PHILIP CALLBECK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Province of Massachusetts-Bay, Winter-Harbour, }
December 24, 1775. }

SIR: I should but ill deserve the generous treatment your Excellency has been pleased to show me, had I not gratitude to acknowledge so great a favour. I cannot ascribe any part of it to my own merit, but must impute the whole to the philanthropy and humane disposition that so truly characterizes General Washington. Be so obliging, therefore, to accept of the only return in my power, that of my most grateful thanks; and be assured my conduct shall bear so strictly in unison with that of the gentleman, so as at all times to secure to myself the honour I now embrace, of subscribing myself, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble, and much obliged servant,

PHILIP CALLBECK.

His Excellency General Washington.

Fearful I should encroach on your Excellency's time, I have declined giving you a detail of the continued distress and persecution that has attended me since I had the honour of taking my leave. I have made my friend, Major Frazer, partly acquainted with it, and requested him to watch a convenient opportunity.

The Case of PHILIP CALBECK, late Commander-in-chief of the Island of St. John's, and THOMAS WRIGHT, one of the Council, Justice of the Peace, and Surveyor-General of said Island, addressed to General WASHINGTON.

That on Friday, the 17th November, two privateers arrived at Charlottetown, the capital of said Island; and immediately after, Captains Broughton and Selman, who commanded said vessels, landed with two parties under their command. That Mr. Calbeck met Selman on his landing, who, notwithstanding a very civil reception, instantly ordered him on board one of the vessels, without permitting him to return to his house, though requested so to do; and, as he was going on board, one of the party insolently, without any provocation, struck him.

That as soon as Mr. Calbeck was conveyed on board, he received a message from Selman to send the keys of his house, stores, &c., otherwise he would break the doors open. On receipt of the message, Mr. Calbeck sent the keys with one of his clerks, (who was detained a prisoner,) that he might attend and open the doors of such places as should be required to be inspected into. Upon the clerk's informing Selman of Mr. Calbeck's directions, he told him he did not want his assistance, and desired him to deliver the keys, which he accordingly did.

That Broughton and Selman, with their party, immediately proceeded to a store in which there was a very large and valuable assortment of goods, all of which, except some very insignificant articles, they sent on board Selman's vessel. After which, although they had the keys of the doors, they broke open two other stores, out of which they took the most valuable articles, together with the entire stock of provisions that Mr. Calbeck had provided for his family's Winter support and the inhabitants immediately about him. That they next went into Mr. Calbeck's dwelling-house, where they examined all his private papers, broke the bed-chambers, closets, and cellar doors open. In Mrs. Calbeck's bed-room they broke open her drawers and trunks, scattered her clothes about, read her letters from her mother and sisters, took the bed and window curtains, bed and bedding, Mrs. Calbeck's rings, bracelets, and trinkets, also some of her clothes. They then took the parlour window curtains, looking-glasses, carpets, and several articles of plate and household furniture, &c., &c.; also, all the porter, rum, Geneva, and wine, (except one cask, which they stove the head into and drank the whole out.) At the same time they plundered the whole of Mrs. Calbeck's little stores of vinegar, oil, candles, fruit, sweetmeats, bacon, hams, &c. Not yet satiated with wanton depredations, they next went to Mr. Calbeck's office, from which they took some of his clothes, &c., the Province silver seal, Governor Patterson's commission, two trunks full of goods, his clerk's desk and wearing apparel; opened Mr. Calbeck's bureau and desks, read all his papers, some of which were of great importance in his private connections.

That after they had ravaged Mr. Calbeck's house and out-houses, they broke into Governor Patterson's house, (in which no person resided,) out of which they took the window curtains, carpets, looking-glasses, cases of knives and forks, silver spoons, table linen, sheets, bedding, his wearing apparel, and the church furniture, which was deposited in his house, &c., &c., broke a quantity of his china, and drank what liquors were in the house.

That after they had accomplished thus far of their cruelty, they made Mr. Wright a prisoner, and, with insulting language, laughed at the tears of his wife and sister, who were in the greatest agony of distress at so cruel a separation from their husband and brother.

That after Mr. Wright came on board where Mr. Calbeck was confined, they represented the treatment they had received, and the confidence they had that Broughton and Selman had no orders to commit such outrages, they, for the purpose of justifying themselves, read their orders, by which it appeared they were no way directed to go to the Island, and that they were particularly cautioned not to abuse private property; upon which Mr. Calbeck and Wright laboured all in their power to convince them of their not having, in any respect, conformed to their instructions or orders. They urged the cruelty of taking them away, and, though it was probable they would be immediately dismissed, yet it would be almost impossible for them to get back to the Island before the Winter set in, the season being so far advanced. Notwithstanding the reiteration of every argument that could be offered, they were deaf to every feeling or sensation, and determined to take away Mr. Calbeck with his effects, and Mr. Wright.

That Mr. Calbeck supposes they have in their custody, of his property, to the amount of two thousand pounds sterling. To exaggerate the cruel treatment he has received, is impossible; and it is equally so even to give an exact detail of the injuries that have been offered to him and his property. All his papers read, some of which were of a very private nature. Although they had all his keys, his doors broken open; his effects, and the provision and necessities he had provided for his family's support, taken away and wantonly destroyed; his wife left destitute of every support; not so much as a candle to burn. Also, between seventy and eighty people, who were lately arrived on the Island, and depended on him for their support during the Winter, are left without any sort of provisions, some of whom, if not all, will inevitably perish for want, which would have been prevented had Mr. Calbeck been permitted to stay; of this both Broughton and Selman were informed by him, as well as other persons. Not to add the further disadvantages that Mr. Calbeck suffers by being taken away, he is debarred from assisting Mrs. Calbeck in her distressed situation, and taking the necessary care of what remains of a shattered fortune. What has been left of his property on the Island, is in the hands of servants, who doubtless will be neglectful, and, perhaps, avail themselves, under the depredations that have been committed on his property, by alleging several of his effects, which they will choose to plunder, were taken away by Broughton and Selman, and party. They, by their conduct, have left Mrs. Calbeck open to these apprehensions; for, although it was urged and requested by his clerks, that an inventory should be taken of the effects they took away, they would not permit it, nor would they suffer the clerks to stand by while they were sending the things away, which were sent in the utmost disorder.

To make it still more doubtful, and to give the inhabitants an opportunity to plunder, Broughton and Selman, after they made a prisoner of Mr. Wright, suffered some of their people to remain on shore, (without an officer,) who broke the doors and windows of Governor Patterson's and Mr. Calbeck's houses, and a second time lawlessly entered and took out what they pleased, and finished what liquors had been left in both houses.

That during their voyage some articles of plate, and other of Mr. Calbeck's property, were found hidden, and in the custody of the common people. So that, even upon a supposition that Mr. Calbeck will be ordered his property, he will doubtless be a very considerable loser.

That Mr. Calbeck and Wright, wantonly torn from their families, have been brought, in a state of captivity, upwards of six hundred miles, by sea, to this Province. During their passage they have suffered many inconveniences, and since their landing they have travelled one hundred and twenty miles.

That Mr. Calbeck and Wright have taken the liberty to trouble, &c., &c., and so concludes.

COLONEL HOWE TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

Norfolk, December 25, 1775.

Yesterday, by a flag of truce, I received a letter from Captain Bellevue, a copy of which I have the honour to transmit you, with a copy of those I have written to him. Though Colonel Woodford and myself were sensible it was our duty to withhold from him, as much as in our power lay, those supplies he wishes to obtain, yet the moderate conduct he has pursued, and the sentiments of humanity by which he seems to be actuated, induced us to delay an answer till to-day, and to couch it in terms which cannot but show him, that occasion, not inclination, had influence upon our conduct. Captain Bellevue's letter was brought us by one of his Lieutenants; he expressed for himself and every officer on board, the reluctance they should feel, if compelled by necessity, they should be obliged, by marauding parties, to snatch from the indigent farmers of this Colony those provisions, they were so willing to purchase. I thought proper, sir, to give you this information; and through you, Colonel Woodford and myself beg leave to submit it to the consideration of your honourable Board, whether we are to show any indulgence to those people, and, if we are, to what bounds we are to extend it.

Major Ruffin, and about one hundred and eighty Minute-Men, arrived last night; it was a seasonable relief to our soldiers, almost worn out with duty this very bad weather.

I was honoured with your letter yesterday, and are made happy to find our proceedings are approved of. The orders it conveys, and all others which we may receive, we shall endeavour to execute with the greatest punctuality.

POST-OFFICES UNDER THE CROWN DISCONTINUED.

General Post-Office, New-York, December 25, 1775.

Whereas, the Provincial Convention at Annapolis has passed a Resolve, "That the Parliamentary Post (as they are pleased to term it) shall not be permitted to suffer or travel in, or pass through that Province with any mail, packages, or letters;" and, in consequence of that Resolve, have taken His Majesty's mail from the Post-Office at Baltimore, with the letters contained therein. The Committee at Philadelphia having also taken the mail containing all the last packet letters to the Southward, opened many of them, to the great hurt of individuals; and signified to the Postmaster their intention of stopping all others for the future; and other of His Majesty's mails having been taken and obstructed, notice is hereby given to the publick, that the Deputy Postmaster-General is obliged, for the present, to stop all the Posts. They are also hereby desired to take notice, that for the safety of the letters coming by the next or any future packet, they will be kept on board, and the names of those who shall have letters will be advertised, that they may either apply themselves, or write to their friends in this city to take them up. An order in writing from the person to whom any letters may be directed will be necessary.

FRANCIS DASHWOOD, Secretary.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Cambridge, December 25, 1775.

SIR: I had the honour to, address myself to you the 19th instant, since which I have received undoubted information, that the genuine instructions give to Connelly have not reached your hands, that they are very artfully concealed in the tree of his saddle, and covered with canvass so nicely, that they are scarcely discernable; that those which were found upon him are intended to deceive, if he were caught. You will most certainly have his saddle taken to pieces in order to discover this deep laid plot.

Enclosed is a copy of General Howe's letter in answer to the one I wrote him the 18th instant; the conduct I am to observe towards Brigadier Prescott, in consequence of these letters, the Congress will oblige me by determining for me.

The gentlemen, by whom you sent the money are arrived; the sum they brought, though large, is not sufficient to answer the demands of the Army, which at this time are remarkably heavy. There are three months' pay due, one month's advance, two dollars for each blanket, the arms which are left by those who are dismissed to be paid for, besides the demands which are on the Commissary and Quartermaster-Generals. You will, therefore, see the necessity of another remittance, which I beg may be as soon as you conveniently can. I will take the opportunity of the return of those gentlemen, to send Colonel Kirkland to you for examination, and that you may dispose of him as to you may seem proper.

A Committee from the General Court of this Province called on me the other day, informing me that they were in great want of ordnance for defence of the Colony; that if what belonged to them, now in use here, was kept for the Continent, they will be under the necessity of providing themselves with others; of course what is kept must be paid for. There are many of the cannon of very little use; such of them as are good I cannot at present part with.

Perhaps when I receive the supply from New-York and Canada, it may be in my power to spare them.

Mr. Wadsworth has sent in his report respecting Cape-Cod harbour, a copy of which you will receive herewith; also a letter received from a Mr. Jacob Bayley, put into my hands by Colonel Little; it contains some things that may not be unworthy the consideration of Congress.

We have made good progress in the works on Lechmere's Point; they would have been finished ere this, but for the severity of the weather, which prevents our people from working.

I received a letter from Governor Cooke, which expresses the fears of the people of Rhode-Island, lest the ships, which we had information were sailed, with some troops on board, were destined for Newport; I sent Major-General Lee there, to point out to them such defence as he may think the place capable of. I sincerely wish he may be able to do it with effect, as that place, in its present state, is an asylum for such as are disaffected to American liberty.

Our returns of inlistments to this day amount to eight thousand five hundred men.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. Enclosed is an estimate of the demands of the Army.

PELEG WADSWORTH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

December 16, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Agreeable to your orders of the 5th instant, I have examined the harbour of Cape-Cod, and give it as my opinion that Cape-Cod makes a very extensive harbour with any winds from the west to north and northeast, and shipping may conveniently ride out of the reach of cannon, although the whole shore was lined with them. But the Cove, which may be strictly called the harbour, might be pretty well commanded from an eminence on the shore. This might deprive an enemy of the most commodious part of the harbour, prevent their watering, rendezvous, &c., &c.

I am, with due respect, your Excellency's humble servant,

PELEG WADSWORTH.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL HOWE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, December 21, 1775.

SIR: In answer to your letter of the 18th instant, I am to acquaint you that my command does not extend to Canada; nor having received any accounts wherein the name of Allen is mentioned, I cannot give you the smallest satisfaction upon the subject of your letter; but trusting Major-General Carleton's conduct will never incur censure upon any occasion, I am to conclude in the instance of your inquiry, that he has not forfeited his past pretensions to decency and humanity. It is with regret, considering the character you have always maintained among your friends, as a gentleman of the strictest honour and delicacy, that I find cause to resent a sentence in the conclusion of your letter, big with invective against my superiors, and insulting to myself, which should obstruct any further intercourse between us.

I am, sir, with due respect, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM HOWE.

To George Washington, Esq.

COLONEL JACOB BAYLEY TO COLONEL LITTLE.

Newbury, November 24, 1775.

SIR: Means have been taken, I do not doubt, to secure the conquest at Canada, and also to connect the Colony with ours; yet as I am nigh to it, and somewhat acquainted with that country, would beg leave to let you know my thoughts of the matter. I say to you as I need some one of my acquaintance who may be able to assert my sincerity; I am not able any other way to improve the one talent I have, being settled in so remote a part of the country, and since the war, applying myself wholly in carrying on the settlement of this country, so that of late, I have had but little acquaintance with gentlemen who are now at the head of Colony affairs. I must suppose that it will be needful that a body of men are the next Spring stationed in Canada, for if the whole is not subdued this season, it must be done. If taken must be kept from France as well as England. It would not surprise me, if after the French had assisted us to drive off the Regulars, they should take it out of our hands for France. Of what vast importance to us is the country, and how easy it is defended. But one fortress commands the whole from any foreign power, and whatever nation, or people, holds the fortress, commands all the back settlements of the United Colonies, and the most extensive fur and skin trade in the universe. I cannot but be thankful that the councils of our adversaries are turned into foolishness in respect to Canada, for if they had taken possession of Quebeck and New-York, with what strength they brought to Boston, how would the matter have been by this time with the Colonies; but Providence has interfered in our behalf.

I would not lose so precious a jewel as Canada; the great difficulty we have, or shall have to keep it, is for want of a communication by land into that country, altogether by land, which we may have from this to St. John's, which will not exceed ninety miles, by which quick intelligence, and an army may be thrown into that country from this in six days; no danger then of a fleet and army from Britain or France. We can provide here for any number on their march, and when in Canada, there is no want; a road also, will connect these people with ours; trade might be carried on, or proposed, which will secure the trading part; our people doubtless are amongst them, which will wear out their Popish bigotry; until that is the case, no great trust to the French. Supposing we set up for independency, how much value is the fur and skin trade of that vast extensive river, lakes and country, (doubtless a million a year.) On the whole, considering every circumstance, convenience and situation, I could heartily urge that you use your endeavour that such a road be thought upon and done early, as early as April; I would do all in my power to forward it. The course from this is nearly forty degrees north-west to Montreal. We are sixty miles east of Crown-Point; nearly north from Hartford; northwest from Boston, one hundred and forty miles; from Newbury northwesterly one hundred and twenty-five miles; about the same distance from Portsmouth; but the maps will inform; Dr. Langlon's is a very good one. If you remember, it is but two years last October, that you, Esquire Stevens and myself, sent a surveyor, chain-man, &c., who measured and marked a road to Missisque Bay, and it is, undoubtedly, good for a road so far, which is two-thirds of the way; indeed, our line terminated forty-five degrees north latitude. I had thoughts that the road be carried to the east of Missisque Bay, but there is danger of drowned land; should it be so, a ferry at the mouth of Missisque river, which will be but three-quarters of a mile; cross Wind-Mill Point, another ferry of the same width, then a good road may be had to Conaga, at thirty miles distance, about six miles above Montreal. But I would, if practicable, make a road without being troubled with water; water carriage is good, and answers an excellent end; but what I would, is, that if we have a sudden call from Canada, we may repair thither without any hindrance. For suppose Canada to be in our hands next May or June, we are certain a fleet and army are in the mouth of St. Lawrence, destined to reduce Quebeck, an army sufficient to repel might be sent this way seasonably, and I must think, that in the hands of the Ministry, it is their greatest advantage against, and in our hands as much, and more, if can be, and I have always wondered that the wise heads against us, if any there be, had not struck on New-York and Quebeck, which would have cut off the communication between the North and South Colonies, and harassed our frontiers, which are of a great extent. The Indians would have been in their favour. We could not have stood out till now; therefore, let us make by the advantage they have given us.

I do not know the situation of the entrance into York, but I should think, if possible, that harbour ought to be secured for divers reasons. York is of more consequence to us, than all the harbours to the east. How easy would it have been for the King's troops and shipping, to have cut off the communication between the North and South Colonies, by taking possession of New-York and the North river, and would not numbers have joined them at York, and will not the King take possession there this winter? I trow not. I believe yet, if the King had possession of Canada, before next June there would be a communication open for them by Albany. Even now, in the Winter, fortifications ought to be built at Sandy-Hook, to keep out, &c. I only speak of this as it comes in my way. I have sent to Colonel Bedel, to see to the road on that side, but I am afraid the post will not get there, it is so bad crossing the lakes at this season. If this road was done, four days would come tidings. The affair of this road must be soon concluded upon, as provisions should be provided in the Winter, and it is much easier got now, than in April or May. I should be glad to have a return from you as soon as possible; how your publick affairs stand. I would be willing to do any thing that might contribute to so glorious a cause that we are now engaged in.

I have wrote in a broken manner my thoughts; you may pick out what of mine you like, and add to your own; perhaps you will, in so much, find something. When you go to Boston save your and our Scotch people, if they are friends. I would recommend that you continue in the service, if you are like to be of service. I don't say that I will not join the army in the Spring, if health remain. I am now in good health. All are well here.

My best regards to the honourable gentlemen in the Army. From your humble servant,
JACOB BAYLEY.

The Captains of the Militia companies, are again called upon to make out exact return-rolls of their men, specifying the towns they come from, and the regiments they are joined to.

The General expects from the officers and soldiers a strict obedience to the general standing orders, forbidding rambling from camp without leave, and hopes every person will exert himself in his particular station to preserve order, and that alertness so necessary in an army within cannon shot of their enemy.

As Milk cannot be procured during the winter season, the men are to have one pound and a half of Beef, or eighteen ounces of Pork per day.

Half pint of Rice, or a pint of Indian Meal per week.

One quart of Spruce Beer per day, or nine gallons of Molasses to one hundred men per week.

Six pounds of Candles to one hundred men per week, for guards.

Six ounces of Butter, or nine ounces of Hog's Lard per week.

Three pints of Peas or Beans per man per week, or vegetables equivalent, allowing six shillings per bushel for Beans or Peas, two and eight pence per bushel for Onions, one and four pence per bushel for Potatoes and Turnips.

One pound of Flour per man, each day; hard Bread to be dealt out one day in a week, in lieu of Flour.

Captain Wentworth Stewart, of Colonel Phinney's Regiment, tried at a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Bricket was President, for "disobedience of orders, and gross abuse to Lieutenant-Colonel March, of the said regiment." The Court are unanimously of opinion that Captain Stewart is guilty of repeated abuse to Lieutenant-Colonel March, and, therefore, adjudge that he ask pardon of Colonel March, before all the officers of the regiment, and at the same time receive a severe reprimand from Colonel Phinney.

John Wales, in Captain Williams's Company, Colonel Greaton's Regiment, tried at the above Court-Martial for "robbing the Quartermaster-General's store." The Court find the prisoner guilty of a breach of the forty-ninth Article for regulating the Massachusetts Army; and, therefore, adjudge him to receive ten lashes upon the bare back with a cat-o'-nine-tails.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to be executed the first fair day.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, December 25, 1775.

DEAR SIR: At the same time that I thank you for stopping visitors in search of preferment, it will give me pleasure to show civilities to others of your recommendation. Indeed, no gentleman that is not well known, ought to come here without letters of introduction, as it puts me in an awkward situation with respect to my conduct towards them.

I do not very much understand a paragraph in your letter, which seems to be taken from mine to Colonel Hancock, expressive of the unwillingness of the Connecticut troops to be deemed Continental. There is no expression in any of my letters, that I can either recollect or find, that has a tendency that way; further than their unwillingness to have officers of other Governments mixed in their corps; in which they are not singular, as the same partiality runs through the whole. I have, in some measure, anticipated the desires of the Connecticut Delegates, by a kind of representation to each of the New-England Governments of the impracticability of raising our complement of men by voluntary enlistments, and submitting to their consideration whether, if the powers of Government are sufficiently coercive, each town should not be called upon for a proportionate number of recruits. What they will do in the matter remains to be known. The militia, who have supplied the places of the Connecticut Regiments, behave much better than I expected they would under our want of wood, barracks, and blankets. With these men, and such as are reinlisted, I shall hope, if they will be vigilant and spirited, to give the enemy a warm reception, if they think proper to come out. Our want of powder is inconceivable. A daily waste, and no supply, presents a gloomy prospect. I fear the detention of the vessels from your port is so generally known, as to defeat the end. Two men-of-war, it is said, put into New-York the other day, and were immediately ordered out, supposed to Virginia.

I am so much indebted for the civilities shown to Mrs. Washington on her journey hither, that I hardly know how to acknowledge them. Some of the enclosed (all of which I beg the favour of you to put into the post-office) are directed to that end, and I shall be obliged to you for presenting my thanks to the commanding-officers of the two battalions of Philadelphia, for the honour done to her and me, as also to any others equally entitled.

I very sincerely offer you the compliments of the season, and wish you and Mrs. Reed, and your fireside, the happy return of many of them, being, dear sir, yours, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed, Esq.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL WARD.

Cambridge, December 25, 1775.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to inform you that he is very apprehensive that the troops in Boston, when the bay is frozen sufficiently hard for them to pass, will take the hay that is on the marsh unless it is removed. You will, therefore, be pleased to have notice given to the persons owning it to take it away and secure it immediately, or his Excellency will be under the necessity of having it burnt.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Major-General Ward.

COLONEL MOYLAN TO WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, December 25, 1775.

SIR: Your letter of the 20th instant, is come to hand. As the corn and oats are wanting for the use of the army, Colonel Mifflin must have them. He will give the price you mention for the one-third belonging to the captors. As to the other two-thirds, it is of little consequence what price is fixed thereon. Colonel Glover must certainly have been mistaken when he informed you that his Excellency was willing that the corn and oats should be disposed of at your place. It could not be his meaning, as he knew the want the Quartermaster was in for them. I wish you would send up immediately the baggage belonging to Captain Foster's people, for they are in a very dirty condition; also for such of Captain Adams's men as are here. I do not know what directions to give you relative to the porter. We must order a survey on it, and judge by the report of its value. I think some butts would sell well at camp.

I am, &c.,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To William Barilett, Esq., Beverly.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE REPRESENTATIVES OF PORTSMOUTH, NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Portsmouth, N. H., December 25, 1775.

Last Monday, at a publick town meeting, the following gentlemen were chosen Delegates to represent this town in Provincial Congress now convened at Exeter; and, by a Committee appointed to draw up Instructions for them, they were the next day unanimously voted by the Town.

To Samuel Cutts and Samuel Sherburne, Esqs., and Captain Pierce Long.

GENTLEMEN: As the approaching session of the Congress will be attended with the consideration of matters of more importance than ever came before any body of men in this Colony, your constituents desire your strict attention to these their instructions, supposing your motives in accepting our choice of you to be those, alone, of promoting the publick good.

The precept sent to this town for the choice of Delegates, mentions our taking up a form of Government in this Colony. This we conceive to be a measure to be entered on with the greatest caution, calmness, and deliberation. We are of opinion that the present times are too unsettled to admit of perfecting a form, stable and permanent; and that to attempt it now would injure us, by furnishing our enemies in Great Britain with arguments to persuade the good people there that we are aiming at independency, which we totally disavow. We should, therefore, prefer the government of the Congress, till God, in his providence, shall afford us quieter times.

If, however, the Congress shall think proper to establish a new form of Government, we enjoin you, that no private pique or prejudice may seclude from the appointment to any place of honour or profit men of approved honour and integrity; whether members likely to be appointed to such places, who you have every reason to think sought an election, that you do every thing in your power to prevent their appointment.

The courts of justice in this Colony, you are sensible, have long slept. We earnestly require you that you use your influence in the Congress that the law may have its course, not only for the punishment of offenders but to enforce the payment of just debts, under such regulations as the Congress, in their wisdom, shall think proper.

As the dastardly and inhuman behaviour of the persons hitherto intrusted by the British Ministry to execute their designs against America, convince us that they will take all advantages of the weakness of any post, while they artfully avoid all such as are in a situation to make a resistance, we desire you will pay proper attention to the further fortifying and guarding the port of Piscataqua, now the frontier of the Colony; and that, in general, you spare no pains to have every part of this Colony in a state of defence. At the same time, however, that we give you this instruction, we recommend it to you that, if a plan of accommodation be proposed, the completion of which will terminate in an honourable settlement of the present disputes, you give your assent thereto; and we the more readily advise this, because we are by no means of opinion that the present measures are countenanced by the British nation in general, (ever remarked for their true valour and love of freedom, and who, when they are fully acquainted with the dispute, will undoubtedly approve the conduct of their sons, so like that of their ancestors at the Revolution,) but rather that they are the schemes of a set of men lost to every sentiment of true honour, and sunk into a state of dissipation and luxury, which they are endeavouring to support by subjugating the most loyal subjects their master could boast of.

As we are firmly persuaded the measures we are taking for the preservation of our freedom are highly justifiable in the sight of God and man, we are determined to hazard our lives and fortunes in the prosecution of them, convinced that our brethren in every part of the Colony are actuated by the same motives, and will readily pay their proportion of the publick expense; you will, therefore, be careful to see that the proportion be equitably adjusted with respect to this town, which has already greatly suffered by the loss of its trade, almost its only support, and of the revival of which there is at present no prospect.

We particularly recommend, that you strictly guard against every measure that may have a tendency to cause disunion; and that, at all times, you keep sight of this recommendation, as a disagreement among ourselves is what our enemies are earnestly wishing for, and, consequently, what we should be more particularly careful to see them disappointed in.

You will use your endeavours that any Committees of Safety, which may be appointed by the Colony Congress, may be directed, in their recess, to sit in this town, which, in all probability, will be the seat of action, and may want the readiest assistance; and that the said Committee be kept under short adjournments.

We entertain the highest and most grateful sense of the merit and bravery of such of our brethren as, at this time, are called forth to "jeopard their lives in the high places of the field," and hope this Colony will be behindhand in none, to see that they are properly rewarded, taking due care, at the same time, to keep up the very just and necessary line of distinction between the civil and military powers.

You will, from time to time, inform the Town Committee of Safety of such matters of importance as are proposed to be transacted in Congress, and take their advice and instruction thereon, or that of our constituents in town meeting assembled, if the said Committee shall think proper.

REMONSTRANCE FROM THE TOWN OF PORTSMOUTH.

To the Honourable Congress of the Colony of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, now convened at EXETER for the preservation of the lives, liberties, and property, of said Colony.

The Memorial and Remonstrance of the inhabitants of the town of Portsmouth, in town meeting assembled, humbly shows: That the great rise of goods has given much uneasiness, not only to the inhabitants of this town, already being much distressed by being the frontier, and the total loss of its trade, but also to those of the Colony in general. Although the honourable Continental Congress have recommended that the Committees of the several towns should regulate this matter, yet, inasmuch as we have been informed that goods, although high, are higher at Newbury and Salem, and higher at Cambridge, we are of opinion that it is too extensive, as well as too delicate, an affair to be in the power of any Town Committee to rectify.

We, therefore, look up to the superior wisdom of Congress, entreating that they will take up the matter on a general plan, and afford such relief as the nature of the case requires.

And your Memorialists will ever pray, &c.

JOHN PENHALLOW, Town Clerk.

Portsmouth, December 25, 1775.

JAMES LYON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Machias, December 25, 1775.

SIR: You doubtless remember to have seen an application from the Committee of Safety in this place, for leave to go against Nova-Scotia, which might probably have been taken then with very little difficulty. But we were informed that such an expedition could not be carried on at that time with proper secrecy, and that there was imminent danger from the King's ships. The same difficulties may, possibly, lie in the way now, if any troops are collected and sent from any part near the Head-Quarters. I apprehend that secrecy is as necessary now as ever it was; and, if only one proper person, at a suitable place, be ordered to conduct the whole affair, it will probably succeed.

There have been many applications, I dare say, from many persons and places; but, were I to point out a suitable place, I should mention this, as it is near to Nova-Scotia. I should be more at a loss for a proper person to conduct the enterprise. I know of fitter persons than myself, in many respects, but they are strangers to the Province and people. But I have dwelt there for years, and have a personal acquaintance with almost all the principal men, and know the country well. I should rejoice, therefore, in the appointment to this necessary business; and, if your Excellency, together with those only who must necessarily be acquainted with the appointment, (for I choose none but they should know any thing of the matter,) in your great wisdom should see fit to appoint me, I will conduct the expedition with the utmost secrecy, and (Deo adj.) will add to the dominions of the Continental Congress another Province, before our enemies are able to defend it. All I require is sufficient authority to collect as many troops as I see fit in this Eastern country, not exceeding one thousand men, and vessels to convey them to the place of action, and blank commissions for the necessary officers of a thousand more, to be filled up as I shall find expedient, in Nova-Scotia, where the men are to be raised, put into the Continental pay, and left there to defend the country when taken. And further, that a sufficient quantity of provisions, ammunition, arms, &c., be sent here about the middle of March.

Your Excellency may inquire about me as much as you please, of Benjamin Foster, Esq., Captain Stephen Smith, Captain O'Brian, and Mr. Shannon, for these gentlemen I should choose to have as companions, but do not choose that they, or any other persons living, should know any thing of the design (if this petition is granted) until it is time to embark, except those persons only who have authority to appoint. The above-mentioned gentlemen know nothing of this application.

The reduction of Nova-Scotia is a matter of great importance, and lies near my heart, on account of my many suffering friends in that Province, and on account of the many advantages that would arise from it to this Colony, and to this place in particular. But, should the Government appoint another person to conduct the expedition, I shall cordially acquiesce, and pray for his success, as I ever do that God may smile on all the American arms, till all our enemies are subdued before us.

Your Excellency will not take amiss what my zeal for the honour and safety of my country constrained me to write.

I am, most respectfully, your Excellency's very humble and obedient servant,

JAMES LYON.

His Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-chief of the Army of the United Colonies.

ADVICES FROM AMERICA.

December 26, 1775. }

By the last advices received from Quebeck, of the 26th of October, it appears that General Carleton, who was then at Montreal, and formed a considerable corps of Canadians and English, that he and Lieut. Colonel Madeau, who commanded another corps on Sorel river, were preparing to proceed, by separate routes, to the relief of St. John's, which had been for some time invested by the Rebels, without their being able to make an impression upon it; and that there was the greatest probability that the country would be soon cleared of those invaders, whose force was considerably diminished by sickness and desertion, and in great want of necessary supplies.

There are no advices from Boston later than the 12th of October, when General Gage left it, invested, as before, by the Rebel army, which had, however, attempted nothing since the affair of Bunker's Hill.

The Earl of Dunmore, Governour of Virginia, acquaints the Secretary of State, in a letter dated the 22d of October, on board the ship William, off Norfolk, that on the 15th, his Lordship had landed with a party of between seventy and eighty men, in the neighbourhood of the town of Norfolk, and destroyed seventeen pieces of ordnance, and brought off two more, which had been carried away from that town by the Rebels, and concealed in the country; that on the 17th he had landed again, at about eight miles from the town, and marched between two and three miles into the country, where about two hundred Shirten men were collected to oppose him, but who fled into the woods upon the appearance of the party, leaving behind them some small-arms and ammunition, which his Lordship carried off. That on the 19th he had again landed, and destroyed ten guns, and brought off six, at a distance of two miles from the coast; and on the 20th brought off six more. And on the 21st, the day before his Lordship's letter is dated, he had landed again, and brought off ten guns and two cohorts, and about sixty small-arms, and a great quantity of ball of different sizes; and his Lordship imagines there are not any military stores remaining in the possession of the Rebels in that part of the Province.

In these several landings, his Lordship made seven prisoners, among whom is one Robinson, a Deputy to the Provincial Convention, and one Mathews, a captain of the Minute-Men.

CHESTER COUNTY, (PENNSYLVANIA,) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, December 26, 1775.

Extract from the Votes of Assembly.—“All Battalions now formed, as well as those hereafter to be formed, are desired to make the necessary returns of their officers, with their respective ranks, to the Committee of their County; and the Committees are desired to certify such returns, with their respective ranks, to the Committee of their County; and the Committees are desired to certify such returns, with the respective rank of each Battalion in their County, to the Committee of Safety, that commissions may be issued immediately for every officer, in conformity with these Rules.”—[Article 24.]

This Committee, taking the foregoing Regulation into consideration,

Resolved, That the respective Colonels of the Militia of this County be, and they are, hereby requested to make the necessary Returns of their Officers, with their respective ranks, to Colonel Anthony Wayne, Chairman of this Committee; and he is hereby empowered and desired to certify such Returns, with the respective Rank of each Battalion in this County, to the Committee of Safety, by the 20th day of January next. And it is further recommended, that each Township, or sufficient number of Associates to form a Company, (after the Companies already formed are full,) that hath not already chosen their Officers, do immediately proceed to elect them, that Returns may be made as above directed. And it is further earnestly recommended to the Associates of this County, to acquiesce under, and subscribe their names to, the Rules and Regulations for the better government of the Military Associates, as formed by the honourable House of Assembly of this Province, until there may be an opportunity of an amendment. And they are desired to pay a strict regard and attention to the 23d Article, which is in these words: “No Commissioned, Non-commissioned Officer, or Private, shall withdraw himself from the Company to which he belongs, without a discharge from the Commanding Officer of the Battalion; nor shall such person be received in any other Company without such discharge.”

Resolved, That Anthony Wayne, James Moore, Francis Johnston, Esquires, Doctor Samuel Kennedy, Caleb Davis, William Montgomery, Persifer Frazer, and Richard Thomas, gentlemen, or any five, or more, of them, be appointed, and they are hereby appointed, to represent this County (if occasion be) in Provincial Convention for the ensuing year.—[Extract from the Minutes.]

By order of the Committee:

FRANCIS JOHNSTON, Secretary.

BUCKS COUNTY, (PENNSYLVANIA,) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Bucks County, December 26, 1775.

This Committee, desirous as much as possible to prevent every species of imposition and extortion, which designing person, prompted by a sordid attachment to self-interest, and the present scarcity of sundry articles of goods, may be tempted to commit, have directed the republication of the Ninth Article of the Continental Association; and all shop-keepers, and other retailers of goods, are requested to be particularly attentive thereto, as a wilful violation thereof will necessarily incur the penalties recommended in this and the Eleventh Article of said Association.

Ninth Article. "Such as are venders of goods or merchandise, will not take advantage of the scarcity of goods that may be occasioned by this Association, but will sell the same at the rates we have been respectively accustomed to do for twelve months last past. And if any vender of goods or merchandise shall sell any such goods on higher terms, or shall, in any manner, or by any device whatsoever, violate or depart from this agreement, no person ought, nor will any of us deal with any such person, or his or her factor or agent, at any time thereafter, for any commodity whatsoever."

By order of the Committee:

HENRY WYNKOOP, Clerk.

COLONEL MAXWELL TO LORD STIRLING.

Trenton, December 26, 1775.

MY LORD: I have begun to write, though I know of no opportunity to send it, as the communication this way is not passable for carriages at present.

I have received two bundles, one of breeches and the other of boots, from Mr. White, which I will forward as soon as possible.

I was in company with Mr. Lewis, one of the Congress, on his way home. He said your letter, concerning the Government troops, came to hand the evening before he set off, and it was the subject of discourse of a number of the Delegates for a considerable time, though in a private capacity; and he said it was acknowledged, by all present, that this was not a proper place for them.

The people of this place and Burlington, on proper application made to them, were complacent enough to order the barracks repaired, and provide every other necessary in their powers. I find, when I get them in repair, they will be large enough to hold my regiment; and it will be very handy to exercise them.

I hope you will send me one of your best frocks for a pattern, by the first of the stage carriages, and I will send it back again.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's very humble servant,
WILLIAM MAXWELL.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, December 26, 1775.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose you the extract of a letter which I yesterday had the pleasure to receive from General Montgomery. It has relieved me from a most distressing anxiety, occasioned by a report which prevailed here, that General Montgomery was killed, Colonel Arnold taken prisoner, and our Army totally defeated. I find that this lie was contrived by some here, inimical to us, and so industriously circulated, that it will probably reach Congress before this letter.

Not one of the recruiting officers is as yet returned, and I fear that in four days more Ticonderoga, Fort George, and this place, will be left without any troops; and at all these places there are so many stores, that it gives me great uneasiness that they should be left without proper guards to protect them.

As I have no troops it will not be in my power to send a garrison to the fort in the Highlands. A post of so much importance ought not to be left without a strong one. I have sent Captain Billings, of Colonel Clinton's Regiment, to raise a company; he thinks he can speedily effect it. I propose to send him to the Highlands, unless Congress should direct otherwise.

The officers, prisoners, are making daily applications to me for money to subsist themselves with, and I find myself under a necessity of supplying them, which I do as sparingly as possible. They make no doubt but that General Howe will order their subsistence to be paid whenever he is applied to.

I am informed that General Carleton has sent home all the pilots from Quebec, probably with an intention to have their services early in the Spring.

Congress will perceive that General Montgomery is in sentiment with me on the necessity of sending a reinforcement into Canada. If any preparations are to be made for it, no time is to be lost, as the boards, &c., &c., must be carried to the spot where the boats are to be constructed, before the Winter breaks up, as it will be utterly impossible after that to procure them.

The expense of expresses from here to Cambridge rises so high that I believe it would save money to appoint a post to go from hence to Springfield, where the post from New-York might take the letters to Cambridge, and on his return leave those for this place.

Enclose a list of the military stores intended for General Washington; they are now at Fort-George, and as we have a fine fall of snow, and the weather extremely cold, I hope to see them here on their way to Cambridge in a few days.

Mr. Macpherson, my Aid-de-camp, has behaved during the whole campaign with so much propriety that General Montgomery has entreated me to recommend him to Congress, and beg that he may be rewarded with a Majority. I most sincerely join in the request, and I believe Congress never will have occasion to repent, should they be so good as to confer the favour.

As I have not been honoured with a line from Congress acknowledging the receipt of any of my several letters of the 11th, 18th, 20th, 22d, and 27th ultimo, and 8th instant, I begin to be apprehensive that they have miscarried. Be so good as to let me know by the New-York post if they are come to hand or not.

I am, sir, with respect and esteem, your most obedient,
very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c.

GENERAL MONTGOMERY TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters before Quebec, December 26, 1775.

MY DEAR GENERAL: When last I had the honour to write, I hoped, before now, to have had it in my power to give you some good news. I then had reason to believe the troops well inclined for a coup-de-main. I have since discovered, to my great mortification, that three companies of Colonel Arnold's detachment are very averse from the measure. There is strong reason to believe their difference of sentiments from the rest of the troops arises from the influence of their officers. Captain . . . *, who has incurred Colonel Arnold's displeasure by some misconduct, and thereby given room for harsh language, is at the bottom of it, and has made some declarations which I think must draw upon him the censure of his country, if brought to trial. Captain . . . *, and Captain . . . *, seem to espouse his quarrel. A field-officer is concerned in it, who wishes, I suppose, to have the separate command of those companies, as the above-mentioned Captains have made application for that purpose. This dangerous party threatens the ruin of our affairs. I shall, at any rate, be obliged to change my plan of attack, being too weak to put that in execution I had formerly determined on. I am much afraid my friend . . . * is deeply concerned in this business. I will have an eclaircissement with him on the subject. I will, hereafter, acquaint you more particularly with this matter. In the mean time, I wish you would not mention names; for I know not whether the situation of affairs will admit of doing the publick the justice I could wish.

Strain every nerve to send a large corps of troops down the instant the Lake is passable. It is of the utmost importance we should be possessed of Quebec before succours can arrive; and I must here again give it to you as my opinion, and that of several sensible men acquainted with this Province, that we are not to expect a union with Canada, till we have a force in the country sufficient to ensure it against any attempts that may be made for its recovery. I believe I have mentioned this in my last, but I cannot help repeating it again.

One difficulty occurs to me; How are those troops to be paid here? The Continental money will not be received by the inhabitants. I had distributed part of it to the troops at Montreal; few would receive it. The consequence was, the soldiers offered it for less than its value, and so it became depreciated. One scheme has occurred to me, which I shall communicate by this opportunity to Price, and our other friends at Montreal. If they can send down to the army such articles as soldiers choose to lay out their money upon, employing sutlers for that purpose, who will receive our paper, the troops may then be paid in Continental currency, which will not be depreciated, the soldier will not grumble, as he may be regularly paid, and, by degrees, the inhabitants may acquire confidence in it, seeing our merchants take it freely. What hard cash can be mustered, might pay the contingencies of the army, such as transportation of baggage, &c., and purchase provisions.

I am amazed no money is yet arrived. The troops are uneasy, and shall, by-and-by, be at my wit's end to furnish the army with provisions. I am the more surprised, as I am credibly informed cash arrived from Philadelphia, at Ticonderoga, three weeks since. I have almost exhausted Price, having had upwards of five thousand pounds, York, from him. I must take this opportunity of acknowledging his service. He has been a faithful friend to the cause indeed. His advice and assistance, upon every occasion, I have been much benefited by; and when I consider that he has been the first mover of those measures, which have been attended with so many and great advantages to the United Colonies, I cannot help wishing the Congress to give him an ample testimony of their sense of his generous and spirited exertions in the cause of freedom.

Having so early reported to you my determination to return home, I take it for granted measures are taken to supply my place. Should not any body arrive shortly for that purpose, I must conclude Congress mean to leave the management of affairs in General Wooster's hands; and, therefore, if this business should terminate in a blockade, I shall think myself at liberty to return. However, if possible, I shall first make an effort for the reduction of the town.

I will shortly comply with several articles of directions which I have received from you, and which I deferred in hopes of complying with them, before now, in peaceable possession of Quebeck. The strange, divided state of the troops, all this campaign, has prevented my sending returns, having never been able to get one with any tolerable exactness. The three discontented companies are within a few days of being free from their engagements. I must try every means to prevent their departure; and in this matter I am much embarrassed. Their officers have offered to stay, provided they may join some other corps. This is resentment against Arnold, and will hurt him so much that I do not think I can consent to it.

I am, my dear sir, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient and affectionate humble servant,

RICHARD MONTGOMERY.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO RICHARD HENRY LEE.

Cambridge, December 26, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 6th instant did not reach this place till Saturday afternoon. The money which accompanied it came seasonably, but not, as it was so long delayed, quantum sufficit, our demands at this time being peculiarly great for pay and advance to the troops; pay for their arms and blanketing, independent of the demands of the Commissary and Quartermaster-General.

Lord Dunmore's letters to General Howe, which very fortunately fell into my hands, and were enclosed by me to Congress, will let you pretty fully into his diabolical schemes. If, my dear sir, that man is not crushed before Spring, he will become the most formidable enemy America has. His strength will increase as a snow-ball, by rolling, and faster, if some expedient cannot be hit upon to convince the slaves and servants of the impotency of his designs. You will see by his letters what pains he is taking to invite a reinforcement, at all events, there, and to transplant the war to the Southern Colonies. I do not think that forcing his Lordship on ship-board is sufficient. Nothing less than depriving him of life or liberty will secure peace to Virginia, as motives of resentment actuate his conduct to a degree equal to the total destruction of the Colony. I fear the destination of the naval armament at Philadelphia, is too well known to answer the design. I have heard it spoken of in common conversation, at this place, near a fortnight ago; and the other day was told that two men-of-war, going into the harbour of New-York, (supposed to be those intended for the relief of the Asia), were ordered, and accordingly sailed immediately out, as it is imagined, for Virginia.

My letters to Congress will give you the occurrences of this place. I need not repeat them; but I must beg of you, my good sir, to use your influence in having a Court of Admiralty, or some power appointed to hear and determine all matters relative to captures. You cannot conceive how I am plagued on this head, and how impossible it is for me to hear and determine upon matters of this sort, when the facts, perhaps, are only to be ascertained at ports, forty, fifty, or more, miles distant, without bringing the parties here at great trouble and expense. At any rate, my time will not allow me to be a competent judge of this business.

I must also beg the favour of you to urge the necessity of appointing a Brigadier-General to the vacant brigade in this army. The inconvenience we daily experience, for want of one, is very great; much more than the want of a Colonel to a regiment, for then the next officer in command does the duty. In a brigade, this may not with propriety happen, and seldom or ever is done with any kind of regularity. Perfectly indifferent is it to me whom the Congress shall please to appoint to these offices. I only want it done, that business may go regularly on.

My best respects to the good family you are in, and to your brothers of the delegation; and be assured that I am, dear sir, your most obedient and affectionate servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Richard Henry Lee.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL THOMAS.

Cambridge, December 26, 1775.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to request you to inform him whether the two persons you spoke of and recommended some time ago, have got into any of the regiments. One of them you said had enlisted a company. His Excellency wishes to know, as there are some vacancies here.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Brigadier-General Thomas.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO JONATHAN GLOVER, ESQ.

Cambridge, December 26, 1775.

Acknowledged receipt of his of 25th, relative to the sloop Sally, retaken by Captain Adams, and sent into Marblehead. Desired him to get information to whom the vessel and cargo belonged. If in danger, to land the cargo, avoid embezzlement, &c.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO WILLIAM WATSON, ESQ.

Cambridge, December 26, 1775.

Acknowledged receipt of his of 23d instant, and informed him that application had been made to General Howe for exchange of prisoners, to which Mr. Howe was silent.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO CAPTAIN WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, December 23, 1775.

Ordered him to advertise in the Cambridge and Watertown papers at least eight days before that of the sale of any goods taken by the Continental armed vessels.

MAJOR-GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, December 26, 1775.

MY LORD: I am this day informed, by the master of a vessel arrived here a few days past, from Cape-Nicholas, in the Island of Hispaniola, that the Rebels get supplies of arms and gunpowder from thence in large quantities; one person, by this informant's account, having sold one thousand stand of arms, and one ton of gunpowder, to the master of a privateer, fitted out for that intent from Providence, in the Government of Rhode-Island. And it was generally said at Cape-Nicholas, that the same privateer had sailed with three other vessels under her convoy, having on board two tons of gunpowder, and ten thousand stand of arms, for the use of the Rebels.

It has lately been discovered that persons in the country, suspected of disaffection to Government, having effects and merchandise in this town, have used and are practising various artifices, by a separation and conveyance of their property to those of the town who pass for being well disposed subjects, to secure the same. As they must be indebted to merchants in Britain for the greater part of such goods, and certainly mean to defraud them in payment, I shall do every thing in my power to stop these proceedings, until I receive your Lordship's particular instructions on this head.

With most perfect respect, I have the honour to be,
&c.,

W. HOWE.

To the Earl of Dartmouth.

TO THE PEOPLE OF NORTH-AMERICA.

Philadelphia, December 27, 1775.

Those who have the general welfare of the United English Colonies, in North-America, sincerely at heart, who wish to see peace restored and her liberties established on a solid foundation, may, at present, be divided into two classes, viz: Those who look forward to an independency as the only state in which they can perceive any security for our liberties and privileges, as every measure of the British Government indicates a vigorous prosecution of their unlimited claims—and those who, overlooking the possibility of Lord North's motion being a political manoeuvre, to lull us to rest until he had sufficient time to prepare for an effectual execution of the measures recommended in the address of both Houses of Parliament, believe that it was sincerely intended as a foundation on which a true constitutional union could be re-established, and our liberties remain unimpaired, and, therefore, think it not impossible that Britain and America may yet be united. Though I am far from believing that every man, in both classes, is a sincere well-wisher to American liberty, yet I firmly persuade myself, she has many zealous friends in each, and shall give equal credit to their sincerity. My present design will, I trust, interfere with neither, as I mean only to point out a matter which to me appears, if not absolutely necessary, at least highly expedient; in either case, to throw out some hints which I think important, but which have not been held out to public consideration.

If the present struggle should end in the total independence of America, which is not impossible, every one will acknowledge the necessity of framing a general plan of connection between the Provinces, or what may be called the Constitution of the United English Colonies. We know of no other way to prevent the many feuds and animosities which may naturally be expected to arise in a country circumstanced like America. If, on the other hand, it should terminate in a reunion with Great Britain, there yet appears so great a necessity of such a constitution, that every good man must desire it; for, draw what line you please, for the present, as long as it shall remain possible for the throne of Great Britain to be filled with an ambitious monarch, and an Administration to be found which will pay no regard to the faith of compacts, and, by having the treasury in its hands, as at this day, can command the force of the nation, there will be no absolute safety for America, but in a union of the Colonies.

We have reason to thank the Divine Ruler of the Universe, that such a union, as has heretofore answered the exigencies of the times, has taken place on every emergency; and we may, without superstition, believe that the Divine counsel to the United Colonies is, "Now is your time to form one general plan of an American Union and Constitution, which shall only dissolve with the last breath of your expiring liberty; which, under my protection, will prove an everlasting barrier against tyrannical encroachments."

And if we will, with hearts sincerely attached to the welfare of mankind, in preference to every thing else, studiously endeavour to ascertain that plan which will most effectually secure the enjoyment of the blessings of heaven to all alike, I doubt not but wisdom from above will enlighten our minds, and enable us to secure ourselves against those latent defects in the constitution of empires, to which they have generally owed their destruction; so that the American empire of liberty may, like the temperate sons of religion and virtue, remain unattacked by the disorders, which bring on a too early dissolution, and after having enjoyed the blessing of perfect health to the last, like them, die of old age. I have often indulged myself with the pleasure of believing, that the part of that admirable statesman's, and divine politician's, the Bishop of St. Asaph's Sermon, delivered before the Incorporated Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, on the 19th of February, 1773, which refers to America, was prophetick of what would hereafter happen. And should we lay aside all selfish, interested views, mutual jealousies, and distrust, and pursue the plan of divine and Christian politics there inculcated, I make no doubt of our being able to correct those errors and defects which are to be found in the most perfect constitution of government which ever the world has yet been blessed with. Conscious of my own inabilities, and earnestly solicitous to see matters, which to me appear of the utmost importance, I long withstood the earnest solicitations of my own mind, and declined offering any thing to the publick; but seeing no prospect of what I so ardently wished for, I at last resolved to throw out a few hints in the best manner I could; and as my only view is to set you a thinking on some points which have not been generally attended to, and if possible, to excite men of abilities and virtue to devote some part of their time to a consideration of what may be the most certain and effectual means of securing to all ranks in society, and to the latest posterity, those blessings and privileges which America in her days of peace and prosperity enjoyed, I should be well pleased to find, that the printers of publick papers throughout the Colonies might hold them up to the publick view of the people. Solomon says, "Where no council is, the people fall; but in the multitude of counsellors there is safety." SALUS POPULI.

Philadelphia, December 27, 1775.

I observed on one of the drums belonging to the Marines now raising, there was painted a Rattlesnake, with this modest motto under it, "Don't tread on me." As I know it is the custom to have some device on the arms of every country, I supposed this may have been intended for the arms of America; and as I have nothing to do with publick affairs, and as my time is perfectly my own, in order to divert an idle hour, I sat down to guess what could have been intended by this uncommon device. I took care, however, to consult on this occasion a person who is acquainted with heraldry, from whom I learned, that it is a rule among the learned in that science, "that the worthy properties of the animal, in the crest-born, shall be considered," and, "that the base ones cannot have been intended;" he likewise informed me that the ancients considered the serpent as an emblem of wisdom, and, in a certain attitude, of endless duration—both which circumstances, I suppose, may have been had in view. Having gained this intelligence, and recollecting that countries are sometimes represented by animals peculiar to them, it occurred to me that the Rattlesnake is found in no other quarter of the world besides America, and may, therefore, have been chosen on that account to represent her.

But then "the worthy properties" of a snake I judged would be hard to point out. This rather raised than suppressed my curiosity, and having frequently seen the Rattlesnake, I ran over in my mind every property by which she was distinguished, not only from other animals, but from those of the same genus or class of animals, endeavouring to fix some meaning to each, not wholly inconsistent with common sense.

I recollected that her eye excelled in brightness that of any other animal, and that she has no eye-lids. She may, therefore, be esteemed an emblem of vigilance. She never begins an attack, nor, when once engaged, ever surrenders. She is, therefore, an emblem of magnanimity and true courage. As if anxious to prevent all pretensions of quarrelling with her, the weapons with which nature has furnished her, she conceals in the roof of her mouth, so that, to those who are unacquainted with her, she appears to be a most defenceless animal; and even when those weapons are shown and extended for her defence, they appear weak and contemptible; but their wounds, however small, are decisive and fatal: conscious of this, she never wounds till she has generously given notice, even to her enemy, and cautioned him against the danger of treading on her. Was I wrong, sir, in thinking this a strong picture of the temper and conduct of America? The poison of her teeth is the necessary means of digesting her food, and at the same time is certain destruction to her enemies. This may be understood to intimate that those things which are destructive to our enemies, may be to us not only harmless, but absolutely necessary to our existence. I confess I was wholly at a loss what to make of the rattles, till I went back and counted them, and found them just thirteen, exactly the number of the Colonies united in America; and I recollected, too, that this was the only part of the snake which increased in numbers. Perhaps it might be only fancy, but, I conceived the painter had shown a half-formed additional rattle, which, I suppose, may have been intended to represent the Province of Canada. 'Tis curious and amazing to observe how distinct and independent of each other the rattles of this animal are, and yet how firmly they are united together, so as never to be separated but by breaking them to pieces. One of those rattles singly, is incapable of producing sound, but the ringing of thirteen together is sufficient to alarm the boldest man living. The Rattlesnake is solitary, and associates with her kind only when it is necessary for their preservation. In Winter, the warmth of a number together will preserve their lives, while, singly, they would probably perish. The power of fascination attributed to her, by a generous construction may be understood to mean, that those who consider the liberty and blessings which America affords, and once came over to her, never afterwards leave her, but spend their lives with her. She strongly resembles America in this, that she is beautiful in youth, and her beauty increaseth with her age; "her tongue also is blue, and forked as the lightning, and her abode is among impenetrable rocks."

Having pleased myself with reflections of this kind, I communicated my sentiments to a neighbour of mine, who has a surprising readiness at guessing at every thing which relates to publick affairs; and, indeed, I should be jealous of his reputation in that way, was it not that the event constantly shows that he has guessed wrong. He instantly declared it as his sentiments, that the Congress meant to allude to Lord North's declaration in the House of Commons, that he never would relax his measures until he had brought America to his feet, and to intimate to his Lordship, that were she brought to his feet, it would be dangerous treading on her. But, I am positive he has guessed wrong, for I am sure the Congress would not condescend, at this time of day, to take the least notice of his Lordship in that or any other way. In which opinion I am determined to remain, your humble servant.

TRYON COUNTY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

County Committee Chamber, December 27, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In answer of several letters of you received to day, concerning our Delegates wanting at your House, we would immediately, without delay, acquaint you, that in our meeting held on the 25th of November last, Mr. William Wills, of Harpersfield, was voted as a Delegate of our County, to represent us, in company with Mr. John Moore, at your House; and we despatched him immediately with his credentials therefor, and we doubted not of his appearance in New-York on that purpose some time ago. We have been informed that he went on his journey, and must suppose that he might be arrived by this time. But in case of the delay of such elected second Delegate, we do hereby empower the said John Moore, if agreeable to you, to be our sole representative for our County at the Provincial Congress, until we have certain notice of the circumstances of the aforementioned late chosen Mr. Wills.

Also, if Mr. John Moore should be on his return home in the time when said Mr. Wills would arrive in New-York at your House, we fully approve that he, then, might act in the same manner, as the only one representative for our County, until we shall receive further notice thereof, and in case of such further want of the one or the other, we will immediately cause a new voting again to supply such want. We may assure you that we are very sorry to be the cause of any delay or disappointment in your House; but we hope to be excused for the true circumstances aforementioned, and besides your letters came very late to our hands.

We remain, with all esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants. By order of the Committee:
ISAAC PARIS, Chairman.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN AT WESTMORELAND, TO HIS FRIEND IN HARTFORD, DATED DECEMBER 27, 1775.

It will not be in my power to be in your parts this Winter, as we have lately had a visitation by a body of Tories, under the command of one Plunket, they pretended by orders from Penn; be that as it will, the bottom of it is toryism. As we were threatened with death and destruction, we had no other way but to fight. They had six or seven hundred men, two cannons, &c. I marched with about four hundred of my regiment, which I thought enough for seven hundred of such wretches. As soon as they came in sight, they fired without saying a word, and rushed to surround us. Our people met them with as much resolution, and a very heavy fire ensued. We soon drove them, killed a number, and drove one wing of the body into the mountain; the main body retreated. This was on the 21st of December.

On the 23d, at night, they attempted to cross the river, to destroy our settlements, where the men were chiefly drawn off; I sent a party to receive them, and just as their boat came to shore, with about one hundred men, our people poured in the shot upon them, at about three rods distance, and obliged them to retreat and make off as well as they could. By the best accounts we can get they had fifty or sixty killed and wounded. We had two killed and three wounded, one of which is since dead. Our enemies are all gone off, I believe for the Winter.

MATTHEW THORNTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Exeter, December 27, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Your favour of the 23d instant, respecting the great want of blankets for the Army, I received this day, and communicated the same to the Congress now sitting, who immediately went into the consideration, and resolved to take the most speedy and effectual method in order to purchase all that can be spared within this Colony. Though we are fearful whether any considerable number can be obtained; yet we do not despair of procuring some, which will be forwarded to your Excellency with all possible despatch.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

MATTHEW THORNTON, Pres't.

To His Excellency General Washington.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE UNITED COLONIES.

North-Carolina, December 28, 1775.

The dispute between Great Britain and America has been so often explained by able writers, that it is needless to say any thing concerning it, than this: If the British Parliament have a right to tax America in the manner and for the purposes they pretend, and to make laws to bind us in all cases, then it is unlawful for the Americans to oppose them. If, on the contrary, which has been proved, they have not that right, the Americans, in duty to themselves and their posterity, ought to oppose them. This they have done, and are still doing, notwithstanding the base and cruel measures fallen upon by those in power, in Britain and America, to prevent their procuring the means of defence; in which, however, they have hitherto been unsuccessful, as the Americans have, though at a great expense, been supplied with ammunition sufficient to enable them to maintain a defensive war for many months, during which time they have used every method that could be devised, to prevail with the governing powers in Britain to repeal their unjust and cruel acts, and to revive that peace and harmony which formerly subsisted between Britain and America. Petitions, addresses, &c., have been sent to them, and that repeatedly, in hopes that at last they would meet with the desired and deserved success. But alas! Britons thirst for American blood! Regiments after regiments have been sent over to shed it; more we are threatened with, and all the horrors of an unjust, cruel, and unnatural war, are denounced against their fellow-subjects in America, whom they brand with the odious and undeserved epithet of rebels, only because they retain too much of their honoured British ancestors' spirit to submit to be slaves.

To defray the expenses of this just, necessary, and honourable defensive war, which the Americans have been compelled to engage in, they have been obliged to emit large sums in paper bills of credit. The preparations that Britain is making to prosecute their enslaving schemes the ensuing year, and (as they term it) to conquer America, makes it necessary, not only to keep up the forces that have been employed this year, but to add largely to their number for the service of the next, which will make another emission, and that a large one, absolutely necessary. Now, we know that the value of a paper currency depends upon the funds established to sink the bills in circulation, which, in the present case, is designed to be effected by a capitation or poll tax, to be paid annually by the people of each Province, for a number of years to come. But how the people are to become able to pay this tax is the next thing to be considered, and it cannot be considered too soon; for, should any real or imaginary insufficiency in the fund present itself to the publick, or be presented to it by the enemies of America, the credit of our paper currency sinks instantly. Our armies can then no longer be kept up, nor our liberties defended; we must then disband the one and resign the other, and become the abject slaves of those wretches whose mercies are cruel. The grand inquiry is, how these difficulties may be surmounted? And here I must beg leave to say that I was much surprised at the instructions given by the Pennsylvania Assembly to their Delegates appointed to represent that Province in the Continental Congress, which runs thus: "Though the oppressive measures of the British Parliament and Administration have compelled us to resist their violence by force of arms, yet we strictly enjoin you, that you, in behalf of this Colony, dissent from, and utterly reject, any propositions, should such be made, that may cause or lead to a separation from our mother country, or a change of the form of this Government." They add: "You are directed to make report of your proceedings to this House." That constituents have a right to give instructions to their representatives, and that they ought to exercise that right, will not be denied by any man who is acquainted with the British Constitution; but I think these instructions smell strong of Toryism, and I am sure they do not retain so much as the shadow of friendship to the cause of American liberty. The literal meaning of them seems to be this: If other petitions, addresses, &c., which we would still have presented, (even while British soldiers and fleets are murdering our people and burning our towns,) are, as the former ones have been, rejected and laughed at, we will, rather than not be esteemed British subjects, submit to the most abject slavery that our lordly masters will deign to let us live under.

Let us now take a view of the present state of North-America. Her ports blocked up, her towns burnt, her coasts watched by ships of war, her rivers and creeks infested with their tenders, commissioned to exercise the honourable employment of stealing sheep, hogs, cattle, and whatever else their vile commanders direct them, or they can force from the unguarded inhabitants. Add to this, the inhabitants of some towns of the first note in our country are drove from their habitations to make room for a vile, mercenary army, consisting of slaves for soldiers, and abandoned Ministerial tools for officers, whose deeds proclaim them incapable of further degeneracy. Let it not pass unnoticed, that the savage Indians, the Negro slaves, and the refuse of English jails, the convict servants, have all been applied to, to assist them in carrying fire and sword to the peaceful abodes of the honest, industrious inhabitants of these once happy Colonies, thereby to compel them to submit to slavery and oppression. Next, let us consider the vile intentions of the fabricators of the Restraining Act, calculated (by preventing the sale of our produce to any but British purchasers) to prevent our procuring the means of defence; and, lest this precaution should prove ineffectual, they have applied to several European Powers to prevent their subjects furnishing us with arms and ammunition, lest, if we are, we should put them to the noble use of defending ourselves. Mean and cowardly as it is, yet this they have done; they know our courage and fear the effects of our just indignation, when armed for the conflict.

From this view of our present state, which is not exaggerated, how weak, not to say wicked, must those men be who could vote for our suffering one moment longer, such cruel treatment and such vile indignity, even worse than might be expected from an enraged foreign enemy in time of open war! What has Britain to complain of, that she ought not to have expected from us if she had only considered us as men. But, condemning us as the descendants of those brave men, who, scorning to be the slaves of a tyrannical Prince and an abandoned Administration, removed from Britain (that sink of corruption) to this land of freedom, where, till of late, tyranny and corruption have not dared to show their detested heads, how infatuated must these men be, who think such men will wear the shackles of Ministerial slavery or lay down their liberties but with their lives. Thanks be to Heaven, though our case is bad, (so bad that Britain cannot make it worse,) there is yet a way open for us, not only to escape the threatened ruin but to become a happy, wealthy, powerful, and respectable people. If it be asked how this great work is to be effected? I answer,

First. By declaring an immediate Independence.

Secondly. By holding forth, to all the Powers of Europe, a general neutrality.

Thirdly. By immediately opening all our ports, and declaring them free to every European Power, except Great Britain, and inviting foreigners to purchase our commodities, and to furnish us with arms, ammunition, and such manufactures as we cannot, as yet, furnish ourselves with; which we cannot do with any prospect of success, so long as we retain even but the shadow of dependance on, or subjection to, Great Britain. We need not doubt, that Britain would endeavour to prevent our having a trade after our declaring independency, as well as now; but the case will, if I am not greatly mistaken, be widely different: Now, she says, we are her subjects, and we have not, as yet, informed the world that we disown subjection. She says, other nations have no right to trade with us, and it is at their risk if they do, and they know it; but when we declare ourselves independent, and offer trade, I apprehend the other Powers will look on us, and esteem us as such; as they certainly have nothing to do with the dispute between Britain and us, and consequently will not tamely submit to Britain's making captures of their vessels. Certain I am, it is the interest of America that she have a free trade to all the European markets, or that they have with us, which, for some time, will answer our purpose as well; and that the trade to North-America should be open, is the interest of every maritime Power in Europe; therefore, we need not doubt their encouraging it.

Fourthly. That in each Province, such persons as are able and willing, shall be encouraged to form themselves into companies (having first subscribed such sums as their circumstances will allow) for the erecting manufactories, the most suitable to the present and future real wants of our inhabitants.

Fifthly. That an act be passed in each Province, absolutely to prevent every kind of luxury and unnecessary expense, either in dress, equipage, furniture, eating, drinking, gaming, or any kind of expensive diversions, &c., &c., under heavy penalties.

Sixthly. That, at the expense of each Colony, encouragement be given to manufacturers and artificers of every useful kind to remove from Europe to North-America, there to set up their several trades; and that the encouragement that each Colony will give to each person, whether in land, money, or indulgences, be caused to be inserted in the newspapers of the different countries in Europe, from whence it might be expected such persons would be permitted to remove.

Sevently. That an act be immediately passed in each Province for an immediate and constant application of the quit-rents of the land in each Province, to the purpose of fortifying the coasts, rivers, &c., as soon as may be, for the building and fitting for service so many vessels of force as may be found necessary for our domestick defence.

Eighthly. That in the tobacco Colonies large quantities of tobacco shall no longer be permitted to be raised, as it is found to interfere with farming, so necessary now, and always to be encouraged, for the purpose of raising materials for manufacturing, which never can be raised in sufficient quantities for the use of the inhabitants of those Colonies while they employ all their force in raising tobacco.

Ninthly. That the laws of each Province, or so many of them as may be found of publick utility, be continued in force, with such alterations only as may be deemed necessary; that their number be rather lessened than increased; that as much as be ambiguity be expunged, and perspicuity introduced in its stead; that law be no longer a burden and a curse, but a blessing to our country.

Tenthly. That religion in each Province be continued upon the footing it now is, and that no man be despised on account of his religious opinions, provided they do not interfere with the peace and safety of the community; except, that Popery shall not be countenanced, by law, in any of the United Colonies.

I have now given the publick my sentiments on the present alarming state of our affairs, showed the necessity of a change, and endeavoured to point out the way to effect it. But I am sensible there are so many individuals that are interested to prevent such measures being pursued, that they will endeavour to frustrate every attempt that the Americans may make to provide for themselves those things they have hitherto depended on them for, and deter them, if possible, from making the attempt, by persuading them of the impossibility of succeeding. But surely our countrymen will not be guilty of so gross an absurdity as to take counsel of them, whose interest it is to deceive them. Some say, it is impracticable to manufacture for ourselves. I grant it so, with respect to the tobacco Colonies, without quitting, in some considerable degree, their favourite staple; but I should not despair of success, was I to undertake to prove, that it is their interest to do it now, and that they would have, in general, been in better circumstances as a people, had they fallen upon other methods than planting many years ago. The Northern Colonies are a proof of it, and the Southern ones, from their favourable climate, have greatly the advantage of their Northern neighbours.

It is by some said to be ungrateful in us to desire a separation from what they are fond to call the Parent State, to whom we are so much obliged. I ask for what? Why, say they, for taking off your produce, for furnishing you with what you want in exchange, and for protecting you from invading enemies at a great expense. In answer to which, I say, we have not sought nor desired a separation; that if we do separate, it is of necessity, not of choice. Cruelty and oppression compels us. We must separate, or become the labouring slaves of Britain, which we disdain to be. And with respect to trade, I deny that there is any colour of obligation, since we are compelled to sell to them, and them only, who thereby have it in their power to take our produce to themselves at any price they please to allow for it, and have the same advantage in rating whatever we take from them at what price they please. With regard to protection, I allow they assisted us, who were not negligent in opposing enemies, that were so on account of our connection with them. But I further say, that in protecting us, they protected themselves; for had France, in the last war, conquered these Colonies, Britain would have lost their trade, and France have gained it; the certain consequence of which would have been, that, for want of a revenue to support fleets and armies for her defence, against an enemy made so much stronger by such an advantageous acquisition, Britain could hardly have escaped becoming a Province of France before this day.

These things, I hope, will be duly considered by every inhabitant of America, as they are recommended to them to show the absurdity of continuing to petition and address, while our towns are in flames, and our inhabitants murdered, rather than separate from a cruel, blood-thirsty people, the cause of all our woes. If this attempt proves in any respect serviceable to the American cause, it will give a secret pleasure to

A BRITISH AMERICAN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL HOWE TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION, DATED DECEMBER 28, 1775.

I am at present, sir, so indispensably engaged, that I have not time to be so particular as I could wish, had I any thing of importance to communicate; but, except some salutes from the men-of-war, matters remain just as they did when I wrote you last. No effectual steps have been taken in respect to the exchange of prisoners, for which the enclosed copies of letters between Lord Dunmore and myself will, I hope, account in such a manner as to leave me, in the opinion of your honourable body, free from blame.

Ship Dunmore, December 25, 1775.

SIR: I have this moment received yours of the 24th, and in compliance with your request, have empowered the bearer, Mr. Laurie, to agree to any one of your Lieutenants in our custody, being exchanged in place of Mr. Batut, Lieutenant of the Fourteenth Regiment, and to an equal number of your privates, in lieu of those of the Fourteenth with you now.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
To Robert Howe, Esquire.

DUNMORE.

Norfolk, December 25, 1775.

MY LORD: Desirous as we are to regain our friends in your custody, and to return to the army the officers and men of their corps who have fallen into our hands, we can, by no means, submit to place the officers and soldiers of the army, who have been taken in battle, upon a footing with those officers of militia and the peasants, that you have thought proper to deprive of their liberty. We have, since our march from the Great-Bridge, taken a number of those who were in action at that place; among them, some who acted under your commissions as field-officers; those I conceive, may be equitably exchanged for those of the same rank in your hands; and reluctant as I am to continue in confinement either your prisoners or ours, I shall consent to no exchange but such as equity shall warrant. I beg leave to refer you to Mr. Laurie for particulars. I should be glad to be favoured with a list of the prisoners you have in your hands, the rank they bear, and the manner in which they were taken.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT HOWE.

Ship Dunmore, December 26, 1775.

SIR: Yours of last night I received, and really am at a loss to know what your meaning is; you certainly, when you proposed an exchange of prisoners, could never have meant to pay your own people so poor a compliment, as not to look upon those, whom the Convention thought proper to appoint to hold military commissions, in any other light than officers; those you talk of as officers of militia and peasants, whom, you say, I have thought proper to deprive of their liberty, come under that predicament, and were taken armed against their liege Sovereign. If the rank of officers in each army is not to be our guide, I own I am at a loss to know by what rule we are to be governed in exchange of prisoners.

I am, sir, your humble servant,
To Robert Howe, Esq., in Norfolk.

DUNMORE.

Norfolk, December 27, 1775.

MY LORD: I was not understood by your Lordship last night, and it gives me concern. You do me justice, however, when you suppose I could not mean, even by implication, to degrade any commissions issued by Conventions, whose authority I acknowledge, whose appointment I honour, and to whose service I have devoted myself. I am, I find, to inform your Lordship of what I really thought you before acquainted, that Conventions, from the fatal necessities of the times, have been compelled to establish three different military bodies: Militia, Minute Battalions, and Regular Regiments; and that they have made a distinction in the rank of each. What I said, therefore, in respect to militia officers, was not without its propriety, had my meaning extended no further than as to their rank. You, my Lord, sometimes affect so much to despise any rank derived from Conventions, that courtesy itself cannot induce you, even in the common forms of address, to admit those appellations which they have fixed to particular characters. Circumstances, however, at other times, have so far an influence upon your Lordship as to prevail upon you, not only to admit that rank, but to endeavour to carry it higher than even the Convention intended.

A Colonel in the Minute service ranks only with a Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regulars; a Colonel of Militia, only with a Lieutenant-Colonel of Minute-Men. This must make it plain, that a Militia Lieutenant, though your Lordship had taken him in battle, cannot be deemed an equitable exchange for a Lieutenant of Regulars, much less, my Lord, if a man should have been torn from his farm, and arbitrarily deprived of his liberty, because a Convention had nominated him an officer, without his having done any one act that could warrant his seizure, or continue his confinement longer than despotism prevails over rights and privileges. In this case I might, indeed, compassionate his fate, but should betray the confidence reposed in me by my country, should I attempt to release him by a prisoner of equal rank taken in battle, who it would be my duty to consider as a pledge in my hands, for the redemption of some brave men, that by the chance of war may happen to be captivated.

The Convention, in order to establish a Militia, have appointed Captains in particular districts to train and exercise, in arms, all persons from sixteen to sixty years of age, without instructing or directing them to act against Government; these may meet and go through the manual exercise, and then return home, surely without the least guilt. Six months after, should some or all of these people be taken from their ploughs, made prisoners, and offered in exchange for those that are prisoners of war, could an officer be justified, who admitted of such an exchange? or would you, my Lord, should we seize upon the persons of the peasants, who come into this town every day, and who attend to your Proclamation, and subscribed your Test, admit of them in exchange for our officers and men, who you assert, were taken in arms? Information had given me to think, and till your last letter, I had no reason to doubt, that some of these officers and men you offered us, were such as I have described; and it was to that I alluded when I said, that I could not put those prisoners, taken in battle, upon a footing with the militia officers and peasants, whom you, my Lord, had thought proper to deprive of their liberty. I was explicit, I thought, when I told your Lordship, that I looked upon those officers, who, under your appointment, fought at the Great-Bridge, though taken since the action, as prisoners, who would be equitably offered in exchange for those of ours of the same rank taken by you; and when I desired an exact list of the men in your custody, the rank they bore, and the manner in which they were taken, I imagined it would be granted me; I wish now to obtain such a list, my Lord; and if I do, you will find that I shall not degrade those commissions issued by Conventions, the rank of which you seem so desirous I should maintain, but join you heartily, if you choose it, in one measure at least, that of returning to their friends such prisoners as we have of yours, and restoring to the bosom of their country those that you have torn from it.

I have not had it in my power, till within this hour, to answer your favour of last night; the delay you will please to excuse.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

ROBERT HUWE.

To His Excellency Lord Dunmore.

TORIES IN SUSSEX COUNTY, NEW-JERSEY.

Newtown, Sussex County, New-Jersey, }
December 28, 1775. }

Last Tuesday, the 26th instant, about four hundred of the militia of this County, under the command of Colonel Ephraim Martin and Mark Thompson, assembled and proceeded in good order and regularity, in quest of Tories, a considerable number of whom (inhabitants of this County) had entered into a combination and agreement not to coin-ply with any Congress measures; about forty, we hear, are taken, most of whom have recanted, signed the Association, and profess themselves true Sons of Liberty, being fully convinced of their error: and that two or three who remain incorrigible are to be sent to the Congress to be dealt with.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED AT HULL, IN ENGLAND, FROM A GENTLEMAN IN NORTH-CAROLINA, DATED DECEMBER 29, 1775.

Our Provincial Convention, at their last meeting, appointed Committees of Safety, consisting of thirteen members for each of the six districts of the Province; and these Committees, by authority of the Convention, elected a Provincial Council, consisting likewise of thirteen. The Legislative, Judicial, and Executive powers of Government, are now entirely in the hands of the said Council and Committees. Governour Martin is still on board the Cruiser, sloop-of-war, from which he issued a proclamation, forbidding a meeting of the Convention, which they resolved was a false, scandalous, scurrilous, and malicious libel, tending to stir up tumults and insurrections, dangerous to the peace of His Majesty's Government, &c., and ordered it to be burnt by the common hangman, which was accordingly done. They appointed two Treasurers, and ordered them to draw on the Continental Congress at Philadelphia for one hundred thousand dollars, for the pay and maintenance of three thousand Minute-Men; and to replace that sum, they have issued paper bills of credit for one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, and laid penalties on those who should speak disrespectfully of the bills, or offer them at less than eight shillings for a dollar. The Minute-Men are to be trained every day, Sundays not excepted; the uniform is a hunting-shirt, leggings, or spatterdash, with garters. To encourage the supplying ourselves with what we used to import from Great Britain, they have voted large premiums to any person or persons who shall erect furnaces for refining iron, slitting mills, steel furnaces, and also, for the making of cotton cards, needles and pins; the refining of sulphur, and making saltpetre and gunpowder in this Colony.

The following is a copy of a Test drawn up by the Convention, signed by themselves, the Provincial Council, Committees of Safety, &c. &c., viz:

"We, the subscribers, professing our allegiance to the King, and acknowledging the Constitutional Executive power of Government, do solemnly profess, testify, and declare, that we do absolutely believe that neither the Parliament of Great Britain, nor any constituent member thereof, have a right to impose taxes on these Colonies to regulate the internal policy thereof; and that all attempts, by fraud or force, to establish and exercise such claims and powers, are violations of the peace and security of the people, and ought to be resisted to the utmost. And, that the people of this Province, singly and collectively, are bound by the acts and resolutions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses; because, in both, they are freely represented by persons chosen by themselves.

"And we do solemnly and sincerely promise and engage, under the sanction of virtue, honour, and the sacred love of liberty and our country, to maintain and support all and every the acts, resolutions, and regulations of the said Continental and Provincial Congresses, to the utmost of our power and abilities.

"In testimony whereof," &c.

The former Convention voted fifty thousand pounds for raising and embodying one thousand men, to be employed in the common cause, which were accordingly raised. A body of five hundred of them are now encamped near Wilmington. It is reported that many of them desert.

We have but little communication with the neighbouring Provinces, owing to the distracted state of the whole Continent; and what we hear is not always to be depended upon. The last accounts from Virginia say, that Lord Dunmore does not lose ground; and since his proclamation, offering freedom to indentured servants and slaves, many people have joined him to save their property. He seized a printing press at Norfolk, which he employs for his own purposes; and, by the means of Negroes, and others, continues to circulate his proclamations and intelligence through the country. It is said that Colonel Henry, with a large body of men, is gone against him; and a General from the American camp, at Cambridge, in Massachusetts-Bay, is expected on the same service.

A gentleman, who lately passed this way from South-Carolina, said that Lord William Campbell, Governour of that Province, and his Secretary, were still on board the Tamer, sloop-of-war. The Governour's lady remained at his house in Charlestown. Mr. Stuart, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, who had fled to East-Florida in May last, lately held a Congress with a great number of Indians, near St. Augustine, but they had not learnt, at Charlestown, what had been done by him and them. The Government of South-Carolina has been, for some time, in the hands of a Council of Safety, consisting of thirteen, and a General Committee of ninety-nine, who permitted several vessels to carry rice to the West-Indies, on condition of their bringing arms, ammunition, clothing, and other necessaries in return; and so strictly do they adhere to the General Continental Association, that a quantity of clothing, shipped from a foreign Island, being discovered to be of British manufacture, was sent back in the vessel that brought it. Some of the fire-arms, which were French, had, on trial, been found good for nothing. They have two regiments of Foot and one of Horse in actual pay, besides a great number of Volunteer Companies daily training, exclusive of the Militia, all which are under the command and direction of the Council of Safety.

An attack on Charlestown has been for some time expected, by an armament from England, on which account many of the inhabitants have left the town, almost all the merchandise and valuable effects are removed, and the Provincial records are, by order of the Council of Safety, carried to Dorchester, about twenty miles up in the country. A scheme was formed, and some vessels purchased, in order to attack and seize the Tamer, sloop; but, when the vessels were fitted out and armed, some misapprehension or misunderstanding arose among the several companies destined for the service, and the design was given up or postponed. It was said that the sum of one million pounds, currency, issued by the Congress last Summer, was nearly expended in putting the Colony in a state of defence; cash was very scarce, and many persons were issuing their own notes.

CAPTAIN BELLEW TO COLONEL HOWE.

Ship Liverpool, off Norfolk, December 30, 1775.

SIR: As I hold it incompatible with the honour of my commission to suffer men; in arms against their Sovereign and the laws, to appear before His Majesty's ships, I desire you will cause your sentinels, in the town of Norfolk, to avoid being seen, that women and children may not feel the effects of their audacity; and it would not be imprudent if both were to leave the town.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

HENRY BELLEW.

To Robert Howe, Esq.

COLONEL HOWE TO CAPTAIN BELLEW.

Norfolk, December 30, 1775.

I am too much of an officer to wish you to do any thing incompatible with the honour of your commission, or to recede, myself, from any point which I conceive to be my duty. Under the influence of reciprocal feelings, consequences may ensue which either, perhaps, would choose to avoid. Our sentinels have received orders not to fire at your boats, or any other, unless approaching the shore in a hostile manner. If they exceed this order, we would punish them ourselves; or, if you do it, we shall thank you for it. If, however, your resentment extends farther than merely to them, I should wish the inhabitants of the town, who have nothing to do in this matter, may have time to remove with their effects. And, as to the rest, I should be unworthy of the respect of a man of your character, if I consulted any thing but my duty.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT HOWE.

To Henry Bellew, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, December 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: Having never considered the four independent companies which have been doing duty at Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham, in the same point of view as the rest of the Army, (although some orders may have gone to or for them, through the hurry of business,) nor included them in my Returns to Congress, according to the Brigade-Major's Report from Congress, I do not think myself authorized to direct pay for them without first laying the matter before Congress, which I shall do by enclosing an exact transcript of your representation of the case, with this single remark: that, as they were not regimented, and were doing duty at some distance from these camps, I did not know whether to consider them as part of the Continental Army, and, therefore, had not ordered them payment heretofore.

With respect to the other requisition contained in your Resolve of the 20th, I do not think myself at liberty to extend the guards of this camp beyond Squantum and Chelsea, both fit places for observation. This was my sentiment of the matter when the Committee did me the honour to call yesterday; but as it appeared to be of some importance to this Government, I did not care to determine upon it without asking the opinion of some of the principal officers in this Army, whose sentiments, I am happy to find, coincide with my own.

This might be assigned as one, among other reasons, to show that I did not consider these four companies as part of the Continental troops; that there were times, in the course of the past Summer, when I should not have suffered them to have remained at the places they were posted, if I had considered myself vested with power to have withdrawn them.

I would not have it inferred, from hence, that I do not think it my duty, and with the greatest cheerfulness shall undertake, to march troops, if these lines are not to be exposed by it, to any place in this or the neighbouring Governments, to oppose an invasion. But, whilst the body of the Ministerial troops continue in Boston, and the circumstances of this Army remain as they are, it must be my first object to guard these lines.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Head-Quarters, Friday night, 8 o'clock, }
December 29, 1775. }

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency General Washington, to acquaint you that he is just informed that you propose to execute the project to-night, which, by some mischance, was delayed last night. If no intelligence of your intention has already reached the enemy, there is no doubt they were sufficiently informed, by the firing, by the tracks this morning they discovered in the snow, and other circumstances, that they are acquainted with your design. His Excellency, therefore, orders me to say, you had better wait a more favourable opportunity, when the absence of the moon, the light afforded by the snow, and weather more suitable to prevent discovery, correspond to give success to your undertaking.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES, Adj't General.

To Brig. Gen. Sullivan, Winter-Hill.

WINTHROP SARGENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Gloucester, December 29, 1775.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: At the request of Messrs. Jacob Green & Co., owners of the sloop Speedwell, — Cory, Master, lately taken by Captain Broughton and sent into this harbour, we have maturely considered the within enclosed account, so far as it is carried out, and are of opinion that the charges are reasonable, and that the losses were sustained; and are further of opinion, that the captors, in justice, should pay it, with the remainder of the account, when the same can be ascertained. And we do recommend to your Excellency the same, hoping you will order that justice may be done to the sufferers ; and beg leave to subscribe ourselves,

Your Excellency's most obedient, humble servants.

WINTHROP SARGENT,
Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

SOUTH-CAROLINA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE CONTINENTAL TREASURERS.

In the Council of Safety, Charlestown, S. C. }
December 31, 1775. }

GENTLEMEN: The Congress, by a Resolution of the 12th July last, empowered the Commissioners of Indian Affairs in the Southern Department, to receive from the Continental Treasury ten thousand dollars, for defraying the expenses of treaties and presents to Indians. The Commissioners met at Salisbury on the 13th ultimo, and, among other proceedings, (copies of all which they transmitted to the Congress,) resolved on a meeting with the Creek and Cherokee Indians, empowered three of their members to purchase goods for presents to the Indians, and to draw on us for ten thousand dollars, and required us to advance them, and draw on you for the like sum. We have, accordingly, agreed to do so, acquainted them therewith, and shall pay their draft when presented, which we expect will be soon.

As we have occasion to send a gentleman, Captain Robert Cochran, to the Massachusetts-Bay, on some particular business of the Colony, in the execution of which he will require money, we have thought proper to draw on you, in his favour, for the sum, to be paid as he may have occasion. We should have procured an order from the Commissioners, which would have been a more formal and proper way of doing the business, but the service on which this gentleman goes requires despatch, money for him will be absolutely necessary. The only Commissioner in this Colony lives at a very great distance, another is in Georgia, a third in the Cherokee country, another in North-Carolina, and the fifth in Virginia; so that waiting for a draft from them, or a majority of them, would have occasioned much delay. We have, therefore, only to repeat, that we hope Mr. Cochran will meet with no disappointment, as it would frustrate our scheme, and be very detrimental to this Colony in particular, and, perhaps, to America in general. We presume the Congress is adjourned, or should have wrote to them on the subject. If they are, and you have any doubts about the propriety of paying this money, be pleased to mention them to the Delegates of Pennsylvania and Mr. Charles Thomson, who, we think, will remove them.

By order of the Council of Safety:

HENRY LAURENS, President.

To George Clymer and Michael Hillegas, Esquires, Continental Treasurers, at Philadelphia.

FREDERICK COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

December 30, 1775. }

SIR: I am directed by the Committee to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 8th instant, which only came to hand yesterday evening, enclosing a resolve of the Congress respecting the removal of Connolly, Cameron, and Smith, to Philadelphia. In obedience thereto, the Committee have sent the prisoners, under guard of an officer (Dr. Adam Fisher) and ten privates, and make no doubt of their being safely delivered, agreeably to order. The guard expect to be reimbursed their necessary expenses, which the Committee do, and they hope the Congress will, think reasonable.

I am directed, also, to transmit you an account of the expenses incurred, on account of the prisoners, during their confinement here, amounting to £27 14s. 5½d., which sum the Committee request the Congress will be pleased to order to be paid to the bearer, Dr. Fisher.

The jail of the County being, in the opinion of the Committee, altogether insecure, they were under the necessity of hiring rooms for the prisoners, and of appointing a guard to prevent their escape. The Militia of this town performed that duty till lately, but, on their refusing to serve any longer without a reasonable satisfaction being made, they were obliged to hire a guard. This has added to the expense, which the Committee would willingly have saved, but which, in our circumstances, could not be avoided.

I am, with respect, sir, your most humble servant,
JOHN HANSON, Jun., Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Congress, Philadelphia.

P. S. Since sealing this letter, I am sorry to acquaint you that Smith has made his escape.

JOHN HANSON, Jun.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 6, 1776.]

Sunday evening, December 31, 1775.

SIR: This moment an express arrived from General Wooster. Copy of his letter, with copy of a letter from General Montgomery to him, I now enclose you.

I cannot procure any gold or silver here to send to Canada. I am afraid it is not to be had at Philadelphia, as a considerable time has already elapsed since Congress gave me reason to hope that a supply would be sent.

I cannot, sir, help repeating my wish that a considerable force should be immediately sent into Canada; the necessity appears to me indispensable, for I do most sincerely believe that, unless such a measure be adopted, we shall severely repent of it, perhaps when too late to afford a remedy. I beg a thousand pardons of Congress for my importunity on this occasion; and I hope they will have charity enough to impute it to my zeal for the American cause.

From what I can learn, the troops that are at Ticonderoga will leave it to-morrow, and I have none to send there. The few that are here refuse to remain until Tuesday, to escort the provisions, before which I cannot move them, for want of carriages.

I have been so very long without hearing from Congress, that I am exceedingly anxious to have the honour of a line from you.

I am, sir, with sentiments of real esteem and regard, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c.

COLONEL DONALD CAMPBELL TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

At Holland-House, Saturday, December 31, 1775.

DEAR SIR: It is with the greatest distress of mind, that I have the task of communicating to you the event of an unfortunate attempt that was made to storm the town of Quebeck, between the hours of two and seven this morning, by four different attacks; unfortunate, indeed, when, with bitterness of soul, I inform you that the gallant and amiable General Montgomery was killed the first fire, as, also, his valiant Aid-de-camp, Captain John Macpherson, and Captain Cheeseman, of the first New-Yorkers, with two or three more. All this happened in the attack on the lower town, at Anse de Meres, where were the three battalions of Yorkers, commanded by the General, whom I attended; and I found myself under the disagreeable necessity of drawing off the troops (too ready to depart) at about seven o'clock, after having passed the first barrier, and just opening to attempt the second.

In the other principal attack, made by Colonel Arnold, with the detachment under his command, Captain Lamb's company of Artillery and two field-pieces, on sleighs, were at the Sole de Matelan, where he succeeded so far as to force one gate, or barrier, and battery, with the misfortune of having his leg splintered, yet I hope not very dangerous, though, from his gallant conduct, he sustained a considerable loss of blood, and is now in the General Hospital, as, also, Brigadier Major Ogden, who was shot (a flesh wound) through the upper part of his shoulder, after a spirited and officer-like conduct, which was distinguishable in the whole of the officers, particularly Lieutenant-Colonel Green, Major Bigelow, and Major Meigs, as, also, Captain E. Oswald, Secretary to Colonel Arnold and a volunteer in the campaign; yet, after carrying that barrier and a second one, they now remain in possession of the house from Limeburner's Wharf, in the lower town, to the second barrier, where they now maintain themselves, with between three and four hundred men; and it is extremely difficult to support them till dark, when I shall hope to draw them off; for which purpose, I sent Colonel James Livingston, with some of his regiment, and Major Dubois, of the Third Yorkers, with upwards of two hundred men, down to the General Hospital, to endeavour to throw themselves in, between this and night, or get Lieutenant-Colonel Green and his party out.

The other attack was with Colonel Livingston and his Canadians, to endeavour burning St. John's Gate with prepared faggots of combustible matter, which was not effected, owing to an early alarm in town. And the last was by another storm attack, from Major Brown's detachment, on Cape-Diamond, commanded by Capt. Brown.

Thus you have the four attacks that were concerted between the dear deceased General Montgomery and Colonel Arnold, which was, in many respects, hurried, from the circumstance of the inlistment of the troops under Colonel Arnold, whose service expires this day. Our whole loss, as far as I can collect without returns, does not exceed fifteen or twenty men, killed and wounded, yet I think a reinforcement of two hundred men, immediately, from Montreal, would be very proper; at the same time, I leave it to you to judge of the propriety of disarming the Tories of Montreal, and, at the same time, to assure you, it is no pleasure to me to enjoy the command which falls on me from the death of the General, and Colonel Arnold's keeping his bed; therefore, I request you will set out for this place as instantly as you can, as your presence is essential, on many accounts. I shall order every care of the troops, and disposition that may occur to me necessary. I must remind you of cash, as there is not above three or four hundred pounds here, from my recollection of what the General said a few days ago; but I have not yet examined any thing, and it is unfortunate, in a particular manner, that both are gone who had the charge of it. The great consumption of powder from the garrison is an object which the General had much at heart, and may be worthy of remark to the Congress, as well as full of force for this country, as you must be convinced the Canadians will never be so firmly on our side as when they are convinced we hold the scales. I hope the last affair will not strike them in the light it does me. I shall not make any alterations in commissions or officers, till I have the pleasure of seeing you here, though application has been made. The remaining Aid-de-camp, Mr. Aaron Burr, I would gladly recommend to you, for the memory of the deceased General, as well as his own personal bravery and good conduct.

I thought to have sent Mr. Melchior's express with this, but the bearer, Mr. Edward Antill, appointed by the General as Engineer, (whom I recommend to your favour and attention,) being well acquainted on the road, I prefer him, for sake of despatch, as I consider every moment important, and to whom I refer you to correct this hurried scroll, and give you particulars he was eye-witness to. My love to all friends and acquaintance, that inquire for me, and believe me to be, with love and esteem,

Your most obedient, humble servant,

DONALD CAMPBELL.

To General Wooster.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

General Hospital, December 31, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I make no doubt but General Montgomery acquainted you with his intentions of storming Quebeck, as soon as a good opportunity offered. As we had several men deserted from us a few days past, the General was induced to alter his plan, (which was, to have attacked the upper and lower town at the same time,) thought it most prudent to make two different attacks upon the lower town; the one at Cape-Diamond, the other through St. Roque's. For the last attack I was ordered, with my own detachment and Captain Lamb's company of Artillery. At five o'clock, the hour appointed for the attack, a false attack was ordered to be made upon the upper town. We, accordingly, began our march. I passed through St.

Roque's, and approached near a two-gun battery, picketed in, without being discovered, which we attacked; it was bravely defended for about an hour, but, with the loss of a number of men, we carried it. In the attack, I was shot through the leg, and was obliged to be carried to the Hospital, where I soon heard the disagreeable news that the General was defeated at Cape-Diamond, himself, Captain Macpherson, his Aid-de-camp, and Captain Cheeseman, killed on the spot, with a number of others not known. After gaining the battery, my detachment pushed on to a second barrier, which they took possession of; at the same time the enemy sallied out from Palace-Gate and attacked them in the rear. A field-piece, which the roughness of the road would not permit our carrying on, fell into the enemy's hands, with a number of prisoners. The last accounts from my detachment, about ten minutes since, they were pushing for the lower town. Their communication with me was cut off. I am exceedingly apprehensive what the event will be; they will either carry the lower town, be made prisoners, or cut to pieces. I thought proper to send an express to let you know the critical situation we are in, and make no doubt you will give us all the assistance in your power. As I am not able to act, I shall give up the command to Colonel Campbell. I beg you will immediately send an express to the honourable Continental Congress, and his Excellency General Washington. The loss of my detachment, before I left it, was about two hundred men, killed and wounded. Among the latter is Major Ogden, who, with Captain Oswald, Captain Burr, and the other volunteers, behaved extremely well. I have only to add, that I am, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient and very humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Wooster, Montreal.

P. S. It is impossible to say what our future operations will be, until we know the fate of my detachment.

GENERAL GREENE TO SAMUEL WARD.

Prospect-Hill, December 31, 1775.

You entreat the General Officers to recommend to the Congress the giving of a bounty. But his Excellency, General Washington, has often assured us that the Congress would not give a bounty, and before they would give a bounty they would give up the dispute.

The cement between the Northern and Southern Colonies is not very strong, if forty thousand lawful, will induce the Congress to give us up. Although I do not imagine that the necessity of allowing a bounty would have broken the Union, yet it was a sufficient intimation that the bare mention was disagreeable. Can you think we should hesitate a moment to recommend a bounty, if we thought ourselves at liberty to do so? We should then have an opportunity of picking the best men, filling the Army soon, keeping up a proper discipline, and preserving good order and government in camp; while we are now obliged to relax the very sinews of military government, and give a latitude of indulgence to the soldiery incompatible with security of either camp or country.

What reason have you to think that a proposition of that sort, if it came recommended by General Officers, would be acceded to by the Congress? Most of the Generals belong to the Northern Governments; if the Congress refuse to hear their Delegates, I apprehend they would the Generals also. The Congress cannot suppose that the Generals are better acquainted with the temper and genius of this people than the Delegates are from these Provinces; and why they should refuse to hear you, and not us, I cannot imagine.

A good politician will always have an eye to economy; but, to form an extensive plan, and not provide the means for carrying it into execution, betrays either a defect in counsel, or want of resolution to prosecute.

There is nothing that will encourage our enemies, both external and internal, like the difficulties we meet in raising a new Army. If we had given a good bounty, and raised the troops speedily, it would have struck the Ministry with astonishment to see that four Colonies could raise such an army in so short a time. They could not expect to conquer a people so united, firm, and resolutely determined to defend their rights and privileges. But, from the difficulties we meet with, the confusion and disorder we are in, the large number of the soldiers who are going home, our enemies will draw a conclusion, that we are like a rope of sand, and that we shall soon break to pieces. God grant it may not be the case.

You misunderstand me, my dear sir, or I wrote what I did not mean. It was not the lower class of people that I meant to complain of, but the merchants and wealthy farmers, who, I think, do not exert themselves as they ought. This is no time for getting riches, but to secure what we have got. Every shadow of oppression or extortion ought to disappear; but, instead of this, we find many articles of merchandise enhanced in price four times the first cost, and most of them cent per cent. The farmers are extortionate, whenever their situation furnishes them with an opportunity. These are the people that I complain most of; they are wounding the cause. When people are distressed, it is natural for them to try every thing, and every where, to get relief; and, to find oppression instead of relief from these two orders of men, will go near to driving the poorer sort to desperation. It will be good policy in the United Colonies to render the poorer sort of people as easy and happy, under their present circumstances, as possible; for they are creatures of a day, and present gain and gratification, though small, has more weight with them than much greater advantages at a distance. A good politician must, and will, consider the temper of the times, and the prejudices of the people he has to deal with, when he takes his measures to execute any great design.

The current sentiment in the New-England Colonies, generally, favours the Opposition; but, if the distresses of the people are multiplied, their opinions may change. They will naturally look back upon their former happy situation, and contrast that with their present worse condition, and conclude that the source of all their misery originates in their dispute with Great Britain.

If all the maritime towns throughout the United Colonies had a body of troops in continual pay, it would, in a great measure, remedy this evil. Provision must be made for those who are thrown out of employ by the decay of trade. If they are not engaged for us, necessity will oblige them to engage against us; for they cannot live upon the air. What signifies our being frightened at the expense? If we succeed, we gain all; but, if we are conquered, we lose all; not only our present possessions, but all our future labours will be appropriated to the support of a haughty, proud, insolent set of puppies, whose greatest merit with the Crown will be, to render the people as completely humble as possible.

I agree with you, that Congress should embody seventy thousand men; all the troops raised in the different Colonies to be upon Continental pay; and where there any stationed for the protection of any particular Province, to be considered as a detachment from the Grand Army; and all, in every Province, to be subject to the Commander-in-chief, and at his disposal and discretion. A body of troops in each Colony would support the spirited, confirm the weak and wavering, and awe our oppressors into submission; for there are no arguments, however well supported by truth and reason, that carry such conviction with them as those which are enforced from the muzzle of a gun, or the point of a bayonet.

If the Southern and Northern troops were exchanged, it would be serviceable to the cause. It would, in a great measure, cure the itch for going home on furlough, and save the Continent the needless expense of paying a large body of troops that are absent from camp.

You complain, and say the New-England Colonies are treated ill. Why are they treated so? You think there ought to have been a bounty given. The Congress always had it in their power to give a bounty, if they pleased. Why were not the New-England Delegates sent to establish the plan for the constitution of the new Army? Why were strangers sent at so critical a period? History does not afford so dangerous a measure as that of disbanding an old army and forming a new one, within point blank shot of the enemy. This task was rendered very difficult, by the reduction of eleven regiments, and the discharge of such a number of officers, who have done every thing to obstruct and retard the filling the new Army, in hopes to ruin the establishment and bring themselves into place again.

From whence originates that groundless jealousy of the New-England Colonies? I believe there is nothing more remote from their thoughts, than designs unfavourable to the equal rights of the other Colonies. For my own part, I abhor the thoughts, and cannot help thinking it highly injurious to the New-England people, who ever have been distinguished for their justice and moderation. I mentioned this subject to Mr. Lynch and Colonel Harrison, who assured me there was no such sentiment prevailing in Congress, nor among the Southern inhabitants of any respectability. I am sorry to find they were mistaken. It grieves me that such jealousies should prevail. If they are nourished, they will, sooner or later, sap the foundation of the Union, and dissolve the connection. God in mercy avert so dreadful an evil. How unhappy is it, for the interests of America, that such Colonial prejudices should prevail, and partial motives influence her councils! The interests of one Colony are no ways incompatible with the interests of another. We have all one common interest, and one common wish, to be free from Parliamentary jurisdiction and taxation. The different climates and produce of the Colonies will ever preserve a harmony amongst them, by an active trade and commerce. Each Colony will have the benefit of its own staples, whether they are independent, or connected with Great Britain.

Governour Franklin of [New-Jersey] and the Assembly go on with a high hand. His impudence, and the Congress's silence, astonish all this part of the world. To suffer such presumption to go unpunished, betrays a want of spirit to resent, or power to punish. The dignity of the Congress ought to be held sacred, or else its authority will soon be brought into contempt. His conduct is calculated to breed a mutiny in the State; such budding mischiefs cannot be too early nipped; diseases that might have been easily remedied if seasonably attended to, have often been rendered incurable by being too long neglected. I wish this may not be the case here.

This is the last day of the old enlisted soldiers' service. Nothing but confusion and disorder reign. We are obliged to retain their guns, whether private or publick property. They are prized, and the owners paid; but, as guns, last Spring, ran very high, the Committee that values them sets them much lower than the price they were purchased at. This is looked upon to be both tyrannical and unjust. I am very sorry that necessity forces his Excellency to adopt any measures disagreeable to the people. But the Army cannot be provided for in any other way, and those we detain are very indifferent; generally without bayonets, and of different sized bores. Twenty thousand troops, with such arms, are not equal, in an engagement, to fifteen thousand, with such arms as the King's troops are equipped with. I wish our troops were better furnished. The enemy has a great advantage over us.

We have suffered prodigiously for want of wood. Many regiments have been obliged to eat their provisions raw, for want of fuel to cook it; and, notwithstanding we have burnt up all the fences, and cut down all the trees for a mile round the camp, our sufferings have been inconceivable. The barracks have been greatly delayed for want of stuff. Many of the troops are yet in tents, and will be for some time, especially the officers. The fatigues of the campaign, the suffering for want of wood and clothing, have made a multitude of soldiers heartily sick of service.

The Connecticut troops went off, in spite of all that could be done to prevent it; but they met with such an unfavourable reception at home, that many are returning to camp again already. The people upon the road expressed so much abhorrence at their conduct for quitting the Army, that it was with difficulty they got provisions. I wish all the troops now going home may meet with the same contempt. I expect the Army, notwithstanding all the difficulties we meet with, will be full in about six weeks.

We never have been so weak as we shall be to-morrow, when we dismiss the old troops. Our growing weaker, whilst the enemy are growing stronger, renders our situation disagreeable.

General Lee has just returned from Rhode-Island. He has taken the Tories in hand, and sworn them, by a very solemn oath, that they would not, for the future, grant any supplies to the enemy, directly or indirectly, nor give them any kind of intelligence, nor suffer it to be done by others without giving information. . . . and were the principals. He gives a very unfavourable account of the spirit and resolution of the people.

I beg leave to congratulate you on the recovery of your health, which may God in his providence long preserve, that you may enjoy happiness yourself, and continue a blessing to your country.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Cambridge, December 31, 1775.

SIR: I wrote you on the 25th instant, since which I am not honoured with any of your favours. The estimate I then enclosed you was calculated to pay the troops, &c., up to the 1st of January. That cannot be done for want of funds in the Paymaster-General's hands, which causes a great murmuring amongst those who are going off. The monthly expenses of this Army amount to near two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars, which I take the liberty of recommending to the observation of Congress, that their future remittances may be governed thereby. It sometimes happens that persons would wish to deposite money in the hands of the Paymaster-General, for his bills on the Treasury at Philadelphia. He has, hitherto, declined such offers, not having authority from Congress to draw. Would it not be proper to give this power? If it should be approved of, you will please to point out the mode that the Congress would choose to have it done in.

The clothing sent to the Quartermaster-General is not sufficient to put half our Army into regimentals, nor is there a possibility of getting any quantity here. I have wrote to General Schuyler, that I wish what was lodged at Albany, could be spared for these troops, as General Montgomery would clothe the men under his command at Montreal. If this can be done, it will be of infinite service; and no time should be lost in forwarding them to this camp.

In forming the regiments for the new establishment, I thought it but justice to appoint the officers, detached under Colonel Arnold, to commissions in them. Their absence, at present, is of very great detriment to the service, especially in recruiting. I would, therefore, wish, if the Congress intend raising troops in or for Canada, that they could be taken in there. The sooner I have their opinion of this matter, the better; that if they can be commissioned in Canada, I may appoint officers here to replace them.

Enclosed you have a copy of a representation sent to me by the Legislative body of this Province, respecting four companies stationed at Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham. As they were never regimented, and were doing duty at a distance from the rest of the Army, I did not know whether to consider them as a part of it, nor do I think myself authorized to direct payment for them, without the approbation of Congress.

It has been represented to me that the free Negroes who have served in this Army are very much dissatisfied at being discarded. As it is to be apprehended that they may seek employment in the Ministerial army, I have presumed to depart from the resolution respecting them, and have given license for their being enlisted. If this is disapproved of by Congress, I will put a stop to it.

I believe Colonel Gridley expects to be continued as Chief Engineer in this Army. It is very certain that we have no one here better qualified. He has done very little, hitherto, in that department; but if the Congress choose to appoint him, I will take care that he pays a proper attention to it. Before I quit this subject, I must remark that the pay of the Assistant Engineers is so very small, that we cannot expect men of science will engage in it. Those gentlemen who are in that station, remained under the expectation that an additional allowance would be made them by the respective Provinces in which they were appointed, to that allowed by the Congress.

Captain Freeman arrived this day at camp from Canada. He left Quebec the 24th ultimo, in consequence of General Carleton's proclamation, which I have the honour to send you herewith. He saw Colonel Arnold the 26th, and says he was joined at Point-aux-Tremble by General Montgomery, the 1st instant; that they were about two thousand strong, and were making every preparation for attacking Quebec; that General Carleton had with him about twelve hundred men, the majority of whom are sailors; that it was his opinion the French would give up the place, if they get the same conditions granted to the inhabitants of Montreal.

Captain Adams, of the Warren, armed schooner, sent into Marblehead the sloop Sally, bound from Lisbon to New-York, laden with two pipes and one hundred and twenty-six quarter-casks of wine. The sloop was made a prize of by the Niger, man-of-war, somewhere near Bermudas, the Captain of whom put his mate and five hands on board, with orders to proceed with her to Boston. The sloop and cargo belongs to Mr. Peter Barberie, of Perth-Amboy, in New-Jersey.

Captains Semple and Harbeson take under their care Mr. Kirkland, who appears to be a much more illiterate and simple man than his strong recommendations bespeak him. Captain Matthews and Mr. Robinson will accompany them. The two latter were prisoners taken by Lord Dunmore, who was sending them to Boston, from whence there is little doubt but that they would be forwarded to England, to which place, I am credibly informed, Captain Martindale, and the crew of the Washington, are sent; also, Colonel Allen, and the prisoners taken with him in Canada. This may account for General Howe's silence on the subject of an exchange of prisoners, mentioned in my letter to him.

General Lee is just returned from his excursion to Rhode-Island. He has pointed out the best method the Island would admit of for its defence. He has endeavoured, all in his power, to make friends of those that were our enemies. You have, enclosed, a specimen of his abilities, in that way, for your perusal. I am of opinion, that if the same plan was pursued through every Province, it would have a very good effect.

I have long had it in my mind to mention to Congress, that frequent applications had been made to me respecting the Chaplains' pay, which is too small to encourage men of abilities. Some of them, who have left their flocks, are obliged to pay the Parson, acting for them, more than they receive. I need not point out the great utility of gentlemen, whose lives and conversation are unexceptionable, being employed in that service in this Army. There are two ways of making it worth the attention of such. One is, an advancement of their pay; the other, that one Chaplain be appointed to two regiments. This last, I think, may be done without inconvenience. I beg leave to recommend this matter to Congress, whose sentiments hereon I shall impatiently expect.

Upon a further conversation with Captain Freeman, he is of opinion, that General Montgomery has with him near three thousand men, including Colonel Arnold's. He says that Lord Pitt had received repeated orders from his father to return home, in consequence of which he had embarked some time in October, with a Captain Green, who was master of a vessel belonging to Philadelphia.

By a number of salutes in Boston harbour, yesterday, I fancy Admiral Shalldam is arrived. Two large ships were seen coming in. Our inlistments now amount to nine thousand six hundred and fifty. Those gentlemen who were made prisoners of by Lord Dunmore, being left destitute of money and necessaries, I have advanced them one hundred pounds, lawful money, belonging to the publick, for which I have taken Captain Matthews's draft on the Treasury of Virginia, which goes enclosed.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. You have enclosed the Returns of the Army.

The Committee of both Houses, "appointed to wait on, and represent to, his Excellency General Washington, the circumstances of four companies, now doing duty in the towns of Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham, setting forth by whose order they were raised; that they were then considered as part of the thirteen thousand six hundred men, agreed to be enlisted by this Colony, where they have done duty, &c.; and to request that his Excellency would order them to be paid by the United Colonies," beg leave to represent: That as the propriety of such an order depends on various circumstances, and as many important matters are constantly soliciting his Excellency's attention, the Committee report the following state of facts, to be laid before him, so that he may be the better enabled to answer the request of this Court:

Upon application from the towns aforesaid, as also from those of Chelsea and Malden, on or about the 1st of May last, to the Committee of Safety of this Colony, who then had the direction of raising and stationing the forces within the same, praying that they would (from a consideration of the situation of said towns, and that the enemy could land in any of them, from Boston harbour, within an hour after they enter their boats, and in some parts in less than half an hour; and, also, that they could, from thence, easily penetrate into the country,) order a detachment from the camps as a guard, to be stationed in these towns: The said Committee of Safety, with the Council of War, after full inquiry and deliberation, determined that it was necessary that a party should be constantly stationed on the sea-coasts of those towns, to watch the motions of the enemy, and prevent their landing. But as no troops could well be spared, at that time, from either of the camps of Cambridge or Roxbury, they directed that there should immediately be raised, one company in Hingham, one in Weymouth, and two in Braintree, (also, two at Chelsea and Malden;) and that these companies should be joined to such regiments, in future, as should be directed.

The men were raised as ordered, and were then, and ever have been, considered as part of the thirteen thousand six hundred men to be raised by this Colony. They were so considered by the General Officers, and have been employed in such services, place and places, as the commanding officer at Roxbury hath, from time to time, directed, as will appear by his orders to the several Captains of said companies, some copies of which accompany this representation.

A company from Roxbury was, as soon as the state of that camp would admit of it, detached to the assistance of these four companies; and upon their being ordered back in August last, two other companies, also part of the Continental Army, were sent to supply their place, and the place of a company drawn from Cohasset, a town adjoining to Hingham. When these four companies were raised, this Colony had it not in contemplation to raise men for the general defence of the sea-coasts, and they never have been considered by us in any other point of view than as part of our quota for the common defence; and being stationed far within the narrow limits of the harbour of Boston, his Excellency will, undoubtedly, from all these considerations, grant the reasonable request of this Court, and order these forces to be paid by the United Colonies.

In Council, December 26, 1775.

Read and accepted; and, thereupon,

Resolved, That the Committee who were appointed to wait upon his Excellency General Washington, with a representation of the state of the said four Companies, be excused that part of their service; and that the Committee appointed to wait upon his Excellency, to request his informing this Court how far he will extend his guards, &c., present him with the foregoing Report and Representation, with the papers accompanying them, and request his ordering payment to said companies.

Sent down for concurrence.

PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

By His Excellency GUY CARLETON, Captain-General and Governour-in-chief in and over the Province of QUEBECK, and the Territories depending thereon, in AMERICA, Vice-Admiral of the same, and Major-General of His Majesty's Forces, commanding the Northern District, &c., &c., &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, it has been found expedient to raise and embody a Militia within this city, to co-operate with, and to assist, His Majesty's troops, in this garrison, in the preservation of the city, and of the persons and property of His Majesty's good and faithful subjects, resident therein, against certain rebellious persons who have invaded this Province, a number of whom have lately appeared in arms before the walls of this town: And whereas, information has been given me, that some persons, resident here, have contumaciously refused to enroll their names in the Militia lists, and to take up arms, in conjunction with their fellow-citizens, for the purposes aforesaid; and that others, who had enrolled their names, and had, for some time, carried arms in the defence and preservation of the city, have lately laid them down: And, also, that some persons are busy in endeavouring to draw away, and alienate, the affection of His Majesty's good and faithful subjects, of this city, from His Majesty's person and Government: For these reasons, and in order to rid the town of all useless, disloyal, and treacherous persons, I have thought fit to issue this Proclamation, and I do, hereby, strictly order and enjoin all and every person and persons whatsoever, liable to serve in the Militia, and residing at Quebeck, who have refused or declined to enroll their names in the Militia lists, and to take up arms in conjunction with His Majesty's good subjects of this city, and who still refuse or decline so to do, as well as those who having once taken up arms, have afterwards laid them down, and will not take them up again, to quit the town in four days from the date hereof, together with their wives and children, and to withdraw themselves out of the limits of the District of Quebeck, before the first day of December next, under pain of being treated as Rebels or Spies, if, thereafter, they shall be found within the said limits.

And, inasmuch as the persons, who, in obedience to this Proclamation, are to quit this town and district, may have bought up a considerable quantity of the provisions brought in for the subsistence of the inhabitants of the town, and it would be imprudent to suffer those provisions to be carried out, more especially as the country abounds with the necessaries of life, I do, hereby, further order and enjoin all and every such person and persons, to deliver in, forthwith, to the Hon. George Allsop, Esq., Commissary, a true inventory or list of their provisions and stores, in order that they may be fairly and justly valued, and the full price paid to the respective proprietors, before their departure.

Given under my hand and seal of arms, at the Castle of St. Lewis, in the City of Quebeck, this twenty-second day of November, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-five, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c.

GUY CARLETON.

By His Excellency's command:

H. T. CRAMAHE.

God save the King.

DEPOSITION OF JOHN BOURS.

I, John Bours, here, in the presence of Almighty God, as I hope for ease, honour, and comfort, in this world, and happiness in the world to come, most earnestly, devoutly, and religiously swear, neither directly nor indirectly to assist the wicked instruments of Ministerial tyranny and villany, commonly called the King's Troops and Navy, by furnishing them with provisions or refreshments of any kind, unless authorized by the Continental Congress, or the Legislature, as at present established, of this particular Colony of Rhode-Island.

I do also swear, by the same tremendous and Almighty God, that I will neither, directly nor indirectly, convey any intelligence, nor give any advice to the aforesaid enemies so described; and that I pledge myself, if I should, by any accident, get the knowledge of such treason, to inform immediately the Committee of Safety.

And as it is justly allowed, that when the sacred rights and liberties of a nation or community are invaded, neutrality is not less base and criminal than open and avowed hostility, I do further swear and pledge myself, as I hope for eternal salvation, that I will, whenever called upon by the voice of the Continental Congress, or that of the Legislature of this particular Colony under their authority, to take arms and subject myself to military discipline, in defence of the common rights and liberties of America. So help me God.*

JOHN BOURS.

Sworn at Newport, December 25, 1775.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, December 26, 1775.

(Parole, Baltimore.)

(Countersign, Lux.)

A Court of Inquiry, consisting of Major-General Putnam, President; and Brigadiers-General, Heath, Sullivan, and Greene, members; held by order of his Excellency the General, to examine into the cause of a complaint exhibited by a number of Field-Officers and others in General Sullivan's Brigade, against the Commissary-General, Joseph Trumbull, Esq. The articles in the complaint were:

First. For not delivering out the back allowance of peas, or the value thereof in money, to the officers and men.

Second. For taking in onions at two shillings and eight pence, and delivering them out at four shillings; and,

Third. For taking in potatoes at one shilling and four pence, and delivering them out at two shillings.

The Court, on mature consideration, beg leave to report to his Excellency, that the first article of the charge is groundless; that the second and third articles, are confessed by the Commissary-General, and though the Court are fully satisfied there was not the least design of fraud in Mr. Trumbull, they are unanimously of opinion that the measure was pernicious and injudicious.

The General approves of the proceedings of the above Court of Inquiry.

At a Court of Inquiry, held at Roxbury, to examine into the conduct of Major Parke, Deputy Quartermaster-General, whereof Colonel Jedediah Huntington was President, for "forcibly quartering troops in the house of Major Thompson." The Court were of opinion that Major Parke conducted himself in obedience to his orders, and as the necessity of the case required.

Thomas Trefry, of Captain Glover's Company, in Colonel Glover's Regiment, tried at a General Court-Martial for "desertion," is found guilty, and ordered to pay twenty shillings lawful money, to be appropriated according to the rules and regulations of the Massachusetts Army.

The General approves the proceedings of the Court of Inquiry held on Major Parke, and of the sentence of the General Court-Martial above-mentioned, and orders it to take place accordingly.

The Regimental Quartermasters are forthwith to settle with and give receipts to the Commissary-General, or his Deputies. The day they next draw, they are to take the whole of the provision and weekly allowance then due.

The Colonels who have purchased clothing at the Quartermaster-General's store, for the use of their men, are directed to discharge their respective debts out of the moneys they are about to receive in behalf of their respective corps.

The Colonels of the new established regiments, to order their recruiting officers to send all the recruits they have raised to their respective Regiments at Roxbury and Cambridge, by the first day of January next.

* CAMBRIDGE, Thursday, January 4, 1775.—On Wednesday, the week before last, Major-General Lee set out for Rhode-Island. He was attended from hence by his guard, and a party of Riflemen; and from Providence, by the Cadet Company of that place, and a number of Minute-Men. He entered the town of Newport the Monday following, December 25, preceded by the Cadets, his guard, and the Riflemen. While there, he called before him a number of obnoxious persons, to whom he tendered an oath of fidelity to the country, which was taken by all of them, excepting Colonel Joseph Wanton, Jun., Nicholas Lechmere, and Richard Beale, two custom-house officers, who refused taking it. Upon which they were put under guard, and brought to Providence. The General, after having viewed the Island, and given directions for erecting some fortifications, set out for Providence on Wednesday, from whence he came to town last Saturday.

As the time is just at hand when the Massachusetts, New-Hampshire, and Rhode-Island troops (not again enlisted) will be released from their present engagement, the General recommends to them to consider what may be the consequence of their abrupt departure from the lines. Should any accident happen to them before the new Army gets greater strength, they not only fix eternal disgrace upon themselves as soldiers, but inevitable ruin, perhaps, upon their country and families.

It is from no dislike to the conduct of the officers that the General requests the men to stay without them; but, in the first place, because it is unnecessary to burden the Continent with a greater number of officers than are requisite to the men; and in the next, because it retards the forming and the proper government of the new Regiments. Those non-commissioned officers and soldiers, therefore, who have their country's welfare so much at heart as to stay till the last of January, if necessary, may join any Company in any of the new established Regiments they please, provided they do not increase the number of rank and file in such Company to more than seventy-six men, more than which no Company is to exceed. All the officers and soldiers at present of other Regiments, but appointed to or enlisted in Colonel Learned's, Parsons's, Joseph Read's, Huntington's, Ward's, Wyllis's, and Bailey's Regiments, are to join them to-morrow; at which time any officer or soldier, in either of those Regiments which belongeth to other Regiments under the new establishment, are to join. In like manner all the officers and soldiers (under the new establishment) who belong to Colonels Prescott's, Glover's, Patterson's, Sergeant's, Phinney's, Arnold's, Greaton's, and Baldwin's Regiments, are to join on Saturday next, when any officers or soldiers in either of those Regiments, belonging to other Regiments, are also to remove to them. On Sunday, the same change is to take place with respect to Colonels James Read's, Nixon's, Stark's, Whitcomb's, Poor's, Varnum's, Hitchcock's, Little's, Webb's, Bond's, and Hutchinson's Regiments.

It is recommended to the Colonels of each of the above named Regiments, to send officers at the time appointed, to receive and march the men from the Regiments they are enlisted out of, to those they are to join, that it may be effected with more regularity and ease, and the change made with as little confusion as possible.

It is expected of such men as are determined not to continue in the service another campaign, that they will sell their blankets to those who do, and are in want of them. The same thing is also recommended to the Militia.

In appraising the Arms, the General expects that they be numbered and marked in such manner as the owners of them, and the prices, may, at any time, be ascertained upon the delivery of them by the Commissary of the Stores. All Arms, thus appraised, and taken for the use of the publick, must be delivered into the care of the Commissary of the Ordnance Stores, but may be redrawn immediately, if the Colonel will pass his receipt for them, and account for the delivery to his men.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, December 29, 1775.

(Parole, Providence.)

(Countersign, Salem.)

The Commissary-General having estimated the value of the different species of Provisions which constitute a ration under the Continental allowance, and finding it to amount to seven pence half-penny lawful money; the General having seen the said estimate, approves of it, and orders that they be settled with accordingly.

The General was in great hopes that a sufficient sum of money would have been sent from Philadelphia, to have paid the troops for the months of October, November, and December, but is sorry to inform them, that there is no more yet arrived than will allow one month's pay, the advanced pay to the new Army, and blanket money; furnishing, at the same time, the Commissary and Quartermaster-Generals with such sums as are necessary for conducting business. The General has already wrote express to Congress for more money, and hopes speedily to be furnished with a sufficient sum to pay them in full.

Particular care is to be taken by the Colonels and commanding officers of Corps, not to suffer any Ammunition to be carried off by the discharged men, but that the same be collected and delivered to the new recruits, if necessary, if not, to the Commissary of Stores.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, December 30, 1775.

(Parole, Marblehead.)

(Countersign, Manly.)

As the want of a timely supply of cash, has prevented the discharged men from receiving more than one month's pay at this time, the Quartermaster-General may withhold his accounts until the next payment, when his charges against the several Regiments must be paid.

The Commissary-General is to serve provisions, or the value thereof, to the discharged men to carry them home, allowing one ration for every twenty miles they have to march.

As the General is informed that numbers of free Negroes are desirous of inlisting, he gives leave to the Recruiting Officers to entertain them, and promises to lay the matter before the Congress, who, he doubts not, will approve of it.

The Massachusetts, Rhode-Island, and New-Hampshire Regiments upon the old establishment, to parade to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, upon their respective Regimental parades, where they will hear and receive the Commander-in-chief's directions.

Such of the Non-commissioned Officers and Soldiers, who presume to carry off their Arms, contrary to the express orders of the General, and to the most pressing demand of their country, may depend upon it, they will be mulcted all the pay and ration money now due to them.

Extract from the Minutes: WILLIAM GOVETT, Secretary.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The Address of the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN: We, your Majesty's dutiful, loyal, and faithful subjects, the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, under a deep sense of your Majesty's great condescension and justice, beg leave to render to your Majesty our unfeigned thanks for your most gracious assent to the act repealing the law granting certain Stamp duties in America. The paternal concern for the welfare and prosperity of all your Majesty's subjects, however remote, which your Majesty has demonstrated on this very important occasion, cannot fail of fixing in the hearts of the good people of this Province the most inviolable affection and loyalty to your Royal person and Government, and exciting their sincerest prayers for the long continuance of your Majesty on the Throne of those extensive dominions, whose happiness and glory have been the invariable objects of your care and attention.

The assurance which your Majesty has been pleased to give us, of "your approbation of the dutiful behaviour of the Province of Pennsylvania, amidst the two prevailing distractions which have agitated the other Colonies," fills our breasts with sentiments of the most respectful gratitude, and demands our warmest thanks. This instance of your Majesty's condescension and goodness must engage the people we represent to continue to recommend themselves still further, by their dutiful behaviour, to your Royal favour and protection.

We humbly entreat your Majesty will further permit us to embrace this opportunity of expressing the high sense we entertain of the justice and tenderness of your Parliament, who, ready to hear and consider the grievances of your Majesty's subjects, have, upon a just representation of the unhappy circumstances of your Colonies, manifested their good dispositions and lenity to us in our late distressed situation.

Fully sensible how much the happiness of your people depends on a perfect harmony and connection between Great Britain and her Colonies, we assure your Majesty, that no care or endeavours shall be wanting, on our part, to promote and establish that union of affections and interests so essential to the welfare of both, and to preserve that loyalty and affection to your Majesty's person and Government, which we esteem to be one of their first and most important duties.

Signed, by order of the House, JOSEPH FOX, Speaker.

CHARLES MOORE, Clerk of Assembly.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The Petition of the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, most humbly sheweth:

That we, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the Representatives of the Freemen of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, humbly ask permission to offer to your Royal wisdom our dutiful supplications.

In our last Petition to your Majesty, we prayed relief of a grievance which the good people of this Province suffered, by duties being imposed upon them by act of Parliament, for the sole purpose of raising a revenue; and, though that act has been repealed, as to part of these taxes, yet the duties on Tea, and other enumerated goods not made in Great Britain, but from thence exported to these Colonies, are still retained; with intent, as we have great reason to fear, of establishing thereby a precedent for repeating such taxations upon us hereafter. Thus we lose the possession of our property, and the title to the remainder becomes extremely precarious; for, as we cannot, from our situation be, in any manner, represented in Parliament, your Royal wisdom will perceive, that we can call nothing our own which others assume a right to take from us without our consent.

The grievance still continuing, notwithstanding the late repeal, our confidence in your Majesty's transcendent goodness induces us to hope, that, through your gracious interposition, we may yet obtain redress.

If we attempted to promote innovations, we might deserve censure. We only endeavour to avoid them. We presume not to request the grant of any new right in our favour, nor any diminution of the Royal prerogative, but only to be restored to that which we constantly, till of late, enjoyed: the invaluable, exclusive privilege of demonstrating our affection for our Sovereign, and our duty to his Government, as heretofore, by voluntary gifts of our property to him. This privilege, repeatedly recognised by your Majesty, and former Kings and Parliaments, our ancestors transmitted inviolate to us; we possessed it without abuse, and have lost it without offence; for, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that none of your subjects are, or can be, more affectionately and firmly attached to your Majesty's person, family, and Government, than your faithful people, the inhabitants of Pennsylvania.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN: Fully confiding that your Majesty will always make the preservation of the constitutional rights of your subjects a principal object of your attention, and that your Royal disposi-

Resolved, That the Committee appointed to view Liberty-Island, repair, as soon as the season will admit, to that place, with Doctor Rittenhouse, Robert Smith, and John McNeal, and determine on, and lay out, such work as they shall think sufficient to defend it; and that those

A true copy from the Journals:

CHARLES MOORE, Clerk of Assembly.

To the Right Honourable the Lords, Spiritual and Temporal, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in Assembly met, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners apprehend, whenever measures are pursued inconsistent with the principles of that freedom on which the British Constitution is founded, it cannot be thought improper to make application for redress to your Lordships, the hereditary guardians of British liberty; and, therefore, they beg leave to represent to your Lordships the following grievance, which greatly affects His Majesty's most faithful American subjects, and to implore your concurrence with the other branches of the British legislature, in relieving them from their present distress.

That the people of this Province, gratefully sensible of your Lordships' wisdom and justice, in the repeal of the late act of Parliament imposing Stamp duties in America, were led to hope, that, in all future time, they should enjoy the right of granting aids to the Crown by representatives Constitutionally chosen by themselves. That, greatly disappointed in this expectation, they find another act, passed in the seventh year of his present Majesty's reign, imposing new duties on the people of America, for the purpose of raising a revenue, equally subversive of this right, and tending to render their property most precarious and insecure.

Your petitioners humbly conceive, that it is essential to the liberties of Englishmen that no laws can be made to take away their property without their consent. Upon this equitable principle, the security of the subject's estate, whether in the mother country or the Colonies, is most justly founded; nor can British freedom, or public happiness, without it, anywhere exist. Hence, the people of this Province, by their Representatives in Assembly, have ever exercised the power of disposing of their own property; and, whenever requisitions have been made by His Majesty, or his Royal predecessors, for the defence of America, they have most cheerfully, and liberally, granted their full proportion of aids for that important purpose. This power being founded on the Constitution of the Government of the Province, and having often received the sanction of the Crown, and full approbation of the British Parliament, your petitioners hope your Lordships will not think any reasons sufficient to deprive His Majesty's faithful subjects, in this Colony, of a privilege so essential to their security and happiness. They, therefore, humbly pray your Lordships to take the premises into your serious consideration, and that you will also be pleased to pursue such measures as you shall, in your wisdom, think most proper, to relieve them and the people they represent from the grievance complained of.

PHILADELPHIA, September 22, 1768.

A true copy from the Journals:

CHARLES MOORE, Clerk of Assembly.

To the Honourable the Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of GREAT BRITAIN, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met, most humbly sheweth:

That, taking into their most serious consideration the statute passed in the fourth year of his present Majesty's reign, prohibiting the further emissions of Bills of Credit from being lawful tender in the Colonies; and attentively weighing the mischiefs which must attend the continuance of the said statute; the obstructions to the growth and increase of this young, and lately flourishing Colony; and the diminution of its commercial intercourse with Great Britain which it must necessarily occasion, we find ourselves under the unhappy necessity of making our application to your honourable House for a repeal of the said law.

That it is known, from the most evident experience, that the growth and increase of this Province has been, in a great measure, occasioned by the moderate sums of paper money which from time to time have been emitted, by and under the direction of its legislative authority. That before these emissions were made, the progress of the Colony, in its wealth and settlement, laboured under the greatest difficulty, and proceeded in its course by degrees almost imperceptible. The inhabitants being under a necessity, from the want of a medium of commerce, to negotiate a great part of their business and traffick in the inconvenient mode of barter and commutation; but, that, upon striking the first Bills of Credit, this disadvantageous method of commerce was soon laid aside; contracts multiplied; personal and real estates rose to their proper value; our numbers increased; trade became extended; and the settlement of the country proceeded with more rapidity than the most sanguine expectations could suggest; and that the same happy and fortunate effects have ever flowed from the further emissions of paper Bills of Credit, in proportion to the sums emitted, without the least inconvenience or prejudice to the merchants of Great Britain or the people of this Province.

That we apprehend no arguments can be necessary, to prove that commerce cannot be carried to any beneficial extent, without a proper medium of circulating cash, destitute of which, the trade of this Colony must, in a short time, be confined to the restricted limits of gentlemen employ such persons as may be necessary, to complete said Works, agreeable to the Report of the Committee appointed for that business.

Resolved, That the Commodore be directed to cause four hundred Seamen and Landsmen immediately to be recruited, for the services of the Armed Boats, and other Naval Equipments, on the same terms the other men were raised.

Upon application of Captain William Jenkins, for the barter among ourselves, and the commercial intercourse with Great Britain be greatly diminished, to the manifest loss to the mother country, and impoverishment of the Colony.

That the trade to the foreign ports, from whence our merchants formerly imported gold and silver, in part of their returns, is effectually obstructed by the high duties imposed on the produce of those ports, to the great detriment of our commerce with Britain; and, even when those duties shall be taken off, the gold and silver imported will be remitted, in discharge of the debts to the mother country; and, therefore, that we can have no permanent medium of commerce, without the liberty of emitting such reasonable quantities of paper Bills of Credit as may be necessary for that purpose.

That, by the policy of the English laws, the person of every debtor remains as a security to his creditor, for the performance of the contract and discharge of the debt; and, should the Legislature of this Province be restrained from making paper money a lawful tender to the creditor, in discharge of the body of the debtor, the person of every American is liable to duress and imprisonment, at the will and pleasure of his creditor.

Moved by the sincerest desire of promoting and increasing the commerce of our mother country, as well as that of our particular Province, we beg leave further to represent, that upon this liberty of instituting a proper medium of trade, the future importations of British manufactures in a great measure depend; that we find, from incontestable vouchers, and experience, that, at all times, the importations from Great Britain have increased or diminished, in proportion to the quantity of this medium and the foreign gold and silver current. That, in the year one thousand seven hundred and sixty, when the largest sums of Bills of Credit and foreign specie were circulating, the greatest quantity of English merchandise was imported that has ever been known, either before or since that period. That before this time, as the quantity of this medium was increased by the demand of the Crown, the orders of the Pennsylvania merchants grew larger, and the importations from Britain also increased. That since this period, those importations have lessened, in proportion to the sinking of those Bills of Credit, and the exportation of our gold and silver to Great Britain; and that in so great a degree as to be extremely injurious to the mutual commerce between our mother country and this Colony. That in the said year, the Bills of Credit of this Province amounted to more than five hundred thousand pounds, which, by sinking a part annually, is now reduced to about two hundred and ninety-three thousand. That a great part of the bills now current are subserving the purposes of commerce, in the Colonies of New-Jersey and Maryland, being received by them from a full solidity of the funds upon which they are established. That the commercial interest of the last mentioned Colony must have been greatly distressed, without their having had, for some years past, no sufficient medium of trade of her own. That before the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-three, all the Bills of Credit now current are directed to be sunk and destroyed, by the laws which emitted them. And, with the greatest concern and uneasiness we assert it, we have reason to fear our commerce with our mother country will languish and expire with them.

That the funds for calling in and sinking these Bills of Credit, have ever been formed on the best security; the real and personal estates of all the people in the Province being subject to a tax for the sinking of them. The quantity emitted, from time to time, has ever been so moderate as to be scarcely sufficient to answer the purposes of trade and the settlement of the country, even when aided by large importations of foreign gold and silver. The merchants of Great Britain have never been injured by their emission, but, on the contrary, have been greatly benefited and enriched, as it enabled our merchants to enlarge their importations, and to pay their debts with honour and punctuality, until their late distress, occasioned by the restrictions of their foreign trade, remitting our gold and silver to England, and the present diminution of the quantity of the said Bills of Credit. That the unhappy effects of this diminution of our paper currency are, already, most sensibly felt; the price of all kinds of labour is lessened; the numbers of our poor are increased; the value of our estates greatly sunk; our trade and importation from Britain evidently decreased; the further settlement of the Province is obstructed, and the people reduced to the greatest distress.

Wherefore, your petitioners, deeply affected with a view of the present and impending calamities which threaten His Majesty's most faithful subjects, the good people of the Province, most ardently entreat your honourable House, that you will be pleased to take the subject of their grievances upon your serious and candid consideration, and grant them that relief which must arise from a repeal of the said statute, and the liberty thereby afforded the Legislatures of this Province, of emitting Bills of Credit as lawful tender, in all our Colony debts, from time to time, as the purposes of commerce, the settlement of the Colony, and the necessities of the Government shall reasonably require.

Signed, by order of the House, JOSEPH FOX, Speaker.

A true copy from the Journals:

CHARLES MOORE, Clerk of Assembly.

To the Honourable Knights, Citizens, and Burgesses of GREAT BRITAIN, in Parliament assembled.

The Petition of the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in Assembly met, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners, taking into their serious consideration the act of Parliament imposing duties on His Majesty's American subjects, for payment of twenty-six Firelocks, purchased by him for the use of his Company, in Colonel Bull's Battalion, by order of the Board, an Order was drawn on Messrs. Mease and Caldwell, for eighty-eight pounds, four shillings and six pence, in his favour, being the amount of said Firelocks.

Agreeable to a recommendation of Congress, this Board discharged David Forster from his confinement, he being a person confined with others taken with Capt. Campbell.

the purpose of raising a Revenue, and conceiving that the said act is injurious to the rights of their constituents, as well as to the trade and commerce of the British dominions, beg leave, in the most respectful manner, to represent those grievances to the Commons of Great Britain, who, they trust, ever will be the faithful guardians and supporters of British liberty.

In the latter end of the last century, our ancestors, under permission of the Crown, removed from their mother country and settled in this distant land, then a wilderness. The motives to an enterprise so arduous, expensive, and hazardous, were not only to enlarge the British empire, and extend its commerce, but to enjoy that perfect security of liberty to which they were entitled, as British subjects, in their native land. And, notwithstanding innumerable dangers and difficulties, they have peopled and improved the country into an extensive Colony, without the least expense to the mother state, whereby the British empire has been considerably enlarged, its commerce extended, and its wealth and power greatly increased. In this removal from their native country, the effects whereof have so manifestly promoted the interest and dignity of the British Government, your petitioners conceive they brought over with them the natural and constitutional rights of English subjects, which have descended to, and are now vested in their posterity, who have, by no act whatever, forfeited or surrendered them: one of which is, that no taxes, for the purpose of revenue, can be legally imposed on them but by representatives chosen by themselves; a right absolutely necessary to the security of their property and estates, and derived to them under the ancient principles of the English Government, and which has ever been esteemed the chief pillar and support of all the other privileges, inasmuch as they apprehend they can, with no propriety, be said to enjoy more than the mere shadow of liberty, while others exercise a power, whenever they please, to take such parts and proportions of their property from them as they think proper, without their consent. In confirmation of this right, a legislative authority, founded on this first and important principle of English liberty, so essential to the happiness of the subjects, was early established in this Province, under the approbation of the Crown. This Legislature was vested with full power not only to support the internal Government of the Province, but of giving and granting to their Sovereign the necessary aids, whenever required, for the general security of His Majesty's dominions. To this Legislature requisitions have been always made for that purpose, since the establishment of the present Government, particularly in the times of King William, Queen Anne, his late most excellent Majesty, and our present most gracious Sovereign, and with the utmost cheerfulness and liberality complied with; a part of which has been, repeatedly, reimbursed by the British Parliament.

Under this right, established on the principles of English liberty, on the settled form of their own Government, and the uninterrupted usage and custom so often recognised and confirmed by the Sovereigns of the mother state, and even by the Parliament itself, the good people of this Province have settled, and esteemed themselves happy, in the enjoyment of that security of property which they conceive to be most essential to freedom, (and without which their other privileges can never be long supported or maintained,) until the late act of Parliament imposing a Stamp duty on the Colonies, which the late honourable House of Commons, united with the other branches of the British Legislature, has been pleased to repeal.

That your petitioners, after the repeal of that act, flattered themselves that His Majesty's most faithful subjects in this Province, yet labouring under a heavy load of debt, occasioned by their excess in granting of aids to the Crown, in the last war, would, in future, be left in the undisturbed possession of this most valuable and important right, which their Legislatures have exercised so perfectly to the satisfaction of the British Government, and general benefit of His Majesty's dominions. It, therefore, gave them inexpressible concern to observe another act passed, in a late session of the last Parliament, imposing duties on His Majesty's American subjects, for the purpose of revenue, and reducing them to the same unhappy condition from which, by the wisdom and justice of the British Legislature, they had been so lately relieved; for, we beg leave to represent, that, should the Parliament of Great Britain continue to exercise a power of imposing taxes on His Majesty's subjects who are not, nor can be, represented in your august House, their property and estates must become extremely precarious, as they can have no power to judge of the propriety of these taxes; no constitutional check on the liberality in granting them; no opportunity of pointing out the easiest mode of imposing and levying them, or of explaining their grievance, when they conceive themselves injured or oppressed, without which it appears to your petitioners impossible for the most wise and just Legislature to impose taxes with propriety and equity, or with safety to the people who are to be affected by them.

Your petitioners, confiding in the justice of your honourable House, and your attachment to the principles of liberty, entreat that you would be pleased to take the rights of His Majesty's faithful American subjects, together with the said act of Parliament, under your consideration, and grant them, so far as is in your power, relief from an grievance from which the people of Great Britain are exempted, a continuation whereof, we fear, will create a distinction that must naturally occasion a disunion of interest, sentiments, and affections, between them, which, in its consequence, may be attended with great inconveniences and mischiefs to the trade and commerce of His Majesty's British, as well as American dominions.

TO THE PUBLICK.

Massachusetts, January 1, 1776.

There are two or three questions, which I pray the publick would give their attention unto, viz: In what sense it must be taken, that the King can do no wrong? What is rebellion in a State? And whether, all things considered, it is not the indispensable duty of the United Colonies of America, immediately, to form themselves into an independent Constitution, or a Republick State?

As to the first of these questions, it has been answered by some to this effect, viz: That the King does nothing, as King, but by his Ministers, and, therefore, whatever wrong is done by the Administration of the King, must be attributed to his Ministers, not to him. But, according to this, what does the King do, as King? Why, nothing, neither right nor wrong. And what is the King, but an absolute nothing? But are there not some Royal acts, which are not properly Ministerial? What are the Royal Charters to the American Colonies, but such acts, seeing they contain the sacred compact between the King and them, by virtue of which he is their King, and they his subjects; and, also, the King's oath to protect them in the enjoyment of all the rights and privileges of Englishmen, and their oath of allegiance to obey him as King? What was the present King's coronation oath, to maintain the British Constitution of Government and the Protestant religion inviolate in his empire, but another such act? And what is the King's assent to acts of Parliament, but a Royal act, not Ministerial? And what if the King should give his Royal assent to an act of Parliament to establish the French laws and the Popish religion in (a part of) his empire, would he not violate his coronation oath? And would not this be doing wrong? Or, what if he should give his Royal assent to an act to raise a revenue on the Colonies without their consent; to an act claiming supreme authority over the Colonies, to make laws binding on them, in all cases whatsoever; to an act to send ships-of-war to block up our harbours, restrain our trade, put a stop to our fishery, and destroy our seaport towns; and armed men, by fire and sword, to carry into execution a number of acts of Parliament, contrived and framed to deprive the Colonies of their essential and constitutional rights and liberty? Would he not break his compact with, and violate his Royal faith to, the Colonists? And would not this be doing wrong? But, if it be granted (as to Administration) that the King does nothing, but by his servants or Ministers, how does such a distinction between the King and his Ministers, follow from thence, as to infer that, if there is any wrong done, it must not be attributed to the King, but to his Ministers only? In ancient times, some were called good Kings, because they reigned well, did that which was right, ruled in righteousness. Others were called wicked Kings, because they did not do the thing that was right, did evil, made their people sin, cruelly oppressed their subjects; but now, it seems, Kings are neither good nor wicked, neither reign well nor ill, neither do what is right nor what is wrong—because they do all by their Ministers! And why have we ascribed blame to Kings of the Stuart race, and pronounced some others of blessed memory?

But the proposition supposes that Kings do something, and what they do, they do by their Ministers; then, it must follow that, whatever they do by their Ministers, is to be ascribed to them as their doing. And, if Kings do nothing but by their Ministers, then Ministers do nothing, as Ministers, but the Royal pleasure; therefore, if Ministers, as Ministers, do wrong, the King does wrong, because he acts by them, and they do his pleasure in doing wrong. The King chooses his own Ministers, and they do all his pleasure; and, by the character of the men he chooses, and by the measures pursued in their administration, we are to judge and determine whether he is a good King or a wicked King. If he chooses none but friends to the British Constitution of Government and Protestant religion, men of wisdom and integrity; and, if all the measures they pursue in their administration tend to protect the people in the enjoyment of their laws, rights, and liberty; to discountenance vice; to encourage learning, virtue, and industry; to maintain the Protestant religion; to increase the wealth of the empire, and diffuse happiness to every part of it; such a one is a good King, he rules in righteousness. But, if he chooses such men, only, as are enemies to the British Constitution and laws, (and the Protestant religion,) and the measures they pursue in their administration tend to deprive the people of their constitutional rights and liberty; to make the King an absolute despot; to involve the empire in confusion, contention, civil war, and bloodshed; to plunge the nation in debt; to protect murderers; to encourage vice and Popery, and discourage learning, virtue, and industry; such a one is a wicked King. He does wrong with a high hand, even though he does all by his Ministers.

But will it not be a more just answer to the question, to say, that the King, by the Constitution, is a nursing father to the people, a protector of their persons, their rights, their properties, and privileges? Therefore, he cannot, as King, do his subjects wrong; he has no constitutional authority to wrong any of them. As charity worketh no ill, it cannot do it; it is inconsistent with its nature. That is not charity which worketh ill or doeth wrong; so it is inconsistent with the constitutional authority or nature of the King to do wrong; it is not the constitutional King that does wrong—that robs the people of their rights—that destroys their liberty and property, and seeks to make them absolute slaves. No! No! Such a one is a tyrant, a character diametrically opposite to that of a constitutional King. The tyrant always does wrong, by every act of his tyranny, whether performed by himself immediately, or by his Ministers; and he may as really be a tyrant when he does all by his Ministers, as when he makes no use of them. This answer is the sense of the grand Congress, in the following pertinent and comprehensive expressions, as I take it, viz: "We view him (i. e. the King) as the Constitution represents him; that tells us, he can do no wrong. The cruel and illegal attacks which we oppose, have no foundation in the Royal authority."

As to the second question, What is rebellion in a State? Since it is asserted, by persons of the most extensive knowledge, "that rebellion is a term undefined and unknown in the law," I shall only attempt to give that idea of it which I have conceived by my own private reflections upon the nature of things. The being of a State or Kingdom, as a body politic, is founded in the Constitution of that State or Kingdom. By the Constitution, all the constituent parts of the body politic are bound, in their several spheres, like the head and members of the human body, to seek the good of the whole; and, when this is the case with King and subjects, ruler and ruled, magistrates and people, the body politic enjoys a well-being, like a human body in a state of health. To rebel, literally signifies to make or levy war; and, properly, it signifies, that some of the constituent parts of the body politic are becoming inimical to the Constitution, and levy war against the well-being of the State. Like sickness in a human body, which assaults the constitution, to destroy the well-being of the body. If any number of the people oppose the constitutional laws of the State, and levy war against the constitutional authority of the King or magistrate, they declare themselves to be enemies to the well-being of the State, and are guilty of rebellion. So, likewise, if the King or magistrate degenerates into a tyrant, robs the people of their constitutional rights, and levies war against them, or any part of them, he declares himself to be an enemy to the well-being of the State, and is guilty of raising rebellion, tending to destroy, not only the well-being, but essential being of the State, as much as when a gangrene seizes any important member of the human body, it threatens the destruction of the whole body, if the infected member be not immediately amputated. And, in case of such a rebellion, the people are bound, by the Constitution, to take up arms, in defence of the State, against the rebels, and cut them off, and not to spare the crowned head, when found heading a rebellion against the Constitution, for he is an intestine enemy to the State. Will any say, did not David spare King Saul, his enemy, when he had an opportunity to have cut off his head, and contented himself with acting only on the defensive. Let such remember, that the reason David gives for it is, because Saul was the Lord's anointed. But Protestants allow no King, now on earth, to be the Lord's anointed; and we ought to cut off a crowned head as soon as any other, when it becomes tyrannical, and raises rebellion in the State, tending to destroy its well-being.

As to the third question, Whether, all things considered, it is not the indispensable duty of the United Colonies of America, immediately to form themselves into an independent Constitution, or a Republick State? I must pray those men of Issachar, the Members of the honourable Continental Congress, that they have understanding of the times, to know what these Colonies ought to do; to consider whether the present time is not the proper nick of time for it; whether the concurring circumstances in Divine Providence do not make it a present duty for laying a foundation of the well-being of the Colonies for many generations? Many things must be considered, in order to come to a determination; particularly, whether these Colonies are not broken off from the British empire, by the imperious, tyrannical, and usurping claim of the British Parliament, with the Royal assent to it, of supreme authority over the Colonies, to make laws binding on them, in all cases whatsoever; and by the grievous laws, and illegal attacks made, and cruel exertions put forth, in consequence of said claim, which stab, to the very heart, the sacred compacts between the King and the Colonies, in which their allegiance to the King, and union to the empire are founded? It must also be considered, whether, whilst the United Colonies have been crying and praying to the King, as children to a father, for redress of grievances, asking only for children's bread, the stipulated rights and privileges of Englishmen, they have not had in return a stone, a serpent, and a scorpion—their petitions refused, themselves declared rebels—armed ships and troops sent to kill, destroy, lay waste, and spread desolation, by fire and sword, from one end of the Colonies to the other? It must also be considered, whether, there are not grounds to conclude that the King is obstinately set and resolute, and the Parliament determined to pour in troops in battle array against the Colonies next Spring, twenty, thirty, or fifty thousand, or as many as they can procure, of Russians, Hanoverians, and Irish Catholics, which, if they do, will be followed with much bloodshed, for we will be free, or die? Whether we ought not to prevent the effusion of human blood as much as may be? And, if we should now enter into a Republick State, and declare our ports open for a free trade with every nation but that which is at war with us, whether the other nations will not, especially, such as suffer by the operation of these grievous acts of the British Parliament, cheerfully enter into an alliance with us, for the sake of enjoying our trade, which shall put an effectual stop to the hostile proceedings of the British Parliament against us? It is true, there are some movings in England; the City of London speaks well to the electors. But, what if they should proceed to instruct their Representatives, remonstrate, and petition for a repeal of all the grievous acts, &c., &c., and all the towns, cities, &c., in England should follow their example; it must be considered whether, in this case, we should have the least reason to expect that the Parliament, or the King, would be moved to do any thing to the purpose, so long as a majority of the Members are under the thumb of the Ministry, by virtue of Ministerial pensions or bribes? Whether the Ministers do not know that they will be immediately impeached, and their heads in danger, if the Parliament should redress the American grievances? They know, by experience, that money answers all things, and that they can carry what point they please in the Parliament by the force of it; and nothing there will put a stop to their measures and proceedings, but the rousing of the British Lion—the people's rising and betaking themselves to arms; this would do the business! It must, therefore, be considered, whether we have any reasonable grounds to expect such an event will take place in the time of the present session of Parliament? and though the rising of the people is the only probable expedient for preventing the destruction of the Kingdom, have we not more grounds to fear that the Ministry will, by craft, falsehoods, and the force of money, keep the people quiet and easy till the Kingdom is destroyed, and the Colonies too, if they continue to wait on them? What wait ye for? Is not every month's delay to look to ourselves, and to enter into such a state as proposed, dangerous?

But, if we should soon have intelligence of things in England taking such an unexpected turn, as to set on foot a negotiation for accommodating matters between Great Britain and the Colonies, I would, in that case, earnestly entreat the Colonies to take heed, and beware of every plan that shall be proposed, to see if it be not calculated to weaken or break the present happy union of the Colonies; or to preserve alive, some way, their claim of supreme authority over the Colonies; as the proposal would, of dissolving the Colony-States, and uniting them all in one state with Great Britain, with liberty to send but an inconsiderable number of Representatives to the Parliament of Great Britain. As the King and Parliament have broken us off from the British empire—drawn the sword offensively, and shed much blood, destroyed our trade, fishery, and a number of our seaport towns, and put us to infinite trouble and expense; it is hoped these Colonies have wisdom and justice enough, for, and in behalf of themselves, not to sit down satisfied with only a repeal of the grievous acts, but insist upon reparation of the damage they have done us; and if the Colonies should ever think fit to enter into compacts again with the King of England, to become his subjects, by receiving Royal charters from him, that they will take care to have the right of choosing all their officers, of making all their laws, and of disposing of all their own property, and taxing themselves only, without being subject to the control of any State or Power on earth, whatsoever, stipulated to them in the most express terms. As they have forced us to draw the sword of defence, and make our appeal to Heaven, God forbid that we should sheath it again, but on conditions of enjoying the rights and privileges of men, and of Englishmen, free and clear of any control of the British Parliament.

JOHANNES IN EREMO.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD DARTMOUTH, SECRETARY OF STATE FOR AMERICA.

Philadelphia, January 1, 1776.

MY LORD: You are the Minister of the American Department. You have the character of a religious man, a rare virtue in a modern statesman. It has become my duty and interest to address you on the present circumstances of affairs in America. I know the Americans well; their strongest and ruling passion was their affection to their mother country; the honour, the glory, of Great Britain they esteemed as their greatest happiness; a large portion of the same affection remains; nothing but repeated injuries and injustice could have lessened it. My Lord, from a wanton and avaricious exercise of power, the Ministry of Great Britain have heaped injuries on the heads of the Americans, that no one period of history can parallel.

The practice of the Egyptians, in smothering the children of the Israelites in the birth, the swords of Cortez and Pizarro, who slew millions of innocent Mexicans and Peruvians, the dreadful famine brought by the East-India Company upon the poor East-Indians, must all be brought into one scale, to serve as any sort of balance to the system of desolation that you, and your brother Ministers, are meditating, and daily practising, against the unhappy people of North-America.

The elements, which the Providence of God hath given for all his creatures, you have the presumption to deprive them of. Fire, sword, famine, and desolation, show the vicinity of your fleets and armies; children and servants are animated to rise and slaughter their benefactors. No species of cruelty, which the wit or malice of man or devils could devise, but are practised against the Americans.

Do you believe in God, my Lord, and direct these things? Do you believe that God made America as well as Great Britain? If you do, ponder, consider well, what answer you will give, if you escape punishment in this world, when you come to be questioned before the Throne of God, for the destruction you have made of His creatures, the work of His hands, to whom he granted life and liberty, earth, air and water, equally as to yourself; and yet, presumptuous man, you have dared to counteract His providence! Have you conscience, my Lord? If you have, I would not, for the empire of a thousand worlds, be Lord Dartmouth! But, my Lord, it is not to awaken your conscience only, that I write you this letter; the flame of civil war, by your management, hath extended far and wide in America; battles have been fought, numbers have been slain, and prisoners taken on both sides; the Americans have in their possession ten for one, and among them many men of rank, Prescott, Preston, Stopford, and others; they are all treated with tenderness and regard, while the prisoners you have taken, are treated with severity, carried to England in irons, there, as it is said, to be tried, and, of course, condemned and executed, or, in other words, under form of law, murdered!

My Lord, if there be any thing on earth, or in Heaven, that you respect, avoid that rock. You have Colonel Allen, Captain Martindale, and some other prisoners; the hour that it is known here that any of those prisoners are executed, the prisoners here will be sacrificed—nay, more, every English and Scotch adherent; dread, shun, and forever abandon such murderous intentions. The cries and vengeance of all the relations of those whose blood shall be shed in this manner, will surround you; death and horror will be your constant companions, and the torments of the damned, even on earth, will await you.

My Lord, this is but the beginning of sorrows. Take in good part what I write. It is truth, and intended for the benefit of Britain and America.

AN ENGLISH AMERICAN.

PETITION OF DOCTOR BENJAMIN CHURCH TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

To the Honourable the Members of Congress in PHILADELPHIA, Greeting:

The Petition of BENJAMIN CHURCH, Jun.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS:

Whereas, your petitioner was put under arrest, in Cambridge, on the 27th of September last, by his Excellency General Washington, where he was confined, a close prisoner, till the 16th day of November; and your petitioner having inherited from Nature a feeble constitution, with a particular tendency to consumption, from which, with great difficulty, he escaped with life, a few years past, and has been compelled to observe the greatest caution ever since, respecting his diet, air, and exercise; your petitioner being precluded, by his severe confinement, from that attention necessary to his preservation, was there attacked with his constitutional complaints; a straightness of the chest, incessant cough, and spitting of blood.

On the 16th of November last, may it please your Honours, your petitioner was removed, by order of your Honours, into the Colony of Connecticut, to be further confined, and was committed, by command of his Honour the Governour, and the honourable Committee, to Norwich Jail, in a close, narrow, dark, and noisome cell; previous to his being lodged therein, a small grate (to the total exclusion of light and air) was nailed up.

Deplorable, indeed, may it please your Honours, has been the event, to your petitioner. He had not been immured in this receptacle of misery but a few hours, when, from the weak state of his lungs, and the corrupt and stagnant air of his cell, he began to labour for breath. In his insupportable distress, which was so great as repeatedly to force blood from his mouth and nostrils, he earnestly entreated his jailer to open the grate, which he declined doing, as it would be a breach of his orders. The most violent convulsive asthma, with all the unspeakable agonies of instant strangulation, then took place.

The keeper of the prison, being justly alarmed with apprehensions of the immediate death of your petitioner, hastened to his Honour the Governour, giving him an account of the distressed and dangerous situation of your petitioner. His Honour compassionately directed the grate to be opened.

This, though a partial, proved but an ineffectual relief, as your unhappy petitioner, at frequent intervals, by day and by night, still struggles with the apprehensions of immediate death from suffocation. He has applied to Messrs. Tracey, Rogers, and Turner, Physicians, in the town, who concur in sentiment, that nothing but exercise, in a clear, elastic air, will contribute to his recovery.

Your petitioner, to obtain the most speedy relief, which the urgency of his circumstances required, presented a petition to the General Assembly of this Colony, for that purpose; but the honourable Assembly judged it improper to act upon the matter, as the order of Congress for his confinement was absolute.

This, may it please your Honours, is but an imperfect representation of the accumulated distresses of your miserable petitioner. He most humbly beseeches your Honours to have compassion upon him. He considers, with mingled grief and indignation, the precipitate step he has taken; but appeals to the Searcher of all Hearts, that the letter, which has proved the unhappy occasion of his sufferings, is the only letter he ever wrote, to go into Boston. That offensive letter was designed as a political decoy for his brother Fleming; and, however equivocal or absurd it may appear to your Honours, was, indeed, dictated by an anxious concern for the distresses of his country.

Your petitioner most earnestly entreats your Honours to permit him to retire to his distressed and necessitous family, in Taunton, and he will never cease to be grateful for your humanity and clemency; and, should he be so happy as to recover his health, your Honours may be assured, it shall be his constant exertions, as it has ever been the first wish of his heart, to promote the welfare of his country.

Your petitioner, may it please your Honours, would deprecate that any jealousy, respecting the integrity of his designs should possess the minds of your Honours; but, if he should be so greatly unhappy, he would request your Honours' permission, by the first opportunity, to leave the Continent; but begs leave to plead with your Honours, to indulge him with an opportunity, by his future endeavours here, to redeem his injured reputation—to approve himself the same inflexible friend to the common rights, and to conciliate the esteem of his worthy countrymen.

And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray,

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, January 1, 1776.

SIR: I have to acknowledge your two favours of the 12th of last month. Captain McKay is, at present, at Hartford. He behaves politely. I believe he is more cautious and guarded. The younger Skene is fled. Governour Skene is still at Hartford. I am sorry for Lieutenant Halsey's imprudence and misbehaviour.

The Continental Congress desire me to transmit to you the rolls of the companies, in the three Connecticut Regiments, that went in the Northern department. I have given the Paymaster-General some few rolls that I had by me. Colonels Hinman and Waterbury have promised to send me their rolls soon. When received, I will transmit them to you.

President Hancock informed me, that the prisoners from St. John's were to be sent to this town and Windham. I am not desirous of their company, and have heard of but few of them this way.

I am, with proper salutations of this day, your obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable Major-General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, January 1, 1776.

SIR: I received, the 20th of last month, your Excellency's favour of the 15th, enclosing a list of the officers and companies, under the new arrangement, with the number of men enlisted; and, at the same time, another of the 17th, with the information, from several persons, who then had lately come out of Boston. I return my thanks for both.

By accounts received from the various parts of the Colony, the Recruiting Officers, for the Continental service, have good success in enlisting men.

The Assembly have granted Chaplains the same pay given last campaign, with the addition of forty shillings per month, each, to enable them to supply their pulpits.

Brigadier-General Prescott is not arrived. Shall give particular directions to prevent his escape, if he comes into this Colony.

The 23d, yours of the 14th of December came to hand, per Monsieurs Penet and De Pluarne. Every necessary assistance, for expediting their journey, was afforded, without delay; they set out the next morning. You shall be made acquainted with the expense incurred on their account, when the same is known.

The 28th instant, at evening, our General Assembly adjourned. There is great unanimity in our common cause. Among others, they passed an act for raising and equipping one-fourth part of the Militia of this Colony, to be forthwith selected by voluntary enlistment, with as many other able-bodied, effective men, not included in any Militia roll, as are inclined to enlist, to stand in readiness, as Minute-Men, for the defence of this, and the rest of the United Colonies, with proper encouragement. Another act, for restraining and punishing persons who are inimical to the liberties of this, and the rest of the United Colonies, and for directing proceedings therein.

No person to supply the Ministerial army or navy; to give intelligence; to enlist, or procure others to enlist in their service; to undertake to pilot any of their vessels, or in any other ways to aid or assist them, on the penalty of forfeiting all his estate, and imprisonment in any of the jails in this Colony, not exceeding three years. No one to speak, write, &c., against the doings of the honourable General Congress, or acts of our Assembly, on the penalty of being disarmed, and rendered incapable to hold or serve in any office, civil or military; and be further punished, either by fine, imprisonment, disfranchisement, or to find surety of the peace and good behaviour.

Any person or persons who put, or shall continue to hold, or screen themselves under the protection of the Ministerial army or navy, or aid or assist in carrying into execution the present Ministerial measures against America, their estates to be seized for the use of the Colony.

A resolve to provide, so that we shall have two armed vessels, one of sixteen carriage-guns, the other fourteen; with a schooner, called the Spy, of four carriage-guns; and four row-gallies.

An act to exempt the polls of soldiers from taxes, for the last, and ensuing campaigns.

Another act, for encouraging the manufactories of saltpetre and gunpowder. Hope to collect saltpetre, and manufacture a considerable quantity of gunpowder early in the Spring.

The furnace, at Middletown, is smelting lead, and likely to turn out twenty or thirty tons. Ore is plenty.

Please to favour me with an account of the quantity of lead received from Crown-Point. From thence I received one hundred and eighty old gun-barrels, which are fitting up here, and will make one hundred and fifty stands of good arms. We are put to difficulty for gun-locks. Hearing that those stands taken in the ordnance store-ship had each a spare lock, thought proper to mention to you, that if it be so, whether it may not be well to furnish a number for the arms fitting here.

On the 29th, at evening, I met, at Hartford, on my returning from the General Assembly, yours of the 23d December, and immediately sent to Captain Wadsworth, a person employed by the Commissary-General, and much acquainted, to see if any blankets could be purchased, and found there are none. Many of our new enlisted men, I am told, will bring blankets with them, which they get from private families. Those lost at the Bunker-Hill fight were furnished in that manner; and our Minute-Men will supply themselves in that way: that I am very doubtful of success, if attempted. Lieutenant-Colonel Durkee this day mentioned to me your direction to him on this head. Shall lay the same before the Committee at our next meeting.

Enclosed is copy of an act empowering the Commander-in-chief, &c., to administer an oath. Also, Minutes of the ordnance taken from the Ministerial troops at the several Northern posts, from the 1st of May to the 13th November, 1775.

I remain, with great truth and regard, and with the proper salutations of this day, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Enclosed is a copy of a letter from President Wheelock, at Dartmouth College.

At a General Assembly of the Governour and Company of the Colony of Connecticut, holden at New-Haven, by special order of the Governour, on the 14th day of December, 1775,

An Act empowering the Commander-in-chief of the Continental Army, or Officers commanding a detachment, or out-posts, &c., to administer an Oath.

Be it enacted, by the Governour, Council, and Representatives, in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That the Commander-in-chief of the Army raised, or to be raised, by this, and the rest of the United Colonies, or any Officer in the service of the said United Colonies, commanding any detachment or out-post, shall have power and authority to administer an oath, and swear any person or persons to the truth of any information or intelligence, or any other matters relative to the publick service.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, January 1, 1776.

SIR: Upon receipt of your Excellency's Letter of the 23d ultimo, I employed two persons to apply to the house-keepers in this town, individually, for blankets for the Army. They have collected about one hundred and eighty, which will be sent forward this day. It is full as large a number as I expected to procure, considering how we have been exhausted by supplies to various parts of the service. I shall immediately take measures for collecting more from the country towns.

I refer your Excellency to General Lee for the particulars of his expedition to Rhode-Island, which I hope will be attended with beneficial consequences to the Colony.

I received yours upon the subject of re-listing the Army, but from the distressed state of the Colony, and the multiplicity of business pressing me, was incapable of giving you a satisfactory answer; nor can I, at present, do any thing more than renew my assurances of giving every assistance in my power to the service.

I am, with truth and esteem, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General of the Armies of the United Colonies.

P. S. You will receive by Mr. Coomes Hale, who carries the blankets, an account of the cost of them. I shall be obliged to your Excellency for giving orders for the payment of it to him. By the same conveyance I send you a box and basket left for your Excellency by Mr. Penet, and the other French gentleman who accompanied him.

JOHN SMITH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, January 1, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your desire, to his Honour the Governor, what blankets could be collected in this town, are now sent you by Mr. Hale, who will give you the cost of them. The number sent is one hundred and eighty-two. Am sorry the number is so small, though believe that a quantity might be collected in the country towns in some little time. If you think it needful, please to let me know, and I will endeavour to procure them.

I am, sir, your very humble servant, JOHN SMITH.

To His Excellency General Washington.

DOCTOR MORGAN TO THE PUBLICK.

General Hospital, at Cambridge, January 1, 1776.

Impressed with a lively sense of the spirit of patriotism which so eminently adorns the good people of this country, the subscriber, who is appointed to the chief direction of the sick and wounded, thinks it incumbent on him to make known the seasonable aid he has lately received from the towns of Concord, Bedford, first and second Parishes of Sudbury, Acton, Marlborough, Stow and Lincoln. The Hospital having, for some time past, been in great want of old linen for bandages, compresses, and lint, or fine tow for dressing; saddler's or sole leather, and web, or gartering, for tourniquets; of tape, thread, needles, pins, and other articles of a like nature; application was made to the inhabitants of the above-named places for a supply, at such prices as they, themselves, should think reasonable. No sooner were our wants thus made known to them, than with an alacrity and zeal truly characteristic of the people, the business of collecting those things was immediately undertaken by some of their Selectmen, and other proper persons. The Clergy, in particular, engaged warmly in the work. To their pious and animated exhortations, from the sacred desk, may be ascribed much of that Christian charity, and those laudable effusions of philanthropy which were manifested on this occasion, and which cannot fail to secure to them the esteem of the publick, and to reflect a lasting honour on their attachment to the cause of liberty, and the rights of human nature. What they could, they furnished with an unsparing hand; offers of pay they nobly rejected, preferring the conscious pleasure that arises from deeds of charity to every selfish, sordid gratification that interest inspires; an instance of benevolence worthy of admiration! Neither is its importance limited by the intrinsic value of the donation; it holds up a proper example of imitation to others.

Ever since the first establishment of a Military Hospital among us, there has been too great a scarcity of these essential articles; and though the present supply is truly liberal, in respect to the numbers who furnished it, yet its salutary influence cannot be lasting, unless it is still continued from other quarters. May we not, therefore, expect a spirit of emulation will be kindled in every humane breast, and an affectionate concern to yield all possible assistance to the wants and distresses of the sick soldiery? Men who cheerfully, and hourly, expose their lives for their country's welfare, and who amidst the destructive rage of battle, willingly encounter danger, in all its shapes, for its defence, may, surely, challenge the compassion of those who reap the advantage of their courage, without any of that risk which is inseparable from it. Can it be once doubted, then, whether the inhabitants of other places will be backward to contribute what need to cost them so little, towards laying in a sufficient store of those articles, to secure against all future apprehensions of further scarcity or want of them? But whilst they are of a low price in themselves, yet money cannot always purchase them, and from their exceeding utility, in cases of need, they become of inestimable value.

As it is impracticable for the subscriber to make personal application to people at a distance, to furnish a supply of what is wanted of this sort for the patients in the Hospital, he hopes all printers of the publick news will be pleased to give this address a place in their papers. He also flatters himself, the Committees established in different places, especially, in large towns, will be pleased to set on foot a further collection of such of the articles enumerated, as may be most easy for them to procure, especially, old sheets and soft worn linen; and to forward the same to the camp with all possible despatch. The expense of conveyance, if any, will be cheerfully paid, and the generous donors may rest assured their contributions will be managed with the strictest care to prevent waste, and meet with due acknowledgment from their humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN,
Director General of the Continental Hospital, and the chief Physician to the Army.

N. B. Blankets are greatly wanted for the Hospital; for which a suitable price will be given, if sent to Cambridge. Any persons having blankets to dispose of, who live at a distance, if they will be so kind as to send notice thereof by the post, mentioning the quality and price of them, shall have an immediate answer.

INSTRUCTIONS TO WINTHROP SARGENT, AGENT.

Head-Quarters, January 1, 1776.

Sir: You being recommended to his Excellency as a proper person to transact the business of the several armed vessels fitted out, or to be fitted at the Continental expense, will be pleased to consider what follows as your Instructions:

1st. When any of the Continental vessels put into Cape Ann, you are to supply them with such necessaries as are absolutely wanting. When any prize is sent in, you are without delay to go on board, receive all the papers on board, and transmit them, by express, to Head-Quarters.

2d. You are to make out an inventory of the cargo, as near as you can from the papers found on board, or information from the Master or Mate of the prize; all possible care that can be taken must be used to prevent any embezzlement of the cargo, or of the captain's, crew's, or passengers', private property, which must be given up to them, except some extraordinary circumstances should arise, to make an alteration of this order necessary.

3d. All sailors belonging to a prize to be detained with you, or sent to neighbouring towns, where you may think them more secure, until you receive orders from Head-Quarters for the further disposal of them.

4th. All prisoners of whatever rank, or denomination, to be treated with the utmost humanity and tenderness.

5th. As you are appointed a Continental agent only, if the officers and men choose to appoint an agent for their one-third of any prize taken, they may do so, in that case you are to permit him to take a copy of all papers relating to the cargo, and when the vessel is discharged, you must give unto said agent a copy of what was on board.

6th. Hulls of all vessels taken, with all their appurtenances, to be carefully laid up in a secure port until further orders.

7th. Whatever advice you at any time have, respecting the armed vessels, or prizes, that is material, you will send up to Head-Quarters by suitable opportunities.

8th. Forasmuch as the port of Cape Ann lies convenient for the armed vessels to run into, when in want of provisions, and other necessaries, you will lay in, on the most reasonable terms, twelve barrels of beef, and twelve barrels of pork; twenty barrels of bread, will be ordered to you from Beverly, where a quantity is reserved for the use of the armed vessels; and, as you supply any vessels with a part of these articles, you are to replace them, so as always to keep that quantity on hand; you must take the steward's receipt for every thing you supply,

9th. As the harbour of Cape Ann is not looked upon as safe to lay up any prizes or their cargoes, you must, as soon as possible, have such as may be brought in there, sent up to Beverly, where William Bartlett, Esq., is, by his Excellency, appointed an agent. You and Mr. Bartlett must agree amongst yourselves about the terms upon which you will do business, for each, of this sort. The commission allowed to all agents, is two and one-half per cent. on sales of any prizes, &c., and the same on the amount of provisions and necessaries supplied the vessels with.

10th. In making up your accounts, you are to remember that the original bills or invoices are to be sent as vouchers; that your own account is to be general, and at the bottom, an affidavit of the justice of your account. This is not done from any jealousy or suspicion, but that the utmost satisfaction may be given the country, and that all agents may be on the same footing.

You will at all times give the utmost despatch, and if any irregularity, misconduct, or negligence in the officers of any vessels, you are desired to give immediate information to the General.

Should any of the vessels unnecessarily remain in port, you are to give orders to the Commander to proceed forthwith to sea; should he refuse, you are to demand his reasons, and transmit them to Head-Quarters.

By his Excellency's command.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONELS HOWE AND WOODFORD TO THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION, DATED NORFOLK, TEN O'CLOCK, P. M., JANUARY 1, 1776.

Between three and four o'clock, a severe cannonade began from all the shipping, under cover of which they landed small parties, and set fire to the houses on the wharves. The wind favoured their design, and we believe the flames will become general. In the confusion which they supposed would ensue, they frequently attempted to land; but this, by the bravery of our officers and men, we have hitherto prevented, with only a few men wounded on our side, and, we persuade ourselves, with a good deal of loss on theirs. Their efforts, and our opposition, still continue. We have stationed ourselves in such a manner as will, we believe, render every thing but burning the houses ineffectual. We wait with impatience your further orders, and are, respectfully, &c.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL HOWE TO THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION, DATED NORFOLK, JANUARY 2, 1776.

The cannonade of the town began about a quarter after three, yesterday, from upwards of one hundred pieces of cannon, and continued till near ten, at night, without intermission; it then abated a little, and continued till two, this morning. Under cover of their guns they landed, and set fire to the town in several places near the water, though our men strove to prevent them all in their power; but the houses near the water being chiefly of wood, they took fire immediately, and the fire spread with amazing rapidity. It is now become general, and the whole town will, I doubt not, be consumed in a day or two. Expecting that the fire would throw us into confusion, they frequently landed, and were every time repulsed, I imagine with loss, but with what loss I cannot tell; the burning of the town has made several avenues, which yesterday they had not, so that they may now fire with greater effect; the tide is now rising, and we expect at high water another cannonade.

I have only to wish it may be ineffectual as the last; for we have not one man killed, and but a few wounded. I cannot enter into the melancholy consideration of the women and children running through a crowd of shot to get out of the town, some of them with children at their breasts; a few have, I hear, been killed; does it not call for vengeance, both from God and man? It is but justice to inform you, that I had the pleasure to find every officer ready to execute orders at a moment's warning, and that the men behaved with steadiness and spirit. Colonel Stevens went down at my command, and headed some men near the water, where he engaged a party who had landed, with a spirit and conduct of a good officer. Of my friend, Colonel Woodford, it is almost needless to speak, but I cannot avoid expressing, that I received from him every assistance which conduct and spirit could give me.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL ELLIOT TO COLONEL PATRICK HENRY, DATED HAMPTON, JANUARY 5, 1776.

Enclosed you have the copy of a letter from Colonel Woodford to me, dated three o'clock yesterday, since which a snow and two small vessels have gone up to Norfolk. She appeared to have a great many men on board, but was not a vessel of war. There are three others (one a brig) in the bay this morning coming up, which Captain Barron has just gone to look after. Some little time after my express left Norfolk with the enclosed, a very heavy firing began, and continued chief part of the night; and a considerable fire was discovered there about dark, which continued burning many hours.

Norfolk, January 4, 1776, three o'clock, P. M.

About quarter past three, on Monday afternoon, the whole fleet began a heavy cannonade, which lasted seven hours, without any intermission, and, indeed, continued, off and on, till last night, since which we have been tolerably quiet. Under the fire of their ships, they landed in many places, and set fire to the houses on the wharves. In these attempts, many of them, we are certain, were killed, and never failed being repulsed by our people. We had not a man killed, and only five or six wounded, one supposed mortally; and two or three women and children are said to be killed. Providence certainly interfered in our favour, or more lives must have been lost. They once landed and got into the streets with field-pieces, but were beat back with loss, and no execution done by their fire. Nineteenths of the town are destroyed, but the fire is now out.

Williamsburgh, January 5, 1776.

I hope our countrymen will not be at all dispirited at the destruction of Norfolk, but rather rejoice that half the mischief our enemies can do us, is done already. They have destroyed one of the first towns in America; and the only one, except two or three, in Virginia, which carried on any thing like a trade. We are only sharing part of the sufferings of our American brethren, and can now glory in having received one of the keenest strokes of the enemy, without flinching. They have done their worst, and to no other purpose than to harden our soldiers, and learn them to bear, without dismay, all the most formidable operations of a war, carried on by a powerful and cruel enemy, to no other purpose than to give the world specimens of British cruelty and American fortitude, unless it be to force us to lay aside that childish fondness for Britain, and that foolish, tame dependance on her. We had borne so long with the oppression of an ungenerous restriction of our trade, of a restriction, in some instances, which seemed calculated merely as badges of our subjection, and had been contented so long with barely refusing to purchase commodities, which they had taxed for the purpose of raising a revenue in America, that our patience and moderation served but to encourage them to proceed to greater lengths. To greater lengths they have proceeded, as far as the proudest tyrant's lust of despotism, stimulated by cruelty, a rancorous malice, and an infernal spirit of revenge, could hurry them. How sunk is Britain! Could not Britons venture to wage war with Americans, till they were told that Americans were cowards—till they had disarmed them, or had, as they thought, put it out of their power to procure arms; nor even then, without the assistance of Roman Catholics and Indians, and endeavouring to raise amongst us a domestic enemy? Was this like a brave and generous nation? If they were lost to all the feelings of Britons, for men contending for the support of the British Constitution—if they were determined to conquer America, why did they not attempt it like Britons? Why meanly run about to the different Powers of Europe, entreating them not to assist us? Why make use of every base and inhuman stratagem, and wage a savage war, unknown amongst civilized nations? Surely, whoever has heard of Carleton's, Connelly's and Dunmore's plots against us, cannot but allow that they must have been authorized by a higher power; and whoever believes this, cannot but wish to be, instantly and forever, removed from under such a power, and to be guarded most effectually against it. Most freely would I cut the Gordian knot which has hitherto so firmly bound us to Britain, and call on France and Spain for assistance against an enemy who seem bent on our destruction, but who, blessed be the God of Hosts, have been baffled in most of their attempts against us, been chastised in all, and have made many attacks upon us, without being able to kill a single man.

AN AMERICAN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A MIDSHIPMAN ON BOARD HIS MAJESTY'S SHIP OTTER, COMMANDED BY CAPTAIN SQUIRE, DATED JANUARY 9, 1776.

December 9.—Our troops, with about sixty townsmen from Norfolk, and a detachment of sailors from the ships, among whom I had the honour to march, set out from Norfolk to attack, once more, the Rebels at the Great Bridge, who had been lodged there some time, and had erected a breastwork opposite to our fort on their side of the river. We arrived at the fort half an hour after three, in the morning, and after refreshing ourselves, prepared to attack the Rebels in their intrenchments.

Captain Squire, ever ready to assist my Lord in the publick cause, had sent his gunners and men to manage two pieces of cannon who were in the front, and ordered to begin the attack. But how can it be supposed, that with two hundred men we could force a strong intrenchment, defended by at least two thousand? Yet this was attempted, and we marched up to their works with the intrepidity of lions. But alas! we retreated with much fewer brave fellows than we took out. Their fire was so heavy, that, had we not retreated as we did, we should every one have been cut off. Figure to yourself a strong breastwork built across a causeway, on which six men only could advance abreast; a large swamp almost surrounded them; at the back of which were two small breastworks to flank us in our attack on their intrenchments. Under these disadvantages, it was impossible to succeed; yet our men were so enraged, that all the entreaties, and scarcely the threats of their officers, could prevail on them to retreat, which at last they did. The cannon were secured within the fort. We had sixty killed, wounded, and taken prisoners; among whom were the gallant Captain Fordice of the Grenadiers of the Fourteenth Brigade, Lieutenants Napier and Leslie, and Lieutenant Batut, wounded and taken prisoner; men all universally esteemed, and for whom all shed tears. We set out on our return to Norfolk about seven o'clock in the evening, at which place we arrived at twelve, and the soldiers were embarked on board vessels prepared for that purpose.

December 14.—The Rebels having now nothing to obstruct their passage, arrived and took possession of Norfolk, and in the evening saluted us with a volley of small-arms: which, the next morning, I was sent on shore to their commander to inform him, that, if another shot was fired at the Otter, they must expect the town to be knocked about their ears.

January 9.—The detested town of Norfolk is no more! Its destruction happened on New-Year's day! About four o'clock in the afternoon the signal was given from the Liverpool, when a dreadful cannonading began from the three ships, which lasted till it was too hot for the Rebels to stand on their wharves. Our boats now landed and set fire to the town in several places. It burnt fiercely all night, and the next day; nor are the flames yet extinguished; but no more of Norfolk remains than about twelve houses, which have escaped the flames.*

FROM THE VIRGINIA GAZETTE, PRINTED ON BOARD THE SHIP DUNMORE, LYING OFF NORFOLK.

Norfolk, Ship Dunmore, January 15, 1776.

Soon after the arrival of the Liverpool frigate from England, Captain Bellew sent a flag of truce, and demanded to be informed, whether His Majesty's ships-of-war would be supplied from the shore with provisions. The reply being in the negative, and the ships in the harhour being continually annoyed by firing from the Rebels, out of that part of the town next the water, rendered it necessary to destroy it, and dislodge them from the houses they occupied, directly under the muzzles of the ship's guns. Accordingly, previous notice being given to the inhabitants, in order that the women, children, and innocent persons, might have time to remove out of danger, on the 1st instant, about four o'clock in the afternoon, the Liverpool, frigate, the Otter and Kingfisher, sloops-of-war, with the Governour's ship, Dunmore, began to cannonade the town, and, in the mean time, a few men were landed in boats, who set fire to the houses next the water.

* The town of Norfolk, in Virginia, which was lately burnt by the Liverpool, man-of-war, and her attendants, was the largest town in the whole Province. It contained near four times the number of houses in Williamsburgh, the capital, and might be compared to Reading, in Berkshire, with regard to the extent of its site, and the scale of its population. The Rebels, therefore, have sustained a very severe loss in its destruction; and we are very well assured, that this loss has already not a little cooled the fever of Virginian patriotism.

As the wind was moderate, and from the shore, it was judged with certainty that the destruction would end with that part of the town next the water, which the King's ships meant only should be fired; but the Rebels cruelly and unnecessarily completed the destruction of the whole town, by setting fire to the houses in the streets back, which were before safe from the flames.

The ill-judged and misapplied fury, discharged upon the weak and the innocent, was not confined to the town. The country around, for several days, was illuminated with the fires of the houses they burnt, amongst which is the distillery, about three miles from the town, a work of great value and publick utility, with a large stock of rum and molasses.

The ships continued firing, with intervals, till about ten o'clock next morning, during which the ardour of the men could not be repressed; and, notwithstanding all possible care taken to prevent them, a few boats went on shore, where they exchanged some shot with the enemy's parties, and had three or four men slightly, and one mortally, wounded. Several accounts concur, that the enemy had eighteen killed, and about forty men wounded.

SAMUEL ADAMS TO ELBRIDGE GERRY.

Philadelphia, January 2, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your very acceptable letter of the 13th of December is now before me. Our opinions of the necessity of keeping the military power under the direction and control of the legislative, I always thought were alike. It was far from my intention, in my letter to you on the subject, to attempt the correcting any imagined error in your judgment, but rather, shortly to express my own apprehensions at this time, when it is become necessary to tolerate that power, which is always formidable, and has so often proved fatal to the liberties of mankind.

It gives me great satisfaction to be informed, that the members of the House of Representatives are possessed of so warm a spirit of patriotism, as that "an enemy to America may as well attempt to scale the regions of bliss, as to insinuate himself into their favour." Whatever kind of men may be denominated enemies to their country, certainly he is a very injudicious friend to it, who gives his suffrage for any man to fill a publick office, merely because he is rich; and yet, you tell me, there are recent instances of this in our Government. I confess, it mortifies me greatly. The giving such a preference to riches, is both dishonourable and dangerous to a Government. It is, indeed, equally dangerous, to promote a man to a place of publick trust, only because he wants bread; but I think it is not so dishonourable, for men may be influenced to the latter from the feelings of humanity; but the other argues a base, degenerate, servile temper of mind. I hope our country will never see the time, when either riches, or the want of them, will be the leading considerations in the choice of publick officers. Whenever riches shall be deemed a necessary qualification, ambition, as well as avarice, will prompt men most ardently to thirst for them; and, it will be commonly said, as in ancient times of degeneracy,

Querenda pecunia primum est,
Virtus post nummos.

"Get money, money still,
And then let Virtue follow, if she will."

I am greatly honoured, if my late letter has been acceptable to the House. I hope the Militia Bill, to which that letter referred, is completed to the satisfaction of both Houses of the Assembly.

The account you give me of the success our people met with in the manufacture of saltpetre, is highly pleasing to me. I procured, of a gentleman in the Colony of New-York, the plan of a powder-mill, which I lately sent to Mr. Revere. I hope it may be of some use.

I have time, at present, only to request you to write to me by the post, and to assure you that I am your affectionate friend,

SAMUEL ADAMS.

To Elbridge Gerry, Esq.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOUR TRYON.

By his Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esq., Captain-General, and Governour-in-chief, in and over the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories thereon depending, in AMERICA, Chancellor, and Vice-Admiral of the same.

A PROCLAMATION.*

Whereas, the General Assembly of this Province stands prorogued to the first day of February, now next ensuing, I have thought fit for His Majesty's service, and I do, with the advice of His Majesty's Council, and by virtue of the powers and authority unto me granted by His Majesty, dissolve the said General Assembly; and the said General Assembly are hereby dissolved, accordingly.

Given under my hand, and seal at arms, in the City of New-York, the second day of January, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, in the sixteenth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the Third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth.

WILLIAM TRYON.

By his Excellency's command:

SAMUEL BAYARD, Jun., Dep. Secretary.

God save the King.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO COLONEL WYNKOOP.

Albany, January 2, 1776.

SIR: Captain Billings will deliver you the officers that were made prisoners in Canada, I do not hesitate a moment to apply to you, on this occasion, as I have had experience of your attention to promote the service. You will be so good as to forward the officers and their baggage to Trenton, together with the baggage of the St. John's garrison, the officers' servants, and four or five men to take care of the baggage; all the other men, women, and children, you will please to desire the Committee to canton, agreeable to my request of the 13th ultimo.

Should the snow fall when you arrive at Delaware, and the river not be navigable, and no possibility of going down on the ice, you will leave the baggage, and proceed with the officers and their servants, to Trenton, from whence you will please to repair to Congress, and report what you have done in prosecution of this request.

The officers are now on their parole of honour; but, when you take them in charge, you will request them to renew their parole, agreeable to my former orders.

The expenses run so high, that the greatest economy is to be used in conveying these troops.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Colonel Wynkoop.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO GENERAL WARD.

Cambridge, January 2, 1776.

SIR: In answer to yours of this date, by Mr. Pope, I am to inform you, by his Excellency's command, that he desires you to send a captain, two subalterns, and fifty men, to take charge of the military stores, provisions, &c., at Squantum, and to remain there till further orders.

I am, sir, &c.

To Major-General Ward.

* New-York, January 11, 1776.—On the 2d instant the Governour issued a proclamation to dissolve the Assembly of this Colony, and writs were issued for a new election of Representatives of the people, to serve in General Assembly. The Sheriff of this City and County, has published an advertisement, giving notice to the freemen and freeholders of the same, that he has appointed Thursday, the first day of February next, for them to meet, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, on the green, near the Work-House, in the city, to elect four members to represent them in General Assembly. The advertisement expresses it thus: To the Representatives of the said City and County, to assist the Captain-General, or Commander-in-chief, in a General Assembly.

BY THE KING.

A Proclamation, for encouraging Seamen to enter themselves on board His Majesty's Ships of War.

GEORGE R.

Whereas, it is our Royal intention to give all due encouragement to all such Seamen who shall voluntarily enter themselves in our service, we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to publish this, our Royal Proclamation; and we do hereby promise and declare, that all such able Seamen, not above the age of fifty, nor under the age of eighteen years, fit for our service, who shall, on or before the twenty-ninth day of February next, voluntarily enter themselves to serve in our Royal Navy, either with the captains or lieutenants of our ships, or the chief officers on board such tenders as shall be employed for raising men for the service of our Navy, shall receive, as our Royal bounty, the sum of forty shillings, each man; and all such ordinary seamen, fit for our service, who shall so enter themselves, as aforesaid, shall receive the sum of twenty shillings, each man, as our Royal bounty: such respective sums to be paid them by the respective clerks of the Cheque, residing at the ports or places where the ships into which they shall be entered shall be, immediately after the third muster of such seamen.

And we do declare, that the qualifications of the Seamen so entering themselves, as aforesaid, shall be certified by the captain, master, and boatswain of the ship or vessel where they shall enter.

And, for prevention of any abuses, by any persons leaving the vessels to which they shall belong, and entering themselves on board any other ships or vessels, in order to obtain the said bounty money, we do hereby declare and command, that such Seamen, belonging to any of our ships or vessels, as shall absent themselves from any of the said ships or vessels, to which they shall belong, and shall enter themselves on board any other of our said ships or vessels, in order to obtain the said bounty, shall not only lose the wages due to them in the ships or vessels they shall leave, but also be severely punished, according to their demerits.

Given at our Court, at St. James's, the third day of January, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, in the sixteenth year of our reign.

God save the King.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BRISTOL, JANUARY 3, 1776.

The rifleman, who was brought a prisoner here from Quebeck, being taken in crossing the river St. Lawrence, is confined in Bridewell. He is a Virginian, about six feet high, stout, and well proportioned. His behaviour is manly, but very modest. He was drafted from his corps, at Cambridge, to go on Arnold's expedition. His dress is a loose dress of coarse woollen, adapted to that cold climate, for which his regimentals were exchanged, or rather, taken from him, at Quebeck.

He says the pay of his corps was forty shillings currency per month, regularly paid (about twenty-five shillings sterling) in dollars, out of which they found their clothes. He was a fortnight in the camp, where, he says, every thing was in good order, provisions plenty, and exact discipline. He can strike a mark, with the greatest certainty, at two hundred yards distance. He has the heavy, Provincial pronunciation, but otherwise speaks good English. The account he gives, is, that the troops, in general, are such kind of men as himself, tall, and well proportioned. He was very clear and explicit in his answers, which he delivered with great modesty, but entirely free from any fear for the consequences of his being brought to England.

He was discharged on Saturday, as there were no grounds for his commitment.

JAMES HOGG, AGENT FOR PENNSYLVANIA, [TO COLONEL RICHARD HENDERSON.]

DEAR SIR: On the 2d of December, I returned hither from Philadelphia; and I have now set down to give you an account of my embassy, which you will be pleased to communicate to the other gentlemen, our copartners, when you have an opportunity. I waited for Messrs. Hooper and Heves a day and a half at Richmond, but they were detained by rainy weather for several days, so that they did not overtake me till I was near Philadelphia, where I was kept two days by heavy rain, though they had it dry where they were. It was the 22d of October, when we arrived at Philadelphia. In a few days they introduced me to several of the Congress gentlemen, among the first of whom were, accidentally, the famous Samuel and John Adams; and as I found their opinion friendly to our new Colony, I showed them our map, explained to them the advantage of our situation, &c., &c. They entered seriously into the matter, and seemed to think favourably of the whole; but the difficulty that occurred to us soon appeared to them. "We have petitioned and addressed the King," said they, "and have entreated him to point out some mode of accommodation. There seems to be an impropriety in embarrassing our reconciliation with any thing new; and the taking under our protection a body of people who have acted in defiance of the King's proclamations, will be looked on as a confirmation of that independent spirit with which we are daily reproached." I then showed them our memorial, to convince them that we did not pretend to throw off our allegiance to the King, but intended to acknowledge his sovereignty whenever he should think us worthy of his regard. They were pleased with our memorial, and thought it very proper; but another difficulty occurred. By looking at the map, they observed that we were within the Virginia Charter. I then told them of the fixing their boundaries, what had passed at Richmond in March last, and that I had reason to believe the Virginians would not oppose us; however, they advised me to sound the Virginians, as they would not choose to do any thing in it without their consent.

All the Delegates were, at that time, so much engaged in the Congress from morning to night, that it was some days before I got introduced to the Virginians; and before then, I was informed that some of them had said, whatever was their own opinion of the matter, they would not consent that Pennsylvania should be admitted as a Colony and represented in Congress, until it originated in their Convention, and should be approved by their constituents. Some days after this, I was told that Messrs. Jefferson, Wythe, and Richard Henry Lee, were desirous of meeting with me, which was accordingly brought about; but, unfortunately, Mr. Lee was, by some business, prevented from being with us, though I had some conversation with him afterwards. I told them that the Pennsylvania Company, suspecting that they might be misrepresented, had sent me to make known to the gentlemen of the Congress, our friendly intentions towards the cause of liberty, &c., &c., but said nothing of our memorial, or my pretensions to a seat in Congress. They said nothing in return to me, but seriously examined our map, and asked many questions. They observed that our purchase was within their Charter, and gently hinted, that, by virtue of it, they might claim the whole. This led me to take notice, that a few years ago, as I had been informed, their Assembly had petitioned the Crown for leave to purchase from the Cherokees, and to fix their boundaries with them, which was accordingly done, by a line running from six miles east of the long island in Holston, to the mouth of the Great-Kenhaw, for which they had actually paid twenty-five hundred pounds to the Cherokees; by which purchase, both the Crown and their Assembly had acknowledged the property of those lands to be in the Cherokees. Besides, said I, our settlement of Pennsylvania will be a great check on the Indians, and, consequently, be of service to the Virginians.

They seemed to waive the argument concerning the right of property; but Mr. Jefferson acknowledged, that, in his opinion, our Colony could be no loss to the Virginians, if properly united to them; and said, that if his advice was followed, all the use they should make of their Charter would be, to prevent any arbitrary or oppressive Government to be established within the boundaries of it; and that it was his wish to see a free Government established at the back of theirs, properly united with them; and that it should extend westward to the Mississippi, and on each side of the Ohio, to their Charter line. But he would not consent that we should be acknowledged by the Congress, until it had the approbation of their constituents in Convention, which he thought might be obtained; and that, for that purpose, we should send one of our Company to their next Convention. Against this proposal, several objections occurred to me, but I made none.

This was the substance of our conference; with which I acquainted our good friends, Messrs. Hooper and Hewes, who joined me in opinion that I should not push the matter further; and they hinted to me, that, considering the present very critical situation of affairs, they thought it was better for us to be unconnected with them. These gentlemen acted a most friendly part all along, and gave a favourable account of our proceedings. Indeed, I think the Company under great obligations to them, and I hope they will take it under their consideration. I was frequently with parties of the Delegates, who, in general, think favourably of our enterprise. All the wise ones of them, with whom I conversed on the subject, are clear in opinion, that the property of the lands are vested in us by the Indian grant; but some of them think, that by the common law of England, and by the common usage in America, the sovereignty is in the King, agreeable to a famous law opinion, of which I was so fortunate as to procure a copy. The suffering traders, and others, at the end of last war, obtained a large tract of land from the Six-Nations, and other Indians. They formed themselves into a company, (called, I believe, the Ohio;) and petitioned the King for a patent, and desired to be erected into a Government. His Majesty laid their petition before Lord Chancellor Camden and Mr. Charles Yorke, then Attorney-General, and afterwards Chancellor. Their opinion follows: "In respect to such places as have been, or shall be acquired by treaty or grant from any of the Indian Princes or Governments, your Majesty's letters patent are not necessary; the property of the soil vesting in the grantee by the Indian grants, subject only to your Majesty's right of sovereignty over the settlements, as English settlements, and over the inhabitants as English subjects, who carry with them your Majesty's laws wherever they form Colonies, and receive your Majesty's protection by virtue of your Royal charters." After an opinion so favourable for them, it is amazing that this Company never attempted to form a settlement, unless they could have procured a charter, with the hopes of which, it seems, they were flattered, from time to time. However, our example has roused them, I am told, and they are now setting up for our rivals. Depending on this opinion, another company of gentlemen, a few years ago, purchased a tract between the forks of the Mississippi and Ohio, beginning about a league below Fort-Chartres, and running over towards the mouth of the Wabash; but whether or not their boundary line is above or below the mouth of the Wabash, the gentleman who showed me their deed could not tell, as it is not mentioned, but is said to terminate at the old Shawanese town, supposed to be only thirty-five leagues above the mouth of the Ohio. And the said company purchased another larger tract, lying on the Illinois River. It was from one of this company that I procured a copy of the above opinion, which he assured me was a genuine one, and is the very same which you have heard was in possession of Lord Dunmore, as it was their company who sent it to him, expecting he would join them.

I was several times with Mr. Deane, of Connecticut, the gentleman of whom Mr. Hooper told you, when here. He says he will send some people to see our country; and if their report be favourable, he thinks many Connecticut people will join us. This gentleman is a scholar, and a man of sense and enterprise, and rich; and, I am apt to believe, has some thoughts of heading a party of Connecticut adventurers, providing things can be made agreeable to him. He is reckoned a good man, and much esteemed in Congress; but he is an enthusiast in liberty, and will have nothing to do with us unless he is pleased with our form of Government. He is a great admirer of the Connecticut Constitution, which he recommended to our consideration; and was so good as to favour me with a long letter on that subject, a copy of which is enclosed. You would be amazed to see how much in earnest all these speculative gentlemen are about the plan to be adopted by the Transylvanians. They entreat, they pray, that we may make it a free Government, and beg that no mercenary or ambitious views in the Proprietors may prevent it. Quit-rents, they say, is a mark of vassalage, and hope they shall not be established in Transylvania. They even threaten us with their opposition, if we do not act upon liberal principles when we have it so much in our power to render ourselves immortal. Many of them advised a law against Negroes, Enclosed; I send you a copy of a sketch by John Adams, which I had from Richard Henry Lee.

A Journal of the Proceedings of the House of Delegates or Representatives of the Colony of TRANSYLVANIA, begun on WEDNESDAY, [TUESDAY] the 23d of MAY, in the year of our Lord CHRIST 1775, and in the fifteenth year of the reign of His Majesty GEORGE the Third, King of GREAT BRITAIN.

The Proprietors of said Colony having called and required an election of Delegates or Representatives to be made, for the purpose of legislation, or making and ordaining laws and regulations for the future conduct of the inhabitants thereof, that is to say, for the town of Boonesborough, six members; for Harrodsburgh, four; for the Boiling-Spring Settlement, four; for the town of St. Asaph, four; and appointed their meeting for the purpose aforesaid, on the aforesaid 23d of May, Anno Domini, 1775, and,

It being certified to us here this day by the Secretary, that the following persons were returned as duly elected for the several towns and settlements, to wit:

FOR BOONESBOROUGH: Squire Boone, Daniel Boone, William Corke, Samuel Henderson, William Moore, and Richard Calloway.

HARRODSBURGH: Thomas Slaughter, John Lythe, Valentine Harmond, and James Douglass.

BOILING-SPRING SETTLEMENT: James Harrod, Nathan Hammond, Isaac and Azariah Davis.

THE TOWN OF ST. ASAPH: John Todd, Alexander Spotswood Dandridge, John Floyd, and Samuel Wood.

Present: Squire Boone, Daniel Boone, Samuel Henderson, William Moore, Richard Calloway, Thomas Slaughter, John Lythe, Valentine Harmond, James Douglass, James Harrod, Nathan Hammond, Isaac Hite, Azariah Davis, John Todd, Alexander Spotswood Dandridge, John Floyd, and Samuel Wood, who took their seats at Convention.

The House unanimously chose Colonel Thomas Slaughter Chairman, and Matthew Jewett Clerk; and after divine service was performed by the Reverend John Lythe, the House waited on the Proprietors, and acquainted them that they had chosen Mr. Thomas Slaughter Chairman, and Matthew Jewett Clerk, of which they approved; and,

Colonel Richard Henderson, in behalf of himself and the rest of the Proprietors, opened the Convention with a speech, a copy of which, to prevent mistakes, the Chairman procured.

Ordered, The same Speech be read.

Read the same, which is as follows:

Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen of the Convention:

You are called and assembled at this time for a noble and an honourable purpose—a purpose, however ridiculous or idle it may appear at first view, to superficial minds, yet is of the most solid consequence; and if prudence, firmness, and wisdom, are suffered to influence your councils and direct your conduct, the peace and harmony of thousands may be expected to result from your deliberations; in short, you are about a work of the utmost importance to the well-being of this country in general, in which the interest and security of each and every individual is inseparably connected; for that State is truly sickly, politically speaking, whose laws or edicts are not careful, equally, of the different members, and most distant branches, which constitute the one united whole. Nay, it is not only a solecism in politics, but an insult to common sense, to attempt the happiness of any community, or composing laws for their benefit, without securing to each individual his full proportion of advantage arising out of the general mass; thereby making his interest (that most powerful incentive to the actions of mankind) the consequence of obedience. This, at once, not only gives force and energy to legislation, but as justice is, and must be eternally the same, so your laws, founded in wisdom, will gather strength by time, and find an advocate in every wise and well disposed person.

You, perhaps, are fixing the palladium, or placing the first corner stone of an edifice, the height and magnificence of whose superstructure is now in the womb of futurity, and can only become great and glorious in proportion to the excellence of its foundation. These considerations, gentle men, will, no doubt, animate and inspire you with sentiments worthy the grandeur of the subject.

Our peculiar circumstances, in this remote country, surrounded on all sides with difficulties, and equally subject to one common danger, which threatens our common overthrow, must, I think, in their effects, secure to us an union of interests, and, consequently, that harmony in opinion, so essential to the forming good, wise, and wholesome laws.

If any doubt remain amongst you with respect to the force or efficacy of whatever laws you now, or hereafter make, be pleased to consider that all power is originally in the people; therefore, make it their interest, by impartial and beneficial laws, and you may be sure of their inclination to see them enforced. For it is not to be supposed that a people, anxious and desirous of having laws made, who approve of the method of choosing Delegates or Representatives, to meet in General Convention for that purpose, can want the necessary and concomitant virtue to carry them into execution.

Nay, gentlemen, for arguments' sake, let us set virtue, for a moment, out of the question, and see how the matter will then stand. You must admit, that it is, and ever will be, the interest of a large majority, that the laws should be esteemed and held sacred. If so, surely this large majority can never want inclination or power to give sanction and efficacy to those very laws which advance their interest and secure their property. And now, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Convention, as it is indispensably necessary that laws should be composed for the regulation of our conduct—as we have a right to make such laws without giving offence to Great Britain, or any of the American Colonies—without disturbing the repose of any society or community under Heaven—if it is probable, nay, certain, that the laws may derive force and efficacy from our mutual consent, and that consent resulting from our own virtue, interest, and convenience, nothing remains but to set about the business immediately, and let the event determine the wisdom of the undertaking.

Among the many objects that must present themselves for your consideration, the first in order must, from its importance, be that of establishing courts of justice or tribunals, for the punishment of such as may offend against the laws you are about to make. As this law will be the chief corner-stone in the groundwork or basis of our Constitution, let us, in a particular manner, recommend the most dispassionate attention, while you take for your guide as much of the spirit and genius of the laws of England, as can be interwoven with those of this country. We are all Englishmen, or, what amounts to the same, ourselves and our fathers have, for many generations, experienced the invaluable blessings of that most excellent Constitution, and surely we cannot want motives to copy from so noble an original.

Many things, no doubt, crowd upon your minds, and seem equally to demand your attention. But next to that of restraining vice and immorality, surely nothing can be of more importance than establishing some plain and easy method for the recovery of debts, and determining matters of dispute with respect to property, contracts, torts, injuries, &c. These things are so essential, that if not strictly attended to, our name will become odious abroad, and our peace of short and precarious duration. It would give honest and disinterested persons cause to suspect that there was some colourable reason, at least, for the unworthy and scandalous assertions, together with the groundless insinuations contained in an infamous and scurrilous libel lately printed and published, concerning the settlement of this country, the author of which avails himself of his station, and, under the specious pretence of proclamation, pompously dressed up and decorated in the garb of authority, has uttered invectives of the most malignant kind, and endeavours to wound the good name of persons, whose moral character would derive little advantage by being placed in computation with his, charging them, amongst other things equally untrue, with a design of "forming an asylum for debtors, and other persons of desperate circumstances;" placing the proprietors of the soil at the head of a lawless train of abandoned villains, against whom the regal authority ought to be exerted, and every possible measure taken to put an immediate stop to so dangerous an enterprise.

I have not the least doubt, gentlemen, but that your conduct, in this Convention, will manifest the honest and laudable intentions of the present adventurers, whilst a conscious blush confounds the wilful calumniators and officious detractors of our infant, and, as yet, little community.

Next to the establishment of courts or tribunals, as well for the punishment of public offenders, as the recovering of just debts, that of establishing and regulating a Militia seems of the greatest importance. It is apparent that, without some wise institution, respecting our mutual defence, the different towns or settlements are, every day, exposed to the most imminent danger, and liable to be destroyed at the mere will of the savage Indians. Nothing, I am persuaded, but their entire ignorance of our weakness and want of order, has, hitherto, preserved us from the destructive and rapacious hands of cruelty, and given us an opportunity, at this time, of forming secure, defensive plans, to be supported and carried into execution by the authority and sanction of a well-digested law.

There are sundry other things highly worthy your consideration, and demand redress, such as the wanton destruction of our game, the only support of life amongst many of us, and for want of which the country would be abandoned ere to-morrow, and scarcely a probability remain of its ever becoming the habitation of any Christian people. This, together with the practice of many foreigners, who make a business of hunting in our country, killing, driving off, and lessening the number of wild cattle and other game, whilst the value of the skins and furs is appropriated to the benefit of persons not concerned or interested in our settlements. These are evils, I say, that I am convinced cannot escape your notice and attention.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: You may assure yourselves that this new-born country is an object of the most particular attention of the Proprietors here on the spot, as well as those on the other side of the Mountains, and that they will most cheerfully concur in every measure which can, in the most distant and remote degree, promote its happiness or contribute to its grandeur.

RICHARD HENDERSON.

May 23, 1775.

Ordered, That Colonel Calloway, Mr. Lythe, Mr. Todd, Mr. Dandridge, and Mr. Samuel Henderson, be a Committee to draw up an answer to the Proprietors' Speech.

May 25, 1775.

Mr. Todd produced to the House an Answer (drawn up by the Committee) to the Proprietor's Speech, and being approved of by the Committee,

Ordered, That Mr. Todd, Mr. Cocke, and Mr. Harrod, wait on the Proprietors with an answer to their Address, which is as follows:

Colonel Richard Henderson and Company:

GENTLEMEN: We received your speech with minds truly thankful for the care and attention you express towards the good people of this infant country, whom we represent. Well aware of the confusion which would ensue the want of rules for our conduct in life, and deeply impressed with a sense of the importance of the trust our constituents have reposed in us, though labouring under a thousand disadvantages, which attend prescribing remedies for disorders which already call for our assistance, as well as those that are lodged in the womb of futurity; yet the task, arduous as it is, we will attempt with vigour, not doubting but unanimity will ensure us success.

That we have an absolute right, as a political body, without giving umbrage to Great Britain or any of the Colonies, to frame rules for the government of our little society, cannot be doubted by any sensible, unbiased mind; and, being without the jurisdiction of, and not answerable to, any of His Majesty's courts, the constituting tribunals of justice shall be a matter of our first contemplation; and, as this will be a matter of the greatest importance, we will still keep in the genius and spirit of the English laws, which happy pattern it shall be our chief care to copy after.

Next to the restraint of immorality, our attention shall be directed towards the relief of the injured, as well as the creditor; nor will we put it into the power of calumny and scurrility to say, that our country is an asylum for debtors, or any disorderly persons.

Nor shall we neglect, by regulating a Militia, as well as the infancy of our country will permit, to guard against the hostilities and incursions of our savage enemies, and, at the same time, to be cautious to preserve the game of our country, so essentially necessary for the subsistence of the first adventurers.

Conscious, gentlemen, of your veracity, we cannot express the satisfaction we experience, that the Proprietors of this promising Colony are so ready to concur with us in any measure which may tend to promote its happiness and contribute to its grandeur.

THOMAS SLAUGHTER, Chairman.

To which Colonel Henderson returned the following Answer:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:

From the just sense of the nature and importance of the trust reposed in you by your constituents, and your laudable and truly patriotick resolution of exerting your abilities in the service of your country, we derive the most sanguine hopes.

Arduous as the task is, every difficulty must give way to perseverance, whilst your zeal for the publick good is tempered with that moderation and unanimity of opinion so apparent in your conduct.

We, gentlemen, look with infinite satisfaction on this happy presage of the future felicity of our infant country, and hope to merit a continuation of that confidence you are pleased to express in our veracity and good intentions.

While our transactions have credit for the integrity of our desires, we cannot fail uniting with the Delegates of the good people of this country, fully persuaded that the Proprietors are zealously inclined to contribute every thing in their power, which may tend to render it easy, prosperous, and flourishing.

MEETING OF THE PROPRIETORS OF TRANSYLVANIA.

At a meeting of the Proprietors of Transylvania, held at Oxford, in the County of Granville, on Monday, the twenty-fifth day of September, Anno Domini 1775.

Present: Colonel Richard Henderson, Colonel Thomas Hart, Colonel John Williams, Captain John Luttrell, William Johnston, James Hogg, and Leonard H. Bullock.

Colonel Henderson being unanimously chosen President, they took into their consideration the present state of the said Colony, and made the following Resolves, viz:

Resolved, That Colonel John Williams be appointed Agent for the Transylvania Company, to transact their business in the said Colony; and he is accordingly invested with full power, by letter of attorney.

Ordered, That Mr. Williams shall proceed to Boonesborough, in the said Colony, as soon as possible, and continue there until the twelfth day of April next; and to be allowed, for his services, one hundred and fifty pounds, Proclamation money of North-Carolina, out of the profits arising from the sale of lands, after discharging the Company's present engagements.

N. B. In case the Settlement should be broken up by attack of Indians, or other enemies, so as to render it impossible for Mr. Williams to continue there and execute the trust reposed in him, it is agreed by the Company, that he shall still be paid the above salary, at the expiration of three years.

Resolved, That Mr. Williams be empowered to appoint one or more Surveyors, and the other officers of the Land Office, for the said Colony, as he may find it necessary. Clerks, Surveyors, and Chain-Carriers, to be sworn before they act.

Resolved, In case of the death or removal of Mr. Williams, that Colonel Richard Henderson, Captain Nathaniel Hart, and Captain John Luttrell, or any one of them, be, and are hereby, declared Agents for the said Company, with the same powers as are given to Mr. Williams, until a new appointment shall be made by the Proprietors.

Resolved, That the Agent shall not grant any Lands adjoining salt springs, gold, silver, copper, lead, or sulphur mines, knowing them to be such.

Resolved, That a reservation to the Proprietors, of one-half of all gold, silver, copper, lead, and sulphur mines, shall be made by the Agent, at granting deeds.

Resolved, That the Agent shall take a counterpart of all deeds granted by him, and shall transmit them to the Proprietors, residing in the Province of North-Carolina, to be audited, with his other proceedings, by the Company.

Resolved, That all surveys shall be made by the four cardinal points, except where rivers or mountains so intervene as to render it too inconvenient; and that, in all cases where one survey comes within the distance of eighty poles from another, their lines shall join, without exception; and that every survey on navigable rivers shall extend two poles out for one pole along the river; and that each survey not on navigable rivers shall not be above one-third longer than its width.

Resolved, That a present of two thousand acres of Land be made to Colonel Daniel Boone, with the thanks of the Proprietors, for the signal services he has rendered to the Company.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Company be presented to Colonel Richard Calloway, for his spirited and manly behaviour in behalf of the said Colony; and that a present of six hundred and forty acres of Land be made to his youngest son.

Resolved, That James Hogg, Esq., be appointed Delegate to represent the said Colony in the Continental Congress, now sitting at Philadelphia; and that the following Memorial be presented by him to that august body:

To the Honourable the Continental Congress, now sitting at PHILADELPHIA.

The Memorial for RICHARD HENDERSON, THOMAS HART, JOHN WILLIAMS, NATHANIEL HART, JOHN LUTTRELL, WILLIAM JOHNSTON, JAMES HOGG, DAVID HART, and LEONARD HENLY BULLOCK, Proprietors of Transylvania, sheweth:

That, on the seventeenth day of March last, for a large and valuable consideration, your Memorialists obtained from the Cherokee Indians, assembled at Watauga, a grant of a considerable territory, now called Transylvania, lying on the south side of the river Ohio.

They will not trouble the honourable Congress with a detail of the risks and dangers to which they have been exposed, arising from the nature of the enterprise itself, as well as from the wicked attempts of certain Governors and their emissaries; they beg leave, only, to acquaint them, that, through difficulties and dangers, at a great expense, and with the blood of several of their followers, they have laid the foundation of a Colony, which, however mean in its origin, will, if one may guess from present appearances, be one day considerable in America.

The Memorialists, having made this purchase from the Aborigines and immemorial possessors, the sole and uncontested owners of the country, in fair and open treaty, and without the violation of any British or American law whatever, are determined to give it up only with their lives. And, though their country be far removed from the reach of Ministerial usurpation, yet they cannot look with indifference on the late arbitrary proceedings of the British Parliament. If the United Colonies are reduced, or will tamely submit to be slaves, Transylvania will have reason to fear.

The Memorialists by no means forget their allegiance to their Sovereign, whose constitutional rights and pre-eminences they will support, at the risk of their lives. They flatter themselves that the addition of a new Colony, in so fair and equitable a way, and without any expense to the Crown, will be acceptable to His Most Gracious Majesty, and that Transylvania will soon be worthy of his Royal regard and protection.

At the same time, having their hearts warmed with the same noble spirit that animates the United Colonies, and moved with indignation at the late Ministerial and Parliamentary usurpations, it is the earnest wish of the Proprietors of Transylvania to be considered by the Colonies as brethren, engaged in the same great cause of liberty and of mankind. And, as by reason of several circumstances, needless to be here mentioned, it was impossible for the Proprietors to call a convention of the settlers in such time as to have their concurrence laid before this Congress, they here pledge themselves for them, that they will concur in the measure now adopted by the Proprietors.

From the generous plan of liberty adopted by the Congress, and that noble love of mankind which appears in all their proceedings, the Memorialists please themselves that the United Colonies will take the infant Colony of Transylvania into their protection; and they, in return, will do every thing in their power, and give such assistance in the general cause of America, as the Congress shall judge to be suitable to their abilities.

Therefore, the Memorialists hope and earnestly request, that Transylvania may be added to the number of the United Colonies, and that James Hogg, Esq., be received as their delegate, and admitted to a seat in the honourable the Continental Congress.

By order of the Proprietors.

RICHARD HENDERSON, President.

Resolved, That Mr. Hogg be empowered to treat and contract with any person or persons who may incline to purchase Lands from the Company, and that he be allowed his expenses for transacting the above business.

Resolved, That the united thanks of this Company be presented to Colonel Richard Henderson, Captain Nathaniel Hart, and Captain John Luttrell, for their eminent services and publick spirited conduct, in settling the aforesaid Colony.

Resolved, That from this time to the first day of June, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, the Lands in the said Colony shall be sold on the following terms :

No survey of Land shall contain more than six hundred and forty acres, (except in particular cases;) and the purchaser shall pay for entry and warrant of survey two dollars; for surveying the same, and a plot thereof, four dollars; and for the deed and plot annexed, two dollars. And also shall pay to the said Proprietors, their Agent, or Receiver for the time being, at the time of receiving a deed, two pounds ten shillings sterling for each hundred acres contained in such deed; also, an annual quit-rent of two shillings, like money, for every hundred acres, commencing in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty.

And that any person who settles on the said Lands before the first day of June, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, shall have the privilege, on the aforesaid conditions, of taking up for himself any quantity not above six hundred and forty acres; and for each taxable person he may take with him, and settle there, three hundred and twenty acres, and no more.

Resolved, That Colonel Richard Henderson survey and lay off, within the said Colony, in such places and in such quantities as he shall think proper, not less than two hundred thousand acres, hereafter to be equally divided amongst the copartners, or their representatives, according to their rateable part, (as fully set forth in the Articles of Agreement entered into by the copartners;) and that each copartner be permitted, by himself or his deputy, to make choice of, and survey in one or more places, any quantity of vacant Land in the aforesaid Colony, for his or their particular use; but not above two thousand acres, and that agreeable to the aforesaid rateable proportions, unless on the same terms, and under the same regulations and restrictions, as laid down for other purchasers.

Resolved, That not more than five thousand acres shall be sold to any one person who does not immediately settle on the said Land; and that at three pounds ten shillings sterling per hundred, and not more than one hundred thousand acres in the whole on these terms.

Resolved, That the Agent deliver what money he may have received for the sale of Lands to Colonel Thomas Hart, when he leaves the said Colony, and that Colonel Hart pay what money may be due from the Company to the people at Watuga on his return; and that the remainder be applied to the payment of the Company's other debts. Also, that the Agent take the first safe opportunity of remitting what further sums he may receive thereafter to William Johnston, Treasurer, to be by him applied towards paying off the Company's debts.

Resolved, That William Johnston be impowered to bargain and contract with any persons inclining to purchase Lands in the said Colony.

Ordered, That Mr. Johnston do in behalf of the Proprietors, accommodate Mr. Peter Hay, merchant, (at Cross Creek, Cumberland County, North-Carolina;) with a present of one thousand acres of Land in the said Colony, for his friendly behaviour towards the Company; or, in lieu thereof, that Mr. Hay be permitted to purchase ten thousand acres, without being obliged to settle the same, at two pounds ten shillings, sterling, per hundred acres, subject to office fees and quit-rents.

Resolved, That a present of six hundred and forty acres of Land be made to the Reverend Mr. Henry Patillo, on condition that he will settle in the said Colony.

Resolved, That the Agent duly attend to the above Resolves, unless when the interest of the Company makes the contrary necessary.

By order of the Proprietors:

RICHARD HENDERSON, President.

SILAS DEANE TO JAMES HOGG, NOVEMBER, 1775.

At the time of granting the New-England Charters, the Crown of Great Britain had no idea of any real interest or property in the American lands. The Pope, as Vicar of Christ, pretended, very early, to have an absolute right, in fee simple, to the earth and all that was therein; but more particularly to the countries and persons of heretics, which he constantly gave away among his favourites. When the Crown of Great Britain threw off its submission to the Pope, or, in other words, by setting itself at the head of the Church, became Pope of Great Britain, this old, whimsically arrogant nation was, in degree, restrained; and Queen Elizabeth, in the year 1579, most graciously gave to Sir Walter Raleigh all North-America, from the latitude 34°, north to 48°, north; and extending west to the great Pacifick Ocean; to which immense territory she had no more right or title than she had to the empire of China. On Sir Walter's attainer, this was supposed to revert to the Crown, and in 1606, James I., in consequence of the same principle, granted the south part of the above, to a company then called the London Company; and, in 1620, granted the northernmost part to a company called the Plymouth Company, containing within its bounds all the lands from 40° to 45° north latitude, and west to the South-Seas. This company granted, 1631, to certain persons, that tract described in this charter, which you will see was very liberal, and rendered them (as in reality they were) independent of the Crown for holding their lands; they having, at their own expense, purchased or conquered them from the natives, the original and sole owners.

The settlement of Connecticut began in 1634, when they came into a voluntary compact of government, and governed under it, until their charter, in 1662, without any difficulty. They were never fond of making many laws; nor is it good policy in any State, but the worst of all in a new one. The laws, or similar ones to those which I have turned down to, are necessary in a new Colony, in which the highest wisdom is to increase, as fast as possible, the inhabitants, and at the same time to regulate them well.

The first is to secure the general and inalienable rights of man to the settlers: without this, no inhabitants, worth having, will adventure. This, therefore, requires the closest and earliest attention.

Next to this, is the mode or rule by which civil actions may be brought, or the surest ways and means by which every individual may obtain his right.

Then a provision for the safety of the community against high handed offenders, house breakers, &c.

There are two ways of regulating a community; one by correcting every offender, and the other to prevent the offence itself; to effect the latter, education must be attended to as a matter of more importance than all the laws which can be framed, as it is better to be able to prevent than, after, to correct a disease.

Peace officers will be necessary, and these ought to be chosen by the people, for the people are more engaged to support an officer of their own in the execution of his trust, than they will ever be in supporting one forced upon them.

Some regulation of civil courts ought early to be made; the most simple and least expensive is best; an honest judge will support his dignity without a large salary, and a dishonest one can have no real dignity at any rate. The General Assembly must be the supreme fountain of power in such a state, in constituting which, every free man ought to have his voice. The elections should be frequent, at least annually; and to this body every officer ought to be amenable for his conduct.

Every impediment in the way of increase of people should be removed—of course, marriage must be made easy.

Overgrown estates are generally the consequence of an unequal division of interest, left by a subject at his decease. This is prevented by an equal, or nearly equal right of inheritance. This has taken place in all the New-England Colonies, and in Pennsylvania, to their great emolument.

All fees of office ought to be stated and known, and they should be stated as low as possible.

Some crimes are so dangerous in their tendency, that capital punishments are necessary; the fewer of these, consistent with the safety of the State, the better.

There ought to be some terms on which a man becomes free of the community. They should be easy and simple; and every one encouraged to qualify himself, in character and interest, to comply with them; and these terms should be calculated to bind the person in the strongest manner, and engage him in its interest.

A new Colony, in the first place, should be divided into small townships or districts, each of which ought to be empowered to regulate their own internal affairs; and to have and enjoy every liberty and privilege not inconsistent with the good of the whole.

Tenure of lands is a capital object, and so is the mode of taking out grants for, and laying them out. If individuals are permitted to engross large tracts, and lay them out as they please, the population of the country will be retarded.

Precarious must be the possession of the finest country in the world, if the inhabitants have not the means and skill of defending it. A militia regulation must, therefore, in all prudent policy, be one of the first.

Though entire liberty of conscience ought every where to be allowed, yet the keeping up among a people, a regular and stated course of Divine worship, has such beneficial effects, that the encouragement thereof deserves the particular attention of the magistrate.

Forms of oaths are ever best, as they are concise, and carry with them a solemn simplicity of appeal to the Divine Being; and to preserve their force, care should be had to avoid too frequent a repetition of them, and on ordinary occasions.

The preservation of the peace, being the capital object of government, no man should be permitted, on any occasion, to be the avenger of the wrongs he has, or conceives he has, received; but, if possible, every one should be brought to submit to the decision of the law of the country in every private, as well as public injury.

Providing for the poor is an act of humanity; but to prevent their being numerous and burdensome to the society is at once humane, and an act of the highest and soundest policy; and to effect it, the education of children, and the manners of the lower orders are constantly to be attended to.

As, in a well ordered government, every one's person and property should be equally secure, so each should pay equally, or on the same scale, for the expenses in supporting the same.

In a new and wild country, it will be deemed, perhaps, impossible to erect schools; but the consequences are so great and lasting, that every difficulty ought to be encountered rather than give up so necessary, so important an institution. A school will secure the morals and manners, and, at the same time, tend to collect people together in society, and promote and preserve civilization.

The throwing a country into towns, and allowing these towns particular privileges, like corporations in England or America, tends to unite the people, and, as in the least family there is, generally, the best economy, so these towns will conduct the internal and domestic prudentials better than larger bodies, and give strength, soundness and solidity to the basis of the State.

Sir: You have, in the foregoing, the outlines of the policy of the Connecticut Government, in as concise a view as I could; the great and leading principles of which will, I conceive, apply to any new State; and the sooner they are applied the better it will be for the health and prosperity of the rising community.

An equal and certain security of life, liberty and property; an equal share in the rights of legislation, and an equal distribution of the benefits resulting from society; with an early attention to the principles, morals and manners of the whole, are the great first principles of a good government, and these well fixed, lesser matters will easily and advantageously adjust, as I may say, themselves. I am far from thinking our system is entirely fit for you, in every point. It has grown up and enlarged itself, as we have grown. Its principal features are worth your attending to; and, if I had leisure, would point out, more particularly, which part I think you might adopt immediately, what additions are necessary, and why some parts should be rejected. But I will, if possible, give you, after your perusal of this, the general heads of what, from my little reading and observation, I think to be the most simple, and, consequently, the best plan of Government.

I am, sir, yours, S. DEANE.

Thursday Morning, November 2, 1775.

Two laws, I see, I have run over without noting upon: the one is, for punishing vagabonds, by setting them to hard labour. The other, for the punishment of theft, which you may think too light, but I think too severe; or, in other words, I would avoid infamous punishments, such as cropping, branding, whipping, &c., and substitute hard labour in their stead.

COLONEL WILLIAMS, AT BOONESBOROUGH, TO THE PROPRIETORS.

Boonesborough, January 3, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In my last, of the 27th instant, I promised in my next, a more circumstantial account than I was capable then of giving, under the confused situation of mind I was then in, occasioned by the unhappy catastrophe of my brother's death, which happened but a few hours before that. To comply in some measure with that promise, and to discharge a duty incumbent upon me, as well as the promptitude of mind I feel to discharge that duty, I cheerfully enter on the task, and endeavour to render some account of what I have been after since my arrival at this place, now upwards of a month since; and as the primitive intention of sending me to Transylvania was to establish a Land Office, appoint the necessary officers to the said office, surveyors, &c., upon the best footing in my power, and to make sale of the lands within the said Colony, upon such terms as might be most advantageous to the Proprietors and satisfactory to the inhabitants thereof; my first step was to fall on some method of appointing a person to the office of surveyor, who should give general satisfaction to the people; I thought none more likely to do so, than calling a convention and taking their recommendation for the person who I would appoint. From the dispersed situation of the people, and the extreme badness of the weather, we failed in convening a majority; however, I took the sense of those who appeared, and who unanimously recommended Colonel John Floyd, a gentleman generally esteemed, and I am persuaded, truly worthy, and him I have commissioned surveyor of the Colony at present, though, perhaps, it may be advisable, at a future day, to divide the Colony into two districts, and to appoint another surveyor to one of the districts. The Entering Office I have disposed of to Mr. Nathaniel Henderson, and the Secretary's to Mr. Richard Harrison; though, upon consideration, I have thought that the numerous incidental expenses were so great that some way ought to be fallen upon to defray them without breaking in upon the money's arising from the sale of the lands, and that the two dollars for entering, &c., and the other two for filling up the deeds, counterparts, annexing seals and plots, &c., was more money than the services of those offices absolutely required; I, therefore, have reserved out of each office, one dollar, to answer the purpose of defraying those extraordinary expenses; and the offices are left well worth the acceptance of persons capable of filling them with credit. The number of entries on our book is now upwards of nine hundred, great part of which was made before I came to this place, when people could make entries without money, and without price; the country abounded with land-mongers; since there is two dollars exacted on the entry made, people are not quite so keen, though I make no doubt but all who can comply with the terms will endeavour to save their lands; and as many people who have got entry on the book, are now out of the country, and cannot possibly pay up the entry money immediately, I have thought proper to advertise, that every person who has made entry on the book, and paid no money, that they come in and pay up the entrance money by the first of April, and take out their warrants of survey, or their several entries will, after that time, be considered as vacated, and liable to be entered by any other person whatever. The surveyors have now began to survey, and some few people have been desirous of getting out their deeds immediately; but they generally complain of a great scarcity of money, and doubt their being able to take their deeds before next June, or even before next fall; though in a general way, people seem to be well reconciled to the terms, and desirous to take upon them, except some few, whom I have been obliged to tamper with, and a small party about Harrodsburgh, who, it seems, have been entering into a confederacy not to hold lands on any other terms than those of the first year. As this party is composed of people, in general, of small consequence, and I have taken some steps to remove some of their principal objections, I make no doubt but to do all that away; and for that purpose have formed a design of removing myself, with the office, to Harrodsburgh, some time in February next, unless I should find, from a trip I purpose immediately taken there, that I cannot do it with safety. The principal man, I am told, at the head of this confederacy, is one Hite; and him I make no doubt but to convince he is in an error. Among other things, one of the great complaints was, that the Proprietors, and a few gentlemen, had engrossed all the land at and near the Falls of the Ohio, which circumstance I found roused the attention of a number of people of note; I, therefore, found myself under the necessity of putting a stop to all clamours of that kind, by declaring that I would grant no large bodies of land to any person whatever, which lay contiguous to the Falls; which I have done in a solemn manner. This I am far from thinking will be injurious to the Proprietors, but quite the reverse; and a circumstance which will render more general satisfaction, and be of as much utility to the Colony, as any step heretofore taken. You will observe that I am going on to justify the measure, before I inform you what it is. But to be brief, it is this: the Falls, it is certain, is a place which, from its situation, must be the most considerable mart in this part of the world; the lands around are generally rich and fertile, and most agreeably situated; which had occasioned many people to fix their affections on that place. Many applications have been made for large grants, at and about that place, and refused. Since which, twenty thousand acres, and upwards, have been entered there for the Company; forty thousand or fifty thousand more, in large tracts, by a few other gentlemen; and a partiality was complained of; a general murmuring ensued. Upon considering the matter, I thought it unjust; I thought it a disadvantage to the partners in general; and that some step ought to be taken to pacify the minds of the people. I, therefore, entered into a resolution that I would grant to no one man living, within a certain distance of the Falls, more than one thousand acres of land, and that to be settled and improved in a certain space of time, under the penalty of forfeiture; that every person who had more entered than one thousand acres, might retain his one thousand out of which spot he pleased; that the several officers, who have claims there, may each, on application and complying with our terms, be entitled to a one thousand within his survey. That a town be immediately laid out, and a lot reserved to each proprietor, and then the first settlers to take the lots they may choose, enter, and improve; which improvement must be done in a certain limited time, or the lot forfeited, and again to be sold, &c. These proposals seem to have given general satisfaction, and every one who had entered large quantities, within these limits, gives it up with the greatest alacrity; and I am in hopes it will meet the general approbation of the Company; if so, I shall be happy; if not, I shall be very sorry, though the necessity must justify the measure. The Falls of Ohio is a place, of all others, within the Colony, will admit of a town, which, from its particular situation, will immediately become populous and flourishing; the land contiguous thereto rich and fertile, and where a great number of gentlemen will most certainly settle, and be the support and protection of a town at that place; a place which should meet with every encouragement, to settle and strengthen, inasmuch as it will, most certainly, be the terror of our savage enemies, the Kickeboos Indians, who border more nearly on that place than any other part of the Colony; and as I think it absolutely necessary that the aforesaid proposed town, at the Falls, to be laid off the ensuing Spring, if I find it practicable, to raise a party about the 1st of March, and go down and lay out the town and stake it off; though this will, in a great measure, depend upon the future tranquillity of our situation, between this and then, for I assure you the little attack made upon us by the Indians, the 23d of last month, has made many people, who are ashamed to confess themselves afraid, find out that their affairs on your side the mountains will not dispense with their staying here any longer at present; and I am well convinced, once they get there, that every alarm, instead of precipitating, will procrastinate their return. When I mention the little attack made on the 23d of last month, in this cursory manner, it is because I have, heretofore, sent you a particular account of that massacre, in a letter of the 27th ult. Though as that letter may fail, and not get to hand, I will now endeavour to briefly relate the circumstances.

On Saturday, about noon, being the 23d, Colonel Campbell, with a couple of lads, (Sanders and McQuinnay,) went across the river. On the opposite bank they parted. Campbell went up the river, about two hundred yards, and took up a bottom: The two lads, without a gun, went straight up the hill. About ten minutes after they parted, a gun and a cry of distress was heard, and the alarm given that the Indians had shot Colonel Campbell. We made to his assistance. He came running to the landing, with one shoe off, and said he was fired on by a couple of Indians. A party of men was immediately despatched, under the command of Colonel Boone, who went out, but could make no other discovery than two moccasin tracks, whether Indian's or not, could not be determined. We had at that time, over the river, hunting, &c., ten or a dozen men, in different parties—part, or all of whom, we expected to be killed, if what Colonel Campbell said was true; but that, by many, was doubted. Night came on; several of the hunters returned, but had neither seen nor heard of Indians, nor yet of the two lads. We continued in this state of suspense till Wednesday, when a party of men sent out to make search for them, found McQuinnay, killed and scalped, in a corn-field, at about three miles distance from town, on the north side of the river. Sanders could not be found, nor has he yet been heard of. On Thursday, a ranging party of fifteen men, under the command of Jesse Benton, was despatched to scour the woods, twenty or thirty miles round, and see if any further discovery could be made. To those men we gave two shillings per day, and five pounds for every scalp they should produce. After they went out, our hunters returned, one at a time, till they all came in safe, Sanders excepted, who no doubt has shared McQuinnay's fate.

On Sunday, the 31st day of the month, our rangers returned, without doing any thing more than convincing themselves that the Indians had, immediately on doing the murder, ran off for northward, as they discovered their tracks thirty or forty miles towards the Ohio making that way.

On the above massacre being committed, we began to doubt that there was a body of Indians about, who intended committing outrage on our inhabitants. However, we are perfectly satisfied since, that their number was only six or seven men, who set off from the Shawnee town before the treaty at Fort-Pitt, with an intent, as they termed it, to take a look at the white people on Kentucky; and King Cornstalk, at the treaty, informed the Commissioners on this, and said, for the conduct of these men, before they returned, he could not be responsible, for that he did not know but that they might do some mischief, and that if any of them should get killed by the whites, he should take no notice at all of it. For this, we have undoubted authority, and do not, at present, think ourselves in any greater danger here than if the above massacre had not have been committed.

Another circumstance is, that our ammunition grows scant. I do not think there is enough to supply this place till the last of March, supposing we should we have no occasion of any to repulse an enemy. If we should, God only knows how long it will last. If any powder can possibly be procured, it would certainly be advisable to do it; if not, some person who can manufacture the materials we have on the way, for the purpose of making powder. Most part of those are at the block house, or at least within two or three miles of that—the rest in Powell's Valley. Those (if we had any person who knew how properly to manufacture them into gunpowder) it would be necessary to have at this place. We have no such person, and of course they would be of but little service here. Notwithstanding, I should have sent for them before now; but people here expect the most exorbitant wages for trivial services. Not less than a dollar a day will do for any thing, which will prevent my sending till I find the necessity greater, or men to be hired cheaper.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO LORD STIRLING.

Philadelphia, January 3, 1776.

Your several letters of the 3d, 5th, 6th, 14th, 17th, and 19th of December, with the enclosures, being duly received, were laid before Congress. The multiplicity of important business which engaged their attention, prevented them from paying an earlier attention to the matters therein contained.

The enclosed resolutions, which I have the honour of transmitting you, will serve to show the sense of Congress in answer to your letters; to which, from your zeal and attachment to the cause of your country, the Congress have the firmest confidence you will pay all due regard.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Right Honourable Lord Stirling.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT HANCOCK.

Lancaster, January 3, 1776.

SIR: Captain Livingston, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, and Lieutenant Anstruther, of the Seventh Regiment, having come to this town on the evening of the 1st inst., under the conduct of Mr. Michael Connolly, the Committee of Correspondence of this County appointed three gentlemen of their body to take their parole, according to the directions received from the honourable Continental Congress, and your letter of the 18th December last. We now enclose the same to you.

The Committee are extremely desirous of receiving the orders of Congress, respecting the matters referred to their decision in our letter by Captain Motte. It has been found absolutely impossible to preserve the peace and good order of this Borough, unless some regulations were made for the soldiers who are prisoners here. We have accordingly directed some, a copy of which we now transmit to you. Since that time, we have been under the necessity of appointing a Sergeant and twelve Privates, to mount guard at our publick magazine every evening. They patrol the street every two hours in the night, to prevent disorder, and to carry the Committee regulations into execution. We hope, in this instance, our conduct will meet with the approbation of the Congress.

I am, sir, your very obedient and most humble servant.

By order of the Committee:

J. YEATES, Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

RECOMMENDATION OF COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, January 3, 1776.

Pursuant to a Resolution of Congress, and this Board, this Committee proceeded to the choice of a number of gentlemen, to be recommended to Congress as proper persons to be appointed Field-Officers for the four Battalions now to be raised, when the following gentlemen were agreed upon, and now recommended to the honourable Congress, as suitable to fill the offices of Majors, viz: George Nagle, Joseph Wood, Henry Bicker, Nicholas Haussiger, Caleb Parry, John Beatty, John Macpherson, James Ross.

Extract from the Minutes:

WILLIAM GOVETT, Secretary.

JOSEPH HALLETT TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Newark, January 3, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I, this afternoon, received your favour of the 30th December. I should immediately comply with the request of the gentlemen of the Committee, notwithstanding the circumstances of my family makes it exceedingly difficult for me to leave them, was I well. I have kept house upwards of three weeks, and, at this time, I am not able to wear my shoes. Was I in town, I could not probably attend the Committee. It gives me pain to hear there is so much difficulty in getting a quorum, to do business, in Congress and Committee of Safety.

My account of the flour, shipped for the use of the Continental Army, is made out. I should have delivered it when I was last in town, with the account of the cargo and disbursements of the sloop Bishop of Landaff, but was not able to get in all the bills of the latter. I have ordered my clerk, Mr. John Lawrence, to deliver the account of the flour to Colonel McDougall, or to you. As soon as I am able, I intend to be with you.

I am your obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH HALLETT.

To John McKesson, Esq.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO JOHN HANCOCK.

New-York, January 3, 1776.

SIR: As it is an object of great moment with us, as well as the Continental Congress, to have the important pass, on Hudson's river, properly secured and fortified, we think it our duty to furnish them with all possible information on the subject. For this purpose, we find Mr. Romans, the Engineer, employed in that department, who is prepared to lay before the Congress his drafts, with the necessary information.

We beg leave to mention, that the place at which the works are to be erected, was fixed before Mr. Romans was employed in the service; and, from his ideas of the matter, that place cannot be rendered sufficiently secure for a lodgment of troops, and to answer the end of a fortified pass, without more expense than our Commissioners, appointed to superintend that business, think prudent; besides which, they observe that his scheme cannot be completely executed, with the despatch the service may require.

Mr. Palmer, in conjunction with the resolve of the Committee, appointed by our Congress to remove the difficulties occasioned by a difference of opinion between the Commissioners and Engineer, has, doubtless, pointed out to Congress certain places on the river which would better answer the purpose of a temporary defence, and at much less expense than will necessarily attend the execution of Mr. Romans's scheme. We are fully of opinion, that the places in Mr. Palmer's proposal ought, by all means, to be covered with fortifications, that will cost but little, and command two considerable reaches of the river. We, at the same time, submit it to the consideration of Congress, how far the completion of the fortifications, already begun, ought to be carried on, either upon Mr. Romans's plan, or that which has, doubtless, been proposed by Mr. Palmer, as the sense of our Committee who were sent to view the work.

We hope this application, while Mr. Palmer is attending on the Congress, will not be construed to his disadvantage. Had we been possessed of Mr. Romans's plan, in its present complete state, and had he been in town at the time of Mr. Palmer's departure, we should have required his accompanying that gentleman. As there is some prospect that Mr. Romans may reach Philadelphia before the plan of fortification is finally determined by Congress, we should think ourselves inexcusable in withholding from them any means for enabling them to determine so important a matter, on the best lights in our power to furnish.

We are, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Chairman.

To the Honourable the President of the Continental Congress.

PETITION OF GEORGE COFFIN.

To the Honourable the Congress of the Colony of New-York:

The Petition of GEORGE COFFIN, of the Island of NAN-TUCKET, humbly sheweth:

That your Petitioner, as well as his neighbours of said Island, being in great want of the common necessities of life, did, in conjunction with Mr. Abraham H. Van Vleck, of the city of New-York, load a vessel, in said city, with provisions for the Island above-mentioned, in direct violation of a resolve of the honourable the Continental Congress. And, although the said provisions were, bona fide, intended for said Island, and there landed, agreeable to the express orders of the said Abraham H. Van Vleck, which orders were, "to go out by the Hook, and carefully avoid all men-of-war and tenders," (and which were punctually complied with by your Petitioner,) yet as loading and carrying the said provisions was contrary to the aforesaid resolve, as also to the intention of your honourable House, and the sentiments of the good people of this Colony, and America in general, your Petitioner is truly sensible of his crime in so doing, and sincerely promises not to act, or do any thing, in future, in violation of the said resolve, or any resolves of their or your honourable Houses; and humbly asks the pardon of all his countrymen for this, his first offence, which he hopes may be granted, and that he may be restored to their favour again, and have liberty to pass unmolested about his employments. And your Petitioner will ever pray.

GEORGE COFFIN.

January 3, 1776.

COLONEL TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, January 3, 1776.

HONoured SIR: I am this day informed that several persons, in this State, have, or intend to apply soon to your Honour, for liberty to export rum, &c., to Carolina—to purchase and import rice, to get a great price for it from the Army. The rum will certainly be much wanted for the Army; and I have orders from Congress to import rice, which I shall do with cash, and at a reasonable rate, and thereby save the rum. I trust and beg that no liberty may be given for exporting rum; and I wish not to have the one or the other matter known, as it may enhance the price of rum; and the other get known to the enemy, and thereby the risk increased on the importation.

I am, honoured sir, your dutiful son,

JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

To Governour Trumbull.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO JONATHAN GLOVER.

Cambridge, January 3, 1776.

SIR: You have annexed a copy of the resolves of the Continental Congress, respecting captures made, or to be made, by armed vessels, fitted out at the charge of the United Colonies, and others. In compliance with the resolution of the 20th ultimo, you must, on receipt hereof, libel such vessel as have been taken by the Lee, schooner, or any other of the Continental armed vessels, which may be now under your care, in the Court of Admiralty established in the Colony. You must use all your diligence, that the trial be brought to as speedy an issue as possible, in order that a distribution be made to the captors, conformable to the resolution of the 30th of November.

I am, sir, yours, &c.

JOHN GLOVER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Beverly, January 3, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform your Excellency, that John Thorner, steward, William Clark, William Wallis, and Thomas Gorthrop, seamen of the ship Jenny, Captain Forster, made an attempt to desert from said ship, and to go on board His Majesty's ship Fowey, (now at anchor before this harbour,) but was discovered and prevented, by information of Andrew Rogers, second mate, and John Roberson, cabin-boy, of said ship, whom I have sent as evidence against them.

I would observe to your Excellency, that these persons have been treated with great kindness, and permitted to go at large, which, in my opinion, they have much abused in attempting to desert to the enemy. I have therefore sent them to Head-Quarters, to be dealt with as your Excellency shall think proper.

I am now endeavouring to man the armed vessels, which, at present, is very difficult, on account of the men's not being paid off for their past services, which is the only objection they have. Could that be done, I apprehend they would readily engage again. However, hope to man one or two of them in a few days, which nothing on my part shall be wanting to effect.

I am, respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

JOHN GLOVER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

DOVER (DELAWARE) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Dover, January 4, 1776.

Resolved, That the keeping up the credit of the Continental currency is essential to support the United Colonies in their virtuous opposition to Ministerial oppression; and that the refusing to take said currency, in payment of debts, &c., will tend to depreciate the value of the same.

Resolved, That it appears to this Committee, by the confession of John Cowgill, a residenter of Little Creek Hundred, in this County, that he has refused, and, from conscience, shall refuse, to take said Continental money in discharge of debts, or for other purposes, when tendered to him.

Therefore, unanimously Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the aforesaid John Cowgill is, by such his conduct, an enemy to his country, and ought to be treated as such by every friend to American liberty; and that they ought to have no further dealings with him.

Signed by order of the Committee of Inspection and Observation for Kent County, on Delaware.

THOMAS RODNEY, Chairman.

THE MONITOR, NO. IX.

There is no opinion more necessary to be universally inculcated and received, than this: That it has been, and still continues to be, the grand aim and intention of the Ministry, to reduce the Colonies to a state of slavery, or, what is, in fact, the same thing, to a state of absolute subjection to the authority of Parliament, in all the plenitude of its imaginary omnipotence. The contrary belief is one great source of the coldness and disaffection which, unhappily, are too prevalent among us at this alarming season. It is this which disinclines numbers to that decisive plan of opposition, which is pursued by America in general, and leads them to a pertinacious adherence to what they term pacifick, moderate, and conciliating measures. It is impossible to conceive that any man in his senses can seriously believe that there is any thing unjust, or oppressive, in the real designs of Administration, and can, notwithstanding, imagine they may be withdrawn from them by complaisance, respect, and humility, on our part. There is a manifest incongruity in the supposition, that deliberate injustice and oppression are to be defeated by a calm appeal to the reason, to the equity, and to the generosity of those who are the authors of them. Force, alone, can be depended on, as an effectual barrier against them, and will always be employed by prudent men and discerning politicians.

Nor was there ever any opinion supported by a series of clearer facts, and more unequivocal circumstances, than the one I now recommend, insomuch that I cannot forbear my astonishment at the obstinate blindness and incredulity of many, in spite of the strongest evidence the nature of the case will possibly admit. No man that governs his judgment by any rational principles, can doubt a single moment, that the views of the Cabinet, respecting America, have all along been the most arbitrary and ruinous imaginable, and that they have, at length, arrived to such maturity, as to call aloud for every exertion a love of liberty, or a dread of impending slavery, can inspire.

The most undeviating uniformity of principle is evident in all the conduct of Administration, from their first attempt to tax the Colonies to the present instant; and, a repetition of its efforts, during a course of years, has served to render its true nature too conspicuous and notorious to be controverted, without the most barefaced absurdity or effrontery.

The matter of taxation is the most exceptionable part of Parliamentary claims. It is this which effectually overthrows every idea of liberty on the part of the Colonies; and it is this, to the establishment of which, in its fullest latitude, every step taken by the Ministry has been immediately directed.

The Stamp Act is an indisputable evidence, that an intention to enslave us did once exist; but it is supposed, by many, that it has been since laid aside, as it was hastily and inconsiderately taken up, and was found, by experience, to be impracticable. But, on what reasons this supposition is founded, is, to me, utterly inconceivable, since it is in direct contradiction to the whole tenor of subsequent events. Had there been no actual revival of the principle, the first attempt might have been ascribed to some transient cause; but, the experiment having been repeated at different times, and in different manners, clearly proves that it was the effect of system, and refutes the contrary presumption. To this, it has been objected, that the several interruptions which have taken place, by repealing the offensive acts, contradict the notion of a system, or of any regular plan of despotism. But, it is a full answer to this, to say, that though a general permanent design might have been formed, to extend the boundless authority of the Parliament over us, yet, it was hard to fix upon any stable, invariable means to accomplish it.

It was to be expected, that the means would remain discretionary, to be diversified as policy, improved by experience, should suggest, conformable to the variety of occasions that might arise. It is, also, extremely probable, that cabals among the Ministry, intestine disturbances, and the rivalry of contending parties, have contributed to produce those relaxations of the general plan which have heretofore happened.

Supposition ought not to be indulged against fact; and, if we adhere closely to this, we must be convinced that the same spirit, which influenced the Stamp Act, has inspired all the succeeding conduct of Administration. This act was repealed, because it was found inexpedient, not because it was built upon an erroneous principle. Our petitions were rejected, because they contained a negation of the right to tax us; and these, together with the resolutions of our Provincial Assemblies, were pronounced derogatory to the just rights of the British Legislature. Here, the right of taxation was tenaciously maintained and asserted, at the same time that the exercise of it, in a particular instance, was abolished. Surely this did not imply a renunciation of the design to enslave us, but only indicated that the present attempt was unsuccessful, and that it was necessary to postpone the execution to some more convenient opportunity. The Declaratory Act put this beyond a doubt; for there our slavery is decreed in as strong expressions as language can afford. There, the power of Parliament to bind us by statutes, in all cases whatsoever, is literally declared and recorded, in the most formal manner.

Nothing can be more arbitrary and inadmissible, than to interpret the intentions of men in opposition to their own plain, express declarations. If we will allow the Parliament to know its own designs, and if we will credit its own positive expressions of them, we cannot hesitate a moment, to believe, that it had embraced a solemn, fixed resolution, to usurp an unbounded dominion over the Colonies.

If it should be said, that a mere general declaration of right does not absolutely disclose an intention to practice upon it, I answer, that it strongly implies it, and that the inference from the one to the other is natural and unavoidable.

Should one man publicly assert, that he had a perfect right to the possessions of another, all who heard him would suppose, of course, that he intended to do justice to himself whenever a favourable occasion offered, and to recover his property, unjustly detained by the present possessor. In like manner, when the Parliament assumes a plenary, unlimited sovereignty over the Colonies, it is highly reasonable to conclude, that a full exercise of the sovereign power is intended.

At the first passing of this act, it was generally considered, in America, as a punctilious formality, in order to prevent any diminution of the imaginary dignity of Parliament, and to preserve an appearance of consistency in its pretensions. But this was a proof of greater confidence than penetration; for a little reflection would have shown, that every purpose of that kind was sufficiently answered by the method observed in the repeal of the Stamp Act, which entirely precluded every detractory implication, and retained the original principle on which that act was founded; so that any further step was altogether superfluous in that view.

The Declaratory Resolution was plainly the result of an active zeal for the power lately exerted, and was established as a more complete ground-work for future operations. Probably its immediate object was to procure a concu-rence of parties in a general principle, in order to silence opposition to such particular exertions of it as should afterwards be made. Had the primitive design upon our liberties been deserted, the policy must have been obvious, of leaving all exorbitant claims untouched and unmentioned, to extinguish those jealousies which had been excited by the preceding attempt.

But, whatever ambiguity there might have been, at first, it was totally banished by the following statute of George III.,* which demonstrated a continuance of the primary intention to bring us under the yoke, and proved, beyond a doubt, that the Declaratory Act was not simply a matter of form, but had been instituted as a constant rule of practice. In this instance, the most exceptionable branch of the authority claimed, (the power of taxation,) was again exercised, though in a different shape from that in which it before appeared. It was politic to change the mode, because it was more likely it should be complied with, under a new form, than under one in which it had been already rejected.

Though this act, in some respects, was preferable to the former, yet, considered in all its relations, it was far more alarming and injurious. Connected with previous circumstances, it rendered the crime of the Ministry more glaring and inexcusable; for, certainly, two attempts speak more decisively than one, especially when corroborated by an intervenient declaration, so clear and peremptory as that which I have been animadverting upon. A renewal of taxation, after such definitive experience as had been gained from the former trial, excluded every idea of inconsistency and precipitation, and denoted a mature, fixed, inveterate scheme of oppression.

This act was combated with the same spirit and energy which had been employed on the foregoing occasion, and the Ministry again found it necessary to allay the ferment they had raised, by removing the cause. They, however, only repealed a part of the act, reserving the remainder as a test that they did not renounce the principle of taxation, and as the instrument of another attack. This repeal, too, partial as it was, had the same foundation of inexpediency with the other.

The attack has been since made, and has involved all the consequences of a civil war. By returning to the charge, a fresh testimony was supplied, of the badness of the Ministerial intentions, and of their deep-laid, inflexible schemes to overturn the liberties of the Continent. Three attempts are still more explicit than two; and, if three attempts to enforce the same power of taxing us do not convince us that an obstinate design has been maintained, for a series of years, to deprive us of all the rights of a free people, I am unable to conceive that any possible degree of evidence would be sufficient for our conviction.

Every successive step of the Ministry is a link of the same chain. The professed purpose of all the penal statutes is to secure obedience to the laws of Parliament, to say nothing of the unexampled rigour and violence with which they have been conducted. The Port Bill, which restrains the trade of Boston, requires these conditions, among others, as essential to its abrogation; full submission to the laws of Parliament, and the payment of His Majesty's duties and customs: that is, the duty upon tea, and, consequently, any other which might be imposed. The pretended authority of the Parliament, in every respect, particularly in that of taxation, is the acknowledged aim and end of all its measures.

The celebrated motion made in the last session, which the Ministry declared was to inform us of the terms we were finally to expect, reserves to the Parliament the exclusive power of taxation, and leaves to our Assemblies only the mode of raising the sums required of us. The quantum, or the amount of what we are to give, is to be determined, in the last resort, by the Parliament; and we are plainly told in what manner this power will be used.

The advantages of trade between Britain and the Colonies, are said to be nearly equal, on both sides; and, accordingly, after an inconsiderable allowance, for the inconvenience we sustain by a monopoly, we are to be made to pay full as much, in taxes, as the people at home. Did this proposition stand alone, it would be a sufficient testimony that we have been destined to slavery; but, when, it is compared and connected with all the preceding circumstances, and with those striking illustrations of fire and sword which have been since exhibited, it must carry an irresistible evidence to every ingenuous mind.*

* Imposing duties on paper, glass, painters' colours, tea, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 13, 1776.]

Cambridge, January 4, 1776.

SIR: Since my last, of the 31st ultimo, I have been honoured with your favour of the 22d, enclosing sundry resolves, which shall, in matters they respect, be made the rule of my conduct. The resolution relative to the troops in Boston, I beg the favour of you, sir, to assure Congress, shall be attempted to be put in execution the first moment I see a probability of success, and in such a way as a council of officers shall think most likely to produce it; but, if this should not happen as soon as you may expect, or my wishes prompt to, I request that Congress will be pleased to advert to my situation, and do me the justice to believe, that circumstances, and not want of inclination, are the cause of delay.

It is not in the pages of history, perhaps, to furnish a case like ours: to maintain a post within musket-shot of the enemy, for six months together, without powder, and, at the same time, to disband one army and recruit another, within that distance of twenty-odd British regiments, is more, probably, than ever was attempted. But, if we succeed as well in the last, as we have, heretofore, in the first, I shall think it the most fortunate event of my whole life.

By a very intelligent gentleman, (a Mr. Hutchenson,) from Boston, I learn, that it was Admiral Shulldham that came into the harbour on Saturday last; that two, of the five regiments from Cork, are arrived at Halifax; two others had sailed for Quebeck, but, what became of them could not be told; and the other, the Fifty-Fifth, has just got into Boston. Certain it is, also, that the greatest part of the Seventeenth Regiment is arrived there. Whether we are to conclude, from hence, that more than five regiments have been sent out, or, that the companies of the Seventeenth, arrived at Boston, are part of the regiments destined for Halifax and Quebeck, I know not.

We also learn, from this gentleman and others, that the troops embarked for Halifax, as mentioned in my letter of the 16th, were really designed for that place, but recalled from Nantasket Road, upon advice being received of the arrival of the above regiments there.

I am also informed of a fleet now getting ready, under the convoy of the Scarborough and Fowey, men-of-war, consisting of five transports and two bomb-vessels, with about three hundred marines, and several flat-bottomed boats. It is whispered that they are designed for Newport, but generally thought, in Boston, that it is meant for Long-Island; and, it is probable, it will be followed by more troops, as the other transports are taking in water, to lie (as others say) in Nantasket Road, to be out of the ice; a large quantity of biscuit is also baking. As the real design cannot, with certainty, be known, I submit it, with all due deference, to the superior judgment of Congress, whether it would not be consistent with prudence, to have some of the Jersey troops thrown into New-York, to prevent an evil which may be almost irremediable, should it happen: I mean the landing of troops at that place, or upon Long-Island, near it.

As it is possible you may not yet have received His Majesty's most gracious speech, I do myself the honour to enclose one, of many which were sent out of Boston yesterday. It is full of rancour and resentment, and explicitly holds forth his Royal will to be, that vigorous measures must be pursued, to deprive us of our constitutional rights and liberties. These measures, whatever they be, I hope will be opposed by more vigorous ones, and rendered unavailing and fruitless, though sanctified and authorized by the name of Majesty, a name which ought to promote the blessings of his people, and not their oppression.

* As there are some leading points, which it is of the last importance to impress upon the minds of the people, I hope the repetition of the same ideas, which I am obliged to make, will be excused, since utility is the sole aim of these papers.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect and regard, your most obedient and most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 1, 1776.

(Parole, The Congress.)

(Countersign, America.)

 This day giving commencement to the new Army, which, in every point of view, is entirely Continental, the General flatters himself, that a laudable spirit of emulation will now take place, and pervade the whole of it. Without such a spirit, few officers have ever arrived to any degree of reputation, nor did any army ever become formidable. His Excellency hopes, that the importance of the great cause we are engaged in, will be deeply impressed upon every man's mind; and wishes it to be considered, that an army without order, regularity, and discipline, is no better than a commissioned mob. Let us, therefore, when every thing dear and valuable to free-men is at stake, when our unnatural parent is threatening us with destruction from every quarter, endeavour, by all the skill and discipline in our power, to acquire that knowledge and conduct which is necessary in war. Our men are brave and good; men who, with pleasure it is observed, are addicted to fewer vices than are commonly found in armies. But, it is subordination and discipline, (the life and soul of an army,) which, next under Providence, is to make us formidable to our enemies, honourable in ourselves, and respected in the world; and herein is to be shown the goodness of the officer.

In vain is it for a General to issue orders, if orders are not attended to; equally vain is it, for a few officers to exert themselves, if the same spirit does not animate the whole. It is, therefore, expected, (it is not insisted upon,) that each Brigadier will be attentive to the discipline of his brigade, to the exercise of, and the conduct observed in it, calling the Colonels and Field-Officers of every regiment to severe account for neglect, or disobedience of orders. The same attention is to be paid by the Field-Officers, to the respective companies of their regiments, by the Captains to their Subalterns, and so on. And, that the plea of ignorance, which is no excuse for the neglect of orders, (but rather an aggravation,) may not be offered, it is ordered and directed, that not only every regiment, but every company, do keep an Orderly Book, to which frequent recourse is to be had, it being expected, that all standing orders be rigidly obeyed, until altered or countermanded. It is also expected, that all orders, which are necessary to be communicated to the men, be regularly read, and carefully explained, to them. As it is the first wish of the General to have the business of the Army conducted without punishment, to accomplish which, he assures every officer and soldier that, as far as it is in his power, he will reward such as particularly distinguish themselves; at the same time he declares that he will punish every kind of neglect or misbehaviour in an exemplary manner.

As the great variety of occurrences, and the multiplicity of business, in which the General is necessarily engaged, may withdraw his attention from many objects and things which might be improved to advantage, he takes this opportunity of declaring, that he will thank any officer, of whatsoever rank, for any useful hints or profitable informations; but to avoid trivial matters, as his time is very much engrossed, he requires that it may be introduced through the channel of a General Officer, who is to weigh the importance before he communicates it.

All standing orders heretofore issued for the government of the late Army, of which every regiment has, or ought to have, copies, are to be strictly complied with, until changed or countermanded.

Every regiment now upon the new establishment, is to give in, signed by the Colonel, or commanding officer, an exact list of the commissioned officers, in order that they may receive commissions; particular care to be taken, that no person is included as an officer, but such as have been appointed by proper authority; any attempt of that kind, in the new Army, will bring severe punishment upon the author. The General will, upon any vacancies that may happen, receive recommendations; and give them proper consideration; but the Congress, alone, are competent to the appointment.

An exact return of the strength of each regiment is to be given in as soon as possible, distinguishing the number of Militia, and such of the old regiments as have joined for a month only, from the established men of the regiment.

This being the day of the commencement of the new establishment, the General pardons all the offences of the old, and commands all prisoners (except prisoners of war) to be immediately released.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 2, 1776.

(Parole, Holland.)

(Countersign, William.)

That every officer may be perfectly well acquainted with the establishment of the present Army, in order that they may be governed by it, and make the returns agreeable thereto, the General informs them, that each regiment is to consist of a Colonel, a Lieutenant-Colonel, a Major, eight companies, an Adjutant, a Quartermaster, a Surgeon, and a Surgeon's Mate; whether a Chaplain will be allowed to each regiment, or one to two regiments, is yet to be determined. Each company is to consist of a Captain, a First and Second Lieutenant, an Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a Drummer and Fifer, and seventy-six Privates, and no more, under any pretence or plea whatsoever.

As the weekly returns which are ordered to be given in every Saturday, are very irregularly made, oftentimes not before Monday, the General desires, that the commanding officer of every corps will be exact in delivering them to the respective Brigade Major, every Saturday, at orderly time, who is to be answerable to the Adjutant-General for any neglect, or breach of this order. For the last time, it is strongly recommended to those officers, to examine the returns thoroughly before they sign and deliver them to the Major of Brigade, whether pay-rolls, muster-rolls, weekly returns, or returns of any other kind, that are demanded, as negligences will not be overlooked, and false returns punished with the utmost severity.

The General is apprehensive, that more men are absent upon furlough than are allowed by the General Orders; if so, he desires the Colonels and commanding officers of such regiments to rectify the mistake without loss of time; and, for a due regulation of this matter, in future, no soldier is to be absent without leave in writing, signed by the commanding officer of the regiment he belongs to, and a register thereof made in the Regimental Book; which furlough is to be delivered to the said commanding officer, so soon as he returns, and, if it should appear that any soldier has overstayed his time, without just reason, a note thereof is to be made in said book, and a furlough denied him, upon a future application, besides suffering such punishment as may, by a Regimental Court-Martial, be inflicted.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 3, 1776.

(Parole, Woodford.)

(Countersign, Norfolk.)

The Continental Rules and Articles, (as lately amended,) for the better government of the troops of the thirteen United Colonies, are now to take place; all trials are, therefore, to be under those articles. And, in compliance with the first, all officers are to subscribe them; each Colonel, or commanding officer of a regiment or corps, is to send to the Adjutant-General for a set for each company, and one for himself and officers to subscribe, which last is to be returned in, when the commissions are given out. These articles are to be read to the men, by an officer of a company, at least once a week. This to be considered as a standing order.

The Commissary of Stores is immediately to make a general return of all the stores under his care, here and at Roxbury; in doing which, he is to be very exact. An account of the arms is wanted, without delay. It was with no small degree of surprise that the General, yesterday, saw, after the repeated orders that had been given for having the tents (so soon as the barracks were fit to be entered) returned to the Quartermaster General, several of them standing uninhabited, and in a disgraceful, ruinous situation; and, moreover, hears, that others serve only for bedding. The officers who have suffered this neglect are informed that this is the last admonition that will be given on this head.

It is expected, that the commanding officers of regiments will be exceedingly attentive to the training, exercising, and disciplining their men, bringing them, as soon as possible, acquainted with the different evolutions and manœuvres necessary to be practised. And, as nothing reflects more disgrace upon an officer, or is more pernicious and dangerous in itself, than suffering arms to be in bad order, the General assures the officers and men, that he will never overlook or pardon a neglect of this kind. There are many practices in regular service highly worthy of imitation, but none more essential than this, and keeping soldiers always clean and neat. The first is absolutely necessary for self-preservation; the other for health and appearance: for, if a soldier cannot be induced to take pride in his person he will soon become a sloven, and indifferent to every thing else. Whilst we have men, therefore, who, in every respect, are superior to mercenary troops, that are fighting for two pence or three pence a day, why cannot we, in appearance, also, be superior to them, when we fight for life, liberty, property, and our country?

The companies now stationed in Cambridge, belonging to Colonel Prescott's Regiment, are to march immediately, and join their respective regiments, at Sewall's Point.

The companies now stationed at Sewall's Point, under the command of Major Wesson, are, forthwith, to march, and take post at Fort No. 1.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, January 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We are, at length, favoured with a sight of His Majesty's most gracious speech, breathing sentiments of tenderness and compassion for his deluded American subjects. The echo is not yet come to hand, but we know what it must be; and, as Lord North said, (and we ought to have believed and acted accordingly,) we now know the ultimatum of British justice. The speech I send you. A volume of them was sent out by the Boston gentry, and, farcical enough, we gave great joy to them, without knowing or intending it; * for, on that day, the day which gave being to the new Army, but before the proclamation came to hand, we had hoisted the Union flag, in compli-

* PHILADELPHIA, January 15, 1776.—By authentic advices from the camp, at Cambridge, of the 3d and 4th instant, we learn, that the bay and harbour of Boston yet continue open, that a man-of-war is so stationed as to command the entrance of Salem, Beverly, and Marblehead harbours; that five hundred fresh troops had arrived from Ireland; two regiments had gone to Halifax; two regiments had pushed into the river St. Lawrence, in hopes of getting up to Quebeck, which was very doubtful. That the two regiments arrived at Boston were the Fifty-Fifth and Seventeenth; that Admiral Shuldham was also arrived. An intelligent person got out of Boston on the 3d instant, who informed General Washington that a fleet, consisting of nine transports, containing three hundred and sixty men, were ready to sail under convoy of the Scarborough and Fowey, men-of-war, with two bomb-vessels and some flat-bottomed boats; their avowed destination in Boston was to Newport, but it was generally supposed to be Long-Island or Virginia. That a number of other transports are taking in water, and they are baking large quantities of biscuit in Boston, some say for the use of the shipping who are to lie in Nantasket Road on account of the ice, while others believe a more important movement is in agitation. This person also informs, that they have not the least idea in Boston of attacking our lines, but will be very thankful to be permitted to remain quiet. That before General Burgoyne's departure it was circulated through the Army, in order to keep the soldiery quiet under their distresses, that the disputes would soon be settled, and that he was going to England for that purpose. That they had intelligence at Boston of four vessels having sailed from Hispaniola for this Continent some time ago, laden with arms and ammunition. Our advices conclude at Boston, a great anecdote: That upon the King's speech arriving at Boston, a great number of them were re-printed, and sent out to our lines on the 3d of January, which being also the day of forming the new Army, the great Union flag was hoisted on Prospect-Hill in compliment to the United Colonies. This happening soon after the speeches were delivered at Roxbury, but before they were received at Cambridge, the Boston gentry supposed it to be a token of the deep impression the speech had made, and a signal of submission. That they were much disappointed at finding several days elapse without some formal measure leading to a surrender, with which they had begun to flatter themselves. When these accounts came away the Army were all in barracks, in good health and spirits. That five thousand Militia had taken the places of those soldiers who would not stay beyond their time of service; that they were good troops, and the whole Army impatient for an opportunity of action.

ment to the United Colonies. But, behold; it was received in Boston as a token of the deep impression the speech had made upon us, and as a signal of submission. So we hear, by a person out of Boston last night. By this time, I presume, they begin to think it strange that we have not made a formal surrender of our lines.

Admiral Shuldham is arrived at Boston. The Fifty-Fifth, and the greater part, if not all, of the Seventeenth Regiment, are also arrived. The rest of the five regiments from Ireland, were intended for Halifax and Quebeck.

It is easier to conceive than to describe the situation of my mind for some time past, and my feelings under our present circumstances. Search the volumes of history through, and I much question whether a case similar to ours is to be found; namely, to maintain a post, against the flower of the British troops, for six months together, without powder, and then to have one army disbanded, and another to be raised, within the same distance of a reinforced enemy. It is too much to attempt. What may be the final issue of the last manœuvre, time only can unfold. I wish this month was well over our heads. The same desire of retiring into a chimney-corner, seized the troops of New-Hampshire, Rhode-Island, and Massachusetts, so soon as their time expired, as had wrought upon those of Connecticut, notwithstanding many of them made a tender of their services to continue, till the lines could be sufficiently strengthened. We are now left with a good deal less than half-raised regiments, and about five thousand militia, who only stand engaged to the middle of this month, when, according to custom, they will depart, let the necessity of their stay be ever so urgent. Thus, for more than two months past, I have scarcely emerged from one difficulty, before I have been plunged into another. How it will end, God, in His great goodness will direct. I am thankful for his protection to this time. We are told, that we shall soon get the Army completed, but I have been told so many things, which have never come to pass, that I distrust every thing.

I fear your fleet has been so long in fitting, and the destination of it so well known, that the end will be defeated, if the vessels escape. How is the arrival of French troops in the West-Indies, and the hostile appearance there, to be reconciled with that part of the King's speech, wherein he assures Parliament, "that, as well from the assurances I have received, as from the general appearance of affairs in Europe, I see no probability that the measures which you may adopt, will be interrupted by disputes with any foreign Power?" I hope the Congress will not think of adjourning at so important and critical a juncture as this. I wish they would keep a watchful eye to New-York; from the account of Captain Sears, now here, much is to be apprehended from that quarter.

I am, with sincere and affectionate regard, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL GREENE TO SAMUEL WARD.

Camp on Prospect-Hill, January 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your kind favour of the 23d last, is now before me. I am extremely happy to find your views so affectionately extended to the combined interests of the United Colonies. Your apprehensions that George III. is determined, at all hazards to carry his plan of despotism into execution, is fully confirmed by his late gracious speech to both Houses of Parliament. In that, you will find, he breathes revenge, and threatens us with destruction. Indeed, it is no more than common sense must have foreseen long since, had we not been blinded by a too fond attachment to the parent state. We have consulted our wishes, rather than our reason, in indulging the idea of accommodation. Heaven has decreed that tottering empire to irretrievable ruin, and, thanks to God, since Providence has so determined it, America must raise an empire of permanent duration, supported upon the grand pillars of truth, freedom, and religion, based upon justice, and defended by her own patriotick sons.

No doubt a large army must be raised in addition to the forces upon the present establishment. You are acquainted with my sentiments upon that head already. How they must be divided, and where stationed, is a matter at present problematical. However, one thing is certain, the grand body must be superior in number to any force the enemy can send. All the forces in America should be under one commander, raised and appointed by the same authority, subjected to the same regulations, and ready to be detached wherever occasion may require. Your observation with regard to the Canadians has often struck me; that their attachment to the one party or the other will greatly depend upon the superiority of force. To prevent which in some measure, and fix them to the common interest, let us raise one or more regiments of Canadians to serve in New-England, and send an equal number into Canada from the Colonies, in addition to what you have proposed. With regard to the scanty measure dealt out to the Army upon the new establishment, we are not altogether different in sentiment; yet I am convinced the regiments will fill to their full complement. I believe they are more, upon an average, than half full already. Undoubtedly, the detaining of arms, being private property, is repugnant to many principles of civil and natural law, and hath disgusted many. But the great law of necessity must justify the expedient, till we can be otherwise furnished. The pay of the soldiers is certainly generous, and the officers likewise, except the field officers, whose pay is much below that of any others, considering their rank and experience, and it will operate to excite an opinion derogatory to their merit.

My dear, sir, I am now to open my mind a little more freely. It hath been said that Canada, in the late war, was conquered in Germany. Who knows but that Britain may be, in the present controversy! I take it for granted, that France and Spain have made overtures to the Congress. Let us embrace them as brothers. We want not their land force in America; their navy we do. Their commerce will be mutually beneficial; they will doubtless pay the expense of their fleet, as it will be employed in protecting their own trade. Their military stores we want amazingly. Those will be articles of commerce. The Elector of Hanover has ordered his German troops to relieve the garrisons of Gibraltar and Port-Mahon, France will, of consequence, attack and subdue Hanover with little trouble. This will bring on a very severe war in Germany, and turn Great Britain's attention that way. This may prevent immense expense, and innumerable calamities in America.

Permit me, then, to recommend from the sincerity of my heart, ready at all times to bleed in my country's cause, a declaration of independence; and call upon the world, and the great God who governs it, to witness the necessity, propriety, and rectitude thereof.

My worthy friend, the interests of mankind hang upon that truly worthy body of which you are a member. You stand the representatives, not of America only, but of the whole world; the friends of liberty, and the supporters of the rights of human nature.

How will posterity, millions yet unborn, bless the memory of those brave patriots who are now hastening the consummation of freedom, truth, and religion! But want of decision renders wisdom in council insignificant, as want of power hath prevented us here from destroying the mercenary troops now in Boston. Frugality, a most amiable domestick virtue, becomes a vice, of the most enormous kind, when opposed to the common good. The tyrant, by his last speech, has convinced us, that to be free or not, depends upon ourselves. Nothing, therefore, but the most vigorous exertions on our part, can shelter us from the evils intended us. How can we, then, startle at the idea of expense, when our whole property, our dearest connexions, our liberty, nay! life itself is at stake; let us, therefore, act like men inspired with a resolution that nothing but the frowns of Heaven shall conquer us. It is no time for deliberation; the hour is swiftly rolling on when the plains of America will be deluged with human blood. Resolves, declarations, and all the parade of heroism in words, will not obtain a victory. Arms and ammunition are as necessary as men, and must be had at the expense of every thing short of Britain's claims.

An army unequipped, will ever feel the want of spirit and courage; but properly furnished, fighting in the best of causes, will bid defiance to the united force of men and devils. When a finishing period will be put to the present dispute, God only knows. We have just experienced the inconveniences of disbanding an army within cannon shot of the enemy, and forming a new one in its stead. An instance never before known. Had the enemy been fully acquainted with our situation, I cannot pretend to say what might have been the consequence. A large body of troops will probably be wanted for a considerable time. It will be infinitely safer, and not more expensive in the end, for the Continent to give a large bounty to any number of troops in addition to what may be ordered on the present establishment, that will engage during the war, than to inlist them from year to year without a bounty. And should the present regiments be inclined to engage for the same term, let them receive the same encouragement. There is not the least prospect of our being able to disband and form a new army again, without the enemy's availing himself of the advantage.

I have taken the liberty to show your last letter to General Lee, whose knowledge of Europe, and American genius and learning, enable him to give you the advice you want. He has written you fully on the subject; it would be mere arrogance in me to say any thing upon the subject, after he has taken up the pen.

I this day manned the lines upon this hill, and feel a degree of pleasure that I have not felt for several days. Our situation has been critical. We have no part of the militia here, and the night after the old troops went away, I could not have mustered seven hundred men, notwithstanding the returns of the new inlisted troops amounted to nineteen hundred and upwards. I am now strong enough to defend myself against all the force in Boston. God bless you and preserve you. Adieu, &c.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS TO CAPTAIN TITUS SALTER.

January 4, 1776.

You are hereby authorized and empowered to inlist a company, to consist of ninety good able-bodied and effective men, including officers, to serve as matrosses at Fort-Washington, for the term of one year, from the 1st of January, unless dismissed sooner by order of Congress, or General Assembly of this Colony, accepting none but what are well accounted with good guns, &c. And you are hereby informed that you may assure said men they shall be paid the same wages that men in the like service are paid on the Continental Army. You will likewise have liberty to nominate two persons to serve as subalterns under you, who, if approved of by the General Assembly, will be commissioned, and make return of your inlistments as soon as may be, that the company may be properly mustered, and commissions made out accordingly.

By order of Congress.

To Captain Titus Salter.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO MAJOR GENERAL HOWE, DATED WHITEHALL, JANUARY 5, 1776.

I was preparing to write to you by a ship of war under orders for Boston, when Major General Burgoyne arrived here on the 27th of December, with your despatches, by the Boyne, which have been laid before the King.

The reasons you assign for not removing from Boston, in consequence of Lord Dartmouth's letters of the 5th of September, fully justifies your resolution on that head; and from the best judgment I am able to form of things as they now appear, I am inclined to think, that even if you could have procured a sufficient quantity of shipping to have effected an evacuation of the place in the manner you suggest, it would have been for many reasons an unadvisable measure.

Your ideas for the plan of operation for the army under your command in the ensuing campaign, are, in general, approved by the King; but I shall write more fully to you upon that subject in a separate letter, confining myself, at present, to the consideration of those parts of your letters which suggest the means of augmenting your force to what is necessary for that plan, and to an explanation of the arrangements we are making for that purpose, and for supplying, as far as is practicable, the several articles of which you have made requisition.

By your calculation, the number of men wanting to complete the several battalions stated in your paper of distribution, so that each battalion shall have five hundred men for the field, amounts to six thousand one hundred men; but as the plan of augmentation, by incorporating one hundred men into each battalion from the foreign troops in British pay, is liable to many objections from the nature and custom of their service—and I cannot yet say, whether it will be practicable to get any assistance from the militia in the manner you propose—you must depend for the augmentation you wish upon the number of levies that will be raised by recruiting, (which I am sorry to say, goes on slowly,) and upon such additional battalions as we shall be able to send you. You are, therefore, to add to the Forty-Second Regiment, which will be one thousand men complete, two other battalions of one thousand each, which will be raised upon a plan proposed by General Frazer, and approved by the King, and which it is hoped will be ready to embark for Boston, with the Forty-Second Regiment, early in the month of April.

You will also be furnished with an additional battalion from the armament going out upon an expedition to the Southern Colonies, which now consists, as you will see by the enclosed copy of my letter of instructions to Major General Clinton, of seven regiments; and, therefore, admitting that it should become necessary to leave two regiments to the Southward, (and I trust it will not be necessary to leave more,) there will be one battalion collected from that service more than you have included in your calculation.

The addition of General Frazer's corps, and of one battalion from the Southern expedition, and supposing the recruits to amount to two thousand men, will make an augmentation to your force of about four thousand four hundred men; and I speak with some degree of confidence, when I say, that I trust we shall be able to send you a separate corps of foreign troops, not less than ten thousand men, for although our negotiation with Russia has failed, we are now in treaty with other States for different corps, amounting in the whole to upwards of seventeen thousand men, and I think those treaties are brought so near to an issue, that they cannot fail.

The additional quantity of tonnage of shipping, which you state to be wanting for the entire evacuation of Boston, is very large; but it will in great measure, if not altogether, be supplied by the store-ships already gone out, and by a much greater number that are now preparing to be sent, all which will be at your disposal after they arrive, and have landed their cargoes; but should these not be enough, means will be found to supply the deficiency.

Your demand for wagons and horses, involves a greater difficulty; for, I am sorry to say, I think it is impossible to be complied with in the extent in which it is stated; and, therefore, I could wish to be satisfied in my own mind, that it is not necessary, and that, supposing the worst to happen, the nature of the operations will be such, that a great part of the service for which wagons and horses are demanded, may be performed by water-carriage.

With this hope, I have pressed forward the supply of flat-bottomed boats, of which thirty-two are already sent out, and also ten yawls, and as many cutters; and forty more boats are now in hand, and will be ready to go out by the first ships. Some horses, however, for the use of the artillery, and for the carriage of tents, must be procured, and I shall consult General Harvey and General Burgoyne, as to the numbers that will be wanted for that purpose.

Upon inquiring at the office of Ordnance, I find that the demand made in August last, for intrenching tools, and of those articles that were wanting in the Engineer's Department, had been supplied; directions, however, will be given for a second supply of the same sort, and for double the quantity of those articles of that supply which were on board the Nancy brig.

With regard to the supply of provisions, forage, and other stores, stated in the returns you have transmitted to me, the care of that business belongs to the Treasury Department, and I have no doubt that the utmost activity will be used in every step that is necessary to be taken.

It is impossible to turn one's thoughts to Canada, without regretting the unfortunate situation of the King's affairs in that country, and lamenting the obstacles which prevented the execution of the measure you had, with so proper a zeal, proposed for the safety of it, and which, I will venture to say, could not have failed; but, when I say this, I am not to presume that Admiral Graves had not good reasons for refusing to adopt it; at the same time, hoping, that, whatever his reasons were, they will be fully inquired into in the proper Department.

My business is to consider the means by which Quebeck, if possible, may be relieved; or, if lost, how we may recover it; but, as it can be of no use to explain to you all the steps I have taken for that purpose, I will only say, that, independent of the efforts we shall make very early to relieve the town, I hope, that, by the first or second week in March, we shall be able to send General Carleton at least ten thousand men.

The King approves the arrangement you propose, in respect to an Adjutant-General and a Quartermaster-General, and also your attention to Major Rogers, of whose firmness and fidelity we have received further testimony from Governor Tryon, and there is no doubt you will find the means of making him useful.

Lieutenant Bourmaster's behaviour does him great credit, and I will not fail to recommend him to Lord Sandwich; in the mean time, I have communicated to the Lords of the Admiralty, what you say of that gentleman, in an official letter, and also what you represent of the necessity of sending out seamen to complete the transports to their proper numbers, and your ideas of the propriety of augmenting the number of seamen, on board the King's ships, to a war establishment.

I am to suppose that Admiral Graves had good reasons for the step he took to destroy the town of Falmouth, and that he did not proceed to that extremity without an absolute refusal on the part of the inhabitants to comply with those requisitions, stated in the orders he received from the Lords of the Admiralty, which, however, does not appear from any account I have seen of that transaction.

In your letter of the 26th November, No. 2, you desire more particular directions in regard to the effects and merchandise in the town of Boston, on which head, it is the King's pleasure, that, if practicable, the whole should be removed and put into store, either at Halifax, or some other place of safety, so that the British merchant may have a chance, at least, to recover some of the property for which he can never be paid. At the same time, I am to repeat to you, what was said of Mr. Pownall's letter, that you must use your own discretion, according as circumstances shall point out at the time of your removal; for, however desirable it may be, that these goods and merchandise should be secured, it is an object that must not be attended to, if it should be found to be accompanied with such difficulty as to create any embarrassment or hazard in your removal; for, supposing such a case, the destruction of these goods and merchandise will be fully justified.

With regard to the battalion and detachment of artillery, serving in North-America, it is to be understood, that you do not fill up any vacancies, but in the rank of second lieutenants, in which rank you may grant commissions, and also, in all other corps below the rank of a field-officer, which commissions will be confirmed by His Majesty.

MATTHEW TILGHMAN TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Annapolis, January 5, 1776.

SIR: Several vessels being nearly ready to sail for the foreign West-Indies, agreeable to the resolutions of Congress, on the account of this Province, our Convention sent two gentlemen express to Williamsburgh and Hampton, to gain intelligence of the situation of affairs in Virginia; they have just returned, and the enclosed copies will inform of the strength of Lord Dunmore, and his present situation and circumstances. Our Convention think it imprudent to hazard the probable seizure of their vessels and cargoes by the numerous tenders and cutters employed to make captures; but the loss of property to this Province, from such an incident, appears to them trivial when compared to the consequences in the relief of a distressed enemy. Therefore, the sailing of the vessels is suspended, and the Convention request the orders of Congress, if not incompatible with any destined service, that the Hornet and Wasp, said now to be ready, may convoy the vessels through the Capes. It is apprehended they will be an overmatch for Stewart's sloop, or any of the tenders. Our Convention, likewise, submit it to the consideration of Congress, whether it may not be less dangerous, and more for the general service, that the Hornet and Wasp should push to Delaware, than return again up this bay. The Convention are very desirous of a speedy answer.

I am, sir, with great respect, your very humble servant,
MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

To Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress.

Williamsburgh, December 29, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We are this moment favoured with yours of the 22d, by Captain Hyde, to whom we have endeavoured to give the assistance he required in the course of his inquiry, as well as to show him the civility due to a gentleman on the very friendly errand he came. We have, perhaps, been remiss in not communicating to you a full account of our situation, and that of our enemy. We had transmitted to our Delegates in Congress the state of our affairs, from time to time, and imagined it would, from thence, be communicated to our sister Colonies, as far as was necessary, and we saw no occasion to call on our neighbours for assistance, by land, and did not, till late, hope for any by water; however, on the arrival of the Liverpool, man-of-war, with a store-ship, we thought it proper to communicate that intelligence to your Committee of Safety, which we did by express, on Saturday last, and which we hope has reached you ere now. The disgraceful circumstance, to the Colony, of seizing the Printer's materials and servants, in Norfolk; the captivating our friends at Kemp's Landing, and the cowardly behaviour of a party of Militia in that neighbourhood, afterwards, proceeded from the defenceless state of that part of the country, and our inability, for sometime, to send them protection, for want of arms and ammunition. As soon as we had despatched a respectable body of men across James River, for this purpose, Lord Dunmore issued his proclamation, and dispersed his standards and oaths, in Norfolk and Princess Anne, to which the bulk of the people in those Counties resorted and subscribed, and a number of slaves ran away to Norfolk and joined the enemy. Our Army continued their march without interruption till they got to a place called the Great-Bridge, between Suffolk and Norfolk; there the enemy had raised a stockade fort to intercept their passage. After some skirmishing for several days, Lord Dunmore's whole regulars, consisting of about two hundred, sallied out, and passed the bridge to attack our party. They met a defeat so complete, and sustained so large a carnage, that they have not yet appeared in action. They retreated on board the ships, and our Army marched into Norfolk without opposition, where there are about twelve hundred of Virginians and North-Carolinians, masters of the land, for Colonel Howe being convenient to the place, and hearing of the state of things there, had kindly marched with about five hundred men to our assistance. The notorious Tories, and some blacks, are gone on board the vessels in the harbour, and have embarked effects to the amount of one hundred and fifty thousand pounds, as estimated.

Our Convention have under examination some suspected persons of property; others have come in, and remain neuter; all the slaves, except what are on board the vessels, have surrendered, on promise of pardon, or been taken in arms, out of whom some examples will be made; and the apprehensions of danger, from that quarter, seem to have subsided. Besides the Liverpool and store-ship, which are supposed to have about four hundred seamen and marines, the naval force of our enemy consists of the Otter, of twelve six, and two four-pounders; the Kingfisher, of fourteen six, and four four-pounders; the Ellbeck, pierced for twenty-two guns, and, perhaps, now recruited from the store-ship, she had, however, only seven, three and four-pounders, badly mounted; the William, of six guns, size unknown; and several tenders, consisting of four schooners, four sloops, with small pilot boats, none of them very considerable, except a sloop belonging to, and commanded by, a Captain Stewart, which is said to mount ten carriage guns. The men belonging to all these ships of war and tenders, do not exceed two hundred, and these mostly pressed. We have at Hampton, at present, about two hundred men only, who have so obstructed the navigation up that river, by sinking boats, that none can get up but those well acquainted with it, and have raised some breastworks for defence. A reinforcement to them of two hundred men is ordered, and will be there in a day or two; beside those, there is a Captain Barron, a brave, experienced seaman, whose company of Militia, being also stationed there, has been very active in small excursions of vessels, in Hampton Roads, from which he has brought in several vessels belonging to Tories, protected others, the property of friends, from falling into the enemy's hands, and has taken two tenders, on their way to the Eastern-Shore for provisions, manned with Americans and slaves. We have strengthened his hands, by empowering him to fit out three armed vessels, to be employed in this way, and have great confidence in his prudence and valour. We have recommended it to Captain Hyde, that, should any vessels of yours be passing through the Road, they give a signal, to be settled by him with Captain Barron and the commanding officer at Hampton, which may produce some useful pilots, and, perhaps, other assistance from thence. We have, also, about three hundred troops in this city.

We are informed of a considerable cannonade, heard this day towards Norfolk, and suppose the gust may have produced some effects of consequence there. If either should occasion any material intelligence from thence, we will endeavour to put it into the way of Captain Hyde, on his return from Hampton. In the mean time, we have particularly mentioned every thing which occurs to us as material, and are, with regard and esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Howard delivered me your favour of the 22d of December. I find the Committee of Safety have seen those gentlemen; who, no doubt, have made them acquainted with the present situation of affairs. We hear the men-of-war are beating down the town of Norfolk. I most sincerely wish the speedy arrival of your ships. I believe we have, at Hampton, three hundred men.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Baltimore, January 5, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed I send you the deposition of a certain Captain John Horn, of Providence, in Rhode-Island, who arrived here this day. By said deposition it appears that there is the greatest reason to believe the ships of war have fired upon and destroyed the town of Norfolk, in Virginia. I thought it a matter of so much importance that the Congress should have the earliest advice of this important transaction, that I have despatched the bearer express therewith. Mr. Wall, of Providence, a gentleman of character, owner of Captain Horn, who is now here, assures me I may depend on the truth of his deposition.

I am, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JUN.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. This moment a young man is arrived from Annapolis, who informs me there was a boat arrived there from Hampton, who brings the same advice of the ships being left firing against the town of Norfolk.

Baltimore Town, ss:

This day came before me, the subscriber, one of the Lord Proprietor's Justices of the Peace for the County of Baltimore, John Horn, master of the sloop Snow-Bird, lately arrived from sea, who did depose as follows: That he, the said John Horn, being at Hampton, in Virginia, on Monday, the first instant, did hear a continued firing of great guns the whole day, supposed to be at the town of Norfolk; that a boat (as he was informed) was sent the same day from Hampton to know the cause of said firing, which, he was informed by Captain Barron, commander of a cruiser belonging to Hampton, brought advice that the vessels of war were firing upon the town of Norfolk; that about four o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, a great flame and smoke was perceived at Hampton, supposed to proceed from the town of Norfolk being on fire. That this deponent sailed from Hampton on Monday, the same evening, during which, and the whole night following, he heard a continual firing of great guns, and observed a great flame towards Norfolk; that on Tuesday, all day till about the middle of the afternoon, he heard a continual firing of great guns, and observed a great smoke ascending from the same quarter, and further this deponent saith not.

JOHN HORN.

Sworn before me at Baltimore, January 5, 1776.

ORDERS FROM NAVAL COMMITTEE TO THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE FLEET OF THE UNITED COLONIES.

In Naval Committee, January 5, 1776.

Orders and directions for the Commander-in-chief of the Fleet of the UNITED COLONIES.

You are to take care that proper discipline, good order, and peace, be preserved amongst all the ships, and their companies, under your command.

You are to direct the several Captains to make out and deliver monthly, or oftener, an exact return of the officers, seamen, and marines, on board of each respective vessel, noting their particular condition and circumstance; also, the quantity and quality of provisions and stores of every kind, together with the state of the respective ships; which returns, or copies of them, you are to transmit to Congress, or a Committee appointed by them to receive such returns, as often as opportunity offers.

You are, by every means in your power, to keep up an exact correspondence with the Congress, or Committee of Congress aforesaid, and with the Commander-in-chief of the Continental Forces in America.

As, by your instructions, you are empowered to equip such vessels as may fall into your power, and to appoint officers for such vessels: as often as this shall happen, you are, by the very first opportunity, to transmit to Congress, or the Committee aforesaid, the burden, force, and manner of equipment of such vessels, together with an exact list of such officers as you may appoint, in order that their appointment may be confirmed by Congress, or others be appointed in their stead.

You will be particularly careful to give such orders and instructions in writing to the officers under your command, as the good of the service may, in every case, require; to devise or adopt, and give out to the commanding officer of every ship, such signals and other marks and distinctions as may be necessary for their direction.

You are to take very particular care that all the men under your command be properly fed and taken care of, when they are in health, as well as when they are sick or wounded. You will, also, very carefully attend to all the just complaints which may be made by any of the people under your command, and see that they are speedily and effectually redressed, for on a careful attention to these important subjects, the good of the service essentially depends.

You are always to be exceedingly careful that your arms, as well great as small, be kept in the very best condition for service, and that all your cartridges, powder, shot, and every accoutrement whatsoever, belonging to them, be kept in the most exact order, always fit for immediate service.

You will carefully attend to such prisoners as may fall into your hands, and see that they be well and humanely treated. You may also send your prisoners on shore, in such convenient places where they may be delivered to the Conventions, Committees of Safety, or Inspection, in order to their being taken care of and properly provided for.

You will, also, give proper orders and directions to the Captains or Commanders of the ships or vessels under your command, in case they should be separated by stress of weather or any other accident, in what manner, and at what places they shall again join you.

STEPHEN HOPKINS,
CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN,
SILAS DEANE,
JOSEPH HEWES.

ROBERT YATES TO JONATHAN HAMPTON.

New-York, January 5, 1776.

SIR: You have, by Mr. Christopher Dwyckinck, eighteen quarter casks of powder, containing, large weight, four hundred and fifty pounds, to pay some powder we had last summer of the Committees of Brunswick and Elizabethtown, and wood for the Continental Army, which I pray you to take in charge, and cause the payment to be made to those Committees, and give Mr. Dwyckinck a receipt for the powder.

I am, dear sir, in haste, your humble servant,

ROBERT YATES, Chairman.

To Jonathan Hampton, Esq., Chairman of the Committee for Elizabethtown.

PROTEST OF KINDERHOOK (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

After those clear and convincing lights, which we have thrown on the business of the Kinderhook election, have been disregarded, we can promise little benefit to ourselves from a further appeal, either to reason or justice. We have shown that the late Committee for our District conformed to the rules of the Congress and of this Board; that a regular poll was held, at which they were appointed to preside, and of which they were, like other returning officers, the only judges in the first instance. We have proved that the rejection of even legal votes, does not absolutely vitiate an election; and we have declared our readiness to conform to the practice of all publick bodies in the case of scrutinies, when it is the invariable usage to strike off from the poll such as have been admitted without the legal qualification, and to add such as, being duly qualified, have been rejected provided they tendered their votes at the election: and to confirm this doctrine, we have alluded to the proceedings of the Common Council of this city, in the scrutiny between Yates and Hun, within a few years. We have remonstrated against the pernicious tendency of this Board's countenancing individuals who have acted in open and wanton violation of all precedents, and even of the orders of this Board. We are, therefore, constrained by the exigency of our case, solemnly to protest against this proceeding of the Committee, and to declare, that from henceforth, the District of Kinderhook is no longer represented at this Board; and in this measure we stand justified to our constituents, as well as our consciences, charging all the mischief upon that decision by which the right of election is taken away from the District and vested in this Committee, and by which the majority of electors is sacrificed to the minority. Such a conduct, too, we conceive, has a manifest tendency to destroy that union which some people pretend such zeal to maintain; and, by lessening the authority of Congresses and Committees, and encouraging a breach of their rules and orders, is subversive of that system of power which the United Colonies have thought proper to establish in carrying on their defence.

The above was delivered in to the Albany County Committee, the 5th January, 1776, by the District Committee of Kinderhook, and signed by

ANDREAS WILBECK,
CORNELIUS V. SCHACK, JUN.,
BARENT VANDERPOEL,
DIRCK GARDINIER,
Committee.

NOTICE FOR ELECTION OF A COMMITTEE FOR KINDERHOOK, NEW-YORK.

Albany, January 6, 1776.

Whereas, the General Committee of the City and County of Albany, by their Resolve entered into on the 5th instant, have invalidated the late return of the election for a Committee in the District of Kinderhook, and ordered that a new election be held in said District, on Monday, the 15th day of January, instant, at the house of Tobias Van Buren, in said District; and that Messrs. Peter Van Ness, Richard Esselstyn, John N. Beekman, Jacob Schermerhorn, and Matthew Adgate, or any three of them, be a Committee to hold the election; and that the Chairman of the County Committee give previous notice, by advertisement, to the inhabitants of said District, of the time and place of such election; and that four persons be chosen to represent said District in General Committee:

In pursuance of the said Resolution, it is hereby declared, that the said election will be held on the day, and at the place aforesaid, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and the inhabitants of said District are hereby notified of said Resolves, and earnestly requested to attend on the day and place aforesaid, for the purpose aforesaid

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, Friday, January 5, 1776.

I do not hesitate a moment to answer my dear General's question in the affirmative, by declaring that now or never is the time for every virtuous American to exert himself in the cause of liberty and his country; and that it is become a duty cheerfully to sacrifice the sweets of domestick felicity, to attain the honest and glorious end America has in view; and I can, with a good conscience, declare, that I have devoted myself to the service of my country in the firmest resolution to sink or swim with it, unanxious how I quit the stage of life, provided that I leave to my posterity the happy reflection that their ancestor was an honest American.

Here, my dear sir, you will ask, why then do you wish to retire from a publick office? Not because I am deterred by any difficulties I have experienced, or any that might hereafter present themselves; for I have had repeated experience in the course of life, that what the greater part of mankind deem impossibilities, exist only in idea, and are surmountable by a steady perseverance; but because I think I should prejudice my country by continuing any longer in this command. The favourable opinion that you are pleased to entertain of me, obliges me to an explanation, which I shall give you in confidence. I have already informed you of the disagreeable situation I have been in during the campaign, but I would waive that, were it not that it has chiefly arisen from prejudice and jealousy; for I could point out particular persons of rank in the Army who have frequently declared, that the General commanding in this quarter, ought to be of the Colony from whence the majority of the troops came; but it is not from opinions or principles of individuals that I have drawn the following conclusion: That troops from the Colony of Connecticut, will not bear with a General from another Colony; it is from the daily and common conversation of all ranks of people from that Colony, both in and out of the Army, and I assure you, that I sincerely lament that a people of so much publick virtue should be actuated by such an unbecoming jealousy, founded on such a narrow principle—a principle extremely unfriendly to our righteous cause, as it tends to alienate the affections of numbers in this Colony, in spite the most favourable constructions that prudent men, and real Americans amongst us, attempt to put upon it; and although I frankly avow that I feel a resentment, yet I shall continue to sacrifice it to a nobler object—the weal of that country in which I have drawn the breath of life—resolved ever to seek, with unwearied assiduity, for opportunities to fulfil my duty to it.

I shall to-morrow write to General Montgomery to collect the evidence in support of the charge against Prescott, and entreat him to be very particular. As the prisoners taken on board the vessels in the St. Lawrence are not yet passed, it is probable that I may, by their means, be able to furnish your Excellency with some accounts of the usage Allen received.

Since the receipt of your Excellency's, of the 18th, Major Rogers is come to this town. I sent to him, and amongst a variety of passes, he produced a late one from the Committee of New-Hampshire, to pass unmolested to New-York, for which place he sets out to-day. I believe there is no truth in the intelligence sent by Mr. Wheelock, for I find upon inquiry, that Rogers arrived at this place after St. John's was invested, and that he went from hence to New-England. I shall, however, make further inquiries. I shall forward the account against Captain Morgan to Colonel Arnold, by next post.

You will perceive by the enclosed, that the junction of General Montgomery and Col. Arnold has taken place, but their force is so small, and the weather has been so severe, that I fear they have not been able to possess themselves of Quebeck. Should an attempt have been made to storm it, and have proved fruitless, and accidents have happened to Montgomery and Arnold, I tremble lest Canada should be lost. If I could procure any men, I would send them to Canada immediately; but I know not where to get any. Even Ticonderoga and Fort-George are by this time, I fear, left to the care of the Commissary of Provisions and Conductor of Artillery. The officers to whom I had issued warrants, to raise four companies, meet with no success.

The first of the cannon arrived here on Wednesday, and the whole is on its way, but detained by the weakness of the ice in Hudson's River, occasioned by the uncommon mildness of the weather for several days past. One frosty night, if not deferred too long, will, however, put every thing in order, and I hope you will soon have the pleasure of seeing all at Cambridge.

To-morrow, thirteen of the Caughnawaga tribe, under the care of Major Woles, will set out for Cambridge, on a visit.

Your letter to General Howe gave me great pleasure, and his answer must convince mankind of your superiority. His affectation is trifling, and unbecoming a gentleman. His letter, I believe, will be eventually a censure on General Carleton.

I shall immediately forward to your Excellency what clothing can be spared from here; great part of it is not yet made up.

Sunday, January 7, 1776.—Yesterday a frost came on, and this morning I had the satisfaction to see the first division of sleds, with cannon, cross the river. Should there be snow all the way to Cambridge, they will probably arrive there about this day week.

A Mr. Gamble, who was made prisoner with Brigadier Prescott, and who was a Deputy Quartermaster-General in Canada, has entreated me to intercede with your Excellency to get him exchanged. He urges that he must be ruined unless he can get back to Canada. Although I by no means wish to prejudice an individual, yet I do not think it prudent that he should go to Quebeck, unless it is in our possession. When that happens, I can see no inconvenience in exchanging him, or permitting him to go, and shall esteem it as a favour if he can then procure your leave, and if you can get him exchanged, that he may not lose his office. He writes to General Lee on the subject. I have expressly informed him that I did not think he could be permitted to go to Quebeck, until after its reduction.

Be pleased to accept the compliments of the season, and my best wishes. I have the honour to be, with unfeigned esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MONTREAL, DATED JANUARY 5, 1776.

I came here last night, with despatches to General Wooster, having just time to acquaint you, per express, that on the 30th instant two attacks were made by our troops on Quebeck, and a feint at Cape-Diamond; the one at St. Roque's, by Colonel Arnold's detachment, consisting of about four hundred men, with sixty of Captain Lamb's company of artillery, and a party of Indians; the other, at Drummond's wharf, under Cape-Diamond, by the New-York troops, commanded by Gen. Montgomery, who was at their head. The attack was commenced between five and six o'clock, in the morning. It is with the greatest concern I inform you, that our brave General, his Aid-de-camp Mr. Macpherson, and Captain Cheeseman, fell the first fire, in the glorious attempt. I was with the General's party, and near him when he was killed. Mr. Macpherson behaved with spirit, and was an honour to his country. We passed the first barrier without opposition. This fatal stroke, of losing our General, threw our troops into confusion, and we received orders from Colonel Campbell to retire, with the loss of about fifteen men. Colonel Arnold's detachment, on the south side, forced two barriers out of four, and about nine o'clock they were surrounded, and under the necessity of surrendering themselves prisoners of war. They are very well treated. Governour Carleton buried General Montgomery and Mr. Macpherson with all the honours of war. Major Meigs is out on parole of honour, for three days, and has leave to carry in all the officers' baggage. Colonel Arnold was wounded in the small of his leg, at the first barrier, as was Major Ogden, and they both retired; Colonel Green had the command afterwards. Colonel Arnold's detachment behaved with the greatest bravery, and struck terror into General Carleton, or he would not treat them as he does. Major Meigs says General Carleton does not expect to hold Quebeck long. Captain Hendricks, of the Pennsylvania riflemen, Lieutenant Humphries, of Morgan's company, of Virginia riflemen, and Lieutenant Cooper, of Captain Manchet's company, are killed; Captain Lamb is slightly wounded, and about one hundred privates are killed and wounded.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

January 5, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The consequences of the enemy's possessing themselves of New-York, have appeared to me so terrible, that I have scarcely been able to sleep from apprehensions on the subject. These apprehensions daily increase. You have it in your power, at present, to prevent this dreadful event. If I do not mistake, the Congress have given you authority to take any step in that place, as well as here, which you shall think necessary for the publick service; but if they have not given you, expressly and literally, authority with respect to the city of New-York, I am confident that any measure you think right to plan, and put in execution, will be approved of. I have the greatest reason to believe, from the most authentic intelligence, that the best members of the Congress expect that you would take much upon yourself, as referring every matter of importance to them is, in fact, defeating the project. We have an instance of this in the fate of the motion for seizing the person of Mr. Tryon. To you they look up for decision. By your conduct they are to be inspired with decision. In fact, your situation is such, that the salvation of the whole depends on your striking, at certain crises, vigorous strokes, without previously communicating your intention. On this principle, I venture to propose the following scheme, and to offer myself for the execution:

New-York must be secured; but it will never, I am afraid, be secured by direct order of the Congress, for obvious reasons. They find themselves awkwardly situated on this head. You must step in to their relief. I am sensible that no man can be spared from the lines, in our present circumstances; but I would propose that you should detach me into Connecticut, and lend your name for collecting a body of volunteers. I am assured that I shall find no difficulty in assembling a sufficient number for the purposes wanted. This body, in conjunction (if there should appear occasion to summon them) with the Jersey regiment, under the command of Lord Stirling, now at Elizabeth-town, will effect the security of New-York, and the expulsion or suppression of that dangerous banditti of Tories who have appeared in Long-Island, with the professed intention of acting against the authority of the Congress. Not to crush these serpents, before their rattles are grown, would be ruinous. I am assured, likewise, that the Connecticut volunteers, who will offer themselves for the service, will expect no pay, but at most the expenses of their provisions, and, perhaps, of carriages for the conveyance of their baggage. When once we have secured the place with street-fortifications, and engaged the friends of liberty so far that they cannot recede, purged the city and Long-Island of the leading Tories, the residence of those Connecticut volunteers will be no longer necessary; for there is no reason to doubt that the Congress will detach troops from Pennsylvania, to garrison the place, although, from reasons hinted at, they may not choose to commence the operation. This manœuvre I not only think prudent and right, but absolutely necessary to our salvation; and if it meets, as I ardently hope it will, with your approbation, the sooner it is entered upon the better. Indeed, the delay of a single day may be fatal.

I am, dear General, yours, most respectfully,

CHARLES LEE.

FORM OF GOVERNMENT ASSUMED BY THE COLONY OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

In Congress, at Exeter, January 5, 1776.

We, the members of the Congress of the Colony of New-Hampshire, chosen and appointed by the free suffrages of the people of said Colony, and authorized and empowered by them to meet together, and use such means, and pursue such measures, as we should judge best for the public good; and, in particular, to establish some form of Government, provided that measure should be recommended by the Continental Congress: And a recommendation to that purpose having been transmitted to us from the said Congress, have taken into our serious consideration the unhappy circumstances into which this Colony is involved, by means of many grievous and oppressive acts of the British Parliament—depriving us of our native and constitutional rights and privileges: To force obedience to which acts, a powerful fleet and army have been sent into this country by the Ministry of Great Britain, who have exercised a wanton and cruel abuse of their power, in destroying the lives and properties of the Colonists, in many places, with fire and sword—taking the ships and laden from many of the honest and industrious inhabitants of this Colony, employed in commerce agreeably to the laws and customs a long time used here: The sudden and abrupt departure of his Excellency John Wentworth, Esq., our late Governour, and several of the Council, leaving us destitute of legislation; and no Executive courts being open to punish criminal offenders, whereby the lives and properties of the honest people of this Colony are liable to the machinations and evil designs of wicked men:

Therefore, for the preservation of peace and good order, and for the security of the lives and properties of the inhabitants of this Colony, we conceive ourselves reduced to the necessity of establishing a form of Government, to continue during the present unhappy and unnatural contest with Great Britain; protesting and declaring, that we never sought to throw off our dependence upon Great Britain, but felt ourselves happy under her protection, while we could enjoy our constitutional rights and privileges; and that we shall rejoice if such a reconciliation, between us and our parent state, can be effected, as shall be approved by the Continental Congress, in whose prudence and wisdom we confide.

Accordingly, pursuant to the trust reposed in us, we do resolve, that this Congress assume the name, power, and authority, of a House of Representatives, or Assembly, for the Colony of New-Hampshire. And that said House then proceed to choose twelve persons, being reputable freeholders and inhabitants within this Colony, in the following manner, viz: Five in the County of Rockingham, two in the County of Stafford, two in the County of Hillsborough, two in the County of Cheshire, and one in the County of Grafton, to be a distinct and separate branch of the Legislature, by the name of a Council for this Colony; to continue as such until the third Wednesday in December next, any seven of whom to be a quorum to do business.

That such Council appoint their President, and, in his absence, that the senior Counsellor preside.

That a Secretary be appointed by both branches, who may be a Counsellor, or otherwise, as they shall choose.

That no Act or Resolve be valid, and put into execution, unless agreed to, and passed by both branches of the Legislature.

That all public officers for the said Colony, and each County, for the current year, be appointed by the Council and Assembly, except the several Clerks of the Executive Courts, who shall be appointed by the Justices of the respective Courts.

That all Bills, Resolves, or Votes, for raising, levying, and collecting money, originate in the House of Representatives.

That at any sessions of the Council and Assembly, neither branch shall adjourn for any longer time than from Saturday till the next Monday, without consent of the other.

And it is further Resolved, That if the present unhappy disputes with Great Britain should continue longer than this present year, and the Continental Congress give no instructions or directions to the contrary, the Council be chosen by the people of each respective County, in such manner as the Council and House of Representatives shall order.

That General and Field-Officers of the Militia, on any vacancy, be appointed by the two Houses, and all inferior officers be chosen by the respective companies.

That all officers of the Army be appointed by the two Houses, except they should direct otherwise in case of an emergency.

That all civil officers for the Colony, and for each County, be appointed, and the time of their continuance in office be determined by the two Houses, except Clerks of Courts, and County Treasurers, and Recorders of Deeds.

That a Treasurer and a Recorder of Deeds, for each County, be annually chosen by the people of each County, respectively; the votes for such officers to be returned to the respective Courts of General Sessions of the Peace, in the County, there to be ascertained as the Council and Assembly shall hereafter direct.

That Precepts, in the name of the Council and Assembly, signed by the President of the Council, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, shall issue annually, at or before the first day of November, for the choice of a Council and House of Representatives, to be returned by the third Wednesday in December, then next ensuing, in such manner as the Council and Assembly shall hereafter prescribe.

COURT-MARTIAL ON CAPTAIN SPENCER.

At a General Court-Martial, held for inquiring into the conduct of Captain Spencer, of the Minute Battalion, upon Lieutenant-Colonel Scott's detachment, and for the trial of all the prisoners in all the guards: Present—

John Ruffin, President, Captain Markham, Captain Fle- ming, Captain Meade, Captain Crawford, Captain Jameson, Captain Mason, Lieutenant Gee, Lieutenant Monroe, Lieutenant Hanway, Ensign Woodson, Ensign Hallway, Ensign Foster.

Captain Spencer appeared before the Court, when several depositions were read, and divers witnesses were sworn and examined. On consideration whereof, the Court is of opinion, that Captain Spencer is not guilty of the charge laid against him, and that he be discharged from the arrest.

JOHN RUFFIN.

Approved of by

ROBERT HOWE.

Whereas, I have been informed that some reports have been spread to the prejudice of Captain Joseph Spencer, respecting his conduct in a late attack of the enemy, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Scott: These are to certify, that the above affair was inquired into by a Court-Martial, who, after a fair hearing, honourably acquitted Captain Spencer. That the said Captain Spencer has served under my command ever since we left Williamsburgh, upon the Norfolk expedition, and has always discharged his duty as a good officer.

Given under my hand, at Norfolk, the 6th day of January, 1776.

WILLIAM WOODFORD.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 6, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of enclosing you sundry resolutions, passed yesterday, respecting Mr. Lovell.

The Congress are desirous to know your opinion what rank it would be proper the Aid-de-camps of the General Officers ought to hold in the Army; and, on this head, I am directed to write to you, and desire your answer.

Just after the receipt of your letter, Connolly and Cameron were brought to town. By some mismanagement, Smith, one of their associates, was suffered to make his escape from Fredericktown, where they were confined. Orders were given to have his saddle searched, but nothing is yet discovered. There is reason to believe he must have found means to withdraw his papers, as we find, by an account from the Committee of Frederick, that his saddle was mended there.

The French gentlemen are arrived, and referred to the Secret Committee.

The Congress have given orders to General Schuyler, immediately to secure Brigadier-General Prescott, and keep him in close and safe custody until further order.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

JOHN JAY TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Philadelphia, January 6, 1776.

DEAR ROBERT: Amid the various sources of consolation, in seasons of poignant distress, which the wise have long amused themselves and the world with, the little share of observation and experience which has fallen to my lot, convinces me that resignation to the dispensations of a benevolent as well as omnipotent Being, can alone administer relief. The sensations which the first paragraph of your letter has occasioned, mock the force of philosophy, and, I confess, have rendered me the sport of feelings which you can more easily conceive than I express. Grief, if a weakness, is nevertheless, on certain occasions amiable, and recommends itself by being in the train of passions which follow virtue. But remember, my friend, that your country bleeds and calls for your exertions. The fate of those very friends, whose misfortunes so justly afflict you, is linked with the common cause, and cannot have a separate issue. Rouse, therefore, and after vigorously discharging the duties you owe your country, return to your peaceful shades, and supply the place of your former joys by the reflection, that they are only removed to a more kindred soil, like flowers from a thorny wilderness by a friendly florist, under whose care they will flourish and bloom, and court your embraces forever. Accept my warmest thanks for the ardour with which you wish a continuance and increase of that friendship to which I have long been much indebted. Be assured that its duration will always be among the first objects of my care. Let us unite in proving, by our example, that the rule which declares juvenile friendships, like vernal flowers, to be of short continuance, is not without exceptions, even in our degenerate days.

Mr. Deane has this moment come in, so that I must conclude, as I hope to conclude every letter to you, with an assurance that I am your affectionate friend,

JOHN JAY.

To Robert R. Livingston.

P. S. Fifty tons of saltpetre arrived this day.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE NORTHERN ARMY.

[January 6, 1776, read, and consideration postponed to Monday next.]

In Congress, January 6, 1776.

The Committee on the affairs of the Northern Army, beg leave to make a further Report, and to sit again.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Medical Committee be directed to provide sufficient quantities of anti-scorbuticks, for the use of the Hospital in the Northern Army.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Hospital at Fort-George be continued, for the reception of soldiers labouring with contagious diseases; and that there be a General Hospital erected on Mount-Independence.

Resolved, That a suitable spot of ground for a garden be enclosed, in the neighbourhood of the General Hospital, to supply the Army with vegetables; and that labourers be hired to cultivate it, under the direction of an overseer, to be appointed by the General, or commanding officer.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the General, or commanding officer in each of the Armies, cause strict inquiry to be made into the conduct of the Directors of the Hospitals, and their surgeons, officers, and servants, and of the regimental surgeons, that, if there has been any just ground of complaint in those departments, the offenders may be punished.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Colonel, or commanding officer, of every regiment, make frequent inquiry into the health of the men under his command, and report the state thereof, with any negligence, malpractice, or other misconduct, of the surgeons, or others, to the General and to Congress, delivering copies of such reports to all persons therein accused.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the General, or Commander-in-chief of the Northern Army, direct all the Batteaus on Lakes Champlain and George, to be immediately repaired.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that one hundred Batteaus be built at Schenectady, so as to be ready for use in February, or March next, at furthest; and, for this purpose, that boards, pitch, oakum, and other necessary materials, be collected, and artificers employed, by the General, or commanding officer.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 6, 1776—12 o'clock.

SIR: After sealing the letters which Captain Morris will deliver you herewith, I found on the messenger some private letters to Mrs. Gage, which I have forwarded. The handwriting of one of them I knew to be from a most dangerous man; and, for very particular reasons, I was induced to open it. I now send it to you, and am your most humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 6, 1776.

SIR: Having particular reasons for believing that an express, which went through this place about noon, this day, for New-York, was charged with despatches of importance for the Ministry of Great Britain, and which might contain matters valuable to be known to the Continental Congress, I immediately despatched the bearer hereof, Capt. Morris, of my regiment, to overtake the messenger, which he did, at the second ferry between this and New-York, and has this moment brought back the messenger, with the enclosed two packets, directed for the Earl of Dartmouth, which I think it is most proper to send to you unopened, in order to be laid before the Congress. Captain Morris, who, on this occasion, has behaved with great prudence and alertness, will wait for whatever despatches or commands you may have for me.

I have the pleasure to inform you, that several vessels, with valuable cargoes, from foreign ports, have arrived in this Province, and, under the protection I have afforded them, have landed their cargoes. Among the rest, are some hundred barrels of gunpowder, which, chiefly, is safely lodged in New-York.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED NEW-YORK, JANUARY 6, 1776.

This Colony contains about 200,000 souls, of which, by an exact return, 40,000 are able to bear arms; from whom deduct 2,000, as lukewarm and disaffected, which leaves 38,000 men, attached to the American cause. The Militia of the Colony is well regulated by the Convention; 9,500 are appointed as Minute-Men, properly officered, and allowed the pay of the Continental troops, for the extra days they muster above the time prescribed by law. Ammunition is distributed to them, at the publick expense, by the several County Committees. They are tolerably well armed, but, by the Spring, will be as completely furnished as any troops in the world, contracts having, for some time past, been made for that purpose, by, and under the inspection of gentlemen who have the cause at heart. A sufficient quantity of intrenching tools are made, and their camp equipage preparing. They have a good train of brass field-artillery, of their own casting, and a vast plenty of iron ordnance. The Militia is commanded by one Major and six Brigade Generals. This Colony is far better prepared for defence than the Massachusetts was last Spring; all our neighbours are in a better state. The present Convention of the Colony exists till May next; during the recess, the publick affairs are conducted by a Committee, or Council of Safety.

There are now twenty-six complete regiments at Cambridge, of 632 effective men, which amounts to 16,432. The Connecticut troops returned home, after the expiration of their time. That Colony is now raising nineteen regiments, of 900 effective men each. New-York has raised four, of 750 each. Jersey two, of 632; and Pennsylvania five, of 632, effective. The number raised in the Southern Colonies, I cannot inform you. The Army at Cambridge is now exceedingly well provided with ammunition and artillery.

General Wooster commanded at Montreal. Our last advices from Canada are dated the 7th of December. General Montgomery was then before Quebeck, with 4,000 Provincials and 5,000 Canadians; he was waiting for his artillery to come from Montreal. Upon its arrival, there is no doubt but he would soon oblige General Carleton to surrender, who has in garrison, under his command, to defend the place, 1,053 men, consisting of English and French merchants, emigrants, Newfoundland-men, sailors, and marines.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN AT NEW-YORK TO HIS FRIEND IN SCOTLAND, DATED JANUARY 6, 1776.

Mr. Washington, with 25,000 men, still keeps General Howe within the limits of Bunker's Hill and the town of Boston. Their privateers have had amazing success in taking a vast number of provision and store-ships, some with cannon and ordnance stores. In short, they are very active. I wish I could say as much for the British fleet, although they are very numerous. Captain Wallace, at Rhode-Island, has, indeed, kept them in good order there; but, by all accounts, [Admiral Graves] has behaved very ill. He gives no proper orders to his Captains detached, and studies nothing, himself, but getting money. In the beginning, some people ventured to Boston by water, with fresh provisions; but there is such oppression, that none of them will go again. Even the poor fishermen cannot get out, till they give a dollar to his Secretary.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, January 6, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of your favour of the 1st inst. The Paymaster-General has delivered me the rolls of some of General Wooster's regiment, as, also, Captain Curtis's pay-roll, by which, I observe, he is paid for sundry premiums, allowed by your Colony. As these differ from the allowances made in other Colonies, and having no directions from the Continental Congress on that head, I cannot venture to give any warrants for their payment. I believe, at any rate, that this would best come as a Colonial charge against the Continent, together with the days added for returning home. In this view, I have taken the liberty to enclose your Honour a form of a pay-roll, agreeable to which I have paid the troops raised in this Colony. It will be almost impossible for many of the Captains to ascertain the dates of the discharges of many of their men, but this can be supplied from my books; as to such as were discharged by Colonel Hunn or me, I propose to give warrants for the pay, and that the Paymaster should, immediately after the accounts are finished, repair to Connecticut, and pay the Captains there. Such of the men as have been re-listed in Canada, to have their names entered in the roll, following each other, and, if the Captains are not certain as to the time, then to make up the wages due to them the 18th November. I have ordered the Captains of the troops raised in this Colony, to send me accounts of the distance the people had to travel from where they were discharged to their places of residence, that I might lay it before the Congress, which I wish yours, also, to do. The billeting money, which I will grant warrants for, I wish to have in separate rolls.

General Montgomery was still before Quebeck, on the 16th December, and had intentions of storming, but he has so few troops, (only eight hundred, and a few Canadians), that I tremble for the event. I wish he could have prevailed on more of the troops to remain in Canada.

Please to accept my best wishes, with the compliments of the season.

I am, sir, with much respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

Governour Trumbull.

P. S. I take the liberty of enclosing fifty dollars, which General Prescott sends Mr. McKay, begging your Honour to cause the same to be delivered to him.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO COLONEL WARNER.

Montreal, January 6, 1776.

SIR: With the greatest distress of mind I now sit down to write to you of the event of an unfortunate attack made on Quebeck, between the hours of four and six in the morning, of the 31st December; unfortunate indeed for us; in it fell our brave General Montgomery, his Aid-de-camp Macpherson, Captains Cheeseman and Hendricks, of the riflemen, and two or three of the subalterns, and between sixty and one hundred privates, (the number uncertain,) and about three hundred officers and soldiers taken prisoners, among whom are Lieutenant-Colonel Green, Major Bigelow, Major Meigs, and a number of Captains and inferior officers. Colonel Arnold was wounded in the leg, in the beginning of the action, as was Major Ogden, in the shoulder, and brought to the General Hospital. I have not time to give you the particulars, but thus much will suffice to show, that in consequence of this defeat, our prospects in this country are rendered very dubious, and, unless we can quickly be reinforced, perhaps it will be fatal, not only to us, who are stationed here, but to the Colonies in general, especially to the frontiers. Greatly, very greatly, depends upon our keeping possession of this country. You know as well as any other man, the temper and disposition of the Canadians; that they are not persevering in adversity; that they are not to be depended upon, but, like the Savages, are extremely fond of choosing the strongest party; and, add to this, our enemies in the country, of which there are many, who use every method to excite the Canadians against us; among other things, they tell them that the United Colonies intend to abandon the country; the clergy refused absolution to all who have shown themselves our friends, and preach damnation to those that will not take up arms against us, and tell them that now it is not too late that we are but a handful of men.

I have sent an express to General Schuyler, General Washington, and to Congress, but you know how far they have to go, and it is very uncertain how long it will be before we can have relief from them. You, sir, and the Green-Mountain corps are in our neighbourhood; you all have arms, and, I am confident, ever stand ready to lend a helping hand to your brethren in distress. I am sensible that there was some disagreement between you and General Montgomery. Poor man! he has lost his life fighting valiantly for his country; but why do I mention any thing about disagreement between you; I know that no private resentment can hinder your exercising every faculty to vindicate the rights and privileges for which we are nobly contending; therefore, let me beg of you, to collect as many men as you can, five, six, or seven hundred, and if you can, and some how or other, convey into this country, and stay with us till we can have relief from the Colonies. You are sensible we have provisions of all kinds in abundance, and the weather in this country is not so frightful as many have imagined. You will see that proper officers are appointed under you, and both officers and soldiers shall be paid as the other Continental troops. It will be well for your men to set out as fast as they are collected, not so much matter whether together or not, but let them set out, ten, twenty, thirty, forty, or fifty, as they can be first collected, for it must have a good effect on the minds of the Canadians, to see succour coming in. You will be good enough to send copies of this letter, or such parts of it as you think proper, to the people below you. I cannot but think our friends will make a push into the country, and am confident you will not disappoint my most fervent wish and expectation in seeing you here, with your men, in a very short time. Now is the time for you to distinguish yourselves; of obtaining the united applause of your grateful countrymen, of your distressed friends in Canada, and your very great friend and servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To Colonel Warner.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL ARNOLD, DATED
CAMP BEFORE QUEBEC, JANUARY 6, 1776.

Before this reaches you I make no doubt you will have heard of our misfortune of the 31st ultimo, and will be anxious for my safety. I should have wrote you before, but a continual hurry of business has prevented me. The command of the Army, by the death of my truly great and good friend, General Montgomery, devolved on me; a task, I find, too heavy under my present circumstances. I received a wound by a ball through my left leg, at the time I had gained the first battery, at the lower town, which, by the loss of blood, rendered me very weak. As soon as the main body came up, with some assistance I returned to the hospital, near a mile, on foot, being obliged to draw one leg after me, and a great part of the way under the continual fire of the enemy from the walls, at no greater distance than fifty yards. I providentially escaped, though several were shot down at my side. I soon learned the death of our General, who attacked the town at the side opposite to me; he behaved heroically; marched up in the face of their cannon, and when he had nearly gained the pass, received the fatal shot, or the town would have been ours. This occasioned the disaster that afterwards happened to my detachment, which, after the General's defeat, had the whole garrison to encounter, under every disadvantage of ground, &c. &c. To return was impossible, as the route was within fifty yards, and exposed to the fire of the whole garrison, who had brought several pieces out of one of the gates, which our people would have been obliged to pass. In this situation, they maintained their ground near three hours; but being overpowered with numbers, were obliged to lay down their arms; about three hundred, including Captain Lamb, of New-York, and part of the train, were taken prisoners, and as near as I can judge, about sixty killed and wounded. Captain Oswald is among the prisoners; he was with me in a selected party of about twenty-five, who attacked the first battery; behaved gallantly, and gained much honour; the prisoners are treated politely, and supplied with every thing the garrison affords. Governor Carleton sent to let me know that the soldiers' baggage, if I pleased, might be sent to them, which I shall immediately send. Though the enemy are now double our number, they have made no attempt to come out. We are as well prepared to receive them as we can possibly be in our present situation, divided at a distance of two miles. I expect General Wooster from Montreal in a few days with a reinforcement. I hope we shall be properly supported with troops by the Congress. I have no thoughts of leaving this proud town, until I first enter it in triumph. My wound has been exceeding painful, but is now easy, and the surgeons assure me will be well in eight weeks. I know you will be anxious for me. That Providence which has carried me through so many dangers, is still my protection. I am in the way of my duty, and know no fear.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 15, 1776, and referred to Mr. Paine, Mr. Dyer, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Wythe, Mr. W. Livingston.]

Lebanon, January 6, 1776.

Sir: Enclosed is a copy of a letter from the Committee of Inspection in the town of Greenwich, bordering on the County of Westchester, in the Province of New-York. This intelligence appears to me worthy the attention of your body. When the United Colonies are driven to the necessity of taking up arms for the defence of their rights, at the same time to feed their enemies, and to give them intelligence and aid, appears incongruous, and requires attention, and some vigorous exertions to prevent it.

Oliver Wolcott and Samuel Huntington, Esquires, the new members from this Colony, will inform what is needful, of the acts and resolves of our General Assembly. Great harmony and unanimity subsisted therein. An act passed for restraining and punishing persons who are inimical to the liberties of this and the rest of the United Colonies, &c.; another for encouraging the manufacture of saltpetre and gunpowder. Hope to produce a considerable quantity of gunpowder by the Spring, from materials collected amongst ourselves.

The furnace at Middletown is smelting lead, and will soon turn out twenty or thirty tons. The vein of ore seems to promise a plenty.

A resolve passed our Assembly directing the Governour and his Council of Safety to fit two armed vessels; one is purchased, will carry sixteen guns. The other to be bought or built; if it be built, will be larger; also to build four row-galleys.

A request was made in a former letter for the loan of fifty cannon from the northern posts. Enclosed is minutes of the ordinance in the possession of the United Colonies in that quarter, exclusive of what is at Crown-Point, at which place there is not less than forty. I hope for a speedy answer, and grant of that favour. The season is advancing wherein they may be drawn down.

Enclosed is copy of the report of a Committee from our Assembly, concerning a lead mine at New-Canada, in the Colony of New-York. Is it not needful to engage the Congress of that Colony to pursue this discovery. The lead extracted from this ore appears to be of the best kind, and the appearance of a plenty is very great.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable President Hancock.

In Committee, Greenwich, December 26, 1775.

HONOURABLE SIR: In compliance with your honourable desire, signified to this Committee by Doctor Mead, who, at the request of this body, has made inquiry into the state of affairs in the County of Westchester, the result of which inquiry we beg leave to lay before your Honour, viz: That upon the best information he could obtain from the friends of the American cause in that quarter, there is now between Byram River and King's Bridge about two thousand barrels of pork, chiefly in the hands of Tories, besides what has been sent off, which is difficult to ascertain.

One Webb and Weyman, of the Borough of Westchester, put up about three or four hundred barrels, which they, (with themselves,) conveyed on board the Asia man-of-war, except twenty-four barrels, stopped by the Committee of New-York. That at the house of W. Sutton, Esq., of Maroneck, about twenty head of fat cattle had been barrell'd within a few days past, which, by some of our friends in that neighbourhood, is supposed to be sent off for the Ministerial army; and that in the same neighbourhood, for three or four miles round, there are not more than eight or ten Whigs to one hundred and twenty Tories. The proceedings of the Committee of that County appear rash, dilatory, weak, and inadequate to their unhappy circumstances. That upon the 15th inst., a large yawl from the Asia, with about twenty-four men armed, came in the night into Maroneck harbour, and from the inimical inhabitants, was loaded with poultry and small stock for said ships; the friends of liberty were so few, that they were not able to collect sufficient force to make any timely opposition. That the Provincial Congress of New-York have sent two or three fruitless messages to the armed Tories in Queen's County, and then passed a resolve, that they should not be indulged the privilege of the York markets, but cannot learn that they have taken any other measures to suppress them. Said Congress adjourned 'till the 1st of February. It is said by one of their members, that some time had been spent by them in debating whether they should not address Mr. Tryon, for the purpose of calling the General Assembly of that Province, to revive their old scheme of adopting the Parliamentary insult of the 20th of February last, which was rejected. And as to the conduct of the men-of-war in New-York, we cannot learn any thing more than what is inserted in the publick papers, to which we beg leave to refer your Honour, and are, with great respect and esteem, your Honour's obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

AMOS MEAD, Clerk.

TO THE HONOURABLE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, CONVENED AT NEW-HAVEN, ON THE 14TH OF DECEMBER, 1775.

Whereas, Captain Samuel Forbs and the subscriber were appointed by your Honours, at your Sessions in October last, a Committee to examine and explore a Lead Mine at New-Canaan, in the Province of New-York, and to report, &c.

The said subscriber asks leave to report, that, on the 7th of November last, on my journey to said New-Canaan, I expected said Captain Forbs to join me, but he being ill and unable to assist in said business, advised me to proceed; with which advice I complied, and repaired to said New-Canaan, where I found said mine, the vein of ore in which appears about fifty or sixty rods in length, lying north and south, in a ledge of rocks, or lime-stone mixed with white flint; at the south end of which the ground falls about twenty-six feet; below which the water cannot be drawn off by a level; which vein I found had been opened about one rod in length, and about three or four feet deep, where I employed a skilful miner to blast the rock, but found no continued or adherent vein, but found the ore in bodies, in different shapes, about three or four inches diameter, lying about three or four feet distant; the said miner also opened the vein in several places, where it had not before been tried, and it appeared to be in the same manner. I, also, smelted eight ounces of said ore, and found, when it was well refined, it weighed five ounces, and was very malleable and good. All which is submitted by your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH HOPKINS.

N. B. The mine aforesaid lies in a tract of land called the King's District, where the fee has never been granted or patented to any person, and the inhabitants claim to hold by possession only; and I employed the miner aforementioned, with others, to labour in said nine seven days, about half of which time was spent in preparing to open the vein, and by the other half of the labour was raised one hundred weight of ore. Yours as above, J. H.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Cambridge, January 6, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 1st instant, and return you my thanks for the blankets, and your promise of having more procured, as they are much wanted. I did not see Mr. Earl, who brought them, nor the account, or the money should have been transmitted you by his return. You will please to draw on the Quartermaster-General, and it shall be immediately paid. I have seen General Lee since his expedition, and hope that Rhode-Island will derive some advantage from it. I am told that Captain Wallace's ships have been supplied, for some time, with provisions by the town of Newport, on certain conditions, stipulated between him and the Committee. When this treaty first obtained, perhaps it was right—there then might have been some hopes of an accommodation taking place; but now, when every prospect of it seems to be cut off by His Majesty's late speech; when the Throne, from which we had supplicated redress, breathes forth vengeance and indignation, and a firm determination to remain unalterable in its purposes, and to prosecute the system and plan of ruin formed by the Ministry against us, should not an end be put to it, and every possible method be fallen upon to prevent their getting necessaries of any kind? We need not expect to conquer our enemies by good offices, and I know not what pernicious consequences may result from a precedent of this sort. Other places, circumstanced as Newport is, may follow the example, and, by that means, their whole fleet and army will be furnished with what it highly concerns us to keep them from; this, however, with all deference, I leave to your consideration.

I received a letter from Governour Trumbull, of the 1st instant, by which I am informed, that the Connecticut Assembly are very unanimous in the common cause; and, among others, have passed an act for raising and equipping a fourth of their Militia, to be immediately selected by voluntary enlistments, with such other able, effective men, as are not included in their militia-rolls, who inclined to enlist, to act as Minute-Men, for their own, or the defence of any of the United Colonies, and this under proper encouragements. Another act, for restraining and punishing persons inimical to us, and directing proceedings therein; no person to supply the Ministerial army or navy, to give them intelligence, to enlist, or procure others to enlist, in their service, to pilot their vessels, or in any way assist them, under pain of forfeiting his estate, and an imprisonment not exceeding three years; none to write, speak, or act against the proceedings of Congress, or their acts of Assembly, under penalty of being disarmed, and disqualified from holding any office, and be further punished by imprisonment. For seizing and confiscating, for the use of the Colony, the estates of those who put or continue to shelter themselves under the protection of the Ministerial fleet or army, or assist in carrying on their measures against us. A resolve to provide two armed vessels, of sixteen and fourteen guns, with a spy schooner of four, and six row-galleys. An act exempting the polls of soldiers from taxes, for the last and ensuing campaign. Another for encouraging the making of saltpetre and gunpowder; a considerable quantity of both, Mr. Trumbull hopes to make early in the Spring. He says, the furnace at Middletown is smelting lead, and likely to turn out twenty or thirty tons, and that ore is plenty. They have, also, passed an act, empowering the Commander-in-chief of the Continental Army, or officers commanding a detachment or out-posts, to administer an oath, and swear any person or persons to the truth of any matters concerning, and relative to, the publick service. The situation of our affairs seems to call for regulations like these, and I should think the other Colonies ought to adopt similar ones, or such of them as they have not already made. Vigorous measures, and such as, at another time, would appear extraordinary, are now become absolutely necessary for preserving our country against the strides of tyranny making against us. Governour Trumbull, in his list, has not mentioned an act for impressing carriages, and agreeable to the recommendation of Congress; this I hope they have not forgot. It is highly necessary that such an authority should be given, under proper restrictions, or we shall be greatly embarrassed, whenever the Army, or any detachment from it, should find it necessary to march from hence.

I am, sir, with very great esteem, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Cooke.

P. S. I have received certain intelligence of the fitting out of a fleet at Boston, of the embarkation of some troops, and that all the ships that were in Nantasket Road are gone, except two men-of-war; their destination is not known, but I am persuaded it is for the southward; I think for Long-Island or New-York.

COMMISSION TO WILLIAM MORONY.

By His Excellency General WASHINGTON, Esq., Commander-in-chief of the Army of the UNITED COLONIES of NORTH-AMERICA.

To Mr. WILLIAM MORONY:

By virtue of the powers and authorities to me granted by the honourable Continental Congress, I do hereby constitute and appoint you Provost Marshal in said Army, in the service of the United Colonies of North-America; to have, hold, exercise, and enjoy, the said office of Provost Marshal, and to perform and execute all matters and things which to your said office doth, or may of right, belong or appertain, until further order shall be given herein, by the honourable Continental Congress, myself, or any future Commander-in-chief of said Army; willing and commanding all officers, soldiers, and persons whatsoever, any way concerned, to be obedient and assisting to you in the due execution of this commission.

Given under my hand and seal, at Cambridge, January sixth, Anno Domini one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

By His Excellency's command.

Instructions for Mr. WILLIAM MORONY, Provost Marshal of the Army of the UNITED COLONIES, under the immediate command of His Excellency General WASHINGTON.

All prisoners guilty of capital crimes, and crimes not triable by a Regimental Court-Martial, are to be sent to the Provost.

The Provost is not to receive any prisoner, without a crime specified in writing, and signed by the person committing him.

No prisoner is to be suffered to be absent from his confinement, until released by proper authority.

The Provost Marshal is to provide a suitable person, when necessary, to execute the sentences of General Court-Martials, approved of, and directed to be enforced, by the Commander-in-chief.

When any men are sent to the Provost, the Provost Marshal is to send a report of them immediately to the regiment they belong to; and no man is to be received by the Provost, except his crime is sent with him.

The Provost is to make a return, every morning, by ten o'clock, to the Adjutant-General, of the number of prisoners under guard, specifying the regiment they belong to, their crimes, by whom, and how long confined.

The Provost is to take due care that all orders from the Judge Advocate, respecting the trials of prisoners, be punctually executed; and is to post proper sentries, from his guard, at such times and in such places, as a General Court-Martial may sit.

The Provost is frequently to take a party from his guard, and patrol the avenues and environs of the camp; is to take up and confine all disorderly and suspicious persons; to suppress riots and disturbances; and to inform the Quartermaster-General of all persons who keep unwarranted and destructive dram-shops, and all other pernicious and camp nuisances.

The Provost is to receive and obey all such orders and instructions as may, at any time, be given him by his Excellency the Commander-in-chief, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, and the Judge Advocate, of the Army of the United Colonies.

Given at Head-Quarters, at Cambridge, this 12th day of January, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

COLONEL LONG TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONGRESS.

Portsmouth, January 6, 1776.

SIR: Mr. McClure tells me there was some difficulty respecting the rolls, which prevented the moneys being paid. I sincerely wish every obstacle may be removed, and their wages may immediately come down, for I heartily wish to see the time for the troops to get off. Mr. Ayres, whom you have appointed Wagon-Master, says, he cannot make it convenient to undertake for more than Captain Dearing's, Wiggins's, and Breuster's companies, as the others live far out of his way, and, consequently, his expenses, in making preparations, will be large. I think, in order to save all that expense, those several Captains had better provide carriages for themselves and men, as they will be able to determine the hour, perhaps, they will go from their rendezvous. There is one Mr. Beal, of this town, an officer of Colonel Poor's regiment, who is inlisting men from out of the companies down here, to serve during the war. There is a resolve of Congress, dated, I think, the 16th September last, which, no doubt, you have, which he thinks authorizes him. The prisoners who are set at liberty by virtue of your vote, are without money or friends, wandering about within their limits, reflecting on us, for making no provision for them. I have been obliged to let some of them sleep in the barracks, otherwise they would, in all probability, have perished this inclement season. I had forgot to mention that Mr. Beal has applied to me for a barrack and other necessities, for his men. I would, likewise, inform you, that I have paid all the carpenters who wrought on the new barracks, and on the bridge, and have purchased near a sloop load of wood, at four dollars per cord, for the forts and troops, which leaves, in my hands, about one hundred pounds, of the sum of two hundred and thirty-five pounds received of Colonel Langdon; and must add, there is not one stick of wood now, either at the barracks or forts, excepting a small matter at Captain Salter's. I am, this day, going again to find where I can purchase any, for they cannot do without it. I must entreat your attention to the poor prisoners, who are continually at my house, in droves, begging for provision to be made. The staff-roll will be handed to you by Mr. McClure.

Have nothing further to add, but am, sir, your most obedient servant,

PIERCE LONG.

P. S. After I have purchased some more wood, I will call on you, and settle the above account.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO COLONEL WYNKOOP.

Albany, January 7, 1776.

SIR: The expense of carrying on the women and children by land, will be too heavy; you will, therefore, detain them with you, more especially as it is not certain whether their husbands are in Connecticut or Pennsylvania. Mrs. Bliss, the widow of the sergeant that was killed on board the Gaspée, you will forward to her parents; and such others may go, as choose to hire their own sleds.

All the men of the St. John's garrison to go or stay, as the officers commanding the different corps they belong to, shall direct.

If any officer of the other troops taken at Montreal, chooses to remain with the men, he has my leave.

General Montgomery is well before Quebeck. I have his letters of the 18th ultimo; he was in hopes soon to be in possession.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Colonel Wynkoop.

JAMES GRAY TO SIR JOHN JOHNSON.

Hermitage, January 7, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer, Lewis Grant, a good soldier, wants a gun, and I wish you had a thousand such men. Captain Barrington's arrival hinders my writing upon particulars. He mentioned some news. My good sir, when you get any news, honour me with your remarks upon them. I beg my humble respects to the ladies, and have the honour to be, dear sir,

Your most obedient, humble servant, JAMES GRAY.

To Sir John Johnson.

P. S. Sir John, send me three or four sheets of paper.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 7, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 1st instant I received, and heartily thank you for your kind salutations. I was happy to hear of the great unanimity in your Assembly, and of the several salutary laws they passed, which show them to be well attached to the common cause, and to have taken the proper measures for supporting it.

Enclosed you have the amount of the lead from Crown-Point, agreeable to your request. The account of the smelting furnace, and your expectations to make a considerable quantity of saltpetre and powder, pleases me much. I wish your most sanguine endeavours may be more than answered.

As to gun-locks, it is not in my power to furnish any; the information you had was groundless, for there were no spare ones in the ordnance stores which fell into our hands. None were ever found, that I have heard of, nor is there mention of them in the invoice.

Having undoubted intelligence of the fitting out a fleet at Boston, and of the embarkation of troops from thence, which, from the season of the year, and other circumstances, must be destined for some expedition south of this; and having such information as I can depend upon, that the inhabitants of Long-Island, in the Colony of New-York, or a great part of them, are inimical to the rights and liberties of America, and, from their conduct and professions, have discovered an apparent inclination to assist in subjugating their fellow-citizens to Ministerial tyranny, there is the greatest reason to believe, that this armament, if not immediately designed against the city of New-York, is, nevertheless, intended for Long-Island; and, as it is of the utmost importance to prevent the enemy from possessing themselves of the city of New-York and the North River, which would give them the command of the country and the communication with Canada, I shall despatch Major General Lee, with orders to repair thither, with such volunteers as are willing to join, and can be expeditiously raised, (having no troops to spare from hence,) to put the city, and fortifications on the North River, in the best posture of defence the season and circumstances will admit of, and for disarming all persons, upon Long-Island and elsewhere, whose conduct and declarations have rendered them justly suspected of designs unfriendly to the views of Congress. I have directed him to call upon the commanding officer of the Jersey troops for such assistance as he can afford; and, being informed by Captain Sears and Mr. Woodward, (who will deliver you this, and whom General Lee will follow in a day or two,) that he apprehends one thousand or fifteen hundred volunteers may be readily raised in your Government, in the towns through which Mr. Lee will pass, I beg the favour of you to interpose your good offices and interest in the matter, to encourage men to go on this important service, and as expeditiously as possible, for counteracting any designs our enemies may have against us in that quarter; every necessary expense attending their march and stay, will be borne by the publick. I just received advice from Chelsea, about nine or ten miles from this, that several ships have sailed from Nantasket Road, that were lying there.

I shall write to the honourable the Convention of New-York, by General Lee, and direct his instructions to be laid before them, praying their assistance to facilitate the purposes of his going.

Boxes of lead, 19½, at $2 70 each.

I am, sir, with much esteem, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOHN ADAMS.

Cambridge, January 7, 1776.

SIR: You will excuse me for reminding you of our conversation the other evening, when I informed you that General Lee's departure for New-York is advisable upon the plan of his letter, and, under the circumstances I then mentioned, ought not to be delayed. In giving me your opinion of this matter, I have no doubt of your taking a comprehensive view of it; that is, you will not only consider the propriety of the measure, but of the execution; and whether such a step, though right in itself, may not be looked upon as beyond my line.

If it could be made convenient and agreeable to you to dine with me to day, I shall be very glad of your company, and we can then talk the matter over at large. Please to forward General Lee's letter to me. I am, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, January 7, 1776.

Ordered him to examine into the condition of Captain Coit's schooner. If fit to be continued in service, to look out for some person qualified to take command of her, appoint officers, and raise men for that purpose. If unfit, and that a clever set of officers and men can be got, also a schooner remarkable for sailing, to remove the guns, ammunition, &c., from on board the one into the other, &c., &c.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 8, 1776.

SIR: By the post of this day, I have received your letter of the 3d, with a copy of the minutes of Congress relative to the New-Jersey troops, &c., from the 8th of December to the 2d instant, inclusive. I have great satisfaction in knowing the sense of the Congress on the several matters therein, and they may be assured, that I shall pay the highest attention and regard to it. The two battalions of this Province, notwithstanding my utmost diligence, are still very deficient in arms, blankets, and almost every necessary, as will appear by the returns, which I shall transmit to you by Thursday next, when I expect to have the returns from all the companies in the First Battalion. I hope this will in some measure be remedied by the Committee of Safety of this Province, who are to meet to-morrow, at Princeton, for the first time since the adjournment of the Provincial Convention, in October last.

I hope you will this evening receive the despatches I sent you by Captain Morris. I hear Cortlandt Skinner, Esq., went off yesterday to the Asia. He has been too quick for me, for I sent off two very alert officers yesterday evening, to assist Lieutenant-Colonel Winds to watch their motions, and to stop such as should attempt to go off. Having some reasons to suspect that Governour Franklin was about moving, he has obtained his promise not to leave the Province, and has planted guards in such a manner as to prevent it.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock, &c.

WESTCHESTER (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

White-Plains, January 8, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of Westchester County, having seen in the publick prints, that many of the inhabitants of Queen's County are thrown out of the protection of the Provincial Congress, and having been informed that they are arming in their defence, are greatly alarmed at their conduct, and beg leave to assure your honourable House, that the friends of liberty in this County are willing, strenuously, to exert themselves to reduce the enemies to their country, before they are supported by the regular troops, if it shall be thought most advisable by the Committee of Safety, or the Provincial or Continental Congresses.

We are, sir, your most humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM MILLER, Deputy Chairman.

To Mr. Pierre Van Cortlandt, President of the Committee of Safety.

MONSIEUR PELISSIER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Forges St. Maurice, 8 Janvier, 1776.

MONSIEUR: En Decembre dernier, le Général Montgomery m'ayant informé du desir qu'il auroit de convoquer une Assemblée en cette Colonie, afin de former des Délégués pour envoyer au Congrès Continental, m'engagea d'employer mes soins pour y parvenir ; mais n'ayant pas trouvé la chose praticable alors, je me rendis au camp de ce Général, afin de conférer avec lui sur les moyens qu'il y auroit à prendre pour en venir à bout.

Par les informations qu'il avoit eues, et suivant les connaissances que j'avois prises, nous fûmes d'avis que cette convocation ne pourroit avoir lieu, qu'après la prise de Quebeck, attendu que les Royalistes, dont le nombre est considérable dans les villes de Montreal et Trois-Rivières, ne cesseroient d'intimider le peuple sur les événements futurs, et de lui faire un portrait odieux et méprisant de la confédération de l'Amérique.

Ce brave Général, impatient de seconder les intentions du Congrès, voulut aplanir les difficultés et lever tous les obstacles par un coup d'éclat, en donnant l'assaut à la ville de Quebeck ; mais vous savez qu'il n'y réussit pas, et qu'il eut le malheur d'y finir ses jours. Il a été généralement regretté de tous ceux qui sont persuadés que des sentiments nobles et généreux l'avoient seuls déterminés à soutenir les intérêts légitimes de ses compatriotes.

Ce contretemps n'a du tout point altéré ici les bonnes dispositions des Amis de l'Amérique, quoiqu'en très petit nombre. Mais il a rendu les Royalistes plus audacieux que jamais, surtout ceux qui sont gagés par le gouvernement ; ils crient déjà Victoire ; cependant je me flatte qu'ils se trompent grossièrement, car quand on voudra attaquer Quebeck, suivant les règles de l'art, du côté de la porte du palais, aucune saison ne pourra empêcher que cette ville ne soit prise en peu de jours.

Quatre canons divisés en deux batteries derrière un mur simple servant de parapet, et le dit mur prolongé sur la même ligne jusqu'à cinquante toises ou environ garnis de creneaux pour la mousqueterie, composent toute la défense de cette partie.

Le local est tel que deux petites batteries que l'on peut établir facilement vingt à trente toises de distance pour battre ou en écharpe, ou de revers, ou en flanc, peuvent ruiner en peu de tems cette foible artillerie. Comme la porte de la ville dans cet endroit est simple ainsi que son portail, il ne seroit pas bien difficile d'y faire brèche, puisqu'une fois les quatre canons démontés, il n'auroit plus qu'à se garantir de la mousqueterie des creneaux. Il est vrai que derrière ces creneaux s'élève un corps de caserne dans l'intérieur, du quel on pourroit fusiller. Mais la mousqueterie ne tient pas devant des batteries couvertes et disposées pour s'en garantir.

La majeure partie du restant de la place étant bordé d'un cap presque inaccessible et tout roc, on ne pourroit y pratiquer aucune brèche. Reste la hauteur d'Abraham, où l'art a établi des fortifications irrégulières, et dont les chemins couverts ne sont pas finis ; cependant, comme elles forment une ligne presque droite depuis la côte d'Abraham jusqu'à celle du fleuve St. Laurent, il résulte de cette position que le feu des courtines et des faces de bastions est considérable, et ne peut être éteint que par une artillerie prodigieuse ; outre cela le terrain exige que les parapets des tranchées y soient formées avec des sacs à terre, au lieu que du côté de la porte du palais, il n'y a que deux batteries que l'on peut attaquer, comme j'ai déjà dit, en écharpe de revers ou en flanc, et qui par ce moyen n'ont point de défense.

J'imagine que si le Congrès daigne encore nous continuer ses secours généreux, et qu'un plan méthodique soit mis à l'exécution, Quebeck ne tiendra pas longtemps.

Alors les Royalistes seront confondus, le juste prévaut sur l'injuste, les Canadiens timides seront enhardis, et on pourra faire des préparatifs contre les forces Parlementaires qui pourroient survenir cette année à dessein d'exécuter des résolutions prises depuis plusieurs années pour réduire dans un état de servitude tous les habitants du continent de l'Amérique Septentrionale.

J'observe, à cet égard, que lorsque le Ministère a voulu abolir les privilèges des habitants de la Baye de Massachusetts, il a au moins cherché à sauver les apparences en leur faisant une mauvaise querelle par une imposition sur le thé. Quant aux Canadiens, on a cru pouvoir leur ôter les leurs sans tant de cérémonies, et même leur persuader que c'étoit pour leur bien, et qu'ils devoient en avoir une éternelle reconnaissance. Je vous avouerai franchement, qu'il faut avoir une triste opinion d'un peuple pour en agir ainsi ; c'est le comble de l'humiliation, mais on s'est trompé.

Lorsqu'en 1765, le Général Murray, sous le prétexte spécieux de former des représentans, tous Canadiens, voulut rétablir le gouvernement sur le même pied qu'il étoit sous la domination Française, il fut aisé de conclure que c'étoit un plan du Ministère, et que les promesses garanties par la proclamation du Roy, en Octobre, 1763, n'auroient point lieu. Le Général Murray n'ayant pu mettre le dit plan à l'exécution, il fut relevé. Le Ministère lui substitua le Général Carleton, qui, dans les mêmes vues, sonda le cœur des Canadiens, et ne négligea rien pour leur persuader que leurs anciennes lois, coutumes, et usages étoient ce qui pouvoient leur convenir le mieux ; mais ayant trouvé l'opposition chez ceux qui savent préférer la liberté au despotisme, il ne donna plus sa confiance qu'aux officiers Canadiens et au clergé. Il trouva en eux tout ce qu'il lui falloit ; c'est-à-dire, des courtisans qui, flattés de l'espérance de voir renaître un jour les temps où ils pouvoient dominer sur le peuple, ils le suivirent suivant ses desirs, et en conséquence adressèrent au Roi une requête, au nom de tous les habitants de la Province de Quebeck, pour se soustraire à la sage constitution Britannique ; c'est-à-dire, pour demander fers pour leurs concitoyens.

Il ne faut pas croire que les Canadiens en général se soient avilis jusqu'à ce point ; quelques adulateurs et quelques ignorans fanatiques des anciennes coutumes signèrent cette honteuse requête sans y avoir été autorisés que par eux-mêmes, au nombre de 65.

C'est d'après cette requête de commande que le Ministère qui avoit déjà ses vues, a saisi avec empressement l'occasion d'établir en ce pays le pouvoir arbitraire, au moyen du Bill de Quebeck. Tous les honnêtes gens de cette Province s'y seroient vus assujettis, si les Colonies voisines n'eussent daigné avoir pitié de leur malheureux sort, et ne leur eussent prêté leur appui pour secouer ce joug odieux. On ose croire que la reconnaissance de cette Province à l'égard de ses voisines sera éternelle : cependant on ne peut, et on ne doit pas cacher que cette bonne disposition et ses bons sentimens pourroient être corrompus dans quelques membres, si on n'avoit pas la précaution de purger la Colonie des flatteurs qui sont aux gages du Gouvernement.

On doit regarder comme certain, que si on les y laisse subsister, ils y formeront une division qui pourroit devenir préjudiciable à toutes les Provinces Unies. Ils y travaillent même déjà en insinuant au peuple qu'au printemps prochain il viendra ici une armée nombreuse de l'ancienne Angleterre, et que s'étant rendu coupable de rébellion, il ne leur restera pour ressource que l'aller joindre l'armée pour obtenir leur pardon, sans quoi ils seront brûlés, pillés, et la majeure partie punis de mort.

Tels sont les propos que l'on tient journellement à un peuple naturellement trop crédule. Si on ne coupe pas au plutôt le mal par la racine, il pourroit devenir incurable ; car des impressions de cette nature deviennent avec le temps, comme des préjugés de l'enfance, très difficiles à détruire : en outre, par les épithètes outrageantes et injurieuses, dont ils se servent en parlant de nos bons voisins qui nous ont secourus, ils tâchent de les rendre méprisables ainsi que la liberté aux yeux du peuple Canadien. Toutes ces menées ne peuvent que produire un mauvais effet, et elles sont d'autant plus dangereuses et sinueuses que des précautions que l'on prendra à leur égard dépendra beaucoup la conservation de la Province.

Si, comme il est à présumer, il n'y a point d'arrangement entre les Colonies et l'ancienne Angleterre d'ici au printemps prochain, il pourroit peut-être arriver qu'elle enverroit des forces dans le fleuve St. Laurent pour tâcher de pénétrer dans les autres Colonies en ramenant les Canadiens sous le joug, soit par menaces, soit par promesses. Il paroîtroit que pour rendre infructueuse une pareille expédition, il y auroit deux moyens principaux qui à ce que je crois méritent une attention particulière. Le premier seroit de maintenir les Canadiens, et le second d'empêcher les flottes de passer au-dessus de Quebeck.

Les circonstances présentes pour le maintien des Canadiens paroissent avoir trois points de vue pour objet :

1. Qu'il soit pris des précautions convenables à l'égard des personnes gagées par le Gouvernement, des autres Royalistes, et surtout des militaires.

2. Quoiqu'il soit naturel que les Canadiens payent leur quote part des frais de la guerre, j'imagine qu'il conviendrait de retarder ce prélèvement, attendu que ce peuple, n'ayant jamais payé aucun impôt que par la voie des droits d'entrée sur les importations, et de sortie sur les exportations, il se figurerait qu'il a été abusé, et qu'il n'a été conquis par ses voisins que pour être taxé et payer tous les frais de la guerre présente, ainsi que les Royalistes le lui font entendre.

3. Pour ne point les alarmer, il faudroit leur laisser leurs évêques, leurs prêtres, et le libre exercice de leur religion. Il est vrai que quelque-uns de leurs curés ont fait des neuvaines et prières publiques à l'Être Suprême pour qu'il daigna exterminer les troupes que nos bons voisins ont bien voulu envoyer à notre secours; mais la politique exige dans ces circonstances qu'ils soient maintenus, et non réduits.

Quant aux mesures à prendre pour empêcher une flotte de passer au-dessus de Quebeck, il me semble que le plus expédient pour des personnes qui, jalouses de leur liberté, ne doivent pas risquer leur sort au hasard d'une bataille, seroit de la brûler.

L'endroit le plus près de la ville où une flotte puisse mouiller, est le chenal de l'Isle d'Orléans. Il est vrai qu'en 1759 les François ne réussirent pas à brûler celle de l'Amiral Sounders, quoiqu'ils eussent huit brûlots du port de 200 jusqu'à 450 tonneaux; mais il ne faut pas en être surpris. A l'instant du départ de ces brûlots, tous les capitaines qui devoient les commander reçurent un ordre positif de lever leurs ancres et de mettre le feu à leurs navires aussitôt que le commandant auroit mis le feu au sien; mais ce dernier, au lieu de lever, coupa ses câbles sur la bite, et força de voile, de sorte qu'il a été rendu à la Pointe-Lévi lorsque les autres étoient à peine à moitié chemin; cependant le commandant étant encore à deux lieues de la flotte qu'il devoit brûler, il mit le feu à son brûlot; tous les autres en firent autant en conformité de leurs ordres, mais trop tôt pour qu'ils pussent produire aucun effet; plusieurs d'entre eux s'échouèrent avant d'arriver à la flotte; et l'amiral, qui avoit eu la précaution de faire mouiller tous ses vaisseaux, et transporter le long des batures à droit et à gauche du fleuve, eut le temps d'envoyer des chaloupes pour remorquer dans le milieu de chenal, qui pour lors étoit libre, les brûlots qui ne s'étoient pas échoués.

On peut dire que si cette expédition n'eut pas le succès que l'on devoit en attendre, elle répondit on ne peut pas mieux aux vues de ceux qui avoient intérêt qu'elle ne réussît pas. Si le contraire fut arrivé, les généraux n'eussent pas pu se flatter d'acquiescer de la gloire durant le cours de cette campagne. On sait que l'événement justifia mal leur espoir. Il ne seroit de même avec des Généraux qui ne sacrifieroient pas les intérêts publics à leur ambition particulière.

Il me paroît qu'il ne seroit peut-être pas impossible de se débarrasser d'une flotte, et même d'une escadre, dans un fleuve comme celui de la Province de Quebeck. Les marées peuvent favoriser ces sortes de manœuvres, et la Province fournit en abondance des matériaux convenables pour construire des brûlots de deux espèces qui ne pourroient être coulés bas facilement par l'artillerie d'un vaisseau de guerre; une des deux espèces pourroient lancer son feu de loin, et l'autre par communication.

Il est bien décidé qu'un corps ne flotte dans un fluide que parcequ'il pese moins que la volume de ce même fluide qu'il déplace. D'après ce principe incontestable, il ne s'agit que de remplir la cale d'un bâtiment d'une matière dont le poids, ajoutée à celui des munitions de guerre, de bouches, équipage, &c., pese moins que le volume d'eau qu'il pourra déplacer.

Le cèdre est fort abondant en ce pays, et est très convenable en pareil cas, parceque son poids spécifique est moindre que celui de l'eau. Un pied cube de ce bois, quoique vert, peut supporter sur la surface de l'eau un poids de trente livres, et ne peut absolument caler qu'avec trente-six livres; mais pour éviter toute difficulté imprévue, je suppose qu'il n'en porte que vingt-cinq livres. Dès-lors un bâtiment large, à fond plat de 200 tonneaux de trente pieds cube chaque, construit avec du cèdre, et dont la cale en sera remplie, pourra, quoique plein d'eau, porter 150,000 livres, qui font 75 tonneaux; et flotter facilement, je suppose que la partie du bâtiment qui sera dans l'eau fera un effort suffisant pour supporter celle qui en sera dehors.

D'après ce calcul, il est aisé de donner à une pareille barque un équipement qui n'excede point ce poids, ayant attention de se réserver au centre pour les munitions, un coffre étanche depuis le fond de cale jusqu'aux baux.

Le volume de ce coffre peut, par son déplacement de l'eau, donner la facilité de mettre du lest, afin de maintenir l'équilibre; le poids d'un pied cube d'eau douce étant 70 lbs., il ne s'agit que de donner au coffre une grandeur relative au poids du lest nécessaire au bâtiment que l'on voudra construire.

Mais au lieu de l'armer avec des canons, si l'on pouvoit lui substituer des obus pour tirer horizontalement des bombettes de huit pouces, et surtout des carcasses rondes en forme d'herisson, on pourroit espérer de brûler les vaisseaux ennemis, pourvu que l'on garantisse du feu les sabords en leur donnant une forme convenable, et les garnissant avec de la taule, il faudroit que les pointes des herissons fussent grillées, et que les matières combustibles qui les envelopperoient pussent flechir assez, afin qu'arrivant sur un vaisseau, elles pussent entrer dans les bordages jusqu'à un pouce et demi ou environ. Un petit boulet d'où s'enlèveroit en différents sens des pointes de fers grillées garnies dans les intervalles, et même jusqu'au dessus de leurs surfaces, pointues avec de l'étaupe huilée, de la toile goudronnée, et autres matières combustibles, que l'on a coutume d'employer dans les carcasses, composeroit cette machine destructive.

Il ne seroit peut-être pas impossible de bastinguer un tel bâtiment de façon à le mettre à l'abri du boulet, et de le garantir de l'abordage, en garnissant son ribord de pointes de fers, les unes horizontales et les autres verticales, en leur donnant deux pieds extérieurement deux tonneaux de fer suffiroient. La précaution de ne placer des aubans qu'intérieurement (ce qui peut se faire en égard à sa largeur) et de ne point lui donner de beaupré conviendrait en pareil cas. On sait bien qu'un bâtiment qui partirait de Quebeck avec un vent fait de sud-ouest et marée baissante qui iroit la nuit mouiller en avant d'un vaisseau de guerre et qui fileroit son cable jusqu'à ce qu'il n'en fut qu'à environ cinquante brasses, ne sauroit être abordé pour ce vaisseau, le vent et le courant étant deux obstacles invincibles; mais ces sont les chaloupes que l'on ne manqueroit pas de trouver mouillées bien au-dessus des vaisseaux qui pourroient être à craindre, c'est pourquoi il faut des moyens pour sauver le bâtiment en question de l'abordage.

Si une machine flottante construite sur ces principes ne pouvoit être coulée bas ni abordée, et qui lançant son feu à une moyenne distance, pourroit insulter un vaisseau de guerre, le brûler, on au moins l'obliger de lever, auroit, je crois, quelque avantage sur un bâtiment ordinaire. Il est vrai qu'il ne seroit propre que sur une rivière, mais c'est tout ce qu'on en attend.

Huit bâtiments de cette espèce de 150 tonneaux chaque, à un mâât seulement montée chacun de six ou huit obus, couteroient moins en total qu'un seul vaisseau de soixante canons, et rendroient peut-être plus de service; quant à l'autre espèce de brûlot destiné à mettre le feu par communication, on pourroit les faire sur les mêmes principes, mais beaucoup plus petits.

Des gabarres à fond plat de vingt à trente tonneaux pontier garnies de cèdre dans le câle, et ayant leurs artifices sur le pont suffiroient.

Deux raisons qui m'ont parues très importantes m'ont fait imaginer la nécessité des brûlots: la première c'est qu'avec des nouvelles troupes, il pourroit y avoir quelques difficultés à disputer le terrain à des vieux corps réglés; et la deuxième c'est que j'oserois dire, par expérience, que l'on doit poser pour axiome que des batteries quelques fortes qu'elles puissent être ne sauroient empêcher une flotte de passer durant la nuit devant Quebeck, remonter le fleuve, et laisser par la derrière elle tous les préparatifs qu'on auroit pu faire par terre.

Telles sont, Monsieur, les idées que j'ai formé sur l'attaque de Quebeck, et une partie des défenses de la Colonie, et que je soumis à votre examen. Je suis bien convaincu que ceux qui, comme vous, s'intéressent essentiellement à la prospérité de l'Amérique sauront prendre tous les arrangements convenables dans les circonstances présentes.

Si j'ai pris la liberté de vous communiquer mes sentiments à cet égard, c'est que persuadé, comme je suis, de la justice de la cause de l'Amérique, personne ne desire plus que moi de la voir réussir dans sa louable entreprise.

Je m'estimerois très heureux, si mes réflexions pouvoient donner lieu à quelques moyens qui pourroient tourner à son avantage.

J'ai l'honneur d'être, avec une parfaite considération, Monsieur, votre très humble et très obéissant serviteur,

PELLISSIER,

Directeur des Forges St. Maurice, près des Trois Rivières.

Janvier 28, 1776.

MONSIEUR: Je suis actuellement à Montréal, où j'ai eu lieu de faire des observations dont j'ai cru devoir vous informer. J'y ai trouvé le nombre des Royalistes beaucoup plus considérables que je ne pensois. Si on ne met pas un frein à leurs propos, il est à craindre qu'ils ne changent la bonne disposition des habitants des campagnes. Je crois que si le rangfort destiné pour le Canada étoit envoyé subitement, et logé dans les campagnes, cela arrêteroit le progrès des mauvais discours. Il est encore tems de le faire, et les habitants ne le trouveront pas mal-à-propos.

Quoique le siège de Quebeck ne soit pas difficile, il pourroit cependant arriver qu'en l'attaquant du côté du Palais, les assiégés se fortifieroient dans l'intérieur de la ville. En égard à l'avantage qu'ils ont de la hauteur de cette partie, c'est pourquoi il seroit nécessaire d'avoir des canons de vingt-quatre, ou au moins de dix-huit, pour suffire dans le cas où l'on seroit obligé d'assiéger par le bastion St. Jean, qui est le faible des fortifications qui sont sur la hauteur d'Abraham. Mais je ne peux pas m'empêcher de vous prier d'observer qu'il faut absolument des ingénieurs pour la conduite des détails du siège, et que sans cette précaution ce sera en vain qu'on y emploiera une quantité considérable de troupes et des munitions de guerre.

Si mes informations peuvent vous être utiles, vous pouvez disposer librement de celui qui a l'honneur d'être, avec une parfaite considération, Monsieur, votre très humble et très obéissant serviteur,

PELLISSIER.

TRANSLATION OF MONSIEUR PELLISSIER'S LETTER.

Forges of St. Maurice, January 8, 1776.

SIR: In December last, General Montgomery acquainted me of his intention of calling an Assembly in this Colony, to the end that Deputies might be chosen to join the Continental Congress. He engaged me to use my endeavours to accomplish this affair, but not finding it then practicable, I went to the camp to confer with him on the proper measures to be taken hereafter for that purpose.

From the informations he had received, and those I had obtained, we were both of opinion that this Convention ought not to be attempted till after the reduction of Quebeck, as the Royalists, who were numerous in the towns of Montreal and Three-Rivers, were continually intimidating the people with supposed consequences, and giving them odious and contemptible ideas of the American Confederation.

This brave General, impatient to forward the designs of the Congress, resolved to remove all difficulties and obstacles, by a bold stroke, in assaulting the City of Quebeck. He did not succeed, and had the misfortune there to finish his days. He fell much regretted by all those who were persuaded that noble and generous motives alone, had determined him to engage in the service of his country.

This repulse has, in no wise, altered the good dispositions of the friends of America here, though they are a very small number, but it has made the Royalists more audacious than ever, particularly those who are in the pay of the Government. They already cry victory; but, I flatter myself, they are grossly mistaken, for, if Quebeck is attacked according to the rules of art, on the side of the Palace-Gate, no season, in my opinion, can prevent the city's being taken in a few days.

* * * * *

I imagine, that, if the Congress continues to afford us its generous assistance, and the above methodical plan is put in execution, that city must soon be taken. The Royalists will then be confounded, the just will prevail over the unjust, and the timid Canadians will be encouraged and emboldened to join in preparations for opposing the Parliamentary forces which may arrive this year, with a design to execute the resolutions taken long since, to reduce to a state of servitude all the inhabitants of North-America.

I cannot but observe, upon this head, that were the Ministry determined to abolish the privileges of Massachusetts-Bay, they endeavoured to save appearances, at least, by creating a cause of quarrel, in imposing a duty upon tea; but they fancied they might enslave the Canadians without so much ceremony; they even presumed they could persuade us it was for our good, and that we owed them, for so much kindness, everlasting gratitude. I own they must have had a wretched opinion of us, to think of thus treating us. It was the height of contempt, but they were mistaken.

When, in 1765, General Murray, under the specious pretence of forming an Assembly of Representatives, who should all be Canadians, intended to re-establish the Government on the same footing it had been under France, it was easy to conclude it a plan of the Ministry, and that the promises made us, and which had been confirmed by the King's Proclamation in 1763, were no longer to be considered as binding. General Murray, not being able to carry this plan into execution, was removed. Ministry substituted General Carleton, who, in the same views, sounded the sentiments of the Canadians, and omitted nothing to persuade them that their ancient laws, customs, and usages, would be most suitable and convenient for them; but having met with opposition among those who knew the difference between liberty and despotism, he no longer communicated with, or took into his confidence, any but some Canadian officers and the clergy. In them he found all he wanted; that is to say, courtiers, who, pleased with the hope of seeing a return of the times in which they might domineer over the people, served him in every thing he desired, and, in consequence, addressed a petition to the King, in the name of all the inhabitants of the Province of Quebeck, to have the wise British Constitution withdrawn; which, in effect, was asking chains for their fellow-citizens.

It ought not to be supposed that the Canadians, in general, were so base. Some flatterers, and some ignorant people, bigoted to ancient customs, signed this shameful petition, without being authorized by any but themselves, to the number of sixty-five only.

It was upon this bespoken petition that the Ministry, who had their views in obtaining it, seized with eagerness the opportunity of establishing arbitrary power in this country, by the Quebeck Act. All the good people of this Province would have found themselves subjected to it, if the neighbouring Colonies had not pitied their unhappy fate, and lent their assistance to throw off the odious yoke; for which we ought to be forever grateful. But it cannot, and ought not to be concealed, that this good disposition, and these good sentiments, may be corrupted in some, if the precaution is not taken of purging the Colony of all those flatterers who receive pay from the Government. It may be considered as certain, that if they are suffered to remain here, they will work a division that may be prejudicial to all the United Colonies. They are already doing it, by insinuating to the people that a large army will be here next Spring from Old England, and that, being guilty of rebellion, they will have no other resource than joining that army to obtain their pardon, without which, their houses will be pillaged and burnt, and themselves punished with death. Such are the discourses daily held to a people naturally too credulous. If this evil is not soon cut up by the roots, it may become incurable; for impressions of this nature, become, in time, like the prejudices of infancy, very difficult to remove. Besides, by the abusive and contumelious epithets they make use of, in speaking of our good neighbours, who come to succour us, they endeavour to render them, together with liberty itself, contemptible in the eyes of the Canadians. These base practices cannot but produce a bad effect; and are so much the more dangerous and serious, as, upon the precautions to be taken with regard to them, depends greatly the preservation of the Province.

If, as it may be presumed, no agreement should take place between the Colonies and Britain, before the Spring, it is probable she will send a force into the river St. Lawrence, for the purpose of penetrating the other Colonies by the aid of the Canadians, brought again under her yoke through menaces or promises, it seems to me that, to render such an expedition fruitless, there are two principal means which deserve particular attention. The first would be to support and retain the Canadians; the second, to hinder the fleet coming up the river, or passing above Quebeck.

The circumstances necessary for retaining and supporting the Canadians, are:

First. That proper precautions be taken for securing the persons salaried here by Government, the other Royalists, and particularly all the military.

Second. Although it is reasonable that the Canadians should pay their proportion of the charges of the war, I imagine it would be proper to delay levying it for some time, as this people, having never been accustomed to pay any tax but by way of duties on importation and exportation, would fancy they had been deceived, and that they were concerned merely to be taxed, and made to pay all the expense of this war, as the Royalists endeavoured to persuade them.

Third. That they may not be alarmed, it is necessary to leave them in possession of their bishops, their priests, and the free exercise of their religion. It is true, that some of the curates have made publick prayers, during nine days, that God would exterminate the troops that our good neighbours have kindly sent to assist us; but prudence requires that no notice should be taken of that conduct.

As to the measures to be taken for hindering a fleet's passing above Quebeck, it seems to me that the most expeditious for persons, who, jealous of their liberty, ought not to risk too much upon the chance of a battle, would be to burn it.

If I have taken the liberty to communicate to you my sentiments thus on the attack of Quebeck and defence of the Colony, it is, because, persuaded as I am of the justice of the cause of America, no one desires more than myself to see her succeed in her most laudable enterprise.

I shall esteem myself very happy, if my reflections may occasion the use of some means that may turn to her advantage.

I have the honour to be, with perfect consideration, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

PELISSIER,

Director of the Iron Works,

Near the Three-Rivers.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

January 28, 1776.

POSTSCRIPT.—I am now at Montreal, where I have an opportunity of making some observations, which I think I ought to communicate to you.

I have found the number of Royalists much more considerable here than I imagined. If they are not bridled, it is to be feared they may change the good disposition of the country people. I believe that if the reinforcements destined for Canada arrive soon, and are quartered in the country, that may be a means of stopping the progress of bad discourses. There is yet time to do it, and the people will not dislike it.

STONINGTON (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Stonington, January 8, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of Correspondence and Safety in this place, to whose consideration your Excellency, by letter dated the 27th of November last, was pleased to refer the affair of one Denny, and his captured vessel and cargo, having, on the 1st of December, transmitted to you their proceedings relative thereto, beg leave now to report, further, that, (having notified all persons concerned,) after a full hearing, and careful examination and inquiry of the several evidences before us, (consisting of people on board said vessel when taken, and of the neighbours supposed best acquainted with the character of said Denny, and one Buddington, who, for some reasons, was suspected of being toryistical,) cannot find that either of them have adopted or pursued any measure really inimical to America, or in any thing acted a part so obnoxious, but that they, upon paying the necessary and occasional charges, might, without further delay or trouble, have said vessel and cargo restored to them; unless the mere act of said Denny's availing himself and being possessed of the enclosed certificate and clearance when taken, should be deemed a sufficient bar in the way; relative to which, the bearer is desired to wait and receive your Excellency's resolution and commands.

From your most obedient, humble servant,

By order of the Committee:

JOSEPH DENISON, Chairman.

To His Excellency General Washington.

JOHN ADAMS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, January 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As your Excellency has asked my opinion of General Lee's plan, as explained in his letter of the 5th instant, I think it my duty to give it, although I am obliged to do it in more haste than I could wish.

I suppose the only questions which arise upon that letter, are, whether the plan is practicable, whether it is expedient, and whether it lies properly within your Excellency's authority, without further directions from Congress.

Of the practicability of it, I am very ill qualified to judge; but, were I to hazard a conjecture, it would be, that the enterprise would not be attended with much difficulty. The Connecticut people, who are very ready upon such occasions, in conjunction with the friends of liberty in New-York, I should think might easily accomplish the work.

That it is expedient, and even necessary to be done, by some authority or other, I believe will not be doubted by any friend of the American cause, who considers the vast importance of that City, Province, and the North River, which is in it, in the progress of this war, (as it is the nexus of the Northern and Southern Colonies,) as a kind of key to the whole Continent; as it is a passage to Canada, to the great lakes, and to all the Indian nations, no effort to secure it ought to be omitted.

That it is within the limits of your Excellency's command, is, in my mind, perfectly clear. Your commission constitutes you commander of all the forces now raised, or to be raised, and of all others who shall voluntarily offer their service, and join the Army for the defence of American liberty, and for repelling every hostile invasion thereof, and are vested with full power and authority to act as you shall think for the good and welfare of the service.

Now, if upon Long-Island there is a body of people who have arms in their hands, and are intrenching themselves, professedly to oppose the American system of defence; who are supplying our enemies, both of the Army and Navy, in Boston and elsewhere, (as I suppose is undoubtedly the fact,) no man can hesitate to say that this is an hostile invasion of American liberty, as much as that now made in Boston. Nay, those people are guilty of the very invasion in Boston, as they are constantly aiding, abetting, comforting, and assisting the army there, and that in the most essential manner, by supplies of provisions. If in the city a body of Tories are waiting only for a force to protect them, to declare themselves on the side of our enemies, it is high time that city was secured. The Jersey troops have already been ordered into that city by the Congress, and are there, undoubtedly, under your command, ready to assist in this service.

That New-York is within your command as much as the Massachusetts, cannot bear a question. Your Excellency's superiority in the command, over the Generals in the Northern Department, as it is called, has been always carefully preserved in Congress, although the necessity of despatch has sometimes induced them to send instructions directly to them, instead of first sending them to your Excellency, which would have occasioned a circuit of many hundreds of miles, and have lost much time.

Upon the whole, sir, my opinion is, that General Lee's is a very useful proposal, and will answer many good ends.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN ADAMS.

To General Washington.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MAJOR-GENERAL LEE.

SIR: Having undoubted intelligence of the fitting out of a fleet at Boston, and of the embarkation of troops from thence, which, from the season of the year, and other circumstances, must be destined for a Southern expedition; and having such information as I can rely on, that the inhabitants (or a great part of them) on Long-Island, in the Colony of New-York, are not only inimical to the rights and liberties of America, but, by their conduct and public professions, have discovered a disposition to aid and assist in the reduction of that Colony to Ministerial tyranny; and, as it is a matter of the utmost importance to prevent the enemy from taking possession of the city of New-York and the North River, as they will thereby command the country, and the communication with Canada, it is of too much consequence (since we find, by His Majesty's speech to Parliament, that, in disregard of the petition from the united voice of America, nothing less than the total subversion of her rights will satisfy him,) to hazard such a post at such an alarming crisis: You will, therefore, with such volunteers as are willing to join you, and can be expeditiously raised, repair to the city of New-York, and calling upon the commanding officer of the forces of New-Jersey, for such assistance as he can afford, and you shall require, you are to put that city in the best posture of defence which the season and circumstances will admit of; disarming all such persons, upon Long-Island and elsewhere, (and, if necessary, otherwise securing them,) whose conduct and declarations have rendered them justly suspected of designs unfriendly to the views of Congress.

You are also to inquire into the state and condition of the fortifications up the North River, and, as far as that be consistent with the orders of Congress, (or not repugnant to them,) to have the works guarded against surprise from a body of men, which might be transported by water near the place, and then marched in upon the back of them.

You will also endeavour to have the medicines, shirts, and blankets, (now at New-York), belonging to the Ministerial troops, secured, and forwarded to this Army. Captain Sears can give you particular information concerning them.

That in other matters relative to the execution of the general plan you are going upon, your own judgment, (as it is impossible, with propriety, to give particular directions,) and the advice of those you have reason to believe are hearty in the cause, must direct you; keeping always in view the declared intentions of Congress.

I am persuaded I need not recommend despatch in the execution of this business; the importance, alone, is sufficient incitement. I would advise a dismissal of the volunteers (whose necessary expenses will be borne) as soon as the service will admit of it; and that you endeavour, as much as possible, at all times to be in readiness to join the Army, if the exigency of our affairs here should call for it.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, the eighth day of January, Anno Domini 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Cambridge, January 8, 1776.

SIR: Having undoubted intelligence of the fitting out of a fleet at Boston, and the embarkation of troops from thence, which, from the season of the year, and other circumstances, must be destined for some expedition south of this; and having such information as I can rely on, that the inhabitants of Long-Island, in your Government, or a great part of them, are not only inimical to the rights and liberties of America, but, by their conduct and professions, have discovered an apparent inclination to lend a helping hand to subjugate their fellow-citizens to Ministerial tyranny, there is the greatest reason to believe, that this armament, if not designed immediately against the city of New-York, is, nevertheless, intended for Long-Island; I have, therefore, thought it expedient to despatch Major-General Lee, with such volunteers as he can quickly assemble, on his march, (for I have not troops to spare from hence, if the distance and time would admit of it,) to put the city of New-York in the best posture of defence the season and circumstances will admit of.

To his instructions, which I have desired him to lay before you, I beg leave to refer, firmly persuaded that your honourable body will give every assistance in their power to facilitate the end of his coming, as there needs no other argument than a retrospective view of the conduct of the Ministerial troops in Boston, and the consequences resulting from it, to prove what a fatal stab it would give to the interests of America, to suffer the city of New-York to fall into the hands of our enemies.

I am, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety of New-York.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, January 8, 1776.

Answered his letters of the 5th and 6th instants. Desired he would purchase the guns from Captain Darby, belonging to the Lee, schooner; if not, he must give them to him. To be alert in fitting the vessels out, &c.

To William Bartlett, Esq., Beverly.

R. HOOE TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

Alexandria, January 9, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: Captain Conway has never been able to get his vessel ready to take in till this day, though he used great industry; the weather, the holydays, &c., have been against him. She is still a very fine vessel, now in the most complete order; and it gives me concern to inform you that the Captain, one of the most active fellows in the world, is about leaving her. Of this, Captain Conway never gave me the most distant hint, till within these few days. As soon as he made known his intentions, I expostulated with and endeavoured to convince him of the impropriety of leaving the service without giving the Council of Safety due notice to provide another master, but all in vain.

He has had a little vessel built somewhere in the lower parts of Virginia; she is finished and come up, and he is going out in her. However, he promises to stay by the vessel and see things carried on, till another master comes on board; you will, therefore, be pleased to appoint one, and send him to take charge, as soon as possible. He says he intended to give you notice at Annapolis, but the Council Room was always full, and he never could find an opportunity.

If you have not a proper person to spare, there is a brother of Conway's, who I believe to be an able seaman, and a very industrious, spirited man, that has offered himself. He being well acquainted, could pick up men in a short time, of which the vessel is bare, having but three on board.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

R. HOOE.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

P. S. If you incline to accept of his brother, it will be well to give me orders by next post, or he will be engaged.

ADDRESS OF NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE COLONY OF NEW-YORK.

January 9, 1776.

To prevent, as much as possible, the evil consequences which may arise from the assertion, that the "Continental Congress have made no approaches towards an accommodation with Great Britain," the Committee of Safety of the Colony of New-York, have directed the following Petition of the Continental Congress to His Majesty, and the Address of the Lord Mayor and Livery of London, to the Electors of Great Britain, occasioned by that Petition, to be published.

In the present unhappy controversy, we can call for no evidence so unexceptionable to the deluded enemies of America, as the testimony of the inhabitants of the Capital, city of Great Britain.

Every information on this subject, coming from among us, might, perhaps, be considered as passing through a suspicious channel; but when we appeal to those who, if we have engaged without grounds in the present contention, are immediately interested against us, every unprejudiced reader must be convinced, that their voluntary testimony in our favour, is full proof of the justice of our cause. And it is for this purpose, that the above-mentioned Address is recommended to the serious consideration of the inhabitants of the Colony of New-York.

By order of the Committee :

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Chairman.

Copy of Petition of the honourable Continental Congress, sitting at PHILADELPHIA, JULY 8, 1775, to His Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign :

We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, of the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island and Providence Plantations, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the Counties of New-Castle, Kent and Sussex, on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, and South-Carolina, in behalf of ourselves, and the inhabitants of these Colonies, who have deputed us to represent them in General Congress, entreat your Majesty's gracious attention to this our humble petition.

The union between our mother country and these Colonies, and the energy of mild and just Government, produced benefits so remarkably important, and afforded such an assurance of their permanency and increase, that the wonder and envy of other nations were excited, while they beheld Great Britain rising to a power the most extraordinary the world had ever known.

Her rivals, observing that there was no probability of this happy connection being broken by civil dissensions, and apprehending its future effects, if left any longer undisturbed, resolved to prevent her receiving such continual and formidable accessions of wealth and strength, by checking the growth of those settlements from which they were to be derived.

In the prosecution of this attempt, events so unfavourable to the design took place, that every friend to the interest of Great Britain and these Colonies, entertained pleasing and reasonable expectations, of seeing an additional force and extension immediately given to the operations of the union hitherto experienced, by an enlargement of the dominions of the Crown, and the removal of ancient and warlike enemies to a greater distance.

At the conclusion, therefore, of the late war, the most glorious and advantageous that ever had been carried on by British arms, your loyal Colonists, having contributed to its success, by such repeated and strenuous exertions, as frequently procured them the distinguished approbation of your Majesty, of the late King, and of Parliament, doubted not, but that they should be permitted, with the rest of the empire, to share in the blessings of peace, and the emoluments of victory and conquest.

While these recent and honourable acknowledgments of their merits remained on record, in the journals and acts of that august legislature, the Parliament, undefaced by the imputation, or even the suspicion of any offence, they were alarmed by a new system of statutes and regulations, adopted for the administration of the Colonies, that filled their minds with the most painful fears and jealousies; and, to their inexpressible astonishment, perceived the danger of a foreign quarrel quickly succeeded by domestic dangers, in their judgment, of a more dreadful kind.

Nor were these anxieties alleviated by any tendency in this system to promote the welfare of their mother country; for, though its effects were immediately felt by them, yet its influence appeared to be injurious to the commerce and prosperity of Great Britain.

We shall decline the ungrateful task of describing the irksome variety of artifices practised by many of your Majesty's Ministers; the delusive pretences, fruitless terrors, and unavailing severities, that have from time to time been dealt out by them, in their attempts to execute this impolitical plan; or of tracing, through a series of years past, the progress of the unhappy differences between Great Britain and these Colonies, that have flowed from this fatal source.

Your Majesty's Ministers, persevering in their measures, and proceeding to open hostilities for enforcing them, have compelled us to arm in our defence, and have engaged us in a controversy so peculiarly abhorrent to the affections of your still faithful Colonists, that when we consider whom we must oppose in this contest, and, if it continues, what may be the consequences, our own particular misfortunes are accounted by us only as part of our distress.

Knowing to what violent resentment and incurable animosities, civil discords are apt to exasperate and inflame the contending parties, we think ourselves required by indispensable obligations to Almighty God, to your Majesty, to our fellow-subjects, and to ourselves, immediately to us all the means in our power, not incompatible with our safety, for stopping the further effusion of blood, and for averting the impending calamities that threaten the British empire.

Thus called upon to address your Majesty, on affairs of such moment to America, and probably to all your dominions, we are earnestly desirous of performing this office with the utmost deference for your Majesty; and we therefore pray, that your Majesty's Royal magnanimity and benevolence may make the most favourable constructions of our expressions on so uncommon an occasion. Could we represent, in their full force, the sentiments that agitate the minds of us, your dutiful subjects, we are persuaded your Majesty would ascribe any seeming deviation from reverence in our language, and even in our conduct, not to any reprehensible intention, but to the impossibility of reconciling the usual appearances of respect, with a just attention to our own preservation, against those artful and cruel enemies, who abuse your Royal confidence and authority, for the purpose of effecting our destruction.

Attached to your Majesty's person, family, and Government, with all devotion that principle and affection can inspire, connected with Great Britain by the strongest ties that can unite societies, and deploring every event that tends in any degree to weaken them, we solemnly assure your Majesty, that we not only most ardently desire the former harmony between her and these Colonies may be restored, but that concord may be established between them, upon so firm a basis as to perpetuate its blessings, uninterrupted by any future dissensions, to succeeding generations in both countries; and to transmit your Majesty's name to posterity, adorned with that signal and lasting glory that has attended the memory of those illustrious personages, whose virtues and abilities have extricated states from dangerous convulsions, and, by securing happiness to others, have erected the most noble and durable monuments to their own fame.

We beg leave further to assure your Majesty, that, notwithstanding the sufferings of your loyal Colonists, during the course of this present controversy, our breasts retain too tender a regard for the kingdom from which we derive our origin, to request such a reconciliation as might, in any manner, be inconsistent with her dignity or her welfare. These, related as we are to her, honour and duty, as well as inclination, induce us to support and advance; and the apprehensions that now oppress our hearts with unspeakable grief, being once removed, your Majesty will find your faithful subjects on this Continent ready and willing, at all times, as they have ever been, with their lives and fortunes, to assert and maintain the rights and interests of your Majesty, and of our mother country.

We, therefore, beseech your Majesty, that your Royal authority and influence may be graciously interposed to procure us relief from our afflicting fears and jealousies, occasioned by the system before-mentioned, and to settle peace through every part of your dominions; with all humility, submitting to your Majesty's wise consideration, whether it may not be expedient, for facilitating those important purposes, that your Majesty may be pleased to direct some mode by which the united applications of your faithful Colonists to the Throne, in pursuance of their common counsels, may be improved into a happy and permanent reconciliation; and that, in the mean time, measures may be taken for preventing the further destruction of the lives of your Majesty's subjects; and that such statutes as more immediately distress any of your Majesty's Colonies, may be repealed.

For by such arrangements as your Majesty's wisdom can form, for collecting the united sense of your American people, we are convinced your Majesty would receive such satisfactory proofs of the disposition of the Colonists towards their Sovereign, and the parent state, that the wished for opportunity would soon be restored to them, of evincing the sincerity of their professions, by every testimony of devotion becoming the most dutiful subjects, and the most affectionate Colonists.

That your Majesty may enjoy a long and prosperous reign, and that your descendants may govern your dominions, with honour to themselves, and happiness to their subjects, is our sincere and fervent prayer.

TO THE ELECTORS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

GENTLEMEN: The mischiefs which have already arisen, and the greater calamities which are threatened, from the unnatural war excited in America, by the arbitrary and inexorable spirit of His Majesty's Ministers, and advisers, have impressed our minds with alarms and apprehensions, which occasion this address to you.

As electors, we are more particularly called upon to take into consideration these dangerous proceedings against our fellow-subjects in America; because the representatives of the people are unhappily made the instruments of these measures.

It is impossible we can see, without the utmost alarm, preparations making for the prosecution of an expensive and ruinous war with our own Colonies, from which so much of our commerce, and, therefore, the sources of our wealth, are derived. The inevitable consequence of this must be an increase of taxes, already too heavy, and an addition to the national debt, which presses us with intolerable weight. We beg you to consider what must be the situation of this kingdom, under an augmentation of taxes, and a diminution of commerce, an increase of national debt, and an equal decrease of national resources.

These are the immediate and unavoidable consequences of this war. The probable ones are still more fatal. If our natural and inveterate enemies should fall upon us, when we are exhausted of men and money, when our most valuable commerce is ruined, and our bravest and veteran troops sacrificed, what is it that can shield us from immediate ruin? If we involve ourselves, then, in this obstinate and expensive civil war, we must owe our safety to the forbearance of our enemies. Neither do we think it improbable, from the desperate valour with which the Americans defend their dearest liberties, that all our efforts will be unsuccessful, and that we shall at last be obliged to sit down under a grievous addition of debt, the shame of defeated armaments, and the total loss of our useful and affectionate Colonies.

The provision that is making for the introduction of Hanoverian and Hessian troops, instead of removing, confirms our apprehensions; because we cannot have any confidence in the protection of foreign mercenaries; and feel at once the shame and folly of that policy which is to burden us with taxes for the payment of foreign protectors, while our own brave troops are slaughtered in an unnatural, unnecessary, and inglorious contest.

For the certain expenses of this war, we see no reparation, even in conquest. Desolated fields, and depopulated Provinces, are little likely to contribute to our necessities, either by revenue or commerce. No complaint from the merchants and manufacturers in Great Britain, of illicit trade, and acts of navigation infringed, has called for these coercive measures. On the contrary, they have repeatedly petitioned against the principles upon which the war is founded. To secure our commerce, therefore, can neither be the aim, nor issue of this war. Neither can it be to settle a due subordination of the Colonies upon the parent state, since they have repeatedly and solemnly acknowledged their subordination, and submitted to our control.

We cannot, therefore, discover any real object, or possible event of this dispute, (should we be successful,) but that of establishing the arbitrary power of the Crown over our fellow-subjects in America, which must greatly endanger the Constitution here, and increase the number of placemen and pensioners, already so enormous as to threaten the utter destruction of freedom and independence among us.

The people of the Colonies have appealed to their fellow-subjects in Great Britain, for the justice and necessity of their conduct. We are convinced of their having been injured and oppressed. We sympathize in their griefs, and revere their fortitude; every motive of humanity, of justice, and of interest, calls upon us to condemn the measures of which they complain, and to declare that we will never willingly contribute to urge their oppressions, or abridge their liberties.

It has been our grief and our misfortune to see that the repeated petitions from His Majesty's subjects in America, supported by many in this country, have not availed to prevent the dreadful extremities we now lament. The petitioners have been studiously driven to the last resources of despair, by a denial of redress, and an accumulation of grievances too severe to be endured by a free people.

In the united petition last year, from all the Colonies to the King, they asked for peace, liberty, and safety. Did it become us to refuse such a request, or to persist in violating the peace, liberty, and safety, of any part of our fellow-subjects? They pledge themselves, "that in time of war, they will be ready and willing to demonstrate their loyalty to His Majesty, by exerting their most strenuous efforts, in granting supplies and raising forces." What can we, in justice, require more from a part of the empire, restrained, in point of commercial advantages, for our benefit, and labouring, in consequence of that restraint, under a heavy and accumulating debt? Can we expect success from a war founded in such flagrant injustice? Appealing, say they, "to that Being who searches thoroughly the hearts of his creatures, we solemnly profess that our counsels have been influenced by no other motive than a dread of impending destruction."

That dread has been realized. Famine, fire and sword, have answered (i. e. were the answers given to) their reasonable requests, and earnest applications. Utter destruction, or unconditional submission, is the only alternative left them, by this imperious and intemperate Administration.

Yet still they were determined to try the force of fresh supplication. This they have done in their late petition to the Throne, more humble, but still fruitless as the former. They say, "Knowing to what violent resentments, and incurable animosities, civil discords are apt to exasperate and inflame the contending parties, we think ourselves required by indispensable obligations to Almighty God, to your Majesty, to our fellow-subjects, and ourselves, immediately to use all the means in our power, not incompatible with our safety, for stopping the further effusion of blood, and for averting the impending calamities, which threaten the British empire."

We feel these as the most amiable sentiments, of men cordially interested in our welfare, and earnestly aiming at peace and reconciliation.

In pursuance of these laudable purposes, they solemnly declare their most ardent desire, that "the former harmony between the two countries may be restored, and a concord may be established between them, upon so firm a basis, as to perpetuate its blessings, uninterrupted by any future dissensions, to succeeding generations, in both countries." They declare, that "they do not request such reconciliation as might, in any manner, be inconsistent with the dignity or welfare of Great Britain;" that, "they are ready and willing, at all times, as they have been, with their lives and fortunes, to assert and maintain the rights and interests of His Majesty, and of their mother country." They, therefore, implore His Majesty, "to take measures for preventing the further destruction of the lives of his subjects; and that he will be pleased to direct some mode by which the united applications of his faithful Colonists to the Throne, in pursuance of their common counsels, may be improved into a happy and permanent reconciliation; and that the wished-for opportunity may soon be restored to them, of evincing the sincerity of their professions, by every testimony of devotion, becoming the most dutiful subjects, and the most affectionate Colonists."

To this petition an answer has been refused. The unhappy petitioners are left to deplore the prospect of inexorable war and desolation, and to seek protection in those fatal resources which self-preservation suggests against impending destruction.

This, gentlemen, is the alarming state of America, which fills us with anxiety and apprehensions.

We lament the blood that has been already shed; we deplore the fate of those brave men, who are devoted to hazard their lives, not against the enemies of the British name, but against the friends of the prosperity and glory of Great Britain. We feel for the honour of the British arms, sullied, not by the misbehaviour of those who bore them, but by the misconduct of the Ministers who employed them, to the oppression of their fellow-subjects. We are, alarmed at the immediate, insupportable expense, and the probable consequences of a war, which, we are convinced, originates in violence and injustice, and must end in ruin.

These are the sentiments, gentlemen, which we take the liberty of communicating to you, as the reasons upon which we have acted, trusting that, if they meet with your approbation, you will co-operate with us, in endeavouring to bring the authors of these evils to the justice of their country.

Signed in obedience to order of the Common Hall.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED CAMBRIDGE, JANUARY 9, 1776.

Last evening, (January 8.) General Putnam achieved what our friend on Winter-Hill attempted. Major Knowlton commanded the party; Minchin, and a deserter, who lately came out, were the guides; about one hundred and thirty passed, near nine o'clock, over the mill-dam; Majors Cary and Henly had each a party, and the former was to push to the farthest house; (if you recollect, there was, to your right from Cobble-Hill, when you looked towards Bunker's Hill, about fifteen houses, which had escaped the conflagration on the 17th of June.) The plan was, to surprise these houses, set them on fire, and bring off the guard, which, we were informed, consisted of an officer and thirty men; but the information was wrong, as there was only a sergeant and five men. The persons appointed to set fire to the houses nearest the dam, had orders not to execute it until Cary had returned from the farthest, but, eager to fulfil what they had undertaken, they were the first that appeared in flames; sometime after, the whole was one blaze of fire. Had I Burgoyne's knack at description, I assure you, a picture might be drawn that would afford great horror, and, at the same time, great entertainment. Bunker's Hill took the alarm; the flashing of the musketry, from every quarter of that fort, showed the confusion of its defenders—firing, some in the air, some in the Mystick river; in short, they fired at random, and thought they were attacked at every quarter, which, you may suppose, gave no small pleasure to the General and a number of us, who were spectators of the scene, from Cobble-Hill. Ten of the houses were soon in ashes. The sergeant and four of the men, with one woman, were brought off prisoners; one poor wretch made some resistance, and was killed. Knowlton behaved like a man used to the business; your friend Minchin with great coolness; Cary and Henly receive merited applause; indeed, every person engaged, did his duty, except being rather too eager in setting the first house on fire.

It is the opinion of many, that, if there was a vigorous attack made, the hill might be carried with little loss; but it was not designed; of course, no preparations were made for such a push.*

ADDRESS OF THE NOBLEMEN, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF ABERDEEN.

Address of the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of Aberdeen, transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and presented to His Majesty.

Unto the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of ABERDEEN.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Freeholders of the County of Aberdeen, deeply penetrated with a due sense of the many invaluable blessings we have uninterruptedly enjoyed under your Majesty's beneficent reign; of the mild government it has pleased your Majesty to rule over us with; of the paternal affection and watchful care your Majesty has ever shown for the liberties of your subjects, and the advantages of your kingdoms; think it our indispensable duty to lay at your Majesty's feet, upon every occasion, the humblest and strongest assurances of our loyal attachment and most respectful gratitude.

We more particularly think this duty incumbent upon us, when we see that the factious principles of some evil-minded and designing men at home, have, at first, misled the opinions of the inhabitants of our Colonies, and, at last, raised up in America a spirit of rebellion, which has forced the sword of authority into a hand that has hitherto constantly covered them with the shield of protection.

After bewailing these circumstances, we do here assert, with the warmest sincerity, that we shall be ever ready, to the utmost extent of our power, to act in defence of your Majesty's person, in support of the dignity of your Crown, and in promoting the wise regulations of your Majesty's Government.

* CAMBRIDGE, January 11, 1776.—We hear that the enemy, the evening on which our troops burnt the houses at Charlestown, were entertaining themselves at the exhibition of a play, which they called the Blockade of Boston; in the midst of which, a person appeared before the audience, and, with great earnestness, declaring that the Yankees were attacking Bunker's Hill; the deluded wretches at first took this to be merely farical, and intended as a part of their diversion; but, soon convinced that the actor meant to represent a solemn reality, the whole assembly left the house in confusion, and scampered off with great precipitation.

Boston, January 11, 1776.—On Monday was presented, at the Theatre, at Faneuil-Hall, the comedy of the Busy-Body, which was received with great applause. The actors (British officers) seemed all to have profited by Impartial's advice; and, we must do the ladies the justice to say, they always were perfect, as well in their parts as in their action. A new farce, called the Blockade of Boston, was to have been presented the same evening, but was interrupted by a Sergeant's representing, or, rather, misrepresenting, the burning of two or three old houses at Charlestown as a general attack on the town of Boston. But it is very evident, the Rebels possess a sufficiency of what Falstaff terms the better part of valour, to prevent their making an attempt that must inevitably end in their own destruction.

As soon as these parts in the Boston Blockade which are vacant, by some gentlemen being ordered to Charlestown, can be filled up, the farce will be performed, with the tragedy of Tamerlane.

And we, at the same time, pray, that these blessings your Majesty has so widely diffused over your subjects, may constantly attend your Majesty's Royal person, family, and cause.

Signed, in name and by appointment of the meeting, at Aberdeen, January 10, 1776.

CHARLES BOYD, Præses.

ADDRESS OF THE DEACONS, ETC., OF THE CITY OF GLASGOW.

Address of the Deacon Conveener, Deacons of the Fourteen Incorporated Trades, and other Members of the Trades-House, of the City of Glasgow, presented to His Majesty by the Right Honourable Lord Frederick Campbell, their Representative in Parliament.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign:

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Deacon Conveener, Deacons of the Fourteen Incorporated Trades, and other Members of the Trades-House, of the City of Glasgow, at a general meeting assembled, impressed with the most unalterable sentiments of loyalty and affection to your Majesty's person and Government, humbly beg leave, at this time, with unfeigned hearts, to express our abhorrence and detestation of that unprovoked and unnatural rebellion, now prevailing in some of your Majesty's Colonies in America. To levy war against their Sovereign, acknowledged to be the best of Kings; against the Government which has always protected them, when in danger, and defended them from the attacks of foreign enemies; against the nation from which they sprung, and against their friends and fellow-subjects, all for the most frivolous causes that ever excited sedition; indicates, too strongly, their intention to shake off, and not be governed by, the laws of Great Britain, which, we firmly believe, they are bound to obey.

We, however, have the pleasure of informing your Majesty, that, notwithstanding this unnatural rebellion, our trade and manufactures, in general, are in a prosperous state; and, as we have hitherto enjoyed all the blessings and advantages which have flowed from your Majesty's just, wise, and prudent administration, so, in duty, we, from the sincerity of our hearts, declare, that, with our lives and fortunes, we will support and defend your Majesty's person and Government, to the utmost of our power, in quelling the unnatural rebellion now subsisting in America, and in restoring the rebellious Colonies to a due submission to the laws and Government of Great Britain.

Signed in our presence, and by our appointment, by John Craig, Deacon Conveener of the Trades of the City of Glasgow, at Glasgow, the tenth day of January, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six years.

JOHN CRAIG.

ADDRESS OF THE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, ETC., OF THE COUNTY OF WIGTON.

Address of the Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, Commissioners of Supply, and Land-Owners of the County of Wigton, presented to His Majesty by the Earl of Galloway.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, Commissioners of Supply, and Land-Owners of the County of WIGTON.

May it please your Majesty:

We, the Justices of the Peace, Freeholders, Commissioners of Supply, and Land-Owners of the County of Wigton, humbly beg leave to assure your Majesty, of our steadfast loyalty and zealous attachment to your sacred person, Crown, and dignity, and the happy Constitution under which we live, the preservation of which, we are, and ever shall be, ready to support, with our lives and fortunes, being fully sensible of the many blessings we enjoy, under your Majesty's most benign government.

We hear, with the deepest sorrow, and sincerely lament, that many of your Majesty's subjects in America, influenced by the counsels of wicked and designing men, have not only denied the supreme legislative authority of this their parent country, but have even dared to appear in actual rebellion, attempting to render themselves independent of Great Britain.

We rely, with the fullest confidence, on the wisdom and prudence of your Majesty's councils, and trust the most effectual measures will be taken, for restoring peace and tranquillity, upon the most permanent foundation, to all your Majesty's dominions. And we fervently pray for the preservation of your Majesty's Royal person and family, that your reign over us may be long and happy, and that you may ever triumph over the enemies of our most excellent Constitution.

By appointment of the meeting:

JOHN AGNEW, Præses.

THOMAS EWING TO COLONEL WILLIAM SMALLWOOD.

Baltimore, January 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: With pleasure have I heard of your being much better of your late illness. I hope the bearer, Mr. Joseph Baxter, my Lieutenant, will find you thoroughly recovered. He now waits on you and the Convention, to get the commissions for our company, with orders for in-listing troops. As I suppose it will be found necessary to advance the soldiers a month's pay, or some advance money, you will please procure for him what you think necessary; and I do here engage, to be accountable to you, or the Convention, for any money you give him, on account of our company. I am in hopes I shall have a very respectable company of farmers' sons, as I am determined I will take very few, if any, out of this town. If any troops are to be kept in this town, I am in hopes you will indulge me and my company by staying here.

I am, with due respect, dear Colonel, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS EWING.

To Colonel William Smallwood.

FREDERICKTOWN (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Frederick, January 10, 1776.

SIR: By order of the Committee for the Upper District of Frederick County, I have sent you (under guard) one Doctor Smith; he was taken sometime in November last in company with Doctor Connolly, and confined in Fredericktown, from where he made his escape; since which he has been taken at the Little-Meadows, with the enclosed letters. The Committee has thought proper to send him to the Congress.

I have the honour to be your obedient servant,

SAMUEL HUGHES, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

P. S. The guard will expect something for their trouble.

Fredericktown, Maryland, November 24, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Little did I expect, when I last wrote you, that our next correspondence would be from this place, or so soon; but my unaccountable fate, still delights in leading me through numerous and perplexing labyrinths, and in adventures particularly singular and strange. I sit down to unbosom myself to my friend, as a relief to an anxiety of mind caused by confinement under a guard for several nights and days, and the painful suspense of as yet not knowing my doom from the Committee of this place; but I find myself very unfit for the task, occasioned by the depression of spirits to which I am often so subject, and the number and confusion of disagreeable ideas that depression raises in my mind. I endeavour to banish them, but in vain. Confinement is death and torture to me; and, to refine on the barbarity of my fate, my guard consists of Germans, whose dissonant jargon of corrupt high Dutch, is not only unintelligible to me, but also so extremely disagreeable, by its cursed noise and harshness, that it distracts my very soul. I often consider that I am in a place where you have enjoyed much satisfaction and agreeable society; but that reflection brings me no comfort, as I am deprived of every benefit of that nature. My two fellow-travellers, my only acquaintance and friends in this place, are, unhappily, in the same circumstances, and we are separated one from the other, so that, as yet, we are not permitted to see or converse with each other, a circumstance which greatly adds to my pain. However, I shall endeavour to fortify my mind, so as to be able to bear whatever may be my doom. Pain, affliction, losses, misfortunes, and defamation, I am habituated to; they are become familiar; but confinement, which, to me, is more dreadful than death, I am but little able to endure; it is the last, and heaviest of all; but, as it is now my destiny, I shall make use of my best efforts to submit to it with patience, and make a virtue of necessity. But it is, indeed, a mortifying reflection, that when, through a crowd of misfortunes, I saw a prospect rise before me, of still doing well, and of attaining all my favourite wishes, it is, I say, a most mortifying reflection, to be then thrown down from this, and to lose every ray of hope—"a long dependance in an hour is lost."*

I have a care, an anxious, deep concern still on my mind, which ought to depend upon me, but, in my situation, am unable to. I must rely on my dear and worthy friend's protection. Your feeling heart can guess whom I mean, and must point out those whom nature itself prompts me to hold dear; remember me to them, with all the affection you can conceive, or they can merit, and assure them, that they

* After these groundless and most ridiculous suspicions were happily cleared up, the whole intention and subject of a secret expedition to the back country, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Connolly, then appointed commandant of the Queen's Royal regiment of Rangers, was disclosed to me, and I was earnestly solicited by the Colonel to accompany him, along with another gentleman named Cameron; to this I most cheerfully consented, and, in the above regiment, we all received our commissions.

On the day following I received an order to take any vessel in the harbour, and also such of the pilots on board His Majesty's sloop the Otter, as I judged proper, for the use of this expedition.

This circumstance was no small satisfaction to me, as I thereby convinced Captain Squire of my being no spy, as he had alleged; and, on going on board his ship, made choice of two of his best pilots.

When we departed from Norfolk on this expedition, I was obliged to leave behind me my servant and all the property I had been able to bring down there. My servant and horses, which were valuable, were to be sent to the plantation of Mr. Atchison, at Lord Dunmore's request; and the rest of my property I left in the house of a Mr. Pierce, in Portsmouth, but I have never since that time heard the least account of any thing belonging to me.

We embarked on board a flat-bottomed decked schooner, which I had engaged for that purpose, with our horses, and only one servant, who belonged to the Colonel.

Our small party consisted of Lieutenant Colonel Connolly, Mr. Cameron, myself, and the servant; and we intended to proceed in this vessel up the Chesapeake, into Potomack River, and land, if possible, near to my house, at Port Tobacco Creek, and afterwards to pass through the country on horseback, until we arrived at Detroit, in Canada.

It was proposed that I should pass through Pittsburgh, with despatches to Mr. McKee, the Indian Superintendent, and to some other friends of Government, then proceed down the river Ohio to the mouth of the Scioto, and from thence up that river, through the Shawanese, Delaware, and Wyandotte, and down Sandusky River to Sandusky Old Fort; from thence I was to cross Lake Erie, by the Rattle Snake Islands, to Detroit; while the other two gentlemen were to cross the Allegany River, at the Kittanning, and proceed by the nearest and most direct route to Detroit. Here a very considerable force was to be collected from all the nearest posts in Canada, and transported, early in the Spring, across the Lake Erie to Presque Isle, where I was to be employed during the Winter with a detachment of two hundred men, in covering and conducting the building battues, and collecting provisions, in order to proceed by the way of French Creek, Venango, and the Allegany River, to Pittsburgh, which we were to seize on, and establish as Head-Quarters, until the disaffected interest was entirely crushed, and the whole strength of the country collected, and formed into regular disciplined regiments.

After leaving a sufficient garrison at Pittsburgh, we were to advance across the Allegany Mountains with our whole force upon the back of Virginia; and, after establishing a strong post at Fort Cumberland, it was proposed to fall down the river Potomack, and seize on Alexandria, where the Earl of Dunmore was to meet us with the fleet, and all the force of the lower part of the Province. Alexandria was to be strongly fortified, as a place of arms, and the communication between the southern and northern parts of the Continent thereby cut off.

If a misfortune, of such magnitude, should have happened, as to oblige us to give up this enterprise at any particular stage thereof, our retreat was then secured by these posts which we occupied in our rear; and if it should have failed in the first part of the expedition, by our finding it impracticable to seize upon Pittsburgh, we were to fall down the Ohio in our battues to the Mississippi, where we were to be joined by the garrison, artillery, and stores from Fort George of Kiskiskim, at the Illinois; and then to proceed down to the mouth of the river Mississippi, in West Florida; where we were to embark in transports, and come round to Norfolk, in Virginia, there to join the Earl of Dunmore.

For the execution of this well formed, judicious, and vast undertaking, Lieutenant Colonel Connolly was furnished with the proper and necessary powers, both from General Gage, the Commander-in-chief, and from the Earl of Dunmore, and with ample instructions for his future conduct, as well as commissions for the formation of a complete regiment at Detroit, or Pittsburgh; all of which, containing no less than eighteen sheets of paper, we carried along with us, in a secret manner, invented by, and executed under the inspection of his Lordship. All these papers were concealed in the mail pillow-sticks on which the servant carried his portmanteau, they being made hollow, for that purpose, and covered with tin plates, and then canvassed glued thereon as usual; this was so dextrously and completely executed that it could not be discovered on the strictest examination.—J. are ever near my heart. If I live, and regain my liberty, I may still be serviceable to them; if not, oh God! how I anticipate their distress; but inform them not where I am, or my situation, for distraction itself would be ease and peace to me, compared with the sight of them in my present circumstances. You, who know the inmost recesses of my heart, will readily discover my perturbation and uneasiness of mind, from every sentence of this incoherent epistle, but believe me, I at present am incapable of any thing better, and must conclude, with a firm reliance on your humanity and friendship.

Dear sir, your sincere and affectionate,

JOHN, Earl of DUNMORE, Viscount FINGCASTLE, Baron MURRAY of BLAIR, of MONLIN and of TILLIMET, Lieutenant and Governour-General of His Majesty's Colony and Dominion of VIRGINIA, and Vice-Admiral of the same, to JOHN CONNOLLY, Esquire.

By virtue of His Majesty's Royal Commission and instruction, appointing me Lieutenant and Governour-General, in and over this his Colony and Dominion of Virginia, with full power and authority to appoint all officers, both civil and military, within the same, I, reposing especial trust in your loyalty, courage, and good conduct, do, by these presents, constitute and appoint you, John Connolly, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant of the Queen's Royal Rangers. You are, therefore, carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of Lieutenant-Colonel Commandant, by exercising and well disciplining both the officers and soldiers under your command; and you are to observe and follow such orders and directions, from time to time, as you shall receive from his Majesty, myself, or any other, your superior officers, according to the rules and discipline of war, and in pursuance of the trust hereby reposed in you.

Given on board the Ship William, under my hand and seal at arms, this 5th day of November, and in the 16th year of his Majesty's reign, 1775.

DUNMORE.

Fredericktown, Maryland, December 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR: I have more to say to you than I will commit to paper. I mentioned you in proper terms to General Gage; and had done something to your honour and advantage could I have got up safely to Detroit.

Captain Lord, who was to have acted under me, will now be in danger at the Illinois. I have, therefore, desired him to push down the Mississippi, and join the Earl of Dunmore and the Fourteenth, at Norfolk. Assist the bearer with a canoe, gun, &c., which make a charge of, and send an Indian express with my letter to Captain Lernoult, at Detroit.

Pray give Mrs. Connolly any assistance she may want, and throw it into the Indian Department, for which I have authority to direct you.

God bless you, adieu, I write in bed, with two sentinels at the door, with hourly apprehensions of death.

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Alexander McKee, Pittsburgh.

From confinement in Frederick, Maryland, }
December 16, 1775. }

DEAR SIR: Just snatching the opportunity of pen and ink, of which I am generally debarred the use of, I write you by the bearer, Doctor Smith, who will inform you fully of every circumstance relative to what you were to have performed. I am now a prisoner, and the whole scheme at an end. You must, therefore, agreeable to General Gage's order, and Lord Dunmore's, proceed down the Mississippi, and join Lord Dunmore at Norfolk, and the Fourteenth, who are now there. Lose no time, for fear the Rebels should be upon you from Pittsburgh. All the General's orders are as Doctor Smith will inform you.

Adieu, my compliments to all the gentlemen under your command. Things wear a shocking aspect in America.

Yours, &c.,

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Captain N. Lord.

P. S. Draw upon General Howe for two hundred dollars, in favour of the bearer. J. C.

Frederick, Maryland, December 16, 1775.

SIR: From the strictest confinement, I venture to write to you, having accidentally got pen, ink and paper, of which I have been debarred for some time.

I was made prisoner on my way through this Government, to your port, where I expected to have afforded you some assistance, and to have ordered Captain Lord of the Eighteenth, from the Union, to join us there also. I am now to inform you, that I much fear His Majesty's enemies may attack you early in the Spring, and as Montreal is in their hands, I dread the consequences. Let this thing . . . to give you notice of such intentions, and whether upon that account, you might not judge it expedient to evacuate the garrison, and, with Captain Lord, move down the Mississippi, and join the Earl of Dunmore at Norfolk. The Fourteenth Regiment have lately had a skirmish with the Rebels, in which Captain Fordice was killed.

I can say no more, as I write every moment expecting to be surprised. Your orders, which I had from the General, are . . . they would have been satisfactory to you. You were ordered to raise all the French you could, which I hope you have done.

I am sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Captain Lernoult, or Officer commanding at Detroit.

N. B. Take care that there is not an improper correspondence carried on between your post and Pittsburgh.

Fredericktown, Maryland, December 16, 1775.

DEAR SIR: Though your remote situation may have prevented you from hearing many particulars relative to the state of the Colonies, you yet must know enough to discover your own dangerous situation. You were to have joined me at Detroit, by the Ouabache communication, and it was expected, by your advice and assistance, that we would have been able to penetrate through the Colony of Virginia, and thus divided the Southern from the Northern Governments. You were formerly ordered by the General to put yourself immediately under the command of General Carleton, but, for obvious reasons, you were desired to receive your directions from the Earl of Dunmore.

The orders are now—— You are therefore, as you was directed, to move yourself and all garrison stores, ordnance, &c., immediately down the Mississippi to New-Orleans, or wherever you can procure a conveyance for Norfolk, Virginia, where you will join his Excellency the Earl of Dunmore and the Fourteenth Regiment. You had full power to make all expenses, so that you need not be apprehensive on that score. The sooner you get down the better, as I much fear you will be attacked from Pittsburgh very soon. Draw a bill in favour of the bearer, for two hundred dollars, and, also, take him with you to Norfolk. The Fourteenth have just had a skirmish with the Virginians, in which Captain Fordice, of that regiment, was killed, and Lieutenant Batut taken prisoner. I am safely watched here, and now write in bed, with two sentinels at the door. Adieu. God bless you. Remember me to Connolly, and all the gentlemen.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Captain N. Lord, or Officer commanding at Illinois.

[Fredericktown, Maryland, December 16, 1775.]

I wrote to you before, but as that letter was to pass the inspection of the Committee, I could not speak free. I am now to desire you not to write to me, or you may be assured that every word will be known before I can see it, as they will open all directed to me. I have wrote to Captain McKee, to let you have what you want, and charge it in the Indian account. Make yourself easy. I don't know where I am to be sent yet. I thought to have had you here, but the Committee altered their opinion, after the man had his horses saddled, to go for you and the child. Lord Dunmore has had a skirmish lately, and had a Captain of the Fourteenth Regiment killed. Give my love to Sally. Keep this secret, for I am not allowed pen or ink.

Yours affectionately,

JOHN CONNOLLY.

To Mrs. Susanna Connolly, Pittsburgh.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Committee, Lancaster, January 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The women and children belonging to the privates of the Seventh and Twenty-Sixth Regiments, who are prisoners here, have this day implored us, in a body, that we would interest ourselves in their behalf. They tell us they are denied further provisions, by Mr. Franks, agent in this place, and that they must inevitably perish, unless relieved from their present distress by your munificence.

We are also informed, by the gentleman who transacts the business for the contractors here, in the absence of Mr. Simon, that he has received express orders not to deliver out any allowance of meat or bread to the soldiers' wives or children, for the future.

Being mindful that humanity ought ever to distinguish the sons of America, and that cruelty should find no admission amongst a free people, we could not avoid considering the situation of their women and children as pitiable, indeed. We were strongly inclined, at the first moment, to assist them in their distress. Our feelings, as men, evidently pointed out to us those people as real objects of compassion.

The Committee have, accordingly, requested of Colonel Matthias Hough to supply them with necessary provisions at the publick expense, until your pleasure can be made known unto us. Mr. Hough has engaged to do this at our request. We flatter ourselves your honourable body will approve the step we have taken, and will give directions for the future subsistence of the women and children. From the returns given to us, we find that there are twenty-four women and twenty-five children belonging to the soldiers of the Seventh Regiment, and six women and eight children belonging to the Twenty-Sixth Regiment.

The Committee have been under the necessity of taking up a number of blankets for the prisoners, at the publick expense. There were in the barracks about one hundred and sixty-five old blankets, almost worn out, and to these we have added seventy-two new ones. The whole serve as a scanty covering for the soldiers, against the rigour and inclemency of the season. We have also been obliged to purchase a quantity of coarse, strong linen, to be filled with straw, for their use. The article of fire-wood, for the consumption of so many men, is very expensive. One hundred weight of soap has been also furnished by us to the prisoners. We beg your directions in what manner these accounts are to be discharged.

The Committee have not yet been favoured with your instructions respecting the officers continuing here until their baggage comes up, and whether they are allowed the privilege of drawing bills for their support. Our particular situation must apologize to you for our importunity, and the trouble we give you. Amongst the more important concerns, it is our highest wish to conduce, in some degree, to the general weal, and that our conduct may be rendered acceptable to the honourable Congress.

We are, gentlemen, with the utmost respect, your most obedient and very humble servants.

By order of the Committee :

J. YEATES, Chairman.

To John Hancock, President of the honourable Continental Congress.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Philadelphia, January 10, 1776.

SIR: I had the pleasure of transmitting you, some days ago, a letter of thanks for your eminent services in the cause of your country.

The several letters you mention in your last, came safe to hand, and were laid before Congress. The distresses of this great Continent, thrown into convulsions by an unnatural war; the unprepared state we were in, when unjustly attacked; the enemies that have arisen up against us in different quarters; and the horrid attempts of the Southern Governours to excite domestick insurrections, and bring the Savages to desolate our frontiers; the necessity of providing armed vessels, to prevent, if possible, the desolation threatened our sea-coast; these, and other matters of the highest importance, which you can easily conceive, must apologize for your letters not having an earlier answer; besides, the Congress flattered themselves; from the steps they had taken, and from the orders and instructions given to their Committee, who were sent to confer with you, that your army would have been reinlisted, and your difficulties in other respects have been relieved.

After the return of their Committee, the Congress took into consideration your several letters, and the Report of the Committee, and thereupon came to sundry resolutions, which I have the honour to enclose.

Phelps has thrown in a petition praying to be heard in his justification; but, as matters of higher moment engage the attention of the Congress, that is suffered to lie over.

The Congress resent the conduct of Lieutenant Halsey, and are of opinion you should proceed to have his conduct inquired into by a court-martial, giving him previous notice to appear in his own defence, and that such sentence should be passed on him as the court-martial shall think just; and should he decline to submit his conduct to such examination and sentence, in that case all arrears due to him ought to be stopped.

I cannot sufficiently express the confidence the Congress have in your attention to the publick interest, and their reliance that you will give to the proper officers in your department such orders as will procure indemnification to the publick for any embezzlement or waste of its stores or moneys.

Desirous of giving every reasonable encouragement and indulgence to men who have resigned their lives in the cause of their country, they have given you power to grant discharges to such officers as find themselves under a necessity of quitting the service, and to remit to such of the troops raised in the Colony of New-York as may be reinlisted, any right the Congress might have to stop wages for the underclothes delivered to them.

I must not omit to inform you of the grateful sense the Congress have of the friendly offices Mr. Price has done to General Montgomery, for the support of the American cause. You will, therefore, be pleased to embrace the first opportunity of returning him their thanks for the same, and assure him immediate measures shall be taken for replacing the moneys he has advanced.

You will, also, be pleased to notify Colonel Easton their approbation of his services, and that they will retain in their minds a just sense of them.

The conduct, spirit, and resolution shown, both by the officers and men who have penetrated Canada, have induced the Congress, in testimony of their approbation, to reserve the raising of two regiments out of the forces now there, for the defence and protection of that country, which their valour has rescued from slavery. The regiments in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey are under orders to march and join them, and the other regiments destined for that service will be ordered to march as fast as raised.

The enclosed resolutions of Congress are so full and explicit that I need not enlarge.

I shall be happy to hear of your perfect recovery, being, with much esteem, sir, &c.,

To General Schuyler. JOHN HANCOCK, President.

CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN TO ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, January 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed is a copy of an order from the Committee to Captain Stone, sent by directions of Congress, on an application from Maryland, which it is necessary you should have.

I also take the liberty to send you a list of the Field-Officers and Captains of two regiments of Foot, and the companies of Artillery, all Provincials, stationed in Charlestown, South-Carolina. Should you go there, upon your arrival off the bar, the pilot will inform you what officer is at Fort Johnson, or any of the nearest batteries to you, from whom you may depend upon all the assistance they can give; they are, most of them, gentlemen of considerable fortunes with us, who have entered into the service merely from principle; and to promote and give credit to the cause, they take it by turns to be at the fort, and the zeal and activity of all of them is such, that you cannot happen amiss, let who will be there. In Charlestown, my particular friends, Mr. Lowndes, Mr. Ferguson, Colonel Powell, Mr. Benjamin Elliott, Colonel Pinckney, Mr. Drayton, Mr. Timothy, and the Reverend Mr. Tennant, a countryman of yours, will introduce you to the others, who will all be glad to have an opportunity of obliging you, and promoting the service.

I wrote yesterday to Mr. Ferguson; one of the gentlemen just mentioned, by way of Georgia, by a gentleman I can depend on, who will destroy my letter should he be taken. In this letter I have hinted to look out for you, and be ready to assist you at a moment's warning.

The two large ships seen off Virginia, the 29th of last month, we are told, were not bound there; however, you will know more certainly by the time you get off the Capes, I make no doubt. I hope you will be able to effect that service; but, whether you may or not, sooner or later, I flatter myself, we shall have your assistance at Carolina, where you may depend on an easy conquest, or, at least, be able to know, without loss of time, when off our bar, the strength of the enemy; and should it be too much for you prudently to encounter, which I hardly think probable, if soon attempted, with the assistance from us, you may, in such case, retreat with great ease, safety, and expedition.

Wishing you every success you can possibly wish yourself, I am, dear sir, your most humble servant,

CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN.

To Esek Hopkins, Esquire, Commander-in-chief of the Fleet of the United Colonies.

P. S. Pray make my compliments to Capt. Saltonstall, and all the rest of your Captains; and shall be obliged to you, if you go to Carolina, to introduce them to any or all the gentlemen I have mentioned, who, I am sure, will be glad to show them every civility in their power. I hope Captain Whipple is better. One of the Maryland gentlemen, Mr. Alexander, a Delegate of that State, tells me there is a very good ship, of about . . . there, easily fitted out, which he is in hopes will join you, with the Hornet and Wasp, and that he should press it to be done. . . . mention by the by—

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 10, 1776.

SIR: I now send you, enclosed, copies of some letters which have passed between Governour Franklin and Lieutenant-Colonel Winds. As it is evident, from the last letter from the Governour, that he intends no longer to remain quiet, I thought it most prudent to secure him, and remove him to this place. I, accordingly, sent orders to Lieutenant-Colonel Winds, this morning, for that purpose. I have provided good, genteel private lodgings for the Governour, at Mr. Boudinot's, which I expect he will occupy this afternoon, and where I intend he shall remain until I have directions from Congress what to do with him.

I am, with great regard, your most humble servant,

STIRLING.

Barracks at Perth-Amboy, January 8, 1776.

SIR: I have had hints that you intended to leave the Province, if the letters, that were intercepted should be sent to the Continental Congress. As I have particular orders concerning the matter, I, therefore, desire you will give me your word and honour, that you will not depart this Province till I know the will and pleasure of the Continental Congress, concerning that matter. From, sir, your humble servant,

WILLIAM WINDS.

To His Excellency William Franklin, Esq.

January 8, 1776.

SIR: Being conscious that my letter, which has been intercepted, contained nothing but what was my duty to write, as a faithful officer of the Crown, being a mere narrative of such facts and reports as had come to my knowledge, concerning publick transactions, I have not the least intention to quit the Province, nor shall I, unless compelled by violence. Were I to act otherwise, it would not be consistent with my declarations to the Assembly, at the last session, nor my regard to the good people of this Province.

Your humble servant,

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

To William Winds, Esq.

Perth-Amboy, January 9, 1776.

SIR: I observed, this morning, that armed men were placed at my gate, who, from time to time, have been relieved by others. On inquiry, I am given to understand that they are placed there as sentinels, by your orders. This I scarcely know how to believe, not only as I am convinced you can have no proper authority for it, but, as I had before, under my hand, assured you (who are a member of the House of Representatives) that, agreeable to my declaration to the Assembly, at the last session, and; I might have added, in compliance with their request, I was determined not to quit this Province until compelled by violence, such an assurance, on my part, was certainly equal to any promise I could make, and ought, of course, have weight with those who pretend to act on principles of honour. However, let the authority, or let the pretence, be what it may, I do hereby require you, if these armed men are sent by your orders, that you do immediately remove them from hence, as you will answer the contrary at your peril.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

William Winds, Esq.

January 9, 1776.

SIR: As you, in a former letter, say you wrote nothing but what was your duty to do, as a faithful officer of the Crown, so I say, touching the sentinels placed at your gate, I have done nothing but what was my duty to do, as a faithful officer of the Congress.

From, sir, your very humble servant,

WILLIAM WINDS.

To Governour Franklin.

ISAAC RYSDYCK TO ROBERT BENSON.

New-Hackensack, January 10, 1776.

RESPECTED SIR: In due return to your letter of December 23d, and the directions of the honourable the Convention, delivered to me last Sunday, I have translated their address to my best endeavours. My having been unwell with cold since, has retarded the work till now. This being the first attempt I ever made of this unusual labour, the time short, my health weak, and myself but a scholar in the English tongue, I shall make no apology for the performance. However, such a more than Demosthenian or Ciceronian piece, translated in the language of Holland, where, possibly, it may be read, and, if so, doubtless much admired, should be, by all means, very correct. If, therefore, the Convention should choose to have it printed, I should wish that some more able eye should review it; or, should the Convention appoint a Committee for the purpose, for an hour or two, I might consult them, and, perhaps, make some amendments. And as no low Dutch, printed in America, hath been seen, hitherto, every where correct, because English printers seldom meet with Dutch copies, and the languages differ so much, I am also willing to attend the press closely, that it may be done in the nearest manner possible; I shall, therefore, please God, wait on you in the beginning of next week, to know the pleasure of the Convention.

As to any recompense, my being a citizen of this State, and enjoying the protection of the honourable the Congress and Convention, therefore, in duty bound to do something for the publick good, forbids me to claim any other than the approbation of the Convention, if not of the performance itself, at least, of my best endeavours to serve, in any manner, God and this bleeding and much injured country.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ISAAC RYSDYCK.

To Robert Benson, Esq., Secretary to the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

P. S. Want of good paper and ink hath rendered this copy not so distinctly legible as I wished.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, January 10, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty to enclose you an extract of a letter from General Montgomery to me, of the 18th ultimo. I fear his next will announce the disagreeable account of his having been obliged to raise the siege, as, soon after the date of his letter, the weather became most intensely cold in Canada. Congress will perceive by the first part of the second paragraph of his letter, that he expected troops from this quarter. I had mentioned to him, that I had taken the liberty to recommend to Congress, to send a body of troops into Canada this winter. I am so well convinced of the practicability, as well as necessity of it, that, although I am much indisposed, I would willingly undertake to conduct them to the south end of the Bay of Missisque, to which place I can get with the necessary provisions, in sleds; from whence the traverse across that bay, which is, by this time, passable on the ice, to Windmill-Point, is easy, and thence on the narrow part of Lake Champlain, no obstacles will intervene, and the distance only about twenty-four miles to St. John's.

Enclose you a copy of the pay-rolls, by which I pay off the men. Governor Trumbull has sent me one from Connecticut, copy of which I also enclose. Congress will observe, that in the last, there is an allowance made for going home, at the rate of fifteen miles per day, a bounty of forty shillings billeting money, one penny per day for travelling charges, &c. None of which, except the billeting money, has been allowed by me to the troops raised in New-York, and for which I chose to have separate rolls made out, that if it either exceeded or fell short of what Congress might allow, the difference may be charged to, or credit given the Colony. Enclose an extract of my letter [dated January 6,] to Governor Trumbull, on this subject.

The officers that have been employed in this quarter complain much of a discrimination in favour of those at Boston, whom, they say, are allowed extra rations. I did not conceive that it was in my power to allow more than one. I have paid the officers only to the time when they left the service. They claim more, and say they ought to be paid until Congress revokes their commissions. On this head they have given me much trouble.

I have not yet received all the accounts of the people engaged in taking and garrisoning Ticonderoga and Crown-Point; those that have been delivered, I now enclose. I have been obliged to advance about one hundred and thirty pounds on this account. The people are poor, and are continually pressing me for the money.

Would it not have a very good effect, besides preventing much jealousy, if no Colony was permitted, (although at a Colonial expense,) to make any further allowance to the troops than what Congress thinks proper to give as a Continental.

A deputation from the Caughnawaga tribe have been at this place, and entered into a treaty of peace. Thirteen of them are gone on a visit to Cambridge. The advantage of possessing Canada becomes daily more evident. The Indians see themselves in our power, as they cannot be supplied but by our leave.

Two of the heaviest cannon broke the ice in crossing Hudson's River. The one is got out, and the other will be in a day or two. The others are all gone on, and I hope will reach Cambridge by the 16th.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the most profound respect and esteem, your most obedient, and very humble servant;

PHILIP SCHUYLER

P. S. I forgot to observe, that the Caughnawaga Deputies avowed that Colonel Johnson had made the infernal invitation to the Indians, mentioned by the Mohawks, viz: to eat a Bostonian, and to drink his blood, and that an ox was roasted on the occasion, and a pipe of red wine given to drink.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LORD STIRLING.

Cambridge, January 10, 1776.

MY LORD: Having received undoubted intelligence of the fitting out of a fleet from Boston, and of the embarkation of the troops from thence, which, from the season of the year, and other circumstances, must be destined for some expedition south of this, and having such information as I can rely on, that the inhabitants of Long-Island, or a great part of them, are inimical to the rights and liberties of America, and, by their conduct and professions, have discovered an apparent inclination to assist in subjugating their countrymen and fellow-citizens to the system of tyr-ny Administration are attempting to establish, there is the greatest reason to apprehend, that this armament, if not immediately designed against the city of New-York, is, nevertheless, intended for Long-Island. Knowing it to be of the last importance to the interest of America, to prevent the enemy from getting possession of these places, and the North River, which would give them the command of the country, and a free communication with Canada, I have despatched Major General Lee, with orders to repair to New-York, with such volunteers as he can raise on his way, (having no troops to spare from hence,) to put the city, and the fortifications up the river, in the best posture of defence the season and situation of affairs will admit of; and for taking proper steps against such persons on Long-Island, and elsewhere, whose conduct hath rendered them suspected of designs unfriendly to the views of Congress, I have directed him to apply to you for the troops of New-Jersey, under your command, in the Continental pay, or such of them as he may think necessary for effecting the purposes of his going. I beg, and am assured, that you will afford him every assistance in your power, for facilitating this business, as far as may be consistent (or not repugnant) to the orders you shall have received from Congress, and with all possible expedition.

I am, my Lord, with much esteem, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Lord Stirling, New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Cambridge, January 10, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: In the confused and disordered state of this Army, occasioned by such capital changes as have taken place of late, I have found it almost impossible to come at exact returns of the strength of our levies. Not till last night was I able to get in the whole, since the dissolution of the old Army. By these, I find myself weaker than I had any idea of, and under the necessity of requesting an exertion of your influence and interest, to prevail upon the Militia of this Government, now in the pay of the Continent, to continue till the last of the month, and longer if requisite. I am assured that those of New-Hampshire will not stay any longer than they engaged for, notwithstanding our weak state, and the progress we make in recruiting, which, by the last week's report, amounts to but little more than half of our usual complement, owing, it is said, to the number of men going, or expecting to go into the Provincial service, at or near their own homes.

I am more and more convinced that we never shall raise the Army to the new establishment by voluntary enlistments. It is, therefore, necessary, that this, and the neighbouring Governments, should consider in time, and adopt some other expedient for effecting it.

The hurry I was in the other day, when your Committee did me the honour to present a petition from a person, (whose name I forgot,) wanting to be employed in the Continental Army, prevented me from being so full on the subject as I wished. I shall beg leave, therefore, at this time to add, that I hope your honourable Board will do me the justice to believe, that it will give me pleasure at all times to pay a proper respect to any recommendation coming from them, and that the reason why I do not now encourage such kind of applications as was made to you, is, that the new Army was arranged as near the plan and agreeable to the orders of Congress, as it was in my power to comply with them, (although some unavoidable departures and changes have taken place,) and the officers thus constituted, ordered to recruit. Every attempt, therefore, of others, not of their appointment, must counteract, and has been of infinite prejudice to the service. They infuse ideas into the minds of the men they have any influence over, that, by engaging with them, or, which is tantamount, not engaging with others, they shall be able to force themselves into the service. Of this we have numberless instances. I am, therefore, anxious to discourage every attempt of this kind, by convincing such persons, that their engaging a company will not bring them in. If they could be once satisfied of this, the business of the Army would go on more smoothly, and with much more regularity and order. In short, gentlemen, it is scarcely possible for me to convey to you a perfect idea of the trouble and vexation I have met with, in getting this matter fixed upon some settled footing. One day an officer would serve, the next he would not, and so on, that I have hardly known what steps to pursue for preserving consistency, and advancing the good of the service, which are the only objects in my view. I have no friend, nor any person with whom I am the least connected, that I want or wish to bring in.

I am, gentlemen, with much esteem and respect, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable the President and Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Cambridge, January 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: In looking over the list of officers in your brigade, I find the whole completed, except in one instance, without paying the least regard to the order which directed that no person should be inserted that was not in the first arrangement, otherwise than by recommendation.

I also find, in the regimental returns of our strength, in your brigade, several matters that need explanation—to wit: a number of men on command—and in Col. Poor's last return, the whole number of his regiment consisted but of two hundred and seventy-seven men; whereas, by the different weekly returns, which he has given, there appears to have been enlisted five hundred and eleven men. In like manner, by the different weekly returns, our whole number of recruits ought to amount to about ten thousand five hundred men; whereas, by the regimental returns of Saturday, (which were only completed last night,) they stand at eight thousand two hundred and twelve, and but five thousand five hundred and eighty-two of these returned present, fit for duty. These things are so alarming, and stand so much in need of explanation, that I must desire you to take a ride to Head-Quarters, and see if they can be accounted for. Major Scammell and Colonel Poor may be necessary, also, in the elucidation of some of these points.

If you were to come to dinner, I should be glad of your company. I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan, Winter-Hill.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, January 10, 1776.

SIR: By Colonel Glover's account, I find that Captain Manly and Captain Burke have engaged, what, in my opinion will, with the officers, be a sufficient number for these small vessels. If the guns belonging to Captain Darby cannot be purchased, they must be replaced out of the two vessels that are not in such forwardness. We shall afterwards think of supplying them. There are two pieces at Cape Ann, out of the ordnance store-ship, and two at Beverly, out of the Concord; these are good guns, and will help. Indeed, I think four as good as six, for the purpose these vessels are fitted out.

The treasury is at present very low. You must, therefore, wait for money until a remittance comes from Philadelphia. We are every day expecting it.

Colonel Glover tells me that both Manly and Burke engaged to advance a month's pay. It was wrong, except the people engaged for twelve months. If they did not, I do not think them entitled to it. However, if you find it will retard the sailing of the vessels, I wish you would raise money, and advance it to them yourself, as the General will not choose to have their accounts blended with the accounts of the Army; which must be the case if Colonel Glover advances the money to them. It will save much trouble, and, at the same time, be your own interest, to keep all the accounts of these vessels in your own hands.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To William Bartlett, Esq., Beverly.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO COLONEL WENTWORTH.

Cambridge, January 10, 1776.

Acknowledged receipt of his and Mr. King's letter of the 10th instant, the latter covering invoice for barrels, and half barrels of flour, given to Stephen Moylan, by order of General Washington. Desired Mr. Wentworth to dispose of five hundred and fifty bushels of potatoes, taken in the schooner Rainbow, at any price, rather than have them perish, and to libel said schooner, agreeable to resolves of Congress sent him herewith.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. IV.

To Colonel Joshua Wentworth, Portsmouth.

JOHN KNIGHT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Northampton, January 10, 1776.

SIR: Many reasons, as well as the unexpected lengthening time of my captivity, induces me to take the liberty of addressing you on a subject, the propriety of which, I must leave to your judgment. Freedom from being a prisoner is the ultimate of my request; and, as this great indulgence, I conceive, lies entirely with your Excellency, I must beg your attention, one moment, to my reasons for this presumption. I have been employed in America since the year 1763, on the survey of the sea-coasts, and, since 1770 until the hour of my captivity, commanded a King's vessel, on that service only; during all which time, I can declare, I never did a single injury to an American, or ever detained one of their vessels, even in an illicit trade, though often in my power. On the contrary, I dare believe, there are several will do me the justice to acknowledge having received assistance from me, when in distress. The work I was then engaged on, was of a publick nature, and intended for the advantage of all; but, as this unhappy dispute must necessarily put a stop to that service, there is not the least probability of my being employed, (should your goodness indulge me with my liberty,) there being so many young gentlemen with the Admiral, waiting for promotion, and many more seeking employment, which, to a man in my situation, having a family in America, would admit of no invitation. I should trespass on your patience, to relate the particulars of my being made prisoner, at Machias, which, I am confident, would appear most favourable for me, and no doubt influence you, sir, in a great measure, to acquiesce with my entreaty. If Captain Stephen Smith, the principal person of that place, was near your Excellency, he would give positive information, that the proceedings with me there, and the Surgeon, Mr. McFadjen, belonging to the Diligent, were altogether contrary to every practice in war.

I beg leave to submit these facts to your Excellency's consideration, and am, with respect, your Excellency's most obedient, very humble servant,

JOHN KNIGHT.

General Washington.

JOSHUA WENTWORTH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Portsmouth, January 10, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday came to town, from London, last from Poole, in England, via Casco Bay, four masters of vessels, belonging to this port, from whom I have collected all the newspapers I possibly could, with sundry packages and letters; and, as I have it in direction from your Excellency, to forward any letters that arrive here, I take the readiest method of their reaching your Excellency, by despatching my young man.

The newspapers are much defaced, previous to their coming to my hand; the anxiety of Americans occasioned a frequent perusal, which, I hope, may apologize for their present state.

The Captains intend setting out for Head-Quarters, in a day or two, who have verbal informations to your Excellency, from some gentlemen of note in London.

In the interim, I have to inform your Excellency, that a number of transports sailed on or about the time these gentlemen left England, (say November 6th,) with stores, for Boston, without convoy; three of which were large ships, formerly in the service of the India Company, and are defenceless. I sincerely wish some of the American armed vessels may conduct them safe to other ports than their first destination.

I am, with much respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JOSHUA WENTWORTH.

His Excellency General Washington.

SOUTHAMPTON (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

Southampton Committee, January 11, 1776.

Present—The Rev. George Gurley, Chairman, and eleven Members.

The honourable Convention, having recommended an inquiry to be made by this Committee, into the conduct of Mr. William Urquhart, merchant, relative to certain goods, mentioned in an account enclosed in a letter from one Hugh Warden, dated Glasgow, September 6, 1775, Mr. Urquhart, having had due notice, appeared before the Committee, and was heard, touching the importation of the said goods. And it appears, from the account, and the examination of his storekeeper, that no goods have been shipped or received by the said Mr. Urquhart contrary to the Association; and that Mr. Urquhart ought to be acquitted of any imputation of having acted contrary to the Association, in that particular.

SAMUEL KELLO, Clerk.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 11, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of the orders I sent to Lieutenant-Colonel Winds, in the night, between the 9th and 10th instant, he sent two officers, attended by a proper guard, to wait upon Governor Franklin, who, at first, refused paying any attention to the message, which kindly invited him to dine with me at this place; but, finding it in vain to act that part, he ordered up his coach, in order to proceed to this place. But Chief Justice Smyth, thinking it was possible to put the matter on an easier footing for the Governor, prevailed on him to give his parole not to depart from his house, on any pretence whatever, not even if a rescue should be offered by Captain Parker, or any other person. This induced Lieutenant-Colonel Winds to suspend the Governor's journey, till he could hear from me, and the Chief Justice came Chargé d'affaires, to negotiate the business here. I have given the Lieutenant-Colonel orders to let the Governor remain at his house, on the conditions stipulated, until I have the orders of Congress to the contrary.

I am, with great regard and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp before Quebec, January 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take the liberty, most heartily, to console with you the loss of great, amiable, and brave General Montgomery, and those brave men who fell with him. By his death, the command of the Army devolves on me; of course, I have carefully examined his instructions from the honourable Continental Congress, and their resolutions respecting this country. I find it strongly recommended to him, to conciliate the affections of the Canadians, and cherish every dawning of liberty which appears among them; and to assure them of the friendship and protection of the Congress; and to endeavour to form, on a lasting basis, a firm union between them and the Colonies, by forming a Provincial Congress, and, from that body, giving them a full representation in the Grand Continental Congress. This, I am confident, the General laboured for with the greatest assiduity, and with as great a degree of success as could be expected, under the present state of affairs.

The disposition of the Canadians is very favourable to your wishes; (the only bar, of consequence, is Quebeck; as this is the key, so, in a great measure, it governs the whole country;) who, having been so long habituated to slavery, and having, as yet, but a faint sense of the value of liberty, are naturally timorous and diffident, and want every possible encouragement to take an active part. This bar removed, I humbly conceive every other obstacle, to a firm and lasting union with Canada, will, of course, be removed. So long as Quebeck remains in the hands of the enemy, it will not be in our power to assist and protect them; of course, we cannot expect their hearty exertions in our favour. Quebeck appears to me an object of the highest importance to the Colonies, and, if proper methods are adopted, must inevitably fall into their hands, before the garrison can be relieved. The whole garrison of Quebeck, including men, women, and children, is supposed, by gentlemen who left town the beginning of December, to be four thousand.

A gentleman of veracity assures me, that Mr. Alsop, the King's Commissary, told him, in confidence, that there was not one thousand barrels of flour in the town; and, it was notorious among the merchants, there was not eight thousand bushels of wheat, and no convenience for flouring it. Provisions of meat were known to be much less than those of bread, though they had some quantity of fish. It is generally agreed, they had short of four months' provision the 1st December. This cannot be exactly ascertained, as the Governor denied the inhabitants liberty of viewing the stores, or giving them any satisfaction, in regard to the quantity. It appears, a blockhead must answer our purpose; it is possible it may not. Will it be prudent to trust an object of such vast importance to the event? With submission, I think it will not. What is to be done? A sufficient force employed to reduce it, by a regular siege, or assault? If the first is attempted, an addition of three thousand men to our present force will, I make no doubt, be thought necessary; if the latter, at least five thousand. The former, with a vast expense and great waste of ammunition, may prove unsuccessful; the latter, from the extensiveness of their works, I think cannot; and five thousand men will hardly be a sufficient garrison, if the place is taken. I beg leave to recommend the sending a body of at least five thousand men, with an experienced General, into Canada, as early as possible; and, in the mean time, that every possible preparation, of mortars, howitzers, and some heavy cannon, should be made, as the season will permit our raising batteries by the middle of March, which may, very possibly, be attended with success, as we can place our mortars under cover, within two hundred yards of the walls, and within one thousand of the centre of the town; and, if supplied with shells, carcasses, &c., can set fire to it whenever we please, which, I make no doubt, would reduce the garrison to terms.

I am well assured more than half of the inhabitants of Quebeck would gladly open the gates to us, but are prevented by the strict discipline and watch kept over them, the command of the guards being constantly given to officers of the Crown, known to be firm in their interest. The garrison consists of about fifteen hundred men, great part of whom Governor Carleton can place no confidence in, or he would not suffer a blockade, and every distress of a siege, by seven hundred men, our force consisting of no more, at present, including Colonel Livingston's Regiment of two hundred Canadians. I have arranged my men in such order, as effectually to blockade the city, and to assist each other as early as possible, if attacked. The men are obliged to lay on their arms constantly, and to mount guard every other night. Their duty is exceedingly hard; however, the men appear alert and cheerful, though wanting many necessities, which cannot be procured here.

I expect General Wooster from Montreal, with a reinforcement, every minute. I have withdrawn our cannon from the battery, and placed them around the magazine, which contains a considerable quantity of powder and ordnance stores, which I am fearful of removing, lest it should make unfavourable impressions on the Canadians, and induce them to withdraw their assistance, and Governor Carleton, presuming on our panic, to sally out. I thought it most prudent to put the best face on matters, and betray no marks of fear. We are in great want of cash; our finances have never afforded any, of consequence, to the troops, who make heavy complaints, not without reason. We have often been reduced to a few johannes, and never able to procure more than ten days' sustenance beforehand. Our whole dependance has been on Mr. Price, who has done every thing in his power, and is the only resource we have at present. I have received two petards from Monsieur Pelissier, at Three-Rivers, who assures me he can supply us with shells, by the 1st of April.

Enclosed is a list of officers killed and wounded in the unfortunate attack on Quebeck. The prisoners and missing amount to about four hundred. Governor Carleton has permitted the baggage of both officers and men to be sent in, and (strange to tell) treats them with humanity.

I think myself, in justice, bound to acknowledge the good conduct and intrepidity, of both officers and men, of my detachment, who undauntedly marched up, in the face of the enemy's cannon; in particular, the volunteers of Captain Oswald, who signalized himself in the attack on their battery, and is now a prisoner.

I hope, gentlemen, my being confined to my bed with my wound and a severe fit of the gout, will apologize for the incoherency and inaccuracy of my scrawl; and that you will believe me, with respect and esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To the Honourable Continental Congress.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp before Quebec, January 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since writing the enclosed, General Wooster has acquainted me he cannot leave Montreal, but has sent down Colonel Clinton, to whom I shall resign the command, until my wound will permit my doing duty, which my Surgeon thinks will be four or six weeks. Colonel Clinton acquaints me, we cannot expect more than two hundred men from Montreal. I have put on foot the raising a regiment of three hundred Canadians, which I make no doubt of effecting. They are to have the same pay, and be under the same regulations, as the Continental forces. I make no doubt the exigency of our affairs will justify the step I have taken, (though without authority for so doing,) and that it will be approved of by the honourable Continental Congress.

I am, most respectfully, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

P. S. The forts of Niagara and Detroit are an object, which, I make no doubt, the honourable Congress have in view. Mr. Antill, now on his way down, can inform you in regard to their strength, stores, &c.

B. A.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Cambridge, January 11, 1776.

SIR: Every account I have out of Boston confirms the embarkation of troops, mentioned in my last, which, from the season of the year, and other circumstances, must be destined for some expedition to the southward of this. I have, therefore, thought it prudent to send Major-General Lee to New-York. I have given him letters, recommendatory to Governor Trumbull, and to the Committee of Safety at New-York. I have good hopes, that in Connecticut, he will get many volunteers, who, I have some reason to think, will accompany him on this expedition, without more expense to the Continent than their maintenance; but, should it be otherwise, and that they should expect pay, I think it is a trifling consideration, when put in competition with the importance of the object—which is to put the city of New-York, such parts of the North River, and Long-Island, as to him shall seem proper, in that state of defence which the season of the year, and circumstances will admit of, so as, if possible, to prevent the enemy from forming a lodgment in that Government, which, I am afraid, contains too many persons disaffected to the cause of liberty and America. I have, also, wrote to Lord Stirling, to give him all the assistance that he can, with the troops under his command in the Continental service, provided it does not interfere with any orders he may receive from Congress relative to them. I hope the Congress will approve of my conduct in sending General Lee upon this expedition. I am sure I mean it well, as experience teaches us, that it is much easier to prevent an enemy from posting themselves, than it is to dislodge them after they have got possession.

The evening of the 8th instant, a party of our men, under the command of Major Knovton, were ordered to go and burn some houses, which lay at the foot of Bunker's Hill, and at the head of Charlestown. They were, also, ordered to bring off the guard, which, we expected, consisted of an officer and thirty men. They crossed the mill-dam, about half after eight o'clock, and gallantly executed their business, having burnt eight houses, and brought with them a sergeant and four privates, of the Tenth Regiment.

There was but one man more there, who, making some resistance, they were obliged to despatch. The gun that killed him, was the only one that was discharged by our men, though several hundreds were fired by the enemy from within their works, but in so confused a manner that not one of our people was hurt. Our inlistments go on very heavily.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 5, 1776.

(Parole, Hancock.)

(Countersign, Adams.)

The Majors of Brigade to order the Adjutants to be exact and punctual in making their weekly returns of the strength of each regiment; also, a separate return of the numbers inlisted in the course of last week, at orderly time to-morrow: The weekly returns to be according to the form lately sent by the Adjutant-General.

The regimentals, which have been made up, and drawn for, may be delivered to the respective Colonels, by the Quartermaster-General, to the order of those Colonels, who drew them at such prices as they have cost the Continent, which is much cheaper than could otherwise be obtained. As nothing adds more to the appearance of a man, than dress, and a proper degree of cleanliness in his person, the General hopes and expects, that each regiment will contend for the most soldierlike appearance. He is, also, very desirous of having the men instructed, as speedily as possible, in all parts of their duty, and recommends it to all the Colonels, to be very careful in the choice of their Non-commissioned Officers; and to their Captains, to divide their companies into small squads, appointing a Sergeant and Corporal to each, from whom the utmost diligence is expected. Those Sergeants and Corporals are by no means to suffer the arms and accoutrements of any man, in their squads, to be dirty, or unfit for use; and, as far as in them lies, to make the men appear neat, clean, and soldierlike. Neglect of duty, in these instances, they may rely upon it, will reduce them to the ranks. These orders are not intended to exempt the Commissioned Officers of the companies, from the strictest attention to these things; on the contrary, as it serves to show the General's solicitude in having the men, and their arms, appear in the best order, it is hoped they will double their diligence.

If Colonel Brewer inclines to accept the appointment of Barrackmaster, he is to proceed directly to discharge the duty of that office; and, as the first business to be done in an army, is with the Quartermaster of each regiment, he is to see that the number of men, for which each barrack was designed, are immediately quartered therein, keeping the regiments together as much as possible, that every tent may be delivered into the Quartermaster-General's store.

The Regimental Quartermasters, and their Sergeants, are to cause proper necessities to be erected, at convenient distances from the barracks in which their men are lodged, and see that those necessities are frequently filled up. Any person who shall be discovered easing himself elsewhere, is to be instantly confined, and brought before a Regimental Court-Martial. They are to cause, also, the filth and garbage about the barracks, to be removed and buried. In short, it is in a particular manner the duty of the Quartermaster to see that the barracks are kept clean and sweet, the victuals properly prepared, &c.; and, although it is the particular business of the Quartermasters, and their Sergeants, to see this done, it is equally necessary, and the duty of the other officers, to look into this business, as too much care cannot be used in a matter where the health of the men so much depends upon it.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 6, 1776.

(Parole, Gerry.)

(Countersign, Chase.)

The General is informed that a custom hath prevailed, at the main guard in Cambridge, of permitting prisoners to be absent upon their parole; he, therefore, orders a total stop be put to this practice for the future. Any officer offending herein, will be immediately put in arrest, and tried for disobedience of orders.

The frequent application for flags at Roxbury, having been found troublesome, and, at the same time, attended with inconveniences, Major-General Ward is requested to suffer no more than one week to go in, unless it be on special occasions, and this to happen on Tuesdays, at which time he will appoint a proper officer always to attend.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 7, 1776.

(Parole, Lynch.)

(Countersign, Morris.)

The Adjutant-General will, this day, deliver to the Brigade Majors, the number of the new Articles of War necessary for each regiment, in their respective brigades; and that no mistake in regard to the said Articles may possibly happen, each book is signed by the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, and countersigned, upon the title page, by William Tudor, Esq., Judge Advocate of the Army of the United Colonies.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 8, 1776.

(Parole, Harrison.)

(Countersign, Johnson.)

It is exceedingly astonishing to the General, that he is yet without those Returns which were called for on the 1st and 3d instants. It is impossible that the business of an army can be conducted with any degree of regularity or propriety, where so much inattention prevails; and he desires that the Commanding Officers of such regiments as are conscious of their neglect, in the instances now referred to, will take notice, and be fully persuaded, that if those Returns are not made at, or before orderly time to-morrow, that they will be ordered under an arrest, and tried for disobedience of orders.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 9, 1776.

(Parole, Knowlton.)

(Countersign, Charlestown.)

The General thanks Major Knowlton, and the officers and soldiers who were under his command last night, for the spirit, conduct and secrecy with which they burnt the houses near the enemy's works, upon Bunker's Hill. The General was in a more particular manner pleased with the resolution the party discovered, in not firing a shot, as nothing betrays greater signs of fear, and less of the soldier, than to begin a loose, undirected, and unmeaning fire, from whence no good can result, nor any valuable purposes answered.

It is almost certain that the enemy will attempt to revenge the insult which was cast upon them last night; for which reason the greatest vigilance and care is recommended; and it also is recommended, that the out-posts be always guarded by experienced officers and good soldiers, who are to be considered in other duties.

It is, also, again and again ordered, that the men are not suffered to ramble from, or lie out of their quarters, contrary to repeated orders on this head, and that their arms and accoutrements be always in order.

To remove present doubts, and prevent future mistakes, it is hereby expressly ordered and directed, that no persons do proceed to discharge the duty of any office, without a regular appointment, by commission from the Congress, warrant, or general order, from the Commander-in-chief. No allowance will be made to any one who acts contrary to this order. All persons, therefore, for their own sakes, are desired to take notice of it, and govern themselves accordingly, that no complaints may hereafter be exhibited for services unwarranted.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 10, 1776.

(Parole, Nelson.)

(Countersign, Langdon.)

His Excellency General Washington has been pleased to appoint Mr. William Morony, Provost-Marshal to the Army of the United Colonies, serving in the Massachusetts-Bay; he is, therefore, in all things appertaining to his office, to be considered and obeyed as such.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 11, 1776.

(Parole, Mount Airy.)

(Countersign, Calvert.)

Head-Quarters, at Cambridge, January 11, 1776.

All officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, belonging to any of the regiments or corps of the Army of the United Colonies, under the immediate command of His Excellency General Washington, who are absent upon furlough, recruiting, or by permission of their commanding officers, are to join their respective regiments by the 1st day of February next. If any officer neglects to pay due obedience to this order, he will be immediately cashiered; and any non-commissioned officers or soldiers offending therein, will be tried and punished as deserters.

By His Excellency's command:

TO THE SOLDIERS OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, WHO ARE NOW IN ARMS AGAINST THE LAWS OF THEIR COUNTRY.

Boston, January 11, 1776.

My Fellow-Citizens :

You have been addressed, by the General Officers of the Continental Army, as fellow-soldiers, and with that insinuating art which was designed to move your passions. I would not draw your attentions from it, provided you will devote your cooler moments to a dispassionate consideration of its subject-matter.

Suffer me, on my part, to address you as fellow-citizens; for I cannot have such dishonourable thoughts of you as to suppose that, when you put on the soldier, you then put off the citizen. Citizens most of you were; you enjoyed the comforts of domestick life, you lately followed your different occupations, and reaped the profits of a quiet and peaceable industry; and I hope in God that you may yet do it, without any disturbance to your innocent wives and children. But, in the late courses of your lives, you must not only have given great uneasiness to your families, but, I dare to say, that all of you were not quite free from uneasiness in your own minds. I know, my dear countrymen, that many of you have been drove to take up arms against your Sovereign and the laws of the happiest Constitution that ever human beings were blest with; some through the necessities incident to human nature, and others by that compulsion which the malevolent and ambitious arts of your leaders have made necessary to deceive you with, in order to screen themselves from that vengeance which the injured laws of society had devoted them to. Many a tear of pity have I dropped for you and for the fate of my country; and many more tears I fear that I shall be forced to shed for the wrath which awaits you from an offended Heaven and an injured Government. Many of your associates have already quitted the field of battle, to appear before that solemn tribunal, where the plea of the united force of all the Colonies will be of no avail, to bribe the judgment, or avert the sentence, of an offended Deity. Some of them, in the agonies of death, sent messages to their friends to forbear proceeding any further, for they now found themselves in the wrong; others have repeatedly said, that an ambition of appearing something considerable, and that only, led them into rebellion. And the unhappy leader in the fatal action at Charlestown, (who, from ambition, only, had raised himself from a bare-legged milk boy to a Major-General of the Army,) although the fatal ball gave him not a moment for reflection, yet had said, in his life time, that he was determined to mount over the heads of his coadjutors, and get to the last round of the ladder, or die in the attempt. Unhappy man! his fate arrested him in his career, and he can now tell whether pride and ambition are pillars strong enough to support the tottering fabrick of rebellion.

But, not to divert you from an attention to the Address of your officers, I would, rather, wish you to weigh it with exactness; and, after you have so done, if you then should think that it is better to trample upon the laws of the mildest Government upon earth, and throw off your allegiance to the most humane Sovereign that ever swayed a sceptre, and submit to a tyranny uncontrolled, either by the laws of God or man, then blame none but yourselves, if the consequences should be fatally bad to you and to your families.

Your officers, my countrymen, have taken great pains to sooth and flatter you, that you may not quit your posts and forsake them, until they have accomplished their ambitious and desperate schemes. Your leaders know that they have plunged themselves into the bowels of the most wanton and unnatural rebellion that ever existed; they think that, by engaging numbers to partake in their guilt, they shall appear formidable, and that, by so numerous an appearance, the hand of justice will not dare to arrest them. Some of you know that this argument hath been frequently urged; but you must know that much superior Powers than this Continent can boast of, have been conquered by that Government which you are now at war with.

Your officers tell you, that they have reduced the regiments from thirty-eight to twenty-six, and assign, as a reason, that many officers, from a puny habit of body, found themselves incapable of fulfilling the duty of their station, have been obliged to absent themselves from their posts, and, consequently, the duty has fallen very heavily upon those who remained. Whether this is a true reason or not, some of you can tell. Be it so or not, why, then, not appoint others? Are none of you fit for officers, but those who absented themselves from their posts? You, generally, took up arms about the same time, and I dare to say, that many of you were as well qualified for commissions as those who left their posts.

Another reason they sooth you with, for disbanding twelve regiments, is, that the vast expense of attending the maintenance of so many regiments might have disabled the Continent from persevering in its resolution of defending their liberties, if the contest should be of any continuance. Surely, my countrymen, you cannot be deluded with such trifling pleas. Can this Continent, which undertakes to carry on a war with the power of Great Britain, be alarmed at a few millions of dollars? Their resources are boundless. The issuing of paper money is easily accomplished; and, while you cannot be compelled to take it, the Continent can never be disabled from persevering in its resolutions. Unhappily for them, they have discovered to you what will be much for your interest to know, viz: that the vast expense of this civil war will be a burden too heavy for the shoulders of you or your posterity to bear. Consider that, already, three millions of dollars have been emitted in paper, and that four hundred and thirty-four thousand dollars, equal to nine hundred and seventy-six thousand pounds, old tenor, is assessed on the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay, to redeem their part; and how much more must be raised to carry on this unnatural war, which was commenced to gratify the pride and desperation of many of your leaders, time, alone, will discover. You have just entered the lists, but there is much yet to be done. To finish the mighty independent empire which they have planted for you, demands such resources as it will require one century to sponge away. Most of you have groaned under a tax of about two or three hundred thousand pounds, old tenor; but, when millions are thrown into the scale, they will press you down, never to rise more.

Your officers tell you, that men who are possessed of a vivacity of disposition, though brave, and in all other respects unexceptionable, are totally unfit for service. This is a new doctrine, advanced to make good officers and soldiers. It is a mystery, which I leave to that dulness and stupidity which your officers have complimented you with, to unravel. The meaning of it you are best acquainted with; but it puts me in mind of what I have heard from the mouth of an arch traitor, who was disappointed in his expectations of the promotions of his near relations, viz: That the people were a set of d—d stupid asses, and were fit only to be drove.

You are further told, that the present campaign is far from a hard one. How hard you have worked, and how much duty you have done, you, yourselves, can tell best. Many who have seen your labours, have thought them great; and I am much inclined to believe that you have gone through some difficulty, especially when your officers, having forgot the popularity of this harangue, almost in the next breath tell you, that the post you at present occupy was fortified and secured by infinite labour. It is an old and just maxim, my countrymen, that deceivers ought to have good memories.

You are next addressed, in the invariable style, for years past, of newspapers and popular harangues, with the abuses of Ministers and Generals. This may keep up your spirits, for aught I know. Town-meeting oratory, I know, has frequently had this effect, till the spirit of it was evaporated, and then it flattened, so as to be quite insipid. They boast much of the attachment of Nova-Scotia and Canada to what they call your interest, as well as of the rest of the Continent. I give you one word of advice, and, as it is from a book which, it is said, you are fighting for, so I suppose that you will not totally disregard it. It is this: "Let not him that putteth on the harness boast as he that putteth it off." But as to the success of union, which you have met with, the same book says, that rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft. It is so, my countrymen, in a double sense; for, in the first place, no person, but one who was bewitched, would run the risk of engaging in a rebellion; and, in the next place, (which is the true meaning of the words,) as witchcraft is renouncing the authority of God Almighty, and applying to the Devil, so rebellion is withdrawing allegiance from a lawful Sovereign, overturning his laws and government, and joining with a power inimical to him.

You are also told that, as the Southern Provinces have ever placed the greatest confidence in your zeal and valour, they did not think it necessary to raise any bodies in the other Provinces for this particular service. Do you believe, my countrymen, that any of the Massachusetts officers were concerned in drawing this Address to you? If so, beware of them, before it is too late. I will not believe it. It surely must be drawn by some of your foreign officers, whom you have disgraced yourselves by suffering them to command you, when you had men of your own Province who were, at least, equal to them, and who would have more naturally cared for you. But you may have felt the ill consequence of it even now, and it may be too late for redress. The true English of it runs thus: The Massachusetts have a different interest from the rest of the Continent; they are a set of brave, hardy dogs, and are always encroaching upon their neighbours, and ought to be humbled; and, when we have established our independency, we shall have much to fear from them. Let us, therefore, make them the mercenaries; they will sacrifice every thing for money; we can pay them in paper, which they are so fond of; by engaging them for soldiers, they will get knocked in the head; their wives and children will be ruined; and, when we have established our empire, we shall have nothing to fear from them; they will become an easy prey to the rest of the Provinces, and we can parcel them out among us as we may think proper.

The remainder of your officers' Address to you, I leave to your own remarks. It is so full of compliment and flattery, in order to catch your passions, that I cannot help blushing for you; and if you are caught by it, I shall then pity you, and you will blush for yourselves.

That you may not plead ignorance, in justification of yourselves, in case the fate of war should be against you, I will now let you into the origin and progress of the public disorders which, for many years past, have sickened the state of this Province, and, at last, hath terminated in a most unnatural and ungrateful rebellion. I am persuaded, my countrymen, that you are ignorant of the true rise of your disorders; the aim of your leaders hath been to keep you in ignorance; they knew that your ignorance was their protection. Had you known their views, you would not only have spurned at the thought of overturning the Constitution, but I venture to say, that some of you would have dragged them to the bar of justice, there to have received that punishment which now awaits them, and I wish that you, yourselves, may not be involved in, as partakers in their crimes. The history runs thus, and every page of it is capable of ample proof.

Know, then, for many years past, this Province hath been deeply immersed in the smuggling business. Perhaps some of you are ignorant, though I am sure all of you are not, of the meaning of smuggling business. I will tell you what it means; it is an importation of goods contrary to the laws of the society to which we belong; it is a defrauding the King of those dues which the law hath granted to him, which fraud is equal, in criminality, to the injuring of a private person; it is a violation of the laws of Christianity; it is injuring, and, perhaps, ruining, our neighbour; in short, when it is thoroughly engaged in, it naturally tends, by degrees, to the effacing every sentiment of virtue. This is a description of the smuggling business; and it is here where I fix the sudden rise of the present rebellion.

In order to evade those laws against unlawful trade, those who were concerned in it, exerted themselves to defeat them. Unluckily for the Government, at that juncture, a person, who had a long while been hunting after preferment, was disappointed of his game; on which, a friend of his, who was versed in the law, vowed revenge; he swore that he would set the Province in a flame, if he died in the attempt. He fulfilled his oath, and burnt his fingers, to such a degree, that he hath irrecoverably lost the use of them. Remember, my countrymen, that there is one sort of flame, that consumes not only a man's property, but also a man's understanding, and ruins, very often, his posterity, also. This man's adroitness in law was thought necessary to be engaged in the cause of defeating acts of Parliament. He was engaged, and he had shrewdness enough to start a thought which, artfully pursued, hath, generally, its expected effect in all popular commotions. He said, that it was necessary to enlist a Black regiment in their service; the bait was snapped at, and many ministers of the Gospel, too, (too many for the honour of the Christian religion,) joined in the cry. The press then routed out its libels; the sacred desk, which ought to have been devoted to the doctrines and precepts of the Prince of Peace, rang its changes on Government, and sounded the trumpet of sedition and rebellion. Boys, who had just thrown away their satchels, and who could scarcely read English, mounted the pulpit, and ventured to decide on matters which had puzzled the sages of the law. Nay, they could not be contented to decide controversies of law, in their harangues to their audiences, but must show their parts in their solemn addresses to the Supreme Being, telling Him who had been guilty of murder, where the law had pronounced the supposed crime to be only self-defence; and some of them even debased the sacred character, by setting on the rabble, in the public street, to insult a person who was obnoxious to the leaders of the mob. At the same time, a notorious defaulter, who had pocketed a large sum of the public moneys, in order to screen himself, took it into his head to mouth it for patriotism; and, by artful wiles and smooth demeanour, he talked the people out of their understandings, and persuaded them to give him a discharge from the debt, on account of his patriotism. This man, whom, but a day before, hardly any one would have trusted with a shilling, and whose honesty they were jealous of, now became the confidant of the people. With his oily tongue, he duped a man whose brains were shallow and pockets deep, and ushered him to the public as a patriot, too. He filled his head with importance, and emptied his pockets, and, as a reward, hath kicked him up the ladder, where he now presides over the Twelve United Provinces, and where they both are at present plunging you, my countrymen, into the depths of distress. Libertinism, riot, and robbery, soon became the effects of this sort of public spirit; houses were plundered and demolished; persons were beat, abused, tarred and feathered; courts of justice were insulted; the pillars of Government were destroyed; and no way to escape the torrent of savage barbarity but by paying obedience to the sovereign mandates of a mob. Garrets were crowded with patriots; mechanicks and lawyers, porters and clergymen, huddled promiscuously into them; their decisions were oracular, and from thence they poured out their midnight reveries. They soon determined to form an independent empire. Yes, my countrymen, I assure you that this independent empire, which you are now assisting those pretended patriots to erect, was formed above seven years ago, though I dare say that most of you are ignorant of the black design. And one of the patriots, (peace be to his manes!) openly avowed it, and declared that a valuation had been taken of the estates in the town of Boston, which, he supposed, would be destroyed by the naval power of Great Britain; and that all the friends of licentiousness were to be reimbursed out of the estates of the friends to Government.

The patriots were determined to humble Great Britain; and, as a first step, they promoted a Non-Importation Agreement, at the same time that the wealthy and artful among them had large quantities of goods by them, by the advanced sale of which they made fortunes, and ruined the small traders. They promised to send their new-imported goods back to England; and, instead thereof, their trunks were crowded with billets of wood, shavings, and brickbats, (to the eternal disgrace of this Province,) when they were opened in England. Some of the patriots carried about papers of subscription against importing goods from England; and washing-women and porters, in order to swell the list, made their marks, (for write they could not,) that they would not import coaches or chariots from home. When they were told of the impropriety of such a conduct, and that the scheme would have no effect, they replied, that they were sensible of it, but Great Britain would be scared by it. They hired mercenaries in England to cabal and write for them, and raise an insurrection. When they were told that Great Britain would be roused, they said that she was not to be dreaded; that she had neither men nor money; that there was more money in the Colonies than in England; that, if she should resent it, the Colonies would not pay her the millions that were due to her. Not content with this insult, the General Assembly disavowed any observance of Acts of Parliament. Great Britain, with her usual lenity, pitied our infatuation, till she was, at last, forced to send troops to support civil Government; those troops we were then to destroy, and we did our best to destroy them, but felt the fatal consequence of the attempt. Our violences at last rose to such a height, that injured sovereignty and an insulted Government have been roused to assert their authority, in order to curb as wanton and wicked a rebellion as ever raged in any Government upon earth.

Thus, my countrymen, I have very shortly stated to you, the rise and progress of the present rebellion. I believe that many, if not most of you, were insensible of the ambitious views of your leaders. I do not think that you were so devoid of virtue as to rush into so horrid a crime at one leap; for, let me tell you, that it is the highest crime that a member of society can be guilty of, and the punishment annexed to it is nothing less than a forfeiture of estate and life. Your leaders have deceived you into what they do not believe themselves; they were desperate themselves, and they have involved you in their own just doom. They tell you your properties and religion are at stake: your ministers tell you so too; and I know that you are too apt to take all they say for gospel. But pray, what danger is your religion in? Why, it is said, that Popery is established in Canada, and will be established here. No, my countrymen! Popery is not established in Canada, let your teachers and leaders assert it never so roundly; it is only indulged to the Roman Catholics there. Your Continental Congress says God and nature have given them a right to the enjoyment of their religion; it is what they capitulated for with General Anherst; it is what the just, the humane King George the Third, confirmed to them. This is the King whom you so lately professed allegiance to, in opposition to the Parliament; not considering that it was by acts of Parliament that the Crown was placed upon his head, and on the heads of his predecessors. It seems, indeed, that your leaders have more lately found out that it is necessary to deny the authority of the King, as they have been daring in denying that of his Parliament. Witness their late Thanksgiving Proclamation, which concludes with a "God save the People," instead of the heretofore invariable "God save the King." Will it not suffice your leaders to mock the King, but they must mock Heaven also? Read it over; view the cloven foot of one of your spiritual guides peeping out, whose pen fabricated the mockery, and whose foot has many a time trod the recesses of rebellion with the cabal, and I dare to say, that had it not been for his mole-like, underground cunning and priestcraft, that this, once over-happy, but now miserably distracted Province, had not been so soon involved in distress.

I would ask you, also, my countrymen, how your properties are at stake? You will, doubtless, tell me, that acts of Parliament have been made to oblige you to pay duties upon various articles. Be it so. Why then do you purchase articles that are to pay duties? Why then did you not petition, in a constitutional manner, to have those acts repealed? The British Parliament never assumed to themselves infallibility; and many a time have they repealed American acts, when they have been convinced that the enforcement of them was incompatible with the mutual interest. It is true, your leaders did petition; but in such an unconstitutional manner, that it was below the dignity, and contrary to the system of the English Government, to hear such petitions; and this your leaders knew must be the fate of them; and this method they planned, in order to effect their independence, and make themselves of that importance to you which they now appear in. But you can have no just plea for entering so deeply into opposition against the parent state. You may know, if you please, that King Charles the First granted to our ancestors a charter; you may call it a compact, if you please, too; and, if it be so, the argument will be much against you; for in that you compacted to pay duties after a short term of years, and you have been fulfilling your compact by paying duties for above an hundred years past; till of late, the scandalous smuggling business reared its front against the laws, and brought the state into its present distraction. You have been told, also, that your land was to be taxed, and that you were to be brought into Lordships. This, I know, hath been artfully propagated among you, and I dare assert it to be groundless. There is too much justice and benignity in the English Government to advance such a scheme; and, supposing that they had it in their idea to do it, so violent an opposition ought to have been suspended, at least, till the scheme had been brought into action; it is like one man's cutting another's throat, lest the other might possibly injure his grandchildren.

I am loath to detain you any longer, my countrymen, from sober reflection. For God's sake, for your own sakes, for your wives' and children's sake, pause a moment, and weigh the event of this unnatural civil war. You have roused the British Lion; you have incensed that Power which hath crushed much greater Powers than you can boast of, and hath done it without your aid too. Great Britain is not so distressed for men or money as some would make you believe. Your conduct hath raised the resentment of the greatest Powers in Europe, and she may, if she pleases, accept of their proffered aid. But your priests and your leaders tell you otherwise; and I will just put the case, that, supposing Heaven in righteous judgment, should suffer you to conquer; look forward then to the fatal consequences of your conquest. You will be conquered by an army of your own raising; and then your dreaded slavery is fixed; the ambition and desperation of your leaders will then demand the fruit of all their toils. Turn back a few pages of the English history; read the account of the civil wars of the last century; and view the triumph, and absolute sway of that tyrant Cromwell; he, like some of your leaders, began with humoring the enthusiasm of the times, and ended the parricide of his country. Let me suppose again, as you vainly imagine, that this will not be the case, and that when you have conquered, you will then beat all your swords into ploughshares; how long do you think it will be before you are obliged to change sides, and beat your ploughshares into swords again? You will then have twelve or fourteen Colonies to form into an independent empire. Where then is to be the seat of empire? Surely the Massachusetts-Bay hath the best title to precedence; they begun the rebellion, and they have the best title to reward. Do you think that the other Colonies cannot furnish as artful demagogues as this Province can? Do not imagine that we are the men, and that wisdom is to die with us. We shall be cantoned out into petty States; we shall be involved in perpetual wars, for an inch or two of ground; our fertile fields will be deluged with blood; our wives and children be involved in the horrid scene; foreign Powers will step in and share in the plunder that remains, and those who are left to tell the story will be reduced to a more abject slavery than that which you now dread. The Colonies are too jealous of each other to remain long in a state of friendship.

I will now, my fellow-citizens, change the scene, to a more eligible view for your interest, and suppose it possible, (though you do not think it so,) that Great Britain can conquer you, and that, instead of being victors, you may be subjects again. You will then have the mildest Government to live under—a Government to be envied by the rest of mankind, and whose only unhappiness is, that it is too apt to abuse that liberty which God and the Constitution hath blessed it with. She hath been loath to call you conquered; she hath, like an over-fond parent, indulged your peevishness, and withheld her resentment until she hath felt the smart of her indulgence; she is now roused, but her resentment is tempered with mildness. He whom you formerly acknowledged for your Sovereign, drops the tear of pity for you, in his late speech from the Throne—a speech so attempted with paternal pity, Royal firmness of mind, and sentiment of dignity, as distinguishes the speaker as the father of his country, and the ornament of human nature. Clemency he is distinguished for; he is revered for his humanity; but his soul is impressed with too much magnanimity to suffer his laws, and the rights of his subjects, to be trampled under the foot of rebellion; he holds out the sceptre of mercy, that bright gem of his Royal dignity, for you to embrace; but if you choose to kiss the rod of his justice, be you yourselves witnesses that it is not his choice.

Remember that Heaven punishes but to save. The God of heaven hath repeatedly checked rebellion, and our own history confirms its defeats. Rebellion is so odious in the eyes of all rational beings, that it is for the universal good that it should be suppressed; it saps the foundation of moral virtue, and, therefore, it is for the general interest that all nature should rise in arms against it; and I have not the least doubt, that Providence will arrest it in its career. When that time comes, complain not that you were not forewarned, and bear your own punishment without murmuring.

That you may seriously reflect on your own impending fate, and the fate of your wives and innocent children, before you take the deadly plunge, and that you may immediately retire from the precipice of ruin, is the friendly wish of your fellow-citizen,

TO MESHECK WEARE.

Portsmouth, January 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As the Committee chosen yesterday, by this town, are just going to Exeter, with a petition and remonstrance to the Congress, against their proceedings, I thought I would just inform you of it, for I think it gives a silly cast to all their doings. I hope they will not comply with their request. The objection was first started in the Committee, at the Work-House, the night before last, and the town-meeting called yesterday. The meeting was very thin, not above forty or fifty persons in it; every one in the meeting voted for it, though, I believe, they were actuated from different motives. They voted to send circular letters to all the towns, that they may remonstrate likewise. It was proposed, I think, by designing men, on purpose to make a division in the Colony, and I believe will go near to effect it, unless the wisdom of the Congress prevent it.

I am, &c.,

VERITAS.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MARYLAND DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

In Convention, held at ANNAPOLIS, in MARYLAND, JANUARY 11, 1776.

To the Honourable Matthew Tilghman, Esq., Thomas Johnson, Jun., Robert Goldsborough, William Paca, Samuel Chase, Thomas Stone, Robert Alexander, and John Rogers, Esquires.

The Convention, taking into their most serious consideration the present state of the unhappy dispute between Great Britain and the United Colonies, think it proper to deliver you their sentiments, and to instruct you in certain points, relative to your conduct in Congress, as Representatives of this Province.

The experience we and our ancestors have had, of the mildness and equity of the English Constitution, under which we have grown up to, and enjoyed a state of felicity, not exceeded among any people we know of, until the grounds of the present controversy were laid by the Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, has most strongly endeared to us that form of Government from whence these blessings have been derived, and makes us ardently wish for a reconciliation with the mother country, upon terms that may ensure to these Colonies an equal and permanent freedom.

To this Constitution we are attached, not merely by habit, but by principle, being in our judgments persuaded it is, of all known systems, best calculated to secure the liberty of the subject—to guard against despotism on the one hand, and licentiousness on the other.

Impressed with these sentiments, we warmly recommend to you, to keep constantly in your view the avowed end and purpose for which these Colonies originally associated—the redress of American grievances, and securing the rights of the Colonists.

As upon the attainment of these great objects, we shall think it our greatest happiness to be thus firmly united to Great Britain, we think proper to instruct you, that should any proposition be happily made by the Crown or Parliament, that may lead to or lay a rational and probable ground for reconciliation, you use your utmost endeavours to cultivate and improve it into a happy settlement and lasting amity, taking care to secure the Colonies against the exercise of the right assumed by Parliament, to tax them, and to alter and change their Charters, Constitutions, and internal polity, without their consent—powers incompatible with the essential securities of the lives, liberties, and properties of the Colonists.

We further instruct you, that you do not, without the previous knowledge and approbation of the Convention of this Province, assent to any proposition to declare these Colonies independent of the Crown of Great Britain, nor to any proposition for making or entering into alliance with any foreign Power, nor to any union or confederation of these Colonies, which may necessarily lead to a separation from the mother country, unless, in your judgments, or in the judgments of any four of you, or a majority of the whole of you, (if all shall be then attending in Congress,) it shall be thought absolutely necessary for the preservation of the liberties of the United Colonies; and should a majority of the Colonies in Congress, against such, your judgment, resolve to declare these Colonies independent of the Crown of Great Britain, or to make or enter into alliance with any foreign Power, or into any union or confederation of these Colonies, which may necessarily lead to a separation from the mother country, then we instruct you, immediately, to call the Convention of this Province, and repair thereto with such proposition and resolve, and lay the same before the said Convention, for their consideration; and this Convention will not hold this Province bound by such majority in Congress, until the representative body of the Province, in Convention, assent thereto.

Desirous as we are of peace with Great Britain, upon safe and honourable terms, we wish you, nevertheless, and instruct you to join with the other Colonies, in such military operations as may be judged proper and necessary for the common defence, until such a peace can be happily obtained.

At the same time that we assure you we have an entire confidence in your abilities and integrity, in the discharge of the great trust reposed in you, we must observe to you, as our opinion, that, in the relation of constituent and representative, one principal security of the former is the right he holds to be fully informed of the conduct of the latter. We can conceive no case to exist in which it would be of more importance to exercise this right than the present, nor any in which we can suppose the representative would more willingly acquiesce in the exercise of it. We, therefore, instruct you, that you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolve of Congress, that the votes given by the Colonies on every question agitated in Congress, shall appear upon the journals thereof; and if such resolve be obtained, that you, at the expense of this Province, procure copies of the said journals, except such parts thereof as relate to military operations and measures taken to procure arms and ammunition, and, from time to time, lay the same before the Conventions of this Province, showing the part you, as Representatives of this Province, take in such questions.

And we further instruct you to move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolve of Congress, that no person who holds any military command in the Continental, or any Provincial regular forces, or marine service, nor any person who holds or enjoys any office of profit under the Continental Congress, or any Government assumed since the present controversy with Great Britain began, or which shall hereafter be assumed, or who directly or indirectly receives the profits of such command or office, shall, during the time of his holding or receiving the same, be eligible to sit in Congress.

JOHN HANCOCK TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The repeated proofs which our enemies have given, of their rage and malice, leave no doubt that they will exert their utmost endeavours to effect our destruction. Through the favour of Providence, our success in Canada has prevented them from employing the Savages against our frontiers. But as there is reason to apprehend they will attempt, in the Spring, to recover possession of that country, the Congress have resolved to support nine battalions for its defence this year: One of Canadians, under Colonel James Livingston; two, to be composed of those brave troops serving there—an honour due to their bravery and merit, to have an opportunity of defending a country which their valor has rescued from slavery; three from Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, of which two are under marching orders; and the remaining three to be raised to the eastward, viz: one in your Colony, one in Connecticut, and one in New-York; as you see by the enclosed resolve.

As the arrival of the troops in due time will greatly conduce to the preservation of that country, and defeat the designs of our enemies, and, as the month of February, which is fast approaching, is the best, indeed, the only time before Summer, of crossing the Lakes, the Congress rely that you will, according to your usual zeal, exert your utmost endeavours to have the battalions from your Colony raised and sent forward with all possible expedition.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JOHN HANCOCK, President.

A battalion to consist of eight companies; each company of one Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a Drum and Fife, and seventy-six Privates, Adjutant, Quartermaster, and Surgeon.

REPRESENTATION OF THE FIELD-OFFICERS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA BATTALIONS.

[Read January 11, 1776.]

The Field-Officers of the four Battalions to be raised in Pennsylvania, beg leave to represent to Congress: That considerable inconveniences will arise from the battalions consisting of seven battalion companies, that number not answering for subdivisions, and rendering all the manœuvres more difficult. They, therefore, request that another company may be added to the battalion; or, if it should be thought that would increase their number too much, that the battalion companies be reduced to sixty-eight men each, in which mode there may be eight companies to a battalion, and a company of light-infantry, without increasing the number of men to be raised by the present establishment of Congress.

LORD STIRLING TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Elizabethtown, January 12, 1776.

SIR: As the Continental Congress have put me under orders to march the two New-Jersey regiments, in their service, to the city of New-York, I must beg the favour of you to request the Committee of Safety for that Province to provide for their reception and quarters, and that they will be so obliging as to inform me when these will be in readiness.

The one hundred fire-locks, which the New-York Congress have promised to furnish for my regiment, I hope are ready, and that they will forward them to me as soon as possible.

I am informed that the enemies to American liberty are very busy on Staten-Island, and that some dangerous movements are now going on among them. My situation here renders it convenient to me to disarn them, or to take and secure such as may be thought worthy of so much notice. When it is intimated to me that such a measure is necessary, it will be executed.

You will see the absolute necessity of the utmost secrecy being observed in all these matters.

I am, your most humble servant, STIRLING.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, New-York.

P. S. I must beg the favour of a copy of this letter being returned to me.

THOMAS WICKES TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Huntington, January 12, 1776.

SIR: We are to inform you we received the powder sent over by Colonel Drake, but Mr. Smith has not yet come, or sent for it. As there is a number of commissions wanting, please to convey them to us by the bearer, Mr. Platt, or some other safe hand, viz: John Buffit, Captain; Isaac Thompson, First Lieutenant; Zebulon Ketcham, Second Lieutenant; Joseph Ketcham, Ensign, for the Fourth Company; Platt Veal, Captain; Michel Heart, First Lieutenant; Isaac Dennis, Second Lieutenant; Jacob Conckling, Ensign, for the fifth company, all of the First Regiment.

We are, sir, your humble servants,

THOMAS WICKES, Chairman.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Chairman, &c.

GENERAL CARLETON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Quebeck, January 12, 1776.

SIR: The 5th of December, Mr. Montgomery took post at St. Croix, within less than two miles of Quebeck, with some field artillery; his heavy cannon were landed at Caprouge; at the same time Arnold's party took possession of the other avenues leading to the town, and prevented all communication with the country. The 7th, a woman stole into town, with letters addressed to the principal merchants, advising them to an immediate submission, and promising a great indulgence in case of their compliance. Enclosed was a letter to me, in very extraordinary language, and a summons to deliver up the town; the messenger was sent to prison for a few days, and drummed out.

To give more efficacy to these letters, five small mortars were brought to St. Roque's, and a battery of five cannon and one howitzer raised upon the heights, within about seven hundred yards of the walls. Soon after, Arnold appeared with a white flag, said he had a letter for me, but was refused admittance, and ordered to carry back his letter.

After every preparatory stratagem had been used to intimidate our wretched garrison, as Mr. Montgomery was pleased to call it, an assault was given the 31st of December, between four and five of the morning, during a snow storm from the northeast. The alarm was general. From the side of the river St. Lawrence along the fortified front, round to the Bason, every part seemed equally threatened. Two real attacks took place upon the lower town: one under Cape-Diamond, led by Mr. Montgomery; the other by Mr. Arnold, upon the part called the Saut ou Matelôt. This, at first, met with some success, but, in the end, was stopped. A sally from the upper town, under Captain Laws, attacked their rear, and sent in many prisoners; Captain McDougal afterwards reinforced this party, and followed the Rebels into the post they had taken. Thus Mr. Arnold's corps (himself and a few others excepted, who were wounded and carried off early,) were completely ruined. They were caught, as it were, in a trap; we brought in their five mortars and one cannon. The other attack was soon repulsed, with slaughter; Mr. Montgomery was left among the dead.

The Rebels have on this assault between six and seven hundred men, and between forty and fifty officers, killed, wounded, and taken prisoners. We had only one lieutenant of the navy, doing duty as a captain in the garrison, and four rank and file, killed, and thirteen rank and file wounded; two of the latter are since dead.

You will be pleased to transmit a copy of my letter to the Secretary of State, by the first opportunity, for His Majesty's information, &c.

GUY CARLETON.

MOVEMENTS OF THE BRITISH FLEET AT RHODE-ISLAND.

Providence, January 20, 1776.

On Friday, the 12th instant, Captain Wallace, with all the vessels under his command, consisting of twelve sail, came up the river from Newport, and at four o'clock, in the afternoon, landed about two hundred and fifty men on the Island of Prudence, where about forty or fifty of our men were stationed, under the command of Captain Pearce. They were soon fired on by the enemy, which was returned with much spirit; but Captain Pearce, finding the enemy greatly superior in number, retreated, and with his men went off the Island; he had one man wounded and taken prisoner, and, it is said, several of the enemy were killed and wounded. The enemy, about sun-set, burnt seven houses on the Island, which being discovered here, his Honour, the Deputy-Governour, General West, Colonels Richmond, Martin, and Cook, Captain Allen, and Captain Wells, immediately set out to send forces upon the Island, by way of Warren and Bristol; from the former of which places General West ordered fifty men, directing them to join such as should be collected at Warwick-Neck, and proceed to the Island. His Honour, with the General, then went to Bristol, and sent off Major Talman, with eighty men, in whale-boats, who landed about the dawn of day. Captain Barton, with a few men, had landed from Head-Quarters, but those at Warwick-Neck were not able to join them for want of boats. About nine o'clock in the morning the enemy landed about two hundred and fifty men, and attacked Lieutenant Car, who was stationed with a guard of forty men, to observe their motions; the remainder of our men, about fifty in number, soon coming up, a smart engagement ensued, which lasted three hours. The enemy several times sent out flanking parties, which were as often drove back to their main body. They were at length drove to their vessels, leaving our people in possession of the Island, having the night before got on board about one hundred sheep; but no cattle are missing. Two of their men were found dead after the action, and one wounded in the thigh; they likewise carried off a number of killed and wounded, particularly an officer, that appeared to be badly wounded, and who, it is supposed, had the command. We had only three men slightly wounded. Our officers and men behaved with the greatest bravery, and had there been boats at Warwick, to carry over the reinforcements from thence, it is thought the enemy's whole party would have been killed or taken. Sunday evening the enemy burnt two buildings on Patience-Island; on Monday they cut a quantity of wood at Hope-Island, and yesterday, it is said, returned to Neuport.

While the bomb brig lay off Prudence, the gunner and five seamen made their escape in a boat, and arrived safe at Bristol.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MONTGOMERY.

Cambridge, January 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Every account from your quarter serves to confirm our hopes that you will get possession of Quebeck, if not already in your hands. I must beg, therefore, your attention to the wants of the Army here, which are not few, and, if they cannot in some part be supplied by you, I do not know where else I can apply.

After powder, the principal deficiency is that of arms; those brought in by the soldiers are so very indifferent that I cannot place confidence in them.

Blankets and clothing we are very deficient in. Of these, and other necessities, I am taught to believe there is abundance in Canada. Quebeck is, I suppose, the great magazine for them, and all kind of military stores. I hope it will be in your power to forward to this place from thence a sufficient quantity to relieve our wants. Whatever you can spare, we shall have occasion for, and your sending them, as expeditiously as possible, will be doing vast service to this Army, and very much oblige sir, yours,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Richard Montgomery, Canada.

P. S. Arms we are exceedingly in want of. These I would wish to receive without delay, if you can supply them from the King's stores in Quebeck.

WILLIAM WALL TO ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

Baltimore, January 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This will be handed you by Captain Stone, of the Hornet, sloop-of-war.

At my arrival here, I found my vessel, agreeably to my expectations, with great satisfaction, and after that I waited on Captain Stone, and gave your compliments to him, and delivered your message, which I hope may prove satisfactory. My business is so at present, that I cannot come to you by this opportunity of Captain Stone, or otherwise would, with all my heart; but after the business is done, will gladly enter with you, with all the cheerfulness in the world, and, therefore, beg, if any vacancy should offer, you will be kind enough to keep it for me, consistent with your honour and convenience. So wishing you all the success imaginable, I am your most obedient humble servant,

FOURTH SERIES. -VOL. IV.

WILLIAM WALL.

To Admiral Hopkins, on board the ship Alfred, per favour of Captain Stone.

N. B. As for news, I refer you to Captain Stone. My best compliments to brother John and Abraham Whipple.
W. W.

JOSEPH BARTLETT TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In order that General Schuyler may be properly informed what pay the officers and soldiers, who served in the expedition to Canada last year, have received from their respective Colonies, the Congress passed the enclosed resolve, which they have ordered me to transmit to you. An order of Congress, for raising a regiment in the western parts of our Province, for Canada, will be sent you by the President.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JOSEPH BARTLETT.

To the Convention, or the Committee of Safety of New-Hampshire.

"In Congress, January 8, 1776.

"Resolved, That the Governour of Connecticut, the General Assemblies of Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, and the Convention of New-York, be written to forthwith, by the Delegates of the said Colonies, respectively, to furnish General Schuyler with the amount of money paid to any persons in the Army under his command, specifying the names of the persons to whom the money was paid by their order."

BAYARD, JACKSON AND COMPANY, TO CAPTAIN MESTON.

Philadelphia, January 13, 1776.

SIR: Our snow Dickenson, being now loaded and ready for sea, we hereby direct you to proceed in her with all possible despatch from this port to the port of Nantes, in France. On your passage, you are to improve wind and weather, to the best advantage, constantly endeavouring to make your passage in as short a time as possible, and carefully avoiding to speak to any vessel. On your arrival at Nantes, you are to apply to Messrs. Montandouin and Frere, merchants there, and to whom you are consigned; they will receive your cargo, which you are to lose no time in delivering, and there take on board such goods as they have orders to ship in return; with which you are to proceed immediately for this port, observing the directions given you as above. On your arrival off our Capes, you are to stand off, and on making a signal, by hoisting your jack to your foretopmast-head, when you will be answered, either from the Light-House or Cape-May, by a sheet hung out. Upon seeing this, you are to conclude there is no danger in your way, and immediately proceed up the bay; but if, after making your signal for six or eight hours, you should see no signal, from either the Light-House or Cape-May, you are then to proceed along the coast towards the Capes of Virginia, and endeavour to land your cargo in the best manner you can, putting it in the care of the Committee of the place where it is landed, or some persons of property, for the use of the Congress, and immediately despatch an express with an account of your proceedings to us. We have the greatest dependance in your vigilance and activity in prosecuting this voyage. Should you succeed, as we pray God you may, you will not only recommend yourself strongly to our further notice, but you will be considered as rendering an essential service to your country. You must be sensible the success of this voyage in a great measure depends upon conduct; we doubt not you will endeavour to acquit yourself in a suitable manner.

Wishing you a safe and pleasant voyage, and a quick and prosperous return, we are, sir, your very humble servants,

BAYARD, JACKSON & CO.

To Captain William Meston.

P. S. Beside the goods that may be shipped on board you, by Messrs. Montandouin and Frere, in return for your cargo, you are to receive on board any quantity of arms and ammunition you may have room for, that may be offered for account of the Congress by any person whatever.*

Yours, BAYARD, JACKSON & Co.

BAYARD, JACKSON AND CO., TO THE FRENCH MERCHANTS.
Philadelphia, January 18, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: We wrote you the 28th of April last, and enclosed the account of sales of your last adventure, at the same time ordered Captain James Johnston, of our snow Dickenson, to remit you the balance, (one hundred and seventy-four pounds, eleven shillings and four pence sterling,) which, by his account, we find he did do from Bristol, since which we have not had the pleasure of a line from you.

This serves to hand you invoice and bills of lading of a valuable cargo of flour, spermaceti candles, and beeswax, shipped on board our snow Dickenson, to your address, which we wish safe to your hands. We would have this cargo immediately sold, and the net proceeds laid out in fifteen tons of gunpowder; or, if gunpowder is not to be had, as much saltpetre, with a portion of fifteen pounds of sulphur to each hundred weight of saltpetre, as will be sufficient to make that quantity of gunpowder; and one thousand five hundred stand of arms, fitted with bayonets and steel ramrods; and one thousand bolts of Russia duck or canvass, and as much more of these articles as the net proceeds of this cargo will purchase. If any of the aforesaid articles cannot be got as aforesaid, the money directed to be paid out of that article, we would have laid out in good ticklenburghs or osnaburghs, or vitzseys, or failing, the returns to be made in gold or silver. This cargo we have shipped you for account of the Continental Congress of the thirteen United Colonies of America, and the order of the returns is what they have directed; and, we make no doubt, you will use your best endeavours to complete it in every article. The ready and cheerful assistance afforded us by many of your merchants, both from the West-Indies and Europe, demands our grateful acknowledgments, and encourages our applying to you for still further supplies, to enable us to oppose the arbitrary and tyrannical proceedings of the Court of Great Britain against us. Should it be in your power to complete the whole of our order, we

* BRISTOL, (ENGLAND), April 8, 1776.—This morning came up to the Key, the snow Dickenson, William Meston, Master, from Philadelphia, bound to Nantes, in Old France, where she was to discharge her loading, and take in a cargo of warlike stores and ammunition, for the use of the Continental Army. She was taken up and fitted out by order of the Congress, and consigned to Messrs. Montandouin and Frere, merchants in Nantes, as appears by the captain's orders, which are here-under copied, verbatim.

The mate and people on board, finding that they were to load with warlike stores, for the use of the Americans, and having, as they declare, been forced into the service, took the vessel, and, instead of proceeding to France, determined to make the first British port. They accordingly brought her into Bristol, after beating upwards of a fortnight about the mouth of the channel; and the Mate is immediately going off for London, and will take all the letters and papers which were on board the said vessel, for the inspection of Government. She was first boarded by the Lieutenant of the Inchiquin tender, lying there; who is going with the Mate to London.

She is about two hundred and fifty tons burden, and now lies at the Quay till the determination of Government concerning her is known. The Captain has entered her at the custom-house.

Her cargo, which consists of twenty-two hundred and twenty-one barrels of flour, two hundred and sixty boxes of spermaceti candles, thirteen casks and one bag beeswax, and fifty-six hundred barrel staves, is valued at near six thousand pounds, and the vessel is worth upwards of fifteen hundred pounds. She is the first American vessel that has been brought into England since the act passed for granting the seamen certain privileges and rewards for seizing any of the Provincial ships, &c.

The following is the principal intelligence received by this vessel:

As soon as the Congress received an account of the repulse and death of General Montgomery, at Quebeck, they ordered ten companies, of one hundred men each, and other considerable reinforcements raised in the western parts of Connecticut, and in the neighbourhood of Albany, to march immediately to Quebeck.

The Americans have an army of fifteen thousand men in the field, in Carolina and Virginia.

The Congress paper is in the highest credit, and they have begun to make payments with it.

The Congress are perfectly unanimous; there is not the least dissension amongst them.

She did not clear the Capes of Delaware River till the 1st of March. When she left Philadelphia, the Congress had received no account of the Prohibitory Act, nor of the hiring of foreign troops.

It was reported the Provincials had taken post upon Noddie's Island, in Boston harbour.

The following vessels sailed at the same time the Dickenson did, all must request you will be very particular in sending the best of each article that is to be had, and that you will give the vessel all possible despatch, so as to be on our coast as early as possible in the Spring. Our former experience of your punctuality and despatch of business, has induced us to recommend this consignment to your house; and we have liberty to inform you, should this voyage succeed to our wishes, we shall have it in our power to wait on you with more important consignments. We request you would conduct this business with as much secrecy as possible, as we have been informed the Court of Great Britain have spies in most of your principal seaport towns, whose business it is to find out American vessels, and learn their cargoes and destination, the time of their sailing, &c., which they transmit to England, in order to have them watched and taken.

We shall anxiously wait the event of this voyage, and, in the mean time remain, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants,

BAYARD, JACKSON & Co.

Messrs. Montandouin and Frere, Merchants in Nantes.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Princeton, January 9, 1776.

The Committee of Safety of the Province of New-Jersey, pursuant to notice given for that purpose, met this day, and there not being a sufficient number of Members to proceed on business, adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Wednesday, January 10, 1776.

The Committee met. Present:

Samuel Tucker, President; Hendrick Fisher, Vice-President; Abraham Clark, Deputy Secretary; Azariah Dunham, Ruloffe Van Dike, John Dennis, Augustine Stevenson, John Pope.

The President laid before the Committee a Letter from the Provincial Congress, and the Congress of New-York, enclosing Resolutions of the Continental Congress, and the Congress of New-York, relative to establishing Posts at proper distances, to carry intelligence to the different parts of the Colony or elsewhere, as occasion may require; and for erecting Beacons at proper distances, which the Congress of New-York recommended to the Congress of New- bound for different ports in France, and on the same business; but as she is a very swift sailer, she left them soon after they put to sea: the ships Sally, Ronland; Neptune, Collins; the Aurora, Cheeky; and three brigs; captain's names, Montgomery, Bethel, and Martin; and many other vessels, the names of which are forgot; and during the three preceding weeks, upwards of thirty other vessels sailed for different ports in France.

About three weeks before the Dickenson left Philadelphia, a French nobleman, (who, with another gentleman of the same nation, had been some time treating with the Continental Congress, and had visited the camp of the grand Army at Cambridge, in New-England.) [Messrs. Penet and Piarnet] intended returning to France in her; but they afterwards removed their baggage out of her, and went on board a vessel which was hired on purpose for them, and are now on their passage for France. The day they came down Delaware River, two French vessels, under French colours, laden with powder, ball, and small arms, arrived there.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED BRISTOL, April 11, 1776.—I yesterday had a long conversation with Captain Meston, the master of the Dickenson. The crew consisted of four Scotchmen, four Irish, and one Englishman, including the master, who is a Scotchman. Some people at Bristol suspect this last of being concerned in the villany, but I am fully persuaded he was not. He has a wife and family at Philadelphia, and cries like a child at the misfortunes that has happened to him. He thinks the river Delaware sufficiently secured, and speaks highly of the unanimity and warlike appearance of the Pennsylvanians. He confirms the death of Montgomery, and was at Philadelphia when the unfortunate news from Quebec was received. Two thousand volunteers, he says, turned out, and offered to march immediately into Canada. I asked him if they went? He believed they did; but could not say positively. The truth is, he is one of the most ignorant fellows I ever conversed with. As he did not expect to come to this country, he brought no newspapers with him.

The mate of the vessel, an Irishman, is gone up to make his merits known to Lord George Germain. He was the cause of the conspiracy, and will, of course, be graciously received. It is very doubtful whose prize she will be. The custom-house, a lieutenant of a man-of-war, and the treacherous crew, all claim her. I hope the infamous traitors may be disappointed.

When the crew brought her opposite to the wharf, in Bristol, where she was to be moored, they gave three cheers; but so far were they from being answered in the same by the people on shore, who were collected in great numbers, and had heard the story from the custom-house officers, that they received nothing but curses for their treachery.

Jersey; which Letter and Resolves were read in this Committee, who, after duly considering the same, approve of the expediency of establishing posts for the purposes aforesaid; have, therefore,

Resolved, That a man and horse be kept in constant readiness, by each of the several Committees of Newark, Elizabethtown, Woodbridge, New-Brunswick, Princeton, and Trenton, whose business shall be to forward all expresses to and from the Continental Congress; and that the aforesaid Town Committees shall, on every intelligence of any invasion or alarm, send expresses to the neighbouring Town Committees, who are directed to provide expresses to forward the same from town to town, to the Town Committees, and to such officers of the Militia as they may think proper to notify thereof throughout the Colony, with as much expedition as may be in their power. And that all the expenses incurred by such expresses, the Treasurers of this Colony, appointed by the Provincial Congress, or either of them, are hereby required to pay on order or orders signed by the Chairman of either of the Committees of the Townships in this Colony. Which orders, with endorsements thereon by the person or persons to whom the same are made payable, shall be sufficient vouchers to the said Treasurers, or either of them, for such sums of money as they, or either of them, may pay thereon as aforesaid.

Ordered, That the above Resolve be published in the New-York and Pennsylvania Gazettes.

A Memorial from Yelles Mead, of the County of Bergen, and several other Memorials from the Counties of Bergen and Essex, of the same tenor, setting forth, that the said Yelles Mead had, in expectation of a Lieutenant's commission in Captain Meeker's Company, in one of the Battalions in this Colony, raised his complement of men for said Company, praying a commission accordingly. Also, a Memorial from George Ross, the third, of the County of Essex, setting forth, that in expectation of an Ensign's commission in said Captain Meeker's Company, he had raised his complement of men, praying a commission in consequence thereof—were laid before the Committee and read, and several recommendations in favour of the Memorialists were also read.

And, also, a Letter from Lord Stirling, recommending Matthias Halstead, of Elizabethtown, First Lieutenant, and the abovesaid Yelles Mead, Ensign of Captain Meeker's Company, was also read.

Ordered, That the said Memorials, Recommendations, and Letter, have a second reading.

Two Recommendations, from the Committee of Woodbridge, were laid before the Committee, recommending James Bonny, Captain, James Manning, First Lieutenant, David Crow, Second Lieutenant, and John Clarkson, Ensign, of a Company of Militia in Woodbridge. The other recommending Ellis Barron, Captain, Ralph Marsh, First Lieutenant, Matthew Freeman, Second Lieutenant, and Jonathan Bloomfield, Ensign, of another Company of Militia in said Woodbridge, which were read, and commissions ordered to be issued accordingly.

A Certificate was produced from the Chairman of the Committee of the North Ward of New-Brunswick, certifying that John Taylor was elected Captain, Jacob Mersural, First Lieutenant, James Schuurman, Second Lieutenant, and John Voorhees, Jun., Ensign, of a Company of Minute-Men in Colonel Neilson's Battalion.

Ordered, That the above gentlemen be commissioned accordingly to their appointment.

The Committee adjourned till two o'clock, P. M.

The Committee met according to adjournment.

John Hart, Esq., one of the Committee, attending, took his seat accordingly.

Mr. President laid before the Committee a Letter from Richard Smith, Esq., one of the Delegates of this Province, at the Continental Congress, in the words following:

"Philadelphia, January 4, 1776.

"DEAR SIR: I am desired by the Congress to transmit to you the enclosed extracts from their proceedings, the whole of which, relative to that subject, I have sent to Lord Stirling, by this post, together with six dozen copies of the Articles of War. The one thousand dollars mentioned in the extract, I have received from the Continental Treasury, and they wait your commands.

"The Congress wish to know in what manner the prisoners of war at Trenton live, who supplies them, and upon what terms. The reason of the inquiry is, that very extravagant claims are made on this head from other quarters, and we aim to render the publick burdens as light as possible. You will, as soon as it is convenient, afford me the necessary information.

"I am, your affectionate, faithful servant,

"RICHARD SMITH.

"To Samuel Tucker, Esq."

The enclosed Resolve, referred to in the above Letter, was read, and is in the words following:

"In Congress, January 2, 1776.

"Resolved, That the Barracks in the Colony of New-Jersey, be prepared for the reception of such of the Battalions as may not be in readiness to proceed to New-York, and that the Ministerial troops or prisoners, at present occupying them, be accommodated in the said Colony, in such a manner as the Committee of Safety for the said Colony shall think most prudent and convenient.

"That the hundred stand of Arms, supplied by the Colony of New-York, for the New-Jersey Battalion, be paid for by the Convention of New-Jersey; and that in order to enable the said Convention to make such payment, as well as to furnish such of the men belonging to the said Battalions, as are yet unprovided with Arms, the further sum of one thousand dollars be advanced to the said Convention, and that the price of the Arms be deducted out of the wages of the Privates belonging to said Battalions.

"Extracts from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

The above Letter and Resolve were read, and ordered a second reading.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Thursday, January 10, 1776.

Joseph Holmes, Esq., one of this Committee, attending, took his seat accordingly.

Jacob Scoggin, Esq., laid before this Committee a recommendation from the Committee of the County of Salem, in favour of certain gentlemen to be commissioned Field-Officers of the Militia in said County. And it appearing to this Committee that a controversy now subsists in the County of Salem, respecting the appointment of Field-Officers, and as this Committee have not at present an opportunity of hearing the grounds of the controversy from both parties, and being desirous of acting in such a manner as may conciliate all parties in a just and equitable determination between them in the appointment of said officers, do, in order thereto, direct, as well the Committee of the County of Salem, as such other persons as are opposed to the gentlemen recommended by the said Committee, or may have any claim to commissions, by the election of the Captains and the Subalterns of the Militia before the 16th day of August last, to appear, by persons properly deputed for that purpose, before the Congress of this Province, the 6th day after their next meeting, that the truth of facts may be then fully known, that they may take such resolution thereon as to them may seem just.

Ordered, That a copy of the above order be delivered to Mr. Scoggin, to be laid before the County Committee, to be by them communicated to the contending parties.

Adjourned till two o'clock, P. M.

The Committee met.

This Committee received information from the Committee of the County of Monmouth, by Doctor Scudder and Doctor Henderson, and also by Letter from the Chairman of the said Committee, that a small sloop, called the Polly and Anne, one Haines, captain, was on the 24th of December last, stranded on Squan Beach, on board of which was a quantity of Beef, Pork and other Provisions; which Vessel and cargo is now in the care and custody of Colonel Forman, except such articles as are perishable, which the Committee directed to be sold by Doctor Scudder and Doctor Henderson; an inventory of which cargo, as well such as were sold, as such as remain, were laid before this Committee. And one James Webb, a passenger on board said Vessel when stranded, appeared before this Committee, by whose deposition it appears that said Vessel was bound from New-York to Boston, and from all circumstances, the Provisions on board were designed for the Ministerial army.

The Committee taking the above matters into consideration, think it proper that the whole of the said cargo be immediately sold, and the Vessel secured; which Vessel, with the amount of the sales, after deducting the necessary expenses, be referred to the disposal of the Congress of this Colony at their next sitting. And that Colonel David Forman, Doctor Nathaniel Scudder, and Thomas Henderson, be, and are hereby authorized and empowered to secure the abovesaid Vessel, and to complete the sales of the cargo, in some convenient time, and account for the sales, and report their proceedings to the Congress of this Province at their next sitting; and may deliver to the seamen and passengers belonging to said Vessel, all such clothing and other effects as belong to them, (exclusive of the cargo,) provided they call for the same in a reasonable time; and that the thanks of this Committee be returned to Colonel Forman, for his extraordinary care and vigilance in securing the said Vessel and cargo.

And whereas, it appears that the Captain, Master and Passengers of the Sloop Polly and Anne, stranded on Squan Beach, are inhabitants of the Colony of New-York; it is, therefore, Ordered, That the said Captain, Master and Passengers, or such of them as are in this Province, be conveyed under guard, as Colonel Forman may think proper, to New-York, and delivered to the Provincial Congress or Committee of Safety, to be dealt with as they may think proper.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Friday, January 12, 1776.

The Committee met.

Whereas, a certain Richard Symonds, a Midshipman, belonging to one of the King's ships-of-war, was, in September last, taken on board a small tender at Barnegat, since which he hath remained a prisoner in the County of Monmouth:

Ordered, That Richard Symonds be removed to Trenton, and there be admitted to remain a prisoner of war on his parole of honour, on the same terms granted to those officers who are already prisoners at that place.

Robert Ellison, Esq., of the County of Sussex, was brought before this Committee, by order of the Committee of the County of Sussex, on a charge of many misdemeanors committed against the liberties of America, and among others of entering into an Association, resolving not to pay the tax ordered to be levied by the Congress of this Province, and not to purchase any goods which might be distrained from persons for their taxes, or for non-attendance at musters. Mr. Ellison being informed of said charge, confessed the same to be true, and that he was influenced thereto by Justice Nathaniel Pettit; but that after signing the said Association, he had erased his name therefrom; that he had nothing to offer in his justification, but his ignorance of the consequence of his proceedings, and his precipitately engaging therein without consideration, and manifested a deep contrition for his offences. He acknowledged he had signed the Association recommended by the Provincial Congress, before signing the Association mentioned above. That after signing the General Association, and before his signing that now charged against him, he had been apprehended in Pennsylvania for practices unfriendly to the liberties of America, where he then made a full recantation, and asked pardon of the publick, promising reformation.

Nathaniel Pettit, Esq., of the County of Sussex, also appeared before this Committee, by order of the Committee of said County, being charged with signing and promoting said Association, mentioned in Robert Ellison's charge; which the said Mr. Pettit confessed, only alleging in his justification, that he had no intention thereby of using any violent measures in opposing the proceedings of the Congress; and, being fully heard in his own justification, by order, withdrew.

The above charges against Mr. Ellison and Mr. Pettit, were reserved to the consideration of the Committee in the afternoon.

Adjourned till two o'clock, P. M.

The Committee met.

The Committee resumed the consideration of the matters alleged against Robert Ellison and Nathaniel Pettit, Esq., and the facts charged against them, appearing by their own confessions, to be true, and the offences of both being nearly equal,

Resolved, That the said Robert Ellison and Nathaniel Pettit be returned to the County of Sussex, under the custody of Colonel Ephraim Martin, and that they be both disarmed, and pay to the Committee of the aforesaid County, or their Chairman, the sum of eight pounds each towards defraying the expenses of apprehending and bringing them before the Committee. And, also, that they severally give security to the said Committee or their Chairman in the sum of fifty pounds each, for their future good behaviour, and, thereupon, be discharged from further detention. And, as during the present process, the said Ellison and Pettit have not only appeared unfriendly to the liberties of this country, but from their conduct have appeared unworthy of the offices of Magistracy which they now sustain; this Committee, therefore, think it advisable for the said delinquents to desist from the further execution of their respective offices, until, by their future good behaviour, they may appear more worthy to execute the same, and shall be called thereto by the Congress or Committee of Safety of this Province. And that the Committee of the County of Sussex be assured of this Committee's hearty approbation of their timely and spirited exertions in apprehending the above persons.

A Memorial from the Committee of the County of Cumberland, was presented to this Committee and read, setting forth, that they had apprehended, and secured in custody, Daniel Stretch, Richard Cayford, and Nathaniel Dowdney, inhabitants of that County, convicted of being enemies to this country, by using their influence, with the ignorant and unwary, to raise a party to oppose the measures adopted for redress of grievances; cursing and ill-treating all Congresses and Committees, and refusing to give any reasonable satisfaction for their extraordinary conduct. The said Committee requesting the direction of this Committee respecting said offenders,

This Committee, duly considering the conduct of the above persons, and finding it necessary to use spirited exertions for the discouragement of such base behaviour:

Do, Order and Resolve, That the Committee of the County of Cumberland detain the said Daniel Stretch, Richard Cayford, and Nathaniel Dowdney, in close confinement, until they shall manifest a suitable contrition for their offences, satisfactory to the said Committee; pay the charges that have or may accrue in apprehending and detaining them in custody; and give security to said Committee, in the sum of fifty Pounds each, for their future good behaviour.

Also, Resolved, That the said Daniel Stretch, Richard Cayford, and Nathaniel Dowdney be disarmed by the said Committee.

This Committee received several Resolutions and determinations of the Continental Congress, respecting raising one new Battalion in this Province; erecting and establishing a Court of Admiralty; advising the forming some useful regulations respecting the Continental forces raised in this Colony; which requisitions, together with many other important concerns, render the speedy meeting of the Congress of this Province absolutely necessary. This Committee have, therefore, appointed the meeting of said Congress to be at New-Brunswick, on Wednesday, the thirty-first day of this instant, (January.)

The Letter from Lord Stirling, recommending Matthias Halstead to be commissioned First Lieutenant, and Yelles Mead Ensign, in Captain Joseph Meeker's Company, in one of the Battalions raised in this Colony; and the Memorial of Yelles Mead, claiming the First Lieutenant's commission in said Company, and of George Ross, the third, claiming the Ensign's commission in said Company, with several recommendations accompanying the same, were all read the second time; and, being duly considered, Ordered, That Yelles Mead be commissioned First Lieutenant, and George Ross, the third, Ensign of said Company.

A Memorial was presented from John Goldtrap, of the County of Somerset, recommending the encouraging of Linen and Woollen Manufactories in this Colony, was read and referred to the next meeting of Congress.

Several Memorials were presented to this Committee, for appointments in a Battalion to be raised in this Colony; which were read and filed, to be taken into consideration at the meeting of Congress.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock.

Saturday, January 13, 1776.

The Committee met.

The Committee having before them several Resolutions of the Continental Congress, of the second day of this instant, (January), among which are the following paragraphs:

"And, with respect to such unworthy Americans, as, regardless of their duty to their Creator, their country, and their posterity, have taken part with our oppressors, and, influenced by the hope or possession of ignominious rewards, strive to recommend themselves to the bounty of Administration, by misrepresenting and traducing the conduct and principles of the friends of American liberty, and opposing every measure formed for its preservation and security—

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the different Assemblies, Conventions, and Committees, or Councils of Safety, in the United Colonies, by the most speedy and effectual measures, to frustrate the mischievous machinations, and restrain the wicked practices of these men.

"And it is the opinion of this Congress, that they ought to be disarmed, and the more dangerous among them either kept in safe custody or bound with sufficient sureties to their good behaviour.

"And, in order that the said Assemblies, Conventions, Committees, or Councils of Safety, may be enabled, with greater ease and safety, to carry this Resolution into execution:

"Resolved, That they be authorized to call to their aid whatever Continental Troops, stationed in or near their respective Colonies, as may be conveniently spared from their more immediate duty; and the commanding officers of such troops are hereby directed to afford the said Assemblies, Conventions, Committees, or Councils of Safety, all such assistance, in executing this Resolution, as they may require, and which, consistent with the good of the service, may be supplied."

This Committee do, therefore, most earnestly recommend to the several County and Town Committees of this Province, to be vigilant and active in carrying the above Resolution into execution; at the same time recommending the exercise of due moderation and prudence in the affair: requesting all officers of the Militia, in this Province, to aid and assist the said Committees, and to execute such orders as they, or either of them, shall receive from the Committee of the County or Township where they reside.

The Letter from Richard Smith, Esq., with the enclosed Resolve of the Continental Congress, were read the second time.

Ordered, That Richard Smith, Esq., deliver to the President, or Vice-President, the one thousand Dollars by him received from the Continental Congress, mentioned in said Resolve; and that the said President, or Vice-President, lay out the same for Fire-Arms, for the use of the Continental Troops in this Colony.

Ordered, That John Posee, Esq., deliver the Arms, by him purchased, to Colonel William Maxwell, or his order, for the use of the Continental Troops in this Colony.

Application was made from the Committee of the County of Morris to this Committee, recommending Jacob Ford, Jr., to be commissioned Colonel; Ellis Cook, Lieutenant-Colonel; Cornelius Ludlow, First Major; Eleazer Lindsley, Second Major; and John Doughty, Adjutant, of the Eastern Regiment of Militia, in the County of Morris.

Ordered, That Commissions be issued, agreeable to the above recommendation.

Ordered, That the Prisoners of War, now in the Barracks at Trenton, be removed from thence by the Committee of Observation of that town, to such convenient quarters as they may be able to procure, in order that the Continental Forces may occupy the said Barracks; and that the expenses in providing quarters for such Prisoners be paid out of the Provincial money in the Treasury.

Ordered, That the President write to the Continental Congress, acquainting them that the Congress of this Province are to meet this month, at which time they will, undoubtedly, give all due attention to raising the Battalion ordered in this Colony; this Committee having, for weighty reasons, deferred issuing warrants till meeting of Congress, being firmly persuaded that the appointment of officers by the Congress will give much greater satisfaction in the Colony than if appointed by this Committee; at the same time recommend Azariah Dunham, Esq., to be appointed Commissary for supplying such Battalion, when raised.

The Committee adjourned their present sitting.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, January 13, 1776.

I wish I had no occasion to send my dear General this melancholy account. My amiable friend, the gallant Montgomery, is no more; the brave Arnold is wounded; and we have met with a severe check, in an unsuccessful attempt on Quebeck. May Heaven be graciously pleased that the misfortune may terminate here. I tremble for our people in Canada; and nothing, my dear sir, seems left, to prevent the most fatal consequences, but an immediate reinforcement, that is nowhere to be had, but from you, and the only route, that which I have pointed out in my letter to Congress, copy of which you have enclosed. Nor do I think that a less number than I have mentioned will suffice. Should your Excellency think proper to send the troops, you will please to let me know it by Express, that I may send provisions to Onion River.

Congress has wrote to me on the subject of my request to retire. Our affairs are much worse than when I made the request; this is motive sufficient for me to continue to serve my country in any way I can be thought most serviceable, but my utmost can be but little, weak and indisposed as I am.

The clothing is gone to Cambridge.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 17, 1776.]

Albany, January 13, 1776—6 o'clock, P. M.

STR: Within this half hour, Mr. Antill arrived with the unfortunate account contained in the enclosed. My amiable and gallant friend, General Montgomery, is no more; he fell in an unsuccessful attack on Quebeck, on the 30th ultimo. My feelings on this unhappy occasion are too poignant to admit of expression. May Heaven avert any further evils.

In the present critical situation of affairs, it is evident to me that nothing but the immediate march of a body of troops into Canada can secure that Province, for the Canadians, as I have heretofore observed, are not to be depended upon; only one hundred and sixty were at Quebeck with Colonel Livingston, and those behaved ill, as Mr. Antill will inform you.

The very great distance of Congress from here will apologize for a request I shall immediately make to General Washington, to send three thousand men into Canada, to march, by the way of No. 4, to Onion River, from whence Lake Champlain is passable to Canada.

Congress, undoubtedly, conceives it to be advantageous to the cause of America to sit at Philadelphia; but they will be good enough to permit me to suggest the necessity of a full-empowered Committee immediately to repair to this place.

Whilst I was preparing to carry into execution the resolutions of Congress respecting Tryon County, I received the two enclosed papers, marked Tryon. We have had a corroboration of these accounts, and I propose to march from hence with what of Militia I can collect; perhaps I shall something exceed the Tories in number, who, we are informed, are about seven hundred. They have cannon; we have none, and we have a very small quantity of powder. I hope, however, to give a good account of them.

The garrison of Ticonderoga leave it on Tuesday. I have only twenty men as yet arrived, of all the recruiting parties I have sent out; these, I suppose, reached Fort-George on the 11th. On the 12th I ordered them back, to aid me to carry into execution the resolution of Congress transmitted me by Mr. Tilghman. I shall send an express to countermand my orders, and to send them on to Ticonderoga.

The hurry I am in will apologize for my not answering your letter sent me by Mr. Tilghman and the other gentlemen, which I must defer to an hour less encumbered than the present.

If any troops can be spared from Jersey, entreat Congress to send them up, that Ticonderoga may have a garrison.

The money arrived yesterday, and goes off to-morrow. I am, sir, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. Captain Hazen has stood our friend in the contest. He has been a great sufferer on the occasion; his house and furniture, I have understood, were destroyed by our troops and the Canadians, and that all his stock of cattle were killed and used by our people. If Congress means to recompense him, perhaps it would be best to have the damage ascertained by a Court of Inquiry. I mention this, lest he should be referred to me, without, at the same time, a mode of liquidating his loss should be prescribed.

TRYON COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO MAJOR-GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tryon County Committee Chamber, }
 January 11, 1776. }

HONOURABLE SIR: We have intelligence, by an inhabitant of Kingsborough, (as by the enclosed copies of affidavits will at large appear,) that inimical preparations are undertaking against the friends of the American cause in Johnstown, and, also, an ambuscade being in wait in the woods not very distant from Kingsborough, so that they may be warned to approach, and to attack with cannon-shot; to which, yet, should join the several friends of the Government within our country. We immediately, upon this information, ordered sufficient scouting parties, to spy out whether any such malicious schemes were enterprised. But, in case to be certain, you must see us in such a defenceless situation that we hardly can resist, much less destroy, such enemies, for the utmost want of powder. We, therefore, resolved, at our Board, to apply, in such remarkable need, to your Honour, begging that you will please to take these, our distressed condition, into kind consideration, and to succour us, as soon as possible, with such ammunition, and, also, with men, if need should require. Relying on your particular zeal for our country's cause, we do not doubt you will grant our request to the safety of our country and the real friends of its liberties.

You will be pleased to favour us with your opinion, in this important matter, with despatch; remaining, with much respect, honourable sir, your obedient, humble servants,

By order of the Committee:

ISAAC PARIS, Chairman.

P. S. It is our opinion that we cannot expect much success against such enemies in Johnstown without cannon, as they are provided there alike. Pray order two or three of nine-pounders to be sent to our use for that purpose. This moment, being about one o'clock, after midnight, arrived at our House of Convention, Colonel Frederick Vischer, of the Mohawk District, and informs us, that he was acquainted, of a credible person living in Johnstown, that there are now about six or seven hundred men ready, under arms, in Johnstown, upon some inimical intent, without doubt.

ISAAC PARIS, Chairman.

To Major-General Schuyler.

AFFIDAVIT OF JONATHAN FRENCH.

Tryon County, N. Y., Committee Chamber, }
 January 11, 1776. }

Jonathan French, Jr., of Kingsborough, appeareth, and informeth this Board, under oath, that he heard of a certain woman, being the wife of an inhabitant near to Johnston-Hall, (which said woman wishes the country well, on condition of not being discovered of her intelligence,) that there was a fort to be built about said Hall; and the friends on the King's side shall be notified of this plan laid by Sir John; and about three hundred Indians (of what nation she does not know) are lying in ambush, so nigh that they can be warned with a cannon shot. Within a fortnight's time, (whereof a part of the time is already past,) the fort aforesaid shall be ready, and the Scotch people of Skenesborough shall partly defend the said fort and partly join the aforesaid Indians, and the King's friends shall be invited to join.

When all be ready, there shall be communication made to the country, or, rather, to the Committee of this County; and, upon the moving of the Whigs and attacking Johnstown, the Indians shall surround them, and fall, in company with the Scotch people and the Government's friends in the country, upon the said friends of liberty, and destroy not only those, but, also, all the rest of the inhabitants of the country, being on the country's side, entirely; as, besides, they live in hopes that some of the Six-Nations will join and assist them in their schemes.

Further the deponent informs, for certainty, that one Daniel Russell, of Kingsborough, is sent abroad, with a flag and the best pair of horses of Sir John Johnston, to enlist people on their (the King's) side, but nobody, at large, knows where he is gone.

Also, there are, already, some stockades rid, to his knowledge, for the above-mentioned fort, and the Scotch people shall be employed to cut all the said stockades wanting. And further saith not.

A true copy.

JOHN EISENLORD, Clerk.

JAMES PRICE TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, January 5, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, my good friend Mr. Antill, will acquaint you with the situation of the Army here, and the late unhappy affair at Quebeck, in which the brave General Montgomery fell; this was owing to the ill-timed advice of a person from Quebeck. Mr. Antill's extensive knowledge of this country gives him the advantage of any body that can be sent from hence, and will be of infinite service to the Congress, in making them thoroughly acquainted with the minds of the Canadians in general, as well as what steps will be necessary for securing this Province and uniting it to the other Colonies. He joined the General on his arrival before Quebeck, and continued with him until he fell, rendering every service in his power.

I fear the Army here will be in great want of cash; our house has advanced them, since their arrival here, upwards of twenty thousand pounds. We are now almost out of that article, and am sorry to say I do not find any of the merchants here willing to lend; however, I hope this inconvenience will be remedied by a speedy supply from the Treasury below; in the mean time, I shall do every thing in my power for the support of the Continental Army.

Have not to add, but am, respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,

JAMES PRICE.

To Major-General Schuyler, &c.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, January 5, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed letters from Colonel Arnold and Colonel Campbell will inform you of the unhappy fate of our brave and most amiable friend, General Montgomery, who, with his Aid-de-camp Macpherson, Captain Cheese- man, and several other brave officers and men, gloriously fell in an unfortunate attack upon Quebeck; unfortunate, indeed; for, in addition to the loss we sustain in the death of the General, one of the bravest men of the age, the flower of our Army at Quebeck were either cut off or taken prisoners. I little expect, that with the troops who remain, to be able to continue the siege; in short, our situation in this country is, at present, and will be, till we can have relief from the Colonies, very critical and dangerous. We really have but very few men in the country, and many of those few not to be depended on, as we have too dearly proved.

Mr. Antill, a gentleman from Quebeck, who General Montgomery appointed an Engineer, I beg leave to recommend to you. He was with the General when he fell, and can give you particulars. He is well acquainted with this country; for which reason I have detailed him, to proceed on to you, and so to the Congress, knowing that he will be much better able to inform you and them than I can, concerning the state of this country, and what will be necessary to be done; unless we have a number of men thrown into this country, as soon as they can possibly get over the lakes on the ice, which, I apprehend, might be done with sleds, and, at the same time, forward some powder, as we have but four tons in the country, at the several posts. We have lost our Artillery company; it will, therefore, be necessary to supply us with another very soon, or we may, possibly, not only lose the footing we have got here, but, perhaps, be all sacrificed in the country. There is but little confidence to be placed in the Canadians; they are but a small remove from the savages, and are fond of being of the strongest party.

Give me leave, also, to remind you of what, I dare say, General Montgomery has done, that we are in the greatest need of cash; hard money we shall soon be in the greatest distress for want of, and, doubtless, the more so, since the check to our arms. Mr. Price has hitherto supplied us; indeed, I know not how we could have subsisted as an army, without him; he has already advanced for us about twenty thousand pounds, and has assisted us in every way possible. General Montgomery, in his last letter to me, begged that Price might be mentioned, in the strongest terms, to the Congress.

The necessity of immediate relief, I am sure, will strike your mind very forcibly, when I tell you that our enemies in the country are numerous; the Clergy almost universally refuse absolution to those who are our friends, and preach to the people that it is not now too late to take arms against us; that the Bostonians are but a handful of men; which, you know, is too true.

Suppose, sir, that General Washington should detach a thousand men from his Army, if there are no other troops, already raised, that can be better spared. Something must be done, and that speedily, or I greatly fear we are ruined. We have but five or six hundred men for the garrisons of this place, Chamblly and St. John's. Many of the troops insist upon going home, their times of enlistment being out; some, indeed, have run away without a pass or dismissal, expressly against orders. I have been just informed that a Captain Pratt, of the Second Battalion of Yorkers, has led off his company from St. John's. I have given orders to suffer no man to go out of the country, whether they will enlist or not; the necessity of the case, I believe, will justify my conduct. I shall not be able to spare any men to reinforce Colonel Arnold; this place must be secured for a retreat, if necessary. I called a council of my officers in this place, who were, to a man, agreed that I ought to remain here. I have, therefore, sent Colonel Clinton with Mr. Price, who, I think, may be of great service to him. God only knows what the event will be. This affair puts a very different face upon our interests in this country; however, we must make the best of it.

I have ordered General Montgomery's papers to be sent to me; when I receive them, I shall conform myself to his instructions. I expected you was at Congress, and had prepared to send this melancholy news to General Washington, as well as to you; but the post arriving last night, I find that you was at Albany, therefore, shall leave it to you. I most heartily condole with you, with General Montgomery's friends, and with the country, for so great and public a loss.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To General Schuyler.

COLONEL DONALD CAMPBELL TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

Head-Quarters before Quebeck, January 2, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: This covers one from Col. Arnold, by which, I understand, you will be particularly informed of the state of affairs here, which gives me much anxiety of mind, yet I hope no fatal accident will happen to us, more than what has happened; and, truly, it is distressing enough. And, to add to it, several of our men, this two days past, have strenuously insisted on being discharged, not having enlisted for longer than to the last of December, which has been complied with; but it is said by some, that their view is only to change companies, and enlist at Montreal, which I hope may be true, though, really, few of them are worth retaining. Some good men are gone, (and some, even, without a discharge,) and carried off their arms, which I wish could be recovered, as being in much demand here. I hope every disposition of the troops, this two days past, will prove agreeable to you, when I have the pleasure of seeing you, though, to gratify some Field-Officers, I shall be necessitated to hold a council of war to-morrow, which I pray may agree in, was it only to satisfy the Field-Officers. I pray you to recommend, in the strongest terms, to Congress, the absolute necessity of sending a sufficient body of troops here, as early as possible; and I would recommend that those troops already on duty at New-York, for expedition sake, be forwarded here, and their place filled up as fast as they can be recruited.

Medicines are much wanted here, and I am told that a Dr. Beaumont has claimed a chest worth fifty guineas, which was the property of the Crown, and ought to belong to Congress. If this is a fact, I could wish it was looked into, as the most expeditious way of providing a supply for the Army, and which must be provided. I hope you will not forget to remind the Congress of the necessity of furnishing a suitable chest for the Army that may be ordered here; a thing much neglected this campaign for our Army.

Musket ball, and smaller sized balls and buckshot, are wanting, and I esteem buckshot more serviceable than generally allowed. I have not, as yet, received a return of the killed and wounded; must, therefore, defer it till you arrive.

I am, dear General, your most humble servant,

DONALD CAMPBELL.

To General Wooster.

P. S. I most sincerely wish you the compliments of the season.

COLONEL ARNOLD TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

General Hospital, January 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you, three days since, of our defeat and the death of General Montgomery and others, with all the information I then had of the matter. We have been in suspense, with regard to my detachment, until this afternoon, when Major Meigs was sent out, with a flag, for the officers' baggage, who, he says, are all taken prisoners, except Captain Hendricks, Lieutenant Humphreys, of the Riflemen, and Lieutenant Cooper, who were killed in the action. General Carleton says our loss, in killed and wounded, is a hundred. Major Meigs thinks it does not exceed sixty, and about three hundred taken prisoners, who are treated very humanely. These brave men sustained the force of the whole garrison for three hours, but were finally obliged to yield to numbers, and the advantageous situation the garrison had over them. Several other officers, I am told, are slightly wounded. We had the misfortune of losing one brass six-pounder in the engagement, and all our mortars were taken from St. Roque's the evening after the engagement. This was the fault of some of the officers who commanded, as they might very easily have been brought away, agreeable to my positive orders for that purpose. Our force, at this time, does not exceed eight hundred men, including Colonel Livingston's Regiment of two hundred Canadians, and some scattered Canadian forces, amounting to two hundred more. Many of the troops are dejected, and anxious to get home, and some have actually set off. I shall endeavour to continue the blockade while there are any hopes of success. For God's sake order as many men down as you can possibly spare, consistent with the safety of Montreal, and all the mortars, howitzers, and shells, that you can possibly bring. I hope you will stop every rascal who has deserted from us, and bring him back again.

Every possible mark of distinction was shown to the corpse of General Montgomery, who was to be interred in Quebeck this day. Had he been properly supported by his troops, I make no doubt of our success. We are short of cash—not more than four or five hundred pounds, and only twenty barrels of salt pork. If any can be spared from Montreal, I think best to bring it down, and all the butter.

I beg you will transmit a copy of this letter to the honourable Continental Congress, and another to his Excellency General Washington. I think it will be highly necessary, with the reinforcement which, I make no doubt, Congress will send, that they should order all the large mortars and howitzers at Crown-Point, Ticonderoga, and Fort-George, on to this place. Monsieur Pelissier, who has a furnace at Three-Rivers, assures me that he can cast any size and number of shells between this and the beginning of April. I hope the honourable Continental Congress will not think of sending less than eight or ten thousand men to secure and form a lasting connection with this country.

I am in such excessive pain from my wound, (as the bones of my leg are affected,) I can only add that I am, with the greatest esteem, dear sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

B. ARNOLD, Colonel, &c.

To General Wooster.

N. B. Many officers here appear dispirited; your presence will be absolutely necessary. I don't expect to be in a capacity to act this two months.

B. ARNOLD.

Albany, January 14, 1776.

SIR: Through the great hurry in which the express was sent off from hence, the enclosed was forgot.

I am, sir, with sentiments of esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

SIR: I have sent Colonel Warner to throw into Canada whatever numbers of men he can procure upon what are commonly called the New-Hampshire Grants; and, in order to encourage them to march without delay, I have offered forty shillings, lawful, as a bounty to the men, and a month's pay to the officers, and an allowance of one-sixth of a dollar per day from their leaving home until they can receive Continental provisions. I hope the Congress will give their approbation of this measure.

I am, as above, yours, &c.,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL McDougall.

Cambridge, January 13, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 2d instant last evening, and note what you mention of the cannon. I am in daily expectation of Colonel Knox's arrival, and until he comes, I cannot, with certainty, inform you whether I shall want the iron cannon or not.

Upon examination of the stores that were on board the brigantine, I find we stand in great need of shells, and shall esteem it a particular favour if you will, immediately on receipt hereof, forward the eleven hundred specified at the foot of your letter.

I am told that there is a vessel arrived with you, that brought twenty tons of powder. I need not inform you the great necessity I am in for that article. If it is true that this quantity is arrived, it would be of infinite service to the great cause we are engaged in, that the whole, or such part thereof as can be spared, was sent with the utmost despatch to this camp. If it belongs to private persons, I request you will purchase it; if to the publick, your exerting your influence with the Committee of Safety to effect this good purpose, will very much oblige, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Alexander McDougall.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Cambridge, January 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It is exceedingly painful to me to give you so much trouble as I have, and am like to do, in the support of our lines and the arrangement of the new Army. But my difficulties must, in their consequences, devolve trouble on you. To my very great surprise, I find that the whole number of arms which have been stopped from the discharged soldiers, amount to no more than one thousand six hundred and twenty; and of that number, no more than one hundred and twenty in store, the rest being redelivered to the recruits who have come in. I also find, from the report of the Recruiting officers, that few men are to be enlisted who have arms in their hands, and that they are reduced to the alternative of either getting no men, or men without arms. Unhappy situation! What is to be done, unless their Governments will exert themselves in providing arms from the several towns, or in such other manner as to them shall seem speedy and effectual.

To account for this great deficiency would be tedious, and not much to the purpose. Suffice it, generally, to say, that it has arisen from two causes: the badness of the arms of the old Army, which the inspectors and valuers of did not think fit to detain; and to the disobedient regiments, which, in spite of every order I could issue to the contrary, (even to a solemn threat of stopping the pay for the months of November and December, of all those who should carry away their arms,) have, in a measure, by stealth, borne them away.

I am glad to hear, by a gentleman of your honourable body, who does me the honour to be the bearer of this letter, that you have, for some time past, been collecting arms at Watertown, whilst a good deal of despatch has been used in making them elsewhere. I beg to know how many I can rely upon, as the recruits now coming in from the country will be useless without. It is to no purpose, I find, to depend upon imported arms. What you can furnish, I must take on behalf of the Continent, and will, upon notice, send some gentlemen to receive them. Will it be prudent to apply to such of the Militia as are going away, for their arms? Leaving it optional with them, cannot be amiss; but, will the necessity of the case justify the policy of detaining them? I ask for information, being, with great truth and esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. James Warren, Speaker of the House of Assembly, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MATTHEW THORNTON.

Cambridge, January 13, 1776.

SIR: I am very sorry that I should have so often troubled you respecting this Army, and that I am under the necessity of applying to you again.

To my great surprise, sir, I find that, notwithstanding I have taken the utmost pains to prevent the soldiers that would not reinlist in the new Army from carrying away their arms, or such of them as were good, the whole number collected amounts to only one thousand six hundred and twenty, of which there are no more than one hundred and twenty now in store, the rest being delivered to the recruits who have come in.

I also find, from the report of the Recruiting officers, that few men are to be enlisted who have arms in their hands, and that they are reduced to the disagreeable alternative of getting men without any, or no men at all. Unhappy situation! What is to be done? Must not these Governments exert themselves in procuring them from the several towns, or in such other manner as to them shall seem most effectual and speedy.

To account minutely for this great deficiency would be tedious, and of no importance. I shall only say, that it has arisen from two causes, to wit: the badness of the arms of the old Army, which the inspectors and appraisers did not think worth detaining, and to the disobedience of some Regiments, carrying theirs away, in a manner, by stealth, notwithstanding every order I could issue, and even solemn threats of stopping the pay for the months of November and December of those that should.

The prospect of getting imported arms is so remote and uncertain that I cannot depend upon it. I, therefore, request the favour of you to inform me, whether you have any, and what number belongs to the Government, as, also, if you will be able to procure more, and in what time. If you have any, or can get them, I shall be glad to take them on account of the United Colonies. They must be had if possible. I have wrote to the honourable General Court of this Province about the same, but have not received their answer. Should any of your Militia be here when I get your answer, will it be prudent to apply to them for their arms? Leaving it optional in them cannot be amiss; but, will the necessity of the case justify an involuntary detention of them? I ask for information.

I am, sir, with great esteem, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Matthew Thornton, Esq., President of the Convention of New-Hampshire.

BENJAMIN FESSENDEN TO JAMES WARREN.

Sandwich, January 13, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: In compliance with the desire of a number of the members of the Committees of Correspondence and Inspection for this town, I enclose you a copy of the vote passed by them yesterday. The Committee have done all in their power to stop said vessel, referred to in the vote, and have had repeated assurances that she should not sail without liberty; but, as she has sailed, thought it a duty incumbent on them, to give information of it to the honourable House, that if any thing further was necessary, they might give such order thereon as to them should, in their wisdom, seem best. Mr. Nye is a member of our Committee, and to him I beg leave to refer you for a more particular account of the conduct of the owners, relative to their sending away the vessel.

I am, honoured sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
BENJAMIN FESSENDEN.

To the Hon. James Warren, Esq.

At a meeting of a number of the Members of the Committees of Correspondence and Inspection, of the town of Sandwich, on January 12, 1776, Mr. Stephen Nye was chosen Chairman, and Benjamin Fessenden, Clerk.

Present: Messrs. Stephen Nye, Eliakim Tobey, Lieutenant John Dillingham, Captain Simon Fish, Elisha Pope, Nathaniel Fish, Seth Freeman, Esquire, Lot Nye, and Benjamin Fessenden.

Whereas, the Committees, or at least a number of each, were some time past informed that a certain sloop, reputed to be owned by Solomon Nye, of Falmouth, Levi Barlow, Jesse Barlow, and Obed Barlow, of this town, was preparing to go on a voyage to the West-Indies, contrary to the recommendations of the Continental Congress and Provincial Assembly; and, in consequence thereof, chose one of their number to make inquiry into the affair; and, in case it was found necessary, to make application to the commanding officer of the troops stationed in this County for orders for them to stop said vessel, or something similar to it, the proceedings at which meeting the Committee cannot now come at. In consequence of which, said member went and received assurances from the above Solomon Nye and Jesse Barlow, that said vessel should not proceed on said voyage without liberty from the General Court. Notwithstanding which, we last week received information that said vessel had loaded and sailed on said voyage, but meeting with contrary winds, was returned and then at anchor. On which, a number of us met and passed the following vote, viz:

That Captain Ward Swift be requested to repair on board said vessel, with such aid as he shall judge necessary, and strip her of her sails, or take some other effectual method to put it out of their power to prosecute said voyage until they shall obtain liberty.

In consequence of which, Captain Swift hath attempted, with a file of men, to stop said vessel; but, before he could get on board, she came to sail, and is gone off.

Therefore, voted, that Captain Benjamin Fessenden be desired to write to the Speaker of the honourable House of Representatives, and enclose to him a copy of this vote. Unanimously agreed to. A true copy of the Minutes:

B. FESSENDEN.

COLONEL BENEDICT ARNOLD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp before Quebeck, January 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I make no doubt you will soon hear of our misfortune on the 31st ultimo, and be very anxious to know our present situation. Our loss and repulse struck an amazing panick into both officers and men, and had the enemy improved their advantage, our affairs here must have been entirely ruined. It was not in my power to prevail on the officers to attempt saving our mortars which had been placed in St. Roque's, of course they fell into the hands of the enemy. Upwards of one hundred officers and soldiers instantly set off for Montreal, and it was with the greatest difficulty I could persuade the rest to make a stand. The panick soon subsided, I arranged the men in such order as effectually to blockade the city, and enable them to assist each other if attacked. It was urged by the officers to move our ammunition and artillery stores, of which we had a large quantity, and though the risk was great, I could not approve the measure as it would undoubtedly have made unfavourable impressions on the minds of the Canadians, and induced them to withdraw their assistance, which must have ended in our utter ruin. I, therefore, put the best face on matters, and betrayed no marks of fear. I have withdrawn the cannon from our battery and placed them round the Magazine. Our present force is only seven hundred. I am in daily expectation of a reinforcement from Montreal of two or three hundred men. I expected General Wooster, but find he cannot leave Montreal. Colonel Clinton is just arrived. I have put on foot the raising a regiment of two or three hundred Canadians, which I make no doubt of effecting. Our finances are very low; however, I hope we shall be able to rub along. Mr. Price is our only resource, and has exerted himself. I wait with great anxiety the arrival of a reinforcement from below. I have wrote the honourable Congress my opinion that five thousand men will be necessary to insure us Quebeck, though it may possibly be reduced with a less number; it appears a blockade may answer the purpose. I think Quebeck an object of too much consequence to trust it to the event. If reduced, five thousand men will be necessary for a garrison.

Your favour of the 5th ultimo, is just come to hand. It gives me a most sensible pleasure to have your approbation of my conduct. I beg you would accept my thanks for the notice you have been pleased to take of me and my officers, in your new establishment. Most of them are provided for in an unexpected manner, not very pleasing to me.

Enclosed is a list of the killed and wounded. Both officers and men behaved with the greatest intrepidity; and had not the General been basely deserted by his troops, we should doubtless have carried the town. My detachment had carried the first battery; my being wounded, and the loss of their guides, retarded them much. After the death of the General, they sustained the force of the whole garrison for a considerable time, who fired from under cover, and had every advantage of situation. Their retreat was cut off by the enemy's gaining a narrow defile through which they were obliged to pass. They were overpowered by numbers and obliged to resign, though deserving a better fate. Governor Carleton treats them with humanity, and has given leave for their baggage to be sent in to them.

I heartily congratulate you on the success of your privaters. I think the balance of the last year's account is still in our favour, though we have met a severe check here. I hope soon to have the pleasure of seeing General Lee, or some experienced officer, here.

I heartily wish you the protection and blessing of the Almighty, and am, with very great respect and esteem, dear sir, your obedient, humble servant,

BENEDICT ARNOLD.

To General Washington.

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp at Roxbury, January 14, 1776.

HONoured SIR: I have your esteemed favour of the 8th instant, and would devoutly join in your petitions, that the hand of the Almighty, in His publick and private dealings, may be properly and profitably attended to. God has, indeed, appeared for our land, contrary to all human reasoning. The principles and hopes of our enemies have failed them; the King's speech, threatening as it is, yet betrays, in almost every sentence, the imbecility of his measures. The Ministry, it seems, have still a morbid majority. It will give the minority new spirits, that so eminent and respectable characters as the Duke of Grafton, General Conway, and Bishop of Peterborough, are added to their number. And, before this time, the King's affairs in Canada will look with a dark aspect. Boston papers are, now a days, something of rarities. I enclose you one for your amusement; the lengthy address in it, animadverting on the address from our Head-Quarters to the soldiers, has inserted one sentence very erroneously. "Your officers tell you, (he says,) that men who are possessed of a vivacity," &c. The word "not," which is essential to the meaning of the sentence, is left out. As light as they make of the burning of two or three old houses at Charlestown, they have pulled down the three or four that escaped the flames. The troops in Boston were under arms all night. I have alighted upon some old proclamations in the house where I am. As they are old things, and the productions of eminent men, I have had thoughts of sending some of them to you.

Recruits come in slowly. The Regiments, on average, are not more than four hundred strong. We have, however, more men than arms. By brother David's letter to the Major, the situation of affairs at New-York require immediate attention. That Colony has hitherto been, and I fear will forever be, a moth to us. I almost wish its capital was in ashes.

I send my love and duty to mother, brothers, and sisters, and a letter to son. I long to embrace the offspring of my dear companion. I implore the Divine mercy that he may, by his improvements and dutifulness, make some amends to his grand-parents for the loss of their lovely daughter. That he may be a blessing to his friends and the world; above all, that his name be written in Heaven. That you may experience much of the presence of the Father of lights, carrying you through the important business of your station, and have occasion to rejoice in the happy fruits of your care and labour.

I am, with all duty and affectionate regards, your bereaved son,

JEDEDIAH HUNTINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 25, 1776, referred to the Committee of Correspondence.]
Cambridge, January 14, 1776.

SIR: I am exceedingly sorry that I am under the necessity of applying to you, and calling the attention of Congress to the state of our arms, which is truly alarming. Upon the dissolution of the old Army, I was apprehensive that the new would be deficient in this instance; and that the want might be as inconsiderable as possible, I gave it in orders, that the arms of such men as did not reinlist, should be (or such of them as were good) retained at the prices which should be affixed by persons appointed to inspect and value them; and that we might be sure of them, I added, that there would be a stoppage of pay for the months of November and December, from those who should carry their fire-locks away without their being first examined. I hoped, by these precautions, to have procured a considerable number; but, sir, I find, with much concern, that from the badness of the arms, and the disobedience of too many in bearing them off, without a previous inspection, that very few were collected. Neither are we to expect that many will be brought in by the new recruits; the officers who are out inlisting having reported that few men who have arms will engage in the service, and that they are under the disagreeable alternative of taking men without arms, or of getting none. Unhappy situation, and much to be deplored! especially, when we have every reason to convince us, that we have to contend with a formidable army, well provided of every necessary, and that there will be a most vigorous exertion of Ministerial vengeance against us, as soon as they think themselves in a condition for it. I hope it is in the power of Congress to afford us relief. If it is not, what must, what can be done?

Our treasury is almost exhausted, and the demands against it very considerable. A constant supply of money to answer every claim and exigency, would much promote the good of the service. In the common affairs of life it is useful; in war it is absolutely necessary and essential. I would beg leave, too, to remind you of tents, and of their importance, hoping, that if an opportunity has offered, you have procured them.

I fear that our Army will not be raised to the new establishment in any reasonable time, if ever; the inlisting goes on so very slow, that it almost seems at an end.

In my letter of the 4th inst., I wrote you that I had received certain intelligence from a Mr. Hutchinson and others, that two of the five regiments from Cork, were arrived at Halifax, one at Boston, and the two others had sailed for Quebeck, and had not been heard of. I am now assured, as a matter to be relied on, by four captains of ships, who left England about the 2d November, and who appear to be men of veracity, that the whole of these regiments, (except the three companies that arrived at Boston some time ago,) when they sailed, were at Milford-Haven, where they had been obliged to put in by a violent storm the 19th of October; that they would not be able to leave it for a considerable time, as they were under the necessity of repairing their vessels and getting some new ones taken up. Such is the uncertainty and contradiction in what I now hear, that it is not possible to know what to believe or disbelieve.

I wrote to the General Court yesterday, and to the Convention of New-Hampshire, immediately upon seeing the great deficiency in our arms, praying that they would interest themselves in the matter, and furnish me with all their power. Whether I shall get any, or what quantity, I cannot determine, having not received their answers. The same application will be made to the Governments of Connecticut and Rhode-Island.

I do myself the honour to send you sundry newspapers, I received from the above-mentioned captains, as they may be later than any you have seen, and contain some interesting intelligence.

I have the honour to be, with much esteem and regard, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, January 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer presents an opportunity to me of acknowledging the receipt of your favour of the 30th ultimo, which never came to my hands till last night, and, if I have not done it before, of your other letter of the 23d preceding.

The hints you have communicated from time to time, not only deserve, but do most sincerely and cordially meet, with my thanks. You cannot render a more acceptable service, nor, in my estimation, give me a more convincing proof of your friendship, than by a free, open, and undisguised account of every matter relative to myself or conduct. I can bear to hear of imputed or real errors. The man who wishes to stand well in the opinion of others, must do this, because he is thereby enabled to correct his faults, or remove the prejudices which are imbibed against him. For this reason, I shall thank you for giving me the opinions of the world upon such points as you know me to be interested in; for, as I have but one capital object in view, I could wish to make my conduct coincide with the wishes of mankind, as far as I can consistently; I mean, without departing from that great line of duty which, though hid under a cloud for some time, from a peculiarity of circumstances, may, nevertheless, bear a scrutiny.

My constant attention to the great and perplexing objects which continually rise to my view, absorbs all lesser considerations, and, indeed, scarcely allows me to reflect that there is such a body in existence as the General Court of this Colony, but when I am reminded of it by a Committee; nor can I, upon recollection, discover in what instances (I wish they would be more explicit) I have been inattentive to or slighted them. They could not, surely, conceive that there was a propriety in unbosoming the secrets of an army to them; that it was necessary to ask their opinion of throwing up an intrenchment or forming a battalion. It must, therefore, be what I before hinted to you; and how to remedy it I hardly know, as I am acquainted with few of the members, never go out of my own lines, nor see any of them in them.

I am exceedingly sorry to hear that your little fleet has been shut in by the frost. I hope it has sailed ere this, and given you some proof of the utility of it, and enabled the Congress to bestow a little more attention to the affairs of this Army, which suffers exceedingly by their overmuch business, or too little attention to it. We are now without any money in our treasury, powder in our magazines, or arms in our stores. We are without a Brigadier, (the want of whom has been twenty times urged,) Engineers, Expresses, (though a Committee has been appointed these two months to establish them,) and, by-and-by, when we shall be called upon to take the field, shall not have a tent to lie in. Apropos, what is doing with mine?

These are evils, but small in comparison of those which disturb my present repose. Our inlistments are at a stand; the fears I ever entertained are realized; that is, the discontented officers (for I do not know how else to account for it) have thrown such difficulties or stumbling-blocks in the way of recruiting, that I no longer entertain a hope of completing the Army by voluntary inlistments, and I see no move nor likelihood to do it by other means. In the last two weeks, we have inlisted but about a thousand men; whereas, I was confidently led to believe, by all the officers I conversed with, that we should, by this time, have had the regiments nearly completed. Our total number upon paper amounts to about ten thousand five hundred; but, as a large portion of these are returned "not joined," I never expect to receive them, as an ineffectual order has once issued to call them in. Another is now gone forth, peremptorily requiring all officers, under pain of being cashiered, and recruits, of being treated as deserters, to join their respective regiments by the first day of next month, that I may know my real strength; but, if my fears are not imaginary, I shall have a dreadful account of the advanced month's pay. In consequence of the assurances given, and my expectation of having, at least, men enough inlisted to defend our lines, (to which may be added my unwillingness to burden the cause with unnecessary expense,) no relief of Militia has been ordered in to supply the places of those who are released from their engagements to-morrow, and as to whom, though many have promised to continue out the month, there is no security for their stay.

Thus am I situated, with respect to men. With regard to arms, I am yet worse off. Before the dissolution of the old Army, I issued an order, directing three judicious men of each brigade, to attend, review, and appraise the good arms of every regiment; and, finding a very great unwillingness in the men to part with their arms, (at the same time not having it in my power to pay them for the months of November and December,) I threatened severely, that every soldier who should carry away his fire-lock without leave, should never receive pay for those months. Yet, so many have been carried off, partly by stealth, but chiefly as condemned, that we have not, at this time, one hundred guns in the stores, of all that have been taken in the prize-ship and from the soldiery, notwithstanding our regiments are not half complete. At the same time, I am told, and believe it, that, to restrain the inlistment to men with arms, you will get but few of the former, and still fewer of the latter, which would be good for any thing. How to get furnished, I know not. I have applied to this and the neighbouring Colonies, but with what success, time, only, can tell. The reflection on my situation, and that of this Army, produces many an unhappy hour, when all around me are wrapped in sleep. Few people know the predicament we are in, on a thousand accounts; fewer, still, will believe, if any disaster happens to these lines, from what cause it flows. I have often thought, how much happier I should have been, if, instead of accepting the command under such circumstances, I had taken my musket on my shoulder and entered the ranks; or, if I could have justified the measure to posterity and my own conscience, had retired to the back country and lived in a wigwam. If I shall be able to rise superior to these and many other difficulties which might be enumerated, I shall most religiously believe that the finger of Providence is in it, to blind the eyes of our enemies; for, surely, if we get well through this month, it must be for want of their knowing the disadvantages we labour under.

Could I have foreseen the difficulties which have come upon us; could I have known that such a backwardness would have been discovered, among the old soldiers, to the service, all the Generals upon earth should not have convinced me of the propriety of delaying an attack upon Boston till this time. When it can now be attempted, I will not undertake to say; but thus much I will answer for, that no opportunity can present itself earlier than my wishes. But, as this letter discloses some interesting truths, I shall be somewhat uneasy until I hear it gets to your hands, although the conveyance is thought safe.

We made a successful attempt, a few nights ago, upon the houses near Bunker's Hill. A party, under Major Knowlton, crossed upon the mill-dam, the night being dark, and set fire to and burnt down eight, out of fourteen which were standing, and which we found they were daily pulling down for fuel. Five soldiers and the wife of one of them, inhabiting one of the houses, were brought off prisoners; another soldier was killed; none of ours hurt.

Having undoubted information of the embarkation of troops (somewhere from three to five hundred) at Boston, and being convinced they are designed either for the New-York Government (from whence we have some very disagreeable accounts of the conduct of the Tories) or Virginia, I despatched General Lee, a few days ago, in order to secure the City of New-York from falling into their hands, as the consequences of such a blow might prove fatal to our interests. He is, also, to inquire a little into the conduct of the Long-Islanders, and such others as have, by their conduct and declarations, proved themselves inimical to the common cause. To effect these purposes, he is to raise volunteers in Connecticut, and call upon the troops of New-Jersey, if not contrary to any order of Congress.

By a ship arrived at Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, we have London prints to the 2d of November, containing the Addresses of Parliament, which are little more than a repetition of the Speech, with assurances of standing by his Majesty with lives and fortunes. The captains (for there were three or four of them passengers) say, that we have nothing to expect but the most vigorous exertions of Administration, who have a dead majority upon all questions, although the Duke of Grafton and General Conway have joined the minority, as, also, the Bishop of Peterborough. These captains affirm, confidently, that the five regiments from Ireland cannot, any of them, have arrived at Halifax, inasmuch as, by a violent storm on the 19th of October, the transports were forced, in a very distressed condition, into Milford-Haven, and were not in a condition to put to sea when they left London; and the weather has been such, since, as to prevent heavy-loaded ships from making passage by this time. One or two transports, they add, were thought to be lost; but these arrived some considerable time ago at Boston, with three companies of the Seventeenth Regiment.

Mr. Sayre has been committed to the Tower, upon the information of a certain Lieutenant or Adjutant Richardson, (formerly of your city,) for reasonable practices; an intention of seizing his Majesty and possessing himself of the Tower, it is said in "The Crisis." But he is admitted to bail, himself in five hundred pounds, and two sureties in two hundred and fifty pounds each.

What are the conjectures of the wise ones with you, as to the French armament in the West-Indies? But, previous to this, is there any certainty of such an armament? The captains, who are sensible men, heard nothing of this when they left England; nor does there appear any apprehensions, on this score, in any of the measures or speeches of Administration. I should think the Congress will not, ought not, to adjourn at this important crisis.

But it is highly necessary, when I am at the end of the second sheet of paper, that I should adjourn my account of matters to another letter. I shall, therefore, in Mrs. Washington's name, thank you for your good wishes towards her, and with compliments, added to mine, to Mrs. Reed, conclude, dear sir, your sincere and affectionate servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed, Esq.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO COLONEL WENTWORTH.

Cambridge, January 14, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 10th instant, with sundry newspapers, packages, &c., by your young man, and to return you his thanks for the same, and your great attention to the directions he has given you. He is much obliged for your information respecting the store-ships, and wishes with you that they, or some of them may be brought safe into port by our armed cruisers, as they will be of immense value to us.

I am, sir, yours, &c.

To Joshua Wentworth, Esq., Portsmouth.

GOOCHLAND COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Goochland County, at the Court-House, on Monday, January 15, 1776:

Present seventeen Members.

The Rev. Mr. William Douglas being summoned to this Committee on the information of sundry witnesses, that the said William Douglas had spoken disrespectfully of the people of America, appeared, and after the witnesses were examined, this Committee are of opinion that Mr. Douglas has said nothing worthy of notice, and that he should be acquitted with honour.

GEORGE UNDERWOOD, County Clerk.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee for the County of Prince Edward, January 15, 1776:

Samuel Burks, an inhabitant of this County, having been summoned to attend this Committee, in consequence of an information lodged against the said Burks, on suspicion of his having acted as an enemy to America, appeared, and after hearing the testimony of several witnesses, summoned and examined relative to Mr. Burks's conduct, it appears to this Committee, that the report was altogether false and groundless, and that the said Burks is entirely innocent of the charge: wherefore, he is honourably acquitted.

Ordered, That a copy of the above Resolves be transmitted to Mr. Alexander Purdie, and entreat him to publish the same.

JOHN NASH, JUN., Chairman pro tem.
BENJAMIN LAWSON, Clerk.

ACCOMACK COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Accomack County, }
January 15, 1776. }

A complaint being, heretofore, lodged against Captain Custis Kellum, mariner, a native of this County, for that he has opposed the measures adopted by the honourable the Convention of this Colony for raising troops, and prevented, as much as in his power, recruits from being raised in the said service, and that he also has expressed himself in language inimical to the American cause, the said Kellum this day appeared, and answered the same; and sundry witnesses being examined on oath, it appeared, that he has much opposed the said measures, and prevented men from listing in the said service, and that he expressed himself in these words, viz: "Damn the Bostonians, what are they but a pack of G-d damned Rebels?"

The Committee taking this case into consideration, are unanimously of opinion that he has acted the part of an enemy to his country, and that the same be published in the Gazette; but the said Kellum appeared penitent, and expressing himself very sorry for his past imprudent conduct, promising to behave himself for the future in such manner as to regain and merit the confidence of his countrymen, and being seemingly convinced of his error, and voluntarily signed the Recantation hereafter written, it is recommended to his said countrymen to receive him into their former favour and good opinion:

"Whereas, I have spoken sundry very malicious and disgraceful words of the noble and spirited Sons of Liberty in New-England, now bleeding in the cause of freedom, and have been so impudent as to find fault with the proceedings of the honourable the Convention of Virginia, do hereby acknowledge, that my former opinion of the Bostonians, and of the proceedings of the honourable Convention, was founded on mean and narrow principles, and that I do hereby renounce the same, and will, for the future, conduct myself in such a manner as shall merit the good opinion of the good people of this country and the publick in general, against whom I have offended; and hope for this, my free and open recantation and acknowledgment, to receive pardon and forgiveness from the publick for my above offence."

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN POWELL, Clerk.

DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER TO CHARLES CARROLL, BARRISTER.

Stepney, January 15, 1776.

MY DEAR BARRISTER: Governour Eden is now with me, and very desirous and willing to co-operate with you and Mr. Tilghman, and such other gentlemen of the Convention, as are willing to disperse the cloud that has almost overshadowed and ready to burst upon us. Let me, therefore, beg and beseech you to use your influence with Mr. Tilghman, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Holliday, and Mr. Stone, to dine with me to-morrow if the Convention should break up in time, if not the next or any other day that may suit. I know the Eastern-Shore gentlemen are anxious to get home, but I flatter myself, that they will think an additional day to the many they have spent on publick business will not be thrown away in attempting to form a plan which may save millions of money and thousands of lives. I know your disposition, and need say no more, but to desire that you will communicate my request to the above named gentlemen, and send an answer by Charles, who will wait your commands.

I am, truly and affectionately yours,

DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

To Charles Carroll, Barrister.

CHARLES CARROLL, BARRISTER, TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

January 15, 1776.

MY DEAR MAJOR: I communicated your letter to the gentlemen you mentioned; they will, with the utmost pleasure, lend their assistance to form a plan for the very good purposes you mention, and would most willingly wait on you to dinner to-morrow, but think it impossible they can get back time enough to meet the House in the afternoon. Will it be agreeable to the Governour and yourself to take a scrap of dinner with me to-morrow. You know I cannot give you meat, but you shall both be most heartily welcome to what I can give you. We expect the Convention will break up to-morrow evening. Pray let me hear from you to-morrow morning early, we must have a meeting. Your affectionate humble servant,

CHARLES CARROLL.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

P. S. I wrote you a note about dinner time, on the appointment of the Council of Safety, which I hope you received.

CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, January 15, 1776.

SIR: I last night received my orders to go to Carolina, and expect to set out on Thursday morning for one of our pilot boats, now at New-Castle, in which I shall take my chance. Should you come out our way, if you think proper to let me know to-morrow or next day, what signal you will show when off our bar, you may depend on my keeping a good look out for you, and let nobody know the signal, but when it is necessary.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN.

To the Honourable Eseck Hopkins, Esq., Commander-in-chief of the Fleet of the United Colonies.

(SIGNAL: Some one of the fleet, if together, or the small sloop, if alone, will hoist a striped flag half up to flying-stay.)

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 17, 1776.]

New-York, January 15, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Livingston arrived here on Saturday, and immediately communicated to us your letters, desiring us to purchase a quantity of powder, &c., we accordingly made a particular inquiry how much of that article is now in this Province, and find there is not, nor has there been, any since last April, but what has been in the hands of the Committee here, of which we send an account enclosed, whereby it appears that there is now in the publick store six thousand three hundred and fifty pounds, which, with what is due from the Continent to this Province, is all the stock they have; four hundred and sixty-two quarter casks was all the powder that was brought from Curacao, though it was said that it was to the amount of three hundred barrels, and that several other vessels, which arrived about the same time, had also brought powder, which was without foundation.

A report prevails here that a fleet of eighteen transports, three ships of war, and a bomb-ketch, have sailed from Boston; that General Lee has desired Governor Trumbull to get fifteen hundred men in readiness, with all despatch; that he intended to march with a small body of men from Cambridge to Connecticut, and with the troops to be raised in Connecticut to march to this place; but, as it is probable you have information from the General, it will be needless for us to enlarge.

The Asia and Phenix are both in this harbour, and the Viper at Sandy-Hook.

We are, sir, your most humble servants,

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,

JOHN ALSOP,

FRANCIS LEWIS.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN ALBANY TO ONE IN HARTFORD, DATED JANUARY 15, 1776.

Last Friday came an express to this city, with the news that Sir John Johnston, (son of the late Sir William.) with about five hundred men, and a few Indians, (Mohawks.) were assembling in hostile posture, &c. The County Committee convened immediately, and ordered the Minute-Men in Albany, Schenectady, Schoharie, Half-Moon, &c., to march to Johnstown, with four days provision, an axe to every sixth man, &c., who are now gone and going; but I rather guess will prove a false alarm, in part, or, at least, less alarming than at first received.

P. S. Monday Evening, January 15.—To-morrow morning, very early, General Schuyler, with the multitudes come in from Berkshire, and all around, (except those gone forward to Schenectady, and some sent home to prepare for the tour of Canada.) will set off for Johnstown. This city is in the greatest confusion; every countenance is changed; Whigs depressed and melancholy, and immediately animated and revengeful, or rather spirited for a noble and vigorous effort in the cause of liberty; whilst the Tories prick up their ears. One of them, for publicly rejoicing at General Montgomery's untimely fall, is closeted in the City-Hall.

P. S. 16th, ten o'clock, A. M.—The General just gone to Schenectady, on his way to Johnstown, accompanied by many good soldiers, &c. Success attend them.

MESSAGE TO THE MOHAWKS, BY MR. BLEECKER, INDIAN INTERPRETER, JANUARY 15, 1776.

Brothers: I am sent by the Commissioners of the United Colonies, to acquaint you that the brethren of Albany have received information that several persons, in and about Johnstown, are busy in instilling men to cut our throats, and are making other hostile preparations to assist in enslaving this country, and to prevent and stop up the road of communication to the westward. Your Albany brothers, on this alarming occasion, have collected their warriors, and are now sending them up the river, in order to inquire into the truth of the report, and act thereupon as they may judge needful.

Brothers: Be not alarmed at these preparations; nothing is intended against you; our own safety and liberty impel us to this measure; you can rest perfectly satisfied that we will invariably pursue our friendly disposition towards you, and expect that you will, agreeable to the promises you made us at Albany, take no part in the present struggle.

Brothers: We promised you, last Summer, that Sir John and his family should not be molested, while he took no measures against us: We are yet of that mind; and, if he has acted as an honest man, he need not fear any danger.

Brothers: Lest the preparations and march into your country should alarm the Six Nations, we desire that you will send some of your young men with this speech to the end of the House of the Six Nations, that no uneasiness may take place in their minds.

Reply of the MOHAWKS, sent by Mr. BLEECKER.

Brothers: This belt we present to the Commissioners of the Twelve United Colonies, and our brothers of Albany, and desire them that the troops that were coming up should not come up so speedily; that, perhaps, a mode might be pointed out to have it settled in an easier manner; that, perhaps, in case the troops came up, it might be a means to stop up the road, and, perhaps, create an uneasiness in their minds, as they and Sir John were, as it were, one blood; and that the General should do all in his power to have it settled without the troops going up; that he was a wise man, and should set his thoughts a thinking to have it settled, by appointing three or four persons to treat with Sir John about it. That they would retain the belt sent by the Commissioners, till such time as they heard from the Commissioners; and, in case the troops did not come, then they would send the belt forward to the other nations; but, if they came up, then they would keep the same in their hands. That three of their nation should immediately go to Sir John, and desire him to remain silent and be at peace; and, that in case there were any in Johnstown that were Tories, they would settle them, and make them remain peaceable. That all the uneasiness in the minds of Sir John and the others in Johnstown, originates from accounts that they receive from people in Albany; that they daily have accounts from thence that the New-England people are coming up to destroy Sir John and his possessions.

Answer sent from the Squaws.

Brothers, The Commissioners of the United Colonies, and the People of Albany: This belt we present you, and hereby renew the covenant that was made last Summer; and we beg that no disturbance shall be made up here, and that the said covenant may not thereby be broken. That in case the troops were to come up, it might create great uneasiness, as they and Sir John were of one blood; and that in case Sir John was disturbed, it might touch their blood; and we beg some other mode may be pointed out, whereby this uneasiness may be settled.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, January 15, 1776.

SIR: I have received your agreeable letter of the 7th instant, per Captain Sears.

The condition and circumstances of the Colony of New-York gives me pain, lest the friends to American liberty, in that Colony, should be too much neglected, and become disheartened, and the inimical designs and mischievous operations of others succeed. I have received credible information that the Provincial Congress there had spent some time, just before they adjourned to the first of February, in debating whether they should not address Mr. Tryon, for the purpose of calling the General Assembly of that Colony, to revive the old scheme of adopting the Parliamentary insult of the 20th of February last, which was rejected. Surely our friends want to be strengthened, and our enemies to be checked.

The following is an extract from a letter from one of our friends to another, dated December 27, 1775: "Just after you left town, the Phenix, a forty-gun ship, arrived, and anchored just before Mr. Drake's; and, in two or three days after, the Asia, in company of the Dutchess of Gordon, came and anchored opposite to Peck's Ship, so that we are highly honoured. General Dabrymple is on board the Phenix, and it is rumoured that they have two hundred troops concealed on board, which has, for near a week past, kept us on pretty hard duty. The Colonel has slept in the barracks two or three nights. If they come, I hope to give a good account of them. We have some excellent field-pieces, and if they visit us the gates will be opened, and we will welcome them with a few Resolves of the Continental Congress, which is the name of one of the pieces."

I wrote a letter to President Hancock, dated the 6th January, instant, and another to one of our Delegates at Congress, requesting that more effectual measures may be taken for the security of New-York, to prevent our enemies from being supplied with provisions, furnished with intelligence, and from having an opportunity to use every artifice to insult and injure us from that quarter. It, therefore, gave me sensible pleasure, to find that you have adopted the measures mentioned in yours, and with great cheerfulness called my Council, and, with their advice, appointed Colonel Waterbury, Lieutenant-Colonel Bradley, and Major Hobby, Field-Officers for one regiment; Colonel Ward, Lieutenant-Colonel Lewis, and Major Douglass, for another; sent a proclamation to the two Colonels, and orders to them, with the rest of the Field-Officers, by voluntary enlistment to raise seven hundred and fifty men each, to join and assist Major-General Lee, with encouragement that they should be entitled to the same pay, wages, and billeting allowed the troops before Boston, during the time they serve, and to be dismissed soon, when the service would conveniently admit. The Field-Officers of each regiment to select Captains and Subalterns from those in the standing Militia; if needful, to request the chief officer of the Militia companies to call their companies together, for the purpose of inlisting the men with expedition; and, to prevent difficulty for want of ammunition, have ordered Captain Niles, commander of our armed schooner, Spy, to take on board half a ton of powder, and transport four hundred pounds to New-Haven, two hundred pounds to Norwalk, and four hundred pounds to Stamford, with orders to him to follow such directions as Major-General Lee may give for the service he is employed in, and to execute the same until dismissed by him, or further orders from me; wished, but failed, to have the pleasure of a short interview with him.

When my orders were ready, very early on Saturday morning last, Captain Sears took them, and, I apprehend, he got to Hartford by noon. I wrote to Major-General Lee, informing of what was done by me. I have no doubt but the men at the westward part of this Colony will readily and expeditiously engage in the service. May the Supreme Director of all events add his blessing on our endeavours to preserve, support, and maintain the constitutional liberties of these Colonies, which he hath made it our duty to do.

Thirteen Indians, of the Caughnawaga tribe, came to visit me on the 13th, and seemed well pleased to have a conference on our affairs, and expressed their belief of my information, and that they were friends and brothers; and yesterday proceeded on their way to you.

I am, with great esteem and regard, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Cambridge, January 15, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed account was this day sent me, by Captain Wadsworth, for payment, as you will see by his order. The services being done for the benefit of the Province, and at the instance of your honourable body, I have referred him to you for payment.

I am, sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable James Warren, Esq., President, &c.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, January 15, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's favour of the 3d instant came to hand, annexed to which are the resolves of the Grand Continental Congress, respecting captures made by Continental armed vessels and others. In compliance with which, and in obedience to your Excellency's command, I have libelled all the vessels which have been brought into this port, by the Harrison armed schooner, and which are now in my care, viz: one sloop, one schooner, and one fishing boat, of about fifteen tons, and shall use my best endeavours that these vessels be brought to trial as soon as may be.

The schooner Harrison, lately commanded by Captain

Coit, I find by strict inquiry, (though she be not very well accommodated for the officers,) is an excellent sailer, and is sufficiently strong. The Continent has been at considerable expense in fitting this vessel for the service, and should she be put out, and another taken into the service, one hundred pounds will necessarily be sunk to the Continent by the transfer. For these reasons I have thought it prudent to continue the Harrison in the service, and have, agreeable to your Excellency's permission, nominated Captain Charles Dyar to the command. This Dyar was with Captain Coit, his last cruise, and can give the character of the schooner more perfectly.

Captain Dyar, the bearer of this wont, at first interview, appear to your Excellency to advantage; he is no orator, and seems rather softly; but his character ranks high as a good officer, and as an active, smart sailor. Captain Coit has recommended him in high terms, and will give your Excellency his true character.

We shall have no difficulty in getting as fine a crew as any on the Continent, provided they can be enlisted for six months only, or for so long a time as Captain Dyar shall continue to command. Our people are very fond of knowing their officers, and the best of them are unwilling to engage for a longer time than their officers engage for. Captain Dyar will wait on your Excellency, and will receive every necessary direction.

I am, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

N. B. Your Excellency will please to direct me whether I am to libel the two vessels taken by Major Tupper, and carried into Dartmouth.

MESHECH WEARE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

January 15, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Your letter of the 13th instant, setting forth the difficulty of providing fire-arms for the Army, came to hand yesterday. The General Court, now sitting, took the contents under consideration, and find that all the publick arms of the Colony have been delivered out to the soldiers, now in the Continental Army, and at our own garrisons in Portsmouth. Upon a return lately made from the several towns in this Colony, we find that not more than two-thirds of the persons capable of using arms, are provided therewith, and many of them, such as would not be thought fit to be trusted to in the Continental Army. The scarcity of workmen, as well as steel, has hitherto prevented our getting but a small number made in this Colony, for which reasons, together with the apparent need of our keeping a considerable body of troops to defend our seaports, brings us to the disagreeable necessity of informing your Excellency that it is not in our power to supply any arms for the purpose you mention. We are fearful, that the detention of the arms of the Militia, (now at the Camp,) against their consent, would create such an uneasiness in their minds, that they would not exert themselves freely, if called upon hereafter.

To General Washington.

THOMAS WESTBROOK WALDRON TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Dover, January 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: While my heart gratefully glows with thankfulness, on the distinguished mark of respect shown me by your vote of the 6th instant, handed hither by Ichabod Rollins, Esq., the evening of the same day, I beg leave to acquaint you, that I have been little able to leave home for three winters successively. That accepting the honourable, arduous, and intense duty, proposed, without a prospect of attending thereto, (which I have not,) would be but to prevent the appointment of a suitable person to assist in the now critical councils of the Colony, and that an address giving notice of my inability, and imploring your excuse, would have been forwarded last week, had not one of your honourable body consented to convey it there.

Please to forgive my saying, that to prevent the effects of late unconstitutional measures, many Colonies appointed Congresses, as their General Assemblies were subject to the adjournments, prorogations, and dissolutions of Governors, &c., and that while Congresses, as such, managed the momentous affair, the friends of America in England, and elsewhere, approved the exertions, and we may reasonably hope will continue still so to do as it seems to me.

But as the fertile field before me begins to raise ideas too important for my sterile pen to marshal, I take leave, with only adding, that I wish you Divine direction, and am, with great truth and sincerity, honourable sirs, your respectful, and most obliged, humble servant,

THOMAS WESTBROOK WALDRON.

To the New-Hampshire Committee of Safety.

HERBERT COURTENAY TO CHARLES CARROLL, BARRISTER.

Baltimore, January 16, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 14th is now before me, the contents of which I note. You may be assured I want no other indulgence in loading the brig Friendship, than others are entitled to by similar contracts, and without vanity, can say, that I can execute such business on equal terms with any other in Baltimore, but I wish not to sacrifice a commission in giving advanced prices above my limits, as am pretty certain has been the case with some since my writing you last. I wonder my application has been the first to raise the price, as I have been told by several that the Convention was wrote to on same head, but when I wrote you first, the matter was only beginning, and that with people who was buying on some private account, and not on that of the Convention, which disabled those employed by them from executing their commissions, as the country people and millers will always sell to those who give them most; nay, some flour that I had bought two days ago, was taken from my door, and given to another private buyer, who gave thirteen shillings per cwt. for it; under such circumstances the market is at present, and unless some order is taken therein to put a stop to private buyers, it appears that the publick's must be impeded. I did inform the Committee that I had engaged between four and five hundred barrels, which was the case, but bad weather has, I must suppose, stopped the wagons. I have about one hundred and seventy barrels of flour on board, and the bread is ready, but that must go in last. I shall go on with loading, as fast as flour comes in, and follow your directions. I thought I could not do less than advise you in my former letter how matters were going on here, which is still the case. This week I think must bring much flour in.

I am, sir, with all respect, your very humble servant,
HERBERT COURTENAY.

To Charles Carroll, Esq., Barrister.]

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 16, 1776.

Your letters of the 25th and 31st of December, and 4th of January, have been duly received, and laid before Congress.

By the enclosed resolutions, you will perceive, that the Congress, in providing for the defence of Canada, have directed that two battalions should be raised out of the troops now serving there. This they did in testimony of their approbation of the services of those brave men, apprehending at the same time that it would be both agreeable to the officers and men, to have the honour of defending a country which their valour had rescued from slavery.

And the Congress have a firm confidence, that General Montgomery, who has a warm and just sense of their merit and services, will cheerfully embrace the present opportunity to continue and promote the officers of that corps, and, as far as in his power, to reward with office, and commend, in those battalions, such volunteers and others, as have distinguished themselves.

The Committee to whom your letters were referred, this day brought a partial report; on which the Congress came to certain resolutions, which you will see in the enclosed extracts. I am just to acquaint you, that it is expected when the Paymaster draws any bills, he will observe to make them payable some few days after sight. The Committee have desired leave to sit again, which is granted.

As soon as they have completed their report, and the Congress have come to a determination thereon, I shall do myself the pleasure of transmuting it to you.

The money last voted, is now ready; and the persons who have the charge of conveying it, will, I expect, set out with it to-morrow.

I have the pleasure to inform you, that the Committee have purchased the saltpetre, and have agreed with the owners of mills to manufacture it into powder. One of the mills, it is expected, will make near a ton a week, and another near half a ton. I hope you will soon receive the powder ordered to be purchased at New-York. There were, as we are informed, eight tons in the same vessel imported for that Colony.

The publick papers will inform you that Lord Dunmore has endeavoured to exercise the same barbarity against the defenceless town of Norfolk, as was exercised against Falmouth.

By these repeated instances of inhumanity, so contrary to the rules of war, and so long exploded by all civilized nations, it would seem, as if the rancorous Ministry, despairing of their measures to conquer and enslave, had determined to glut their revenge with destruction and devastation. For my part, I shall not be surprised to hear, that in their phrenzy of rage, and to effect their dark purposes, they have proceeded to murder, under forms of law, those prisoners whom the tools of their vengeance have chanced to take, and whom, with officious zeal, they have sent to England.

As it is now apparent that our enemies mean to exert their whole force against us next Summer, the Congress are taking measures for putting the Middle and Southern Colonies in a posture of defence. We shall, doubtless, suffer much in this great struggle; but I trust no losses or sufferings will induce us to desert the defence of our liberty; and that, cost what it may, we will persevere with unremitting vigour to maintain that inestimable jewel, which we received from our ancestors, and transmit the same with unsullied lustre to our posterity.

January 18.—The Committee to whom your letter of the 31st of December was referred, desire to be informed, whether the companies stationed at Chelsea and Malden are regimented, and whether, if those at Hingham, Weymouth, and Braintree, were withdrawn, it would be necessary to replace them out of the Continental Army.

Since writing the above, we have received a letter from Messrs. Philip Livingston, Alsop, and Lewis, by which, we find, to our mortification, that we were misinformed with regard to the large quantity of powder arrived at New-York, and that there were only four hundred and sixty-two quarter casks, which were imported for the use of that Colony, and of which a great part is distributed among several Counties.

Before this comes to hand, you will doubtless receive an account of the disagreeable news from Quebeck, on which I sincerely condole with you. The Congress arrived here last evening. To day I expect the Congress will take it into consideration. The result of their deliberations you will have in my next letter.

I am, &c., JOHN HANCOCK, President.

THOMAS LYNCH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am happy to be at last able to write you, that every thing you desired me to get done, is accomplished for the present. Our President assures me he has sent you the determination of Congress, concerning the trial of captures. Courts of Admiralty have been appointed in the Colony for that purpose. Colonel Frye has been appointed Brigadier in your Army, (Mr. Arnold precedes him in that of Quebeck;) and I enclose copies of the resolutions for the direction of the Postmaster, relative to letters of officers and soldiers in our service.

The delays in procuring the money has given me much concern, being sensible of the injury occasioned thereby to the service, but the calls for money from every quarter so far outrun the diligence of the signers, that my reiterated solicitations could get the sum no sooner.

We have resolved to raise, exclusive of your Army, in New-Hampshire one battalion, in Connecticut one, in New- York one, in Jersey three, in Pennsylvania five, in the Lower Counties one, in Virginia six, in North-Carolina three, and South-Carolina three, in Georgia one, and in Canada two, exclusive of Canadians; besides these, I have no doubt New-York will have four more, and Maryland two, which, with the Regiments of Artillery, will be sixty-two or three battalions, and the expense not less than ten millions of dollars. How quick a transfer of property from the rich to the poor such an expenditure must produce, you are well able to judge. The prospect is far from receiving light when it is considered how each Colony lavishes away its private treasure at the same time, or when we view the amazing and unaccountable supineness of all our Governments. Not a single individual, any where in civil department, seems to consider himself as interested in publick matters, unless he can get money by them. The idea of all the paper being mortgages on their private estates is totally lost and forgotten.

In this state of things, I have, besides my dependance on the continuance of the favour of Heaven, trust in two supports alone, the one on your vigorous exertions, the other on the weakness of our enemies. Should they lose footing in America this Winter, I should despise their thirty thousand Russians, scattered by storms, arriving, one transport after another, fatigued and debilitated by the fatal effects of a long voyage, without a spot to collect and recruit themselves for the field, and depending for every necessary on supplies from a country three thousand miles distant.

Do not the speeches of the King and his Ministers hold very different language from those of the last year? America is no longer the abject, cowardly, and defenceless wretch she was then; now his Lordship would have despised, had they not bravely supported their rights, seems to approve their vigorous support of them, and offers the terms of 1763. A gentleman, well known to Maryland, Lord Drummond, just from England, assures me, he will give much more; he tells me that he has had many conversations with Ministry on this subject, and showed me a paper, approved by each of them, and which he is sure will be supported in both Houses. The substance of it is, America to be declared free in point of taxation, and internal police; judges to be approved by the judges of England, and commissioned during good behaviour, upon stated and sufficient support be steadily assigned by the Colonies; all charters to be held sacred; that of Boston restored; Britain to regulate trade sub modo, all duties laid for the purpose of regulation, be paid into the Colony Treasury, where they arise, applicable to its uses by its own Legislature, in lieu of which, America shall, by duties, on such articles as will probably keep pace in its consumption, with the rise or declension of the Colony, laid up by each legislature, by permanent act of Assembly; grant towards the general support of the empire, annual sums in proportion to five thousand pounds sterling, for this Colony: as this sum is little more than half of what did arise by duties heretofore paid in this place, I doubted his information, but was assured, that Ministry wanted nothing but a show of revenue to hold up to Parliament; as they are afraid to propose reconciliation, without saving, what the stiff old Englishmen call, the honour of the nation. His Lordship came hither through Halifax, Boston, and York, where, I fancy, he saw what induced him to hint once or twice at beginning with a suspension of arms; to which I turned a very deaf ear, well knowing that the Winter season is ours, and that much may be done by April next. I sincerely wish I had your sentiments on these heads. I shall propose them to the consideration of Congress, as soon as the most urgent affairs are over; I think they merit it.

Congress has ordered you fifteen ton of gunpowder from New-York, and we have saltpetre enough here, to make eighty tons more, so that I hope we shall not soon want again; larger quantities are every day expected. I beg you will make our compliments to your lady, and to the rest of your family, and all my friends. Dear, sir, your most obedient,

THOMAS LYNCH.

P. S. We have just heard from Charlestown, that they have mounted on the batteries there above one hundred and sixty cannon, from twelve to forty-two pounders, and seventy more in different parts of the Province, that the party raised by Kirkland and his gang are totally suppressed; he is come, but I have not yet seen him.

Resolved, It is the opinion of this Committee, that whereas a number of the Members of this Committee are either removed out of Town, or engaged in the Army, or Continental or Provincial Congresses, that there be a sub-Committee appointed to draw up an advertisement to the Town, requesting that the Quorum may be reduced to the number of Twenty-One, and that the Chairman be desired to sign the advertisement.

Ordered, therefore, That Mr. Denning, Mr. Abeel, Mr. Jay, and Mr. Miller, be appointed a sub-Committee for that purpose, and attend at the City-Hall at ten o'clock, on Wednesday, the 17th day of January instant, to take the sentiments of the publick.

Mr. J. Anthony,	Mr. Moore,	Mr. Bancker,

A motion was made by Mr. Bull, and seconded by Mr. Helme, in the words following, viz:

MR. CHAIRMAN: I move that the opinion of this Committee be taken, whether any person residing in another Colony, during their non-residence ought to hold a seat in this Committee.

The question then being put upon the above motion, was carried in the negative.

Mr. Samuel Broome, a Member of this Committee, having removed out of this Province, resigned his seat.

Christopher Duyckinck, agreeable to an order of last night, attended with one of his evidences relative to Mr. Burling's having imported a quantity of Tea in the Sloop Wanton.

Mr. John Buchanan, Mr. Duyckinck's evidence, being called in, informed the Committee that he saw four casks of Tea carted from Samuel Burling's store to Thomas Grant's, by John Van Aullen and Peter Outenbergh; that the head of one of the casks falling loose, he, (the examinant,) discovered Tea on the body of the cart.

Ordered, That a sub-Committee be appointed to examine the several casks, supposed to be Tea, carted from Mr. Burling's store to Mr. Thomas Grant's, as also six hogsheds which Mr. Burling delivered Mr. Isaac Roosevelt.

Ordered, That Mr. Breasted, Captain Pell, Mr. Abeel, and Mr. Bull, be a sub-Committee for that purpose, and make a report thereon, with all convenient speed.

On motion of Mr. Denning,

Ordered, That Mr. Duyckinck be requested to deliver Mr. Samuel Burling, or his order, the Sails which he has in charge belonging to the Sloop Wanton.

Mr. Brinckerhoff having purchased Goods of Mr. Thomas Grant, which were found by this Committee to have been imported contrary to the General Association, the matter was this evening laid before the Committee; which, being debated, the question was put, whether Mr. Brinckerhoff had knowingly violated the Association? Carried in the negative.

A motion was made by Mr. Bleecker, and seconded, in the words following, viz:

MR. CHAIRMAN: I move that an application be made from this Committee to the Provincial Congress, requesting they will pass a resolve that all Goods and Merchandise imported into this Colony, contrary to the General Association, be forfeited; and that they empower this Committee to appoint persons to dispose of such Goods and Merchandise, and to distribute the moneys arising from the sales thereof to the poor.

At a meeting of the General Committee for the City and County of New-York, Friday evening, January 12, 1776. Present: Cornelius P. Low, Chairman pro tem.

John Van Aullen informed the Committee that he carted two casks of Tobacco from Mr. Burling's store to Mr. Grant's; that he saw dust like Tea lay on the cart; that he saw some Lead round the cask; that he verily believes it was Tobacco put into a Rice cask.

Peter Myers says he carted Wine from on board Captain Mount; that he did not believe there was any Tea came in the vessel.

The sub-Committee appointed to draw up a state of the facts relating to Messrs. Grant and Fine, and Samuel Burling's violating the Association, report the same accordingly.

On motion of Mr. Sharpe,

Ordered, That the same be committed to the reconsideration of the sub-Committee.

Mr. Bonner, a prisoner, being confined in the Guard-House,

Ordered, That he be admitted to bail.

The sub-Committee appointed to draw up an advertisement to the Town, report the same accordingly; which, being read and approved of, is as follows, viz:

MEMORIAL OF WILLIAM LEARY.

To the Committee of Safety for the Colony of NEW-YORK:
The Memorial of WILLIAM LEARY, Town-Major, humbly sheweth:

That since he has had the honour of filling the station he now occupies, by virtue of his appointment, he studiously endeavoured to preserve the peace, good order, and well being of this city, as much as was in his power; that for that purpose, he has carefully attended the regular appointment of the Nightly Guard, according to the instructions of the General Committee.

And this memorialist further sheweth, that since his said appointment, he has found the utmost remissness in duty, and the greatest disrespectfulness towards officers from the soldiers of the respective beats; that he has repeatedly complained of the same to no effect: that the few independent companies which have been raised in this city, have showed, upon many occasions, the greatest cheerfulness to render any assistance to their suffering country; but that at present he observes a great delinquency even in them.

And this memorialist further sheweth, that upon regular complaint being made to the Field-Officers of said companies, they unanimously assign the following reason for the same: That they have been, and ever will be, willing and ready to do their part of their respective duties; but that the men over whom they have command, too justly assert that their good nature is imposed upon; that the more they do, the more seems to be required at their hands; that their interest and families have already suffered by their persisting in their former assiduity, and they are fearful that necessity will at length compel them to desist, unless their fellow-citizens will step forth and aid them in the common cause.

And this memorialist further sheweth, that the danger to which this city is nightly exposed, not only from the attacks of external and internal enemies, but from the malice and intemperance of any individual who mounts guard, he has thought it his indispensable duty to lay before this Committee particular threats which he has heard from some individuals of those unruly guards, who, he has reason to believe, wanted nothing but an opportunity of putting the same into execution, "such as firing upon His Majesty's ships, now in the harbour," an act that must unavoidably bring unspeakable distress upon the inhabitants of this city. The countersign has been divulged, and those who were appointed as guardians of our safety, have exposed us to the greatest dangers from the common enemy. He, therefore, humbly prays that this Committee will take the matter under their serious consideration, for, if long neglected, he is fully convinced a sufficient number will soon be wanting to do the duty (though ever so badly) of this city.

WILLIAM LEARY, Town-Major.

New-York, January 16, 1776.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, January 16, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: We have been so baffled by the weather, that we only arrived here last night. I believe we shall find no difficulties in procuring a sufficient body of volunteers for the New-York expedition. The unhappy accounts from Canada, seem to animate these people, rather than depress. Indeed, we have now occasion for exertion and decision. I am apprehensive that the Congress must be inspired by you. They have just given a strong, and, I think, unfortunate instance of indecision. Colonel Waterbury had raised a regiment; the regiment was equipped and ready for embarkation. They were to have landed in Oyster-Bay, to have attacked the Tories in Long-Island. Lord Stirling was to have attacked them on the other side; all this by order of Congress; when suddenly, Colonel Waterbury received an order to disband his regiment, and the Tories are to remain unmolested till they are joined by the King's assassins.

Governour Trumbull, like a man of sense and spirit, has ordered this regiment to be reassembled; I believe it will be ready on Sunday, the day on which I shall march from this town. I shall send immediately an express to the Congress, informing them of my situation, and at the same time conjuring them not to suffer the accused Provincial Congress of New-York to defeat measures so absolutely necessary to salvation. The affairs of Canada, will, I suppose, very soon, if not instantly require a very considerable force from this Province; neither will the circumstances of New-York admit of its being too much stripped of men, for which reason I should think it advisable immediately to raise some additional regiments in Massachusetts-Bay. Adieu, dear General. God prosper you, and the arms of virtue.

Yours, most sincerely,

CHARLES LEE.

To General Washington.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hartford, January 16, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Major French, whom I have met with at Hartford, is extremely solicitous for permission to return home, as he is confident that his whole fortunes depend upon his being immediately on the spot with his friends at this instant. As he is, I believe, a man of strict honour, his parole not to serve for a given time against the freedom of America, would be sufficient security; and as he has a family to provide for, it would certainly be humane and charitable to indulge him, nor can I see any inconvenience which would attend the indulgence; there may be some objections which do not, perhaps, occur to me, but I could wish for my own part, that as so much depends upon it, he might be gratified; however, I beg you will excuse my submitting the matter to your consideration.

I am, dear General, your most obedient humble servant.

CHARLES LEE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

SAMUEL MOTT TO GOVERNOR TRUMBULL.

Preston, January 16, 1776.

SIR: Being on the 5th of this instant, (January), desired and directed by your Honour and Council of Safety, to view the works erected and proposed for defence at New-London, Groton, and Stonington, and report my opinion in the premises, &c.

In pursuance thereof, I have attended at the places above mentioned, and have found that there is at New-London a work newly erected at the edge of the town, by the water, where the old fort or battery stood, which, on some accounts appears neat, well made and in good order. But by reason of the bad situation of the place, on account that in case of an attack from the enemy, it will have a tendency to draw the enemy's shot in the most dangerous direction on the body of the town, and by reason of the ill construction of the embrasures, &c., that it cannot defend from those parts of the harbour, where an enemy's ships of war might, and doubtless would, lie for action; and by reason that in case the enemy should set fire to any of the nearest buildings, it would be very difficult to support and occupy the work, and the danger that the men in the work must undergo from those in the tops of enemy's vessels, render it, in my opinion, not a suitable place to defend the town and harbour, and altogether insufficient for that purpose; and likewise, that in case of an attack from the enemy, the guns and stores in said work would be in great danger of falling an easy prey to the enemy.

I find also, adjacent to the town, on a place called Winthrop's Neck, a new work erected for defence, which, in my opinion, so far as it is done, may be of good service in assisting to defend the place, but the situation of the place will not admit of its being a sufficient defence. I also, viewed Shaw's Point, commonly called Mamacock, which, in my opinion, is capable of being fortified to very good purpose. The guns would lie fifty or sixty feet above the surface of the water, and only about one hundred and ninety rods from the opposite side of the channel; it has a very good and safe communication with the country, but no works are yet erected here.

I have also viewed the east shore of New-London harbour, on Groton side, and find a new work erected within reach of the whole channel of the harbour, which work so far as it is carried, I very much approve of, and think that with finishing what is begun, and making some small addition, it will be capable of making a very good defence.

The guns on this work, I imagine to be about one hundred feet above the surface of the water. A little back of the work, next the country, is a very commanding eminence, (likewise in pretty good shot of the harbour,) which if well fortified, might contain barracks and a bomb-proof sufficient to contain its own stores, and those of the other work, and would secure a safe and easy communication with the country, and would, if skilfully erected, in a great measure, defend the harbour, and be almost inaccessible to an enemy.

On the whole, it is my opinion, that somewhere between ten or fifteen hundred pounds, well laid out, in fortifying the above-mentioned parts of Groton, and on Mamacock, and Winthrop's Point or Neck, is all that is necessary for defending that important harbour and the town, and properly manned, would prevent any, the most potent enemy, from either holding possession of the harbour, or annoying the town. An addition of heavy cannon, to make what they now have, to the number of about forty, would be sufficient to man all these works.

I have, likewise, viewed the works lately erected at Stonington, and find them, so far as executed, in my opinion well situated, strong built, and being completed, with a very little alteration, which I have pointed out to Major Smith, sufficient with one hundred battalion-men, and thirty artillery-men, to defend against any ship-of-war, &c., that will likely penetrate that harbour, unless the enemy land a body of troops, in which case the above number of troops might hold out, until the country came to their assistance. All which is submitted to your Honour, by yours, &c., &c.

SAMUEL MOTT.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Captain-General and Governour of the American Colony of Connecticut, &c.

N. B. If the works at the above places should be prosecuted, it will be necessary to provide about twelve new spades, five falling axes, two broad axes, and some iron crows, for the work at Stonington, and a number of tools for New-London, Groton, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, January 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 5th instant, enclosing copies of General Montgomery's and General Wooster's letters, I received, for which I return you my thanks.

It was from a full conviction of your zealous attachment to the cause of our country, and abilities to serve it, that I repeatedly pressed your continuance in command; and it is with much concern, sir, that I find you have reason to think your holding the place you do will be of prejudice and incompatible with its interest. As you are of this opinion, the part you are inclined to take is certainly generous and noble. But will the good consequences you intend, be derived from it? I greatly fear they will not. I shall leave the matter to yourself, in full confidence, that in whatever sphere you move, your exertions for your country's weal, will not be wanting.

Whatever proof you may obtain, fixing or tending to support the charge against Mr. Prescott, you will please to transmit me by the first opportunity.

I am apt to believe the intelligence given Dr. Wheelock, respecting Major Rogers, was not true, but being much suspected of unfriendly views to this country, his conduct should be attended to with some degree of vigilance and circumspection.

I confess I am much concerned for General Montgomery and Colonel Arnold; and the consequences which will result from their miscarriage, should it happen, will be very alarming; I fear not less fatal than you mention. However, I trust, that their distinguished conduct, bravery, and perseverance, will meet with the smiles of fortune, and put them in possession of this important fortress. I wish their force was greater, the reduction would then be certain.

I am sorry that Ticonderoga and Fort-George should be left by the garrisons, and that your recruiting officers meet such ill success. It is too much the case in this quarter, and from the slow progress made in inlisting, I despair of raising an army to the new establishment. Should it be effected, it will be a long time first.

Our Coughnawaga friends are not arrived yet; I will try to make suitable provision for them, during their stay, and use every means in my power to confirm their favourable disposition towards us. They will not, I am fearful, have such ideas of our strength as I could wish. This, however, shall be strongly inculcated.

If Quebeck is in our possession, I cannot see that any inconvenience will result from Mr. Gamble's going there upon his parole; but if it is not, however hurtful it may be to him, however disagreeable to me to prejudice the interest of an individual, I cannot consent to his return. I am much distressed by other applications of a like nature. If Mr. Gamble's request is granted, others in the same situation will claim the same indulgence; further, I think a partial exchange should not be made, and my proposition for a general one, was rejected by Mr. Howe, or what is the same, it was unnoticed. I could wish that his application had been to Congress, they might have complied with it, had they thought it reasonable.

I shall be much obliged by your sending, as expeditiously as you can, such clothing as you are able to spare; it not being made up is rather an advantage, as it may be done here with some saving.

I am much pleased that the artillery was like to be got over the river; and am in hopes that Colonel Knox will arrive with it in a few days. It is much wanted.

On reading the copy of General Wooster's letter, I was much surprised to find that he had granted furloughs to the Connecticut troops under his command, in preference to discharges. What advantage could he imagine they would be of to the Continent, when they were at their own homes? If he could not continue them in the service they were upon, their discharge would certainly have eased the country of a considerable expense.

Giving you, in return, the compliments of the season, and wishing for you every happiness, I am, dear sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 16, 1776.

SIR: The alarming and almost defenceless state of our lines, occasioned by the slow progress in raising recruits for the new Army, and the departure of a great number of the Militia, which had been called in for their support till the 15th instant, from this and New-Hampshire Governments, rendered it necessary for me to summon the General Officers in council, to determine on proper measures to be adopted for their maintenance and preservation. For this purpose they met at Head-Quarters yesterday and to-day, and finding that it was with the utmost difficulty and persuasion that such part of the latter as are now here, could be prevailed on to continue till the last of the month, (after which there is not the remotest probability of their staying one moment,) they have judged it expedient, and absolutely necessary, that thirteen regiments should be forthwith raised, equal to those of the new establishment, to be officered according to the usual mode of their respective Governments, which are to repair to this camp by the last instant, if possible, to be in readiness to act in such manner (and till the 1st of April) as circumstances may require. Of this number, they apprehend the Massachusetts should furnish seven; your Government four; and the New-Hampshire two; being agreeable to the proportion settled by Congress.

In order that each regiment may consist of a proper number of officers and men, I herewith send you a list for their regulation, as, also, of the Continental pay.

I must earnestly solicit your regard to arms, ammunition, blankets, clothing, and kettles, that they may come as well provided with these necessary articles as they can, particularly of the first, of which I find, to my great surprise and concern, there is an amazing deficiency, notwithstanding I have used every precaution my judgment could point out to procure them. Besides the arms which these regiments will bring with them, I shall be particularly obliged by your furnishing me, for the use of the Continent; with such others as you have, or can collect. If you have any, or can get them made, you will please to inform me of the quantity. These Governments, I hope, will exert themselves in this instance. They must be had, or what can, what will be done?

The great and constant attention, sir, which you have shown, upon all occasions, to promote the publick cause, affords me the strongest assurance that your every exertion and interest will be employed to comply with these several requisitions.

I am, sir, &c., &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOR COOKE.

Cambridge, January 16, 1776.

SIR: It is exceedingly painful to me that I should have so often troubled you respecting this Army, and that I am under the necessity of applying to you again; but you must, in some measure, be involved in whatever difficulties attend me.

To my great surprise, I find, that notwithstanding I had taken the utmost care to prevent the soldiers that would not reinlist in the new Army from carrying away their arms, or such of them as were good, the number collected is trifling and inconsiderable, of which there are but very few, if any, now in store, they having been delivered to the recruits which have come in.

I also find, from the report of the recruiting-officers, that a few more are to be enlisted who have arms in their hands, and that they are reduced to the disagreeably alternative of taking men without any, or no men at all. Unhappy alternative! Must not those Governments exert themselves in procuring them from the several towns, or in such other manner as to them shall seem most speedy and effectual?

To account minutely for this great deficiency, would be of no importance. I shall only say, that it has arisen from two causes, to wit, the badness of the arms of the old Army, which the inspectors and appraisers did not think worth detaining, and to the disobedience of some regiments, carrying theirs away, contrary to every order I could issue, and even solemn threats of stopping their pay for the months of November and December, of those that should.

The prospect of getting imported arms is so remote and uncertain, that I cannot depend upon it. I, therefore, request the favour of you, to inform me whether you have any, and what number, belonging to Government; as, also, if you will be able to procure more, and in what time. If you have any, or can get them, I shall be glad to take them, on account of the Continent; they must be had, if possible.

I have wrote to the other New-England Governments on the same subjects.

I am, sir, with great regard and esteem, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Governor Cooke.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Cambridge, January 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your several resolves, in consequence of my letters of the 10th and 15th instant, have been presented to me by a Committee of your honourable body. I thank you for the assurances of being zealously disposed to do every thing in your power to facilitate the recruiting of the American Army; and, at the same time, that I assure you I do not entertain a doubt of the truth of it, I must beg leave to add, that I conceive you have mistaken the meaning of my letter of the 10th, if you suppose it ever was in my idea that you should offer a bounty at the separate expense of this Colony.

It was not clear to me, but that some coercive measure might be used on this, as on former occasions, to draft men to complete the regiments upon the Continental establishment; but, as this is thought unadvisable, I shall rely on your recommending to the Selectmen, and the Committees of Correspondence, &c., to exert themselves in their several towns, to promote the enlistments for the American Army.

In the meanwhile, as there is an appearance of this service going on but slowly, and it is necessary to have a respectable body of troops here, as soon as possible, to act as circumstances shall require, I must beg that you will order in, with as much expedition as the nature of the case will admit of, seven regiments, agreeable to the establishment of this Army, to continue in service till the 1st of April, if required. You will please to direct that the men come provided with good arms, blankets, kettles for cooking, and, if possible, with twenty rounds of powder and ball.

With respect to your other resolve, relative to arms, I am quite ready to make an absolute purchase of such as shall be furnished either by the Colony or individuals. I am also ready to engage payment for all the arms which shall be furnished by the recruits, if lost in the publick service; but I do not know how far I could be justified in allowing for the use of them, when I know it to be the opinion of Congress that every man shall furnish his own arms, or pay for the use of them, if put in his own hands; to do otherwise, is an indirect way of raising the pay. I again wish that the honourable Court could devise some method of purchasing.

I beg leave to return my thanks for the kind offer of fifty thousand pounds, for the Continental use. I will accept of a loan upon the terms mentioned, of half that sum, to secure payment of the Militia, whose time of service will be up the last of this month, till when I shall not have occasion to make use of the money.

I am, with great respect, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable General Court of Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MATTHEW THORNTON.

Cambridge, January 16, 1776.

SIR: The alarming and almost defenceless state of our lines, occasioned by the slow progress in raising recruits for the new Army, and the departure of a great number of the Militia, which had been called in for their support till the 15th instant, rendered it necessary for me to summon the General Officers in council, to determine on proper measures to be adopted for their preservation. For this purpose they met at Head-Quarters yesterday and to-day, and finding that it was with the utmost difficulty and persuasion that such of the latter as are now here, have been prevailed to continue till the last of the month, (after which there is not the remotest probability of their staying a moment,) they have judged it expedient, and absolutely necessary, that thirteen regiments should be forthwith raised, equal to those of the new establishment, to be officered according to the usual mode of their respective Governments, which are to repair to this camp by the last instant, if possible, to be in readiness to act in such manner (till the 1st of April) as circumstances may require. Of this number, they apprehend the Massachusetts should furnish seven; Connecticut four; and your Government two; being agreeable to the proportion settled by Congress.

In order that each regiment may consist of a proper number of officers and men, I have enclosed you a list for their regulation, and of the Continental pay.

I must earnestly solicit your attention and regard to arms, ammunition, blankets, kettles, and clothing, that they may come as well provided with these necessities as possible, particularly the first, as, from the amazing deficiency here, I shall not have it in my power to supply them.

The situation and exigency of our affairs calling for this assistance, I have the most pleasing assurance that your honourable body will exert themselves for complying with this requisition, with all possible despatch.

I am, sir, with much esteem and regard, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Matthew Thornton.

MAJOR-GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, January 16, 1776.

MY LORD: By Admiral Shulldham's arrival, on the 30th of December, I had the honour of your Lordship's despatches of the 22d October; a duplicate of the 25th September, from Mr. Deputy Secretary Pownall, covering a letter from Lord William Campbell, of the 19th July; a duplicate from your Lordship, of the 22d September, the originals of which are not yet received, with copies of despatches from the Earl of Rockford, of the 21st September, to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; also, a copy of a letter from your Lordship, of the 22d September, to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, in which you are pleased to intimate that the stores of provisions contracted for by Messrs. Mure, Son & Atkinson, by the Lords of the Treasury, are intended as well for the fleet as the army; whereas, from there not being any mention made of the fleet sharing these stores, either in your Lordship's letters to me, from the Lords of the Treasury, or the merchants, the cargoes arriving before Admiral Shulldham, were distributed solely to the army. But, since the sight of your Lordship's letter, that I might not appear to neglect the fleet, I have, though without a direct order from your Lordship, given a proportion of porter to the ships; at the same time, I beg leave to observe, the deliveries of provisions to the soldiers, for some weeks past, being without peas or rice, the want of bedding, and the unavoidable exposure to the weather, from the nature of the duty, which has been very severe, without enumerating further reasons, make them require these refreshments more than seamen, who are better provided.

I enclose, for your Lordship's information, an account of the deficiencies in the provision contract, with the Commissary's letter thereupon; and I shall send another to the Lords of the Treasury.

Having heard, from Governour Tryon, that there is a prospect of getting some provisions on the side of New-York, I have despatched a vessel to endeavour to procure it; and the victuallers for the navy, lately arrived, could conveniently afford us a supply for six weeks, if necessary, which relieves me from the necessity of putting the troops to short allowance, more especially as I am hopeful that the vessels mentioned in my despatch of the 19th December, may return from the West-Indies and Georgia, before the provisions in store, as per state, are consumed; so that our dependance is not wholly on the contractors' ships, one of which got in the 13th instant, with oats, flour, and peas; the last article affording most seasonable relief.

The necessary arrangements being made for the departure of Major-General Clinton to Cape-Fear, in consequence of your Lordship's despatches of the 22d October, he is ready to sail in the Mercury, ship-of-war, with the Falcon, sloop, and two transports, having on board two companies of Light-Infantry, and some Highlanders; the latter, I hope, may be useful in getting men in North-Carolina, if Governour Martin is not deceived in his expectations, of which I do not presume to judge, having received no direct intelligence from thence since General Gage's departure; nor have I received Governour Martin's letter, referred to in your Lordship's letter of 22d October.

It is much to be wished that the troops had sailed from Europe in time to have arrived at their destination by the middle, or latter end of November; but I am free to own my opinion to your Lordship, which has been, to leave the Southern Provinces in the fullest persuasion of their security, until the Rebels should have been defeated on the side of New-York; which event appears to me, more clearly than ever, of so much consequence, that our utmost strength should be exerted to accomplish it before designs of less importance are taken up, inconsistent with the general plan of operations for the ensuing campaign; and it is to be presumed the Southern Rebels would have been less able to defend themselves, had they not been roused by the conduct of their Governours, who have not, I fear, the power of suppressing them, or of re-establishing the interest of Government in any degree.

It is remarkable, that the destination of the regiments to the Southward, was promulgated here by private letters from England, that came in the same ship with your Lordship's despatch relative to them; and I make no doubt of the Rebels being in possession of the intelligence very soon after it arrived. General Lee, I hear, is gone for the Army in consequence of it.

In Mr. Deputy Secretary Pownall's letter of the 22d September, I am to understand, that I may expect the King's commands from your Lordship, for the Seventeenth, Twenty-Seventh, Twenty-Eighth, Forty-Sixth, and Fifty-Fifth Regiments, to be sent to Quebeck, as early as possible, in the Spring, and to detach a sufficient force from this army for the security of Halifax.

These drains, added to that to the Southward, from whence I can promise myself little assistance to the main army, will reduce the expected strength for the campaign so considerably, that, if a respectable supply of troops from Europe does not arrive soon in the Spring, another defensive campaign, I conclude, will be the consequence; for, by the want of a force to act early, the Rebel Army will have full time to intrench in every strong position their commanders may fix upon; in which case, though we should get possession of New-York without resistance, we must not expect to carry their intrenched camps but with considerable loss. Whereas, on the contrary, the army, at the opening of the campaign, being in force, would, probably, by rapid movements, bring the Rebels to an action upon equal terms, before they could cover themselves by works of any signification.

The ill consequences that must arise from another defensive campaign, are not to be pointed out to your Lordship; but it may be necessary to observe, that if the five battalions under Major-General Clinton are joined by the well-affected inhabitants, and should possess themselves of any object that it may be important to hold, I shall not presume to call them off to the main army, unless the General shall represent that the inhabitants are able to maintain their situation, although the King's troops should be withdrawn.

I beg leave to remark, that with a proper army, of twenty thousand men, having twelve thousand at New-York, six thousand at Rhode-Island, and two thousand at Halifax, exclusive of an army for the Province of Quebeck, the present unfavourable appearance of things would, probably, wear a very different aspect before the end of the ensuing campaign. With fewer troops, the success of any offensive operations will be very doubtful, the enemy possessing advantages that will not be readily overcome by a small force; neither is their army by any ways to be despised, having in it many European soldiers, and all, or most of the young men of spirit in the country, who are exceedingly diligent and attentive in their military profession.

Enclosed are copies of letters of the 13th and 18th December, from Governor Tryon, with three papers, containing intelligence from him. He seems positive of being able to raise two thousand men, upon the arrival of this army at New-York, who may be rendered very useful, if accompanied by his personal services in the field. The enclosed extract from my answer to the Governor, and copy of a letter to the commanding officer at Niagara, I hope may meet with His Majesty's approbation.

I beg your Lordship will honour me with the King's commands respecting the bounty money, payment, and clothing, of the Provincial levies: their officers, last war, ranked with those of the army as youngest, in their respective degrees.

Your Lordship has enclosed a state of the transports, including such as have arrived and been taken into His Majesty's service, in consequence of the duplicate of your Lordship's letter of the 22d September; and, that no time may be lost in transporting the army from hence to New-York, I shall continue to take up all proper vessels that can be got; but I do not suppose that this place can be evacuated without the aid of transports from Europe. One great difficulty, among the many in this operation, will be the number of inhabitants who, I expect, will desire to be removed, with their effects and merchandise. As many as Governor Legge can possibly accommodate and provide for, shall be sent to Nova-Scotia.

Having lately discovered a negotiation of property between the Rebels and their friends in this town, I use every endeavour to stop it; and, although it is not done as effectually as I could wish, yet I am hopeful a large stock in trade may be reserved until I have the honour of your Lordship's instructions for my future conduct in this business.

By accounts from the Rebel army, it is said Major-General Carleton got into Quebeck on the 20th of November, and the season then being so far advanced, I conclude it will not be in the power of the Rebels to force him this Winter. I have sent an officer, who may be depended upon, to Halifax, and from thence to Quebeck, that I may have a true state of the General's situation, and I expect his return by the beginning of April.

The six missing companies of the Seventeenth, and six companies of the Fifty-Fifth Regiments, arrived the 30th December, in the Grosvenor, and Grand Duke of Russia, transports, but have not had any account of the other four companies of the Fifty-Fifth Regiment.

From what I can learn of the designs of the leaders of the Rebels, they seem determined, since the receipt of the King's speech among them, to make the most diligent preparations for an active war; and it is my firm opinion they will not retract until they have tried their fortune in a battle, and are defeated; but I am under the necessity of repeating to your Lordship, that the apparent strength of this army, for the Spring, does not flatter me with the hopes of bringing the Rebels to a decisive action.

With the most perfect respect, I have the honour to be, your Lordship's faithful, and most obedient servant,

WILLIAM HOWE.

JOHN YOUSTE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Georgetown, January 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having applied to the Committee of Observation for a sufficient quantity of powder, for proving the guns which I have engaged to furnish the Council of Safety, which I have been refused, without your approbation.

Glad you would please to nominate a man in town to see the guns proved, as it is inconvenient to me, at present, to leave the business.

Mr. Dickens has left town, which prevents his writing to you, according to agreement.

I hope, gentlemen, you will please to let me know what I am to expect, as the guns cannot be delivered, or finished, otherwise than by your granting a license for powder.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN YOUSTE.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

NOMINATION OF MEMBERS OF ASSEMBLY IN NEW-YORK.

New-York, January 17, 1776.

At a meeting of a number of freemen and freeholders of the City and County of New-York, at the house of Mrs. Vanderwater, on Wednesday, January 17, 1776, for the purpose of nominating persons to represent them in the next General Assembly, it was agreed, by a majority of said company, that Philip Livingston, John Alsop, John Jay, and Alexander McDougall, be, and are, recommended to the publick as sufficient men for that purpose; and, in order to avoid any division among the electors, they are desired to aid and assist in the above choice.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED NEW-YORK, JANUARY 17, 1776.

General Lee is coming here with a body of armed men. A gentleman of this city, who is just returned from Connecticut, tells me General Washington has wrote to Governor Trumbull, informing him that a fleet has left Boston; that he conjectures they are bound for New-York; given him their size and strength, as nearly as he could; informed him that General Lee was coming along with ninety riflemen; and desired he would order a number of men to be immediately raised to come with them to this city. That, in consequence thereof, Governor Trumbull had assembled the Committee of Safety, and they advised him to issue his warrant, ordering two regiments to be raised, (about fifteen hundred in both,) to be commanded by Colonels Waterbury and Ward, under the direction of General Lee, and to come to this city. Another gentleman, who is just come from camp, told me that General Lee was to bring with him an Engineer and artillerymen.

18th.—The Jersey lads are gone to Horn's Hook, from thence they have crossed, or are to cross, as I am informed, to Long-Island, and pay Queen's County a visit. The Eastern Post told me he left General Lee at Hartford on Monday.

19th.—Eleven o'clock this morning, a second detachment (about three hundred Jerseymen) went to Long-Island. It is said the former one consisted of four or five hundred.

PETITION FROM THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE GRANTS TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

To the Honourable JOHN HANCOCK, Esq., President of the Honourable Continental Congress, &c., &c., now assembled at PHILADELPHIA.

The humble Petition, Address, and Remonstrance of that part of AMERICA, being situate south of CANADA line, west of CONNECTICUT River, north of the MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, and east of a twenty-mile line from HUDSON'S River, commonly called and known by the name of the NEW-HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, humbly sheweth:

That your Honours' petitioners, being fully sensible and deeply affected with the very alarming situation in which the United Colonies are involved, by means of a designing

Ministry, who have flagrantly used, and are still using, their utmost efforts to bring the inhabitants of the very extensive Continent of America into a base and servile subjection to arbitrary power, contrary to all the most sacred ties of obligation by covenant and the well-known Constitution by which the British empire ought to be governed: Your petitioners, not to be prolix or waste time, when the whole Continent are in so disagreeable a situation, would, however, beg leave to remonstrate, in as short terms as possible, the very peculiar situation in which your petitioners have, for a series of years, been exercised, and are still struggling under. Perhaps your Honours, or, at least, some of you, are not unacquainted that, at the conclusion of the last war, the above-described premises, which your petitioners now inhabit, was deemed and reputed to be in the Province of New-Hampshire, and, consequently, within the jurisdiction of the same; whereupon, applications were freely made to Benning Wentworth, Esq., then Governor of the Province of New-Hampshire, who, with the advice of his Council, granted, under the great seal of said Province, to your Honours' petitioners, a large number of townships, of the contents of six miles square, each. In consequence of which, a great number of your petitioners, who were men of considerable substance, disposed of their interest in their native places, and, with their numerous families, proceeded, many of them, two hundred miles, encountering many dangers, fatigues, and great hardships, to inhabit a desolate wilderness, which is now become a well-settled frontier to three Governments. This was not all our trouble; for, soon after the commencement of those settlements, the monopolizing land-traders of New-York, being apprized that the Province of New-Hampshire had granted the said lands, and that settlements were actually making, did present a petition, as we have often heard, and verily believe, in your petitioners' names, praying that the same lands granted by New-Hampshire might be annexed to the Province of New-York, on account of its local and other circumstances, for the benefit of the inhabitants. Your petitioners, not being apprized of the intrigue in this case, were mute. Therefore, as no objection was made, why the prayer of the petition should not be granted, his Majesty was pleased, with advice of Council, on the 24th day of July, 1764, to grant the same. Immediately after, the land-traders of New-York petitioned the then Governor of that Province for grants of land, some parts of which had been previously granted to your petitioners by the Governor and Council of New-Hampshire. The dispute then became serious. Your petitioners, then, petitioned his Majesty for relief in the premises. His Majesty was pleased to appoint a Committee, who reported to His Majesty in the premises, and His Majesty was pleased to pass an Order in the following words:

"At a Court at St. James's, the 24th day of July, 1767.

"Present: The King's Most Excellent Majesty, Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Chancellor, Duke of Queensbury, Duke of Ancaster, Lord Chamberlain, Earl of Litchfield, Earl of Bristol, Earl of Shelburne, Viscount Falmouth, Viscount Barrington, Viscount Clarke, Bishop of London, Mr. Secretary Conway, Hans Stanley, Esq.

"His Majesty, taking the said Report into consideration, was pleased, with the advice of his Privy Council, to approve thereof; and doth hereby strictly charge, require, and command, that the Governor or Commander-in-chief of His Majesty's Province of New-York for the time being, do not, upon pain of His Majesty's highest displeasure, presume to make any grant, whatsoever, of any part of the lands described in the said Report, until His Majesty's further pleasure should be known concerning the same.

"WILLIAM SHARP.

"A true copy. Attest:

"GEORGE BANYAR, Deputy Sec'y."

The many intervening and unhappy disputes which have since happened between those land-traders of New-York and your petitioners, would take up too much time, under the present situation of publick affairs, to recite; as Captain Heman Allen and Dr. Jonas Fny, who we have appointed to present this to your Honours, will be furnished therewith, should they find your Honours' admittance, and such particulars be thought necessary. Let it suffice here, only to mention that the oppressions from these overgrown land-traders of New-York were so grievous, that your petitioners were again induced, at a great expense, to petition His Majesty; in consequence of which, a Committee was appointed, and made a report in favour of your petitioners, which is too prolix to be inserted here.*

We are called on, this moment, by the Committee of Safety for the County of Albany, to suppress a dangerous insurrection in Troy County. Upwards of ninety soldiers were on their march, within twelve hours after their receiving the news; all inhabitants of one town, inhabited by your petitioners, and all furnished with arms, ammunition, accoutrements, and provisions, &c. Again, we are alarmed by express from General Wooster, commanding at Montreal, with the disagreeable news of the unfortunate attack on Quebeck, (unfortunate, indeed, to lose so brave a commander,) requiring our immediate assistance by troops; in consequence of which, a considerable number immediately marched for Quebeck, and more are daily following their example.

Yet, while we, your petitioners, are thus earnestly engaged, we beg leave to say, we are entirely willing to do all in our power in the general cause, under the Continental Congress, and have been, ever since the taking Ticonderoga, &c., in which your petitioners were principally

* Extract from a Report of the Lords of Trade to the Committee of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, for Plantation Affairs, dated December 3, 1772.

Upon the fullest examination into all the circumstances, which, at present, constitute the state of that district between the rivers Hudson and Connecticut, out of which, the greatest disorders and confusion have arisen, it seemeth to us, that the principal objects of attention in the consideration of any measures that can be suggested for restoring publick tranquillity, and quieting possessions, are,

First, Those townships, which, having been originally settled and established under grants from the Government of the Massachusetts-Bay, fell within this district, by the determination of the northern boundary of that Province, in the year 1740.

Secondly, Those grants of land, made within this district, by the Government of New-York, previous to the establishment of the townships laid out by the Governor of New-Hampshire, after the conclusion of the peace; and which land now lies within the limits of some one or other of those townships.

Thirdly, Those townships, which, having been originally laid out by the Governor of New-Hampshire, either continue in the same state, or have been confirmed by grants from New-York; and, also, those which have since originated under grants from the latter of those Colonies.

With regard to those townships which fall under the first of the above-mentioned descriptions; when we consider their nature and origin, and the numberless difficulties to which the original proprietors of them must have been subjected in the settlement of lands, exposed to the incursions of the Savages, and to every distress, which the neighborhood of the French, in time of war, could bring upon them; and, when we add to these considerations, the great reason there is to believe that the grants were made upon the ground of military services against the enemy; we do not hesitate to submit to your Lordships, our opinion, that the present Proprietors of these townships, ought, both in justice and equity, to be quieted in their possessions; and, that all grants whatsoever, made by the Government of New-York, of any lands, within the limits of those townships, whether the degree of improvement, under the original grant, had been more or less, are, in every light which they can be viewed, oppressive and unjust. But, as we are sensible that such subsequent grants made by the government of New-York, however unwarrantable, cannot be set aside by any authority from His Majesty, in case the grantees shall insist on their title; we submit to your Lordships, whether it might not be expedient, in order to quiet the original Proprietors in their possessions, to propose that all such persons who may claim possession of lands within the limits of such townships, under New-York grants, should, upon condition of their quitting such claim, receive a grant under the seal of New-York upon the like terms, and free of all expenses, of an equal number of acres, in some other part of the district lying between the rivers Hudson and Connecticut; and in case where any actual settlement or improvement has been made by such claimants, that they should, in such case, receive fifty acres of waste land for every three acres they may have improved.

With regard to those grants made by the Government of New-York, which fall within the second description, and upon which any actual improvement has been made; they do appear to us to deserve the same consideration; and that the Proprietors thereof ought not to be disturbed in their possessions, whether that improvement be to a greater or lesser extent. But we beg leave to observe to your Lordships, that, in both these cases, no consideration ought to be had to any claim, where it shall appear that no regular possession has ever been taken, and no actual settlement ever been made.

With regard to those townships, which fall within the last mentioned description, we submit to your Lordships our opinion; that, provided such townships do not include land within the limits of some antecedent grant, upon which actual improvement has, at any time, been made, it would be advisable they should be confirmed as townships, according to the limits expressed in the grants thereof; and that all persons having possession of any shares in the said townships, either as original grantees, or by purchase, or conveyance, and upon which shares any actual improvement or settlement has been made, ought not, in justice, to have been, or to be, in future, disturbed in the possession of such shares; nor ought they to be bound to any other conditions, whether of quit-rent, or otherwise, than what is contained in the grant.

active under Colonel Ethan Allen; but are not willing to put ourselves under the honourable Provincial Congress of New-York, in such a manner as might, in future, be detrimental to our private property, as the oath to be administered to those who are, or shall be, entrusted with commissions from said Congress and the Association agreed upon by the same authority, together with some particular restrictions and orders for regulating the Militia of said Province, if conformed to by the inhabitants of said New-Hampshire Grants, will, as we apprehend, be detrimental to your petitioners, in the determination of the dispute now subsisting between said inhabitants and certain claimants under said Province of New-York; and that your petitioners' ardent desires of exerting themselves in the present struggle for freedom may not be restrained, and that we might engage in the glorious cause without fear of giving our opponents any advantage in the said land dispute now subsisting, which we would wish should lie dormant until a general restoration of tranquillity shall allow us the opportunity for an equitable decision of the same.

Another reason, that much hinders our joining hand and hand with New-York Government in the general cause, is, they will not own us in our property; but, on the contrary, the Judges of the Supreme Court for said Province have expressly declared the charters of our lands, deeds, &c., to be null and void. Therefore, we, your Honours' humble petitioners, most earnestly pray your Honours to take our case into your wise consideration, and order that, for the future, your petitioners shall do duty in the Continental service, if required, as inhabitants of said New-Hampshire Grants, and not as inhabitants of the Province of New-York, or subject to the limitations, restrictions, or regulations of the Militia of said Province; and that commissions, as your Honours shall judge meet, be granted accordingly. And, as in duty bound, your Honours' petitioners shall ever pray.

At a meeting of the Representatives of the different towns on the New-Hampshire Grants, legally warned and convened at the house of Cephas Kent, inn-holder, in Dorset, on the 16th day of January, 1776, Captain Joseph Woodward, Chairman, Dr. Jonas Fay, Clerk.

This meeting, after due consideration, agreed to prefer to the honourable Continental Congress an humble Petition, setting forth the peculiar circumstances of this part of the country. Accordingly, a Committee was appointed to draw up the same, who drew up the foregoing, and reported to the House in the evening. The Clerk read the same in his place, and afterwards delivered it in at the table. The House adjourned till to-morrow, nine of the clock, 17th January. Met according to adjournment. The said Petition, being a second time read, was agreed to by the whole House. Then Lieutenant James Brackenridge and Captain Heman Allen were nominated to prefer the said Petition; the vote was called; passed in the affirmative, nem. con. Then Dr. Jonas Fay was nominated; the vote called; passed in the affirmative, nem. con.

FURTHER ACCOUNTS OF THE UNSUCCESSFUL ATTACK ON QUEBECK.

Philadelphia, January 17, 1776.

Our readers will expect that we should give some account of so interesting a piece of intelligence as the late unsuccessful, but brave, attempt made by the Continental troops to storm the town of Quebeck. The following is the best we have been able to collect, and, we have reason to think, contains the most material facts.

General Montgomery had determined to storm the town as soon as a good opportunity offered, and his plan was to attack the upper and lower town at the same time; but, several of his soldiers having deserted, he was induced to alter his design, and thought it most prudent to make two different attacks upon the lower town, the one at Cape-Diamond and the other at St. Roque's. The former was conducted under the immediate command of the General himself; but here a most unfortunate event early took place, viz: the fall of that gallant and able commander, which, no doubt, damped the ardour of his troops, and was the occasion of a repulse, though not till they had passed the first barrier, and were preparing to attempt the second. The other attack was conducted by Colonel (now Brigadier-General) Arnold, with his own detachment from New-England, and Captain Lamb's company of artillery, from New-York. They pressed through the St. Roque's, and approached near a two-gun battery, without being discovered, and attacked it; the enemy bravely defended it above an hour, but it was carried. In this attack General Arnold was shot through the leg, and was obliged to be carried to the Hospital, as was, also, Brigadier-Major Ogden, who, after a spirited and soldier-like conduct, received a wound in his shoulder. The command of this detachment now devolved on Lieutenant-Colonel Greene, of Rhode-Island, who, after gaining the battery, pushed on to a second barrier, which they took possession of; at the same time, the enemy sallied out from Palace-Gate, and attacked them in the rear. A field-piece, which the roughness of the road would not permit their carrying on, fell into the enemy's hands. The communication between the two detachments was, by this means, cut off, and, after a resolute push for the lower town, these brave soldiers were forced to yield to superior numbers with superior advantage, and submitted themselves prisoners. Captain Macpherson and Captain Cheeseman fought and fell by the side of their General. These officers distinguished themselves by their good conduct; and Lieutenant-Colonel Greene, Majors Bigelow and Meigs, and Captains Oswald and Burr, are particularly mentioned as having done themselves great honour. The loss of General Montgomery, who well understood the duties of the soldier and citizen, and generously endured the fatigues of the one for the sake of securing the rights of the other, is greatly regretted by every lover of mankind; but our enemies will soon find that America is become the nursery of heroes, and that, while we are struggling in so glorious a cause as that of liberty and virtue, she will not want Generals to lead forth her armies, and direct them to victory and triumph.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CANADA, DATED FEBRUARY 9, 1776.

It is not improbable, that, unacquainted with all the circumstances, some persons who, while they applauded the courage and resolution of our late brave General Montgomery, in attacking, under every disadvantage, a city so strongly fortified, both by art and nature, as Quebeck, with less than half the number of men that were within the walls to defend it, may censure the attempt as rash and desperate. But his situation not only justified, but made it a matter of indispensable duty, though a duty of a nature so difficult and arduous, that the most heroic virtue and intrepid courage, was absolutely necessary to the performance of it. The expiration of the time for which a great part of the Provincial troops had been enlisted being near at hand, in a council of war an attack of the town before that time was determined upon, and a plan concerted. But just before its execution, it appearing that some deserters from our Army had discovered it to the enemy, an alteration became necessary, nor was there any time to delay, for the men were on point of returning home, and the General was reduced to the dilemma of making an attack, under all disadvantages, or of raising the siege, and retiring with the loss of all the advantages we had gained by the unparalleled fatigues of a Winter campaign in such a country. It is no wonder, therefore, that, perilous as it was, he, with Colonel Arnold, &c., determined to make the attack, though to stimulate his men, the General was obliged to head them in person.

The attack was made with as much bravery as it was resolved on, and probably would have succeeded, had not a fatal discharge from the enemy's cannon, soon after he mounted the wall, finished the glorious career of our gallant General and some of the bravest of his followers. The principal of these were, his Aid-de-camp, Captain Macpherson, of Philadelphia, Captain Cheeseman, of New-York, and ten of his company, who all fell at the first fire. This mighty loss, at the first onset, so confused and discouraged our men that the remaining officers in the detachment thought themselves under a necessity of drawing off the men.

Captain Cheeseman was the first that scaled the wall, and intrepidly pushing forward, he received a canister of grape-shot through his body, which brought him to the ground. He attempted to rise, and his motions indicated a desire to press forward, but all was over, the fatal wound was given, through which fled as brave and heroick a spirit as ever animated the breast of an Alexander.

He seemed to have a remarkable presage that he should fall in the attack; he mentioned it without the least superstitious fear, but with the undaunted bravery of a soldier. He dressed himself that morning extremely neat, and putting five half-joes in his pocket, said that would be sufficient to bury him with decency. In him, I have lost a valuable and much esteemed friend.

ACCOUNT OF THE ATTEMPT ON QUEBECK.

[From the New-York Gazette.]

As the publick have, no doubt, received many contradictory accounts relative to the unfortunate attempt against Quebeck on the 31st of December last, and having great reason to think no just one has yet been published, I have (in justice to the characters of many, whose names, perhaps, have not been mentioned, or, if mentioned, not with the respect they deserve) sent you for publication the following sketch of that morning's transaction; assuring you, at the same time, that I am entirely divested of prejudice; that I was but transiently acquainted with any of the officers of the detachment previous to the attack, and, consequently, can have no interest in suppressing or exaggerating any circumstances, to the injury of any one of them; on the contrary, there is not a circumstance related, respecting the assault, but what I was either an eye-witness to, by being in the front, or had from those whose characters as gentlemen, and conduct as brave soldiers, entitles them to the greatest credibility. Those officers and gentlemen whose names are mentioned, eminently distinguished themselves; their enemies do them the justice to acknowledge it; and I hope their country will amply reward them.

About four o'clock in the morning, the detachment being assembled in St. Roque's, (together with Captain Lamb, and part of his company of Artillery, with a field-piece, mounted on a particular carriage, for the conveniency for carrying it through the snow, though its inefficacy was soon experienced) Captain Elezzer Oswald, with a party of twenty-five men, was detached to attack the enemy's advanced works at the Saut au Matelôt, on the entrance into the lower town, on St. Charles's side, the main body being then in motion to follow, but by the time they came opposite Palace-Gate, the garrison had taken the alarm, and, being apprized of the design, began a heavy fire from the walls, by which they had to pass a full quarter of a mile ere they came to the first place of action; which, with the obstruction occasioned by the field-piece, threw the divisions commanded by Majors Bigelow and Meigs into such confusion, that they lost the right path. However, the advanced party soon reached the barrier, and began the attack, in which they were joined by Colonel Arnold himself, and supported by Captain Daniel Morgan with his company of Riflemen, who were in front of the main body.

In this onset, unfortunately—unfortunately, indeed—Col. Arnold received his wound, and was carried off; but, notwithstanding, Captain Morgan and the first party obtained possession of the battery of four guns, took great part of the guard, and a number of inhabitants, who surrendered prisoners. In this situation they were obliged to remain (not being supported by the main body, who had not recovered from their confusion so as to come up) till joined by Lieutenant Steel, with part of Captain Smith's company. Captain Lamb, with his Artillery company, (who were obliged to quit the field-piece, it being impossible to bring it forward,) Captain Hendricks, with part of his company, and several of the musketeers from the different companies, (after regaining the proper road) in all, about two hundred, when they again formed, and were again led on by Captain Morgan, (upon whom the body then called as their commanding officer) to force the second barrier, which, had they effected, would have given full possession of the lower town; but the enemy having defeated the division which the immortal hero, General Montgomery, led to force their works in the lower town, on the St. Lawrence side, had now turned all their force upon this detachment; yet the dispute remained obstinate for some time, (in which an attempt to scale it was twice made by the intrepid Captain Morgan, whose uncommon presence of mind, and gallant behaviour in this critical situation, were truly conspicuous,) and success till now, seemed inclined to crown their brave endeavours, when they found themselves surrounded on all quarters; a party of near two hundred men, having sallied out at Palace-Gate, attacked and took prisoners all the rear, who had not got within the first barrier, and having brought their cannon, which commanded the river St. Charles, to rake the street, were a second time thrown into disorder, and obliged to take possession of the houses, in which they made a resolute stand of full three hours; but finding the enemy's fire continue, both from their cannon and musketry, and not more than one in ten of their own fire-locks serviceable, the others rendered useless by a snow storm which began in the night, and continued the whole day; and not having the least possibility of making a retreat, were at length obliged to surrender themselves prisoners; which in all human probability would not have been their fate, had those brave officers and soldiers who distinguished themselves in the front, been properly sustained by those who were in the rear; but, on the contrary, from the conduct of the garrison, there was the greatest prospect of carrying the town.

In this glorious though unsuccessful attempt, fell, (besides those in General Montgomery's division,) while in the utmost exertion of their duty, that excellent young officer, Captain William Hendricks, of Pennsylvania; the truly brave Lieutenant John Humphreys, of Captain Morgan's company, and Lieutenant Cooper, of Connecticut; Captain Hubbard, of the town of Worcester, in Massachusetts-Bay, died in a few days after, of a wound he received before he reached the first barrier.

The spirited exertions and gallant behaviour of the patriotick John Lamb, the firmness of the indefatigable Captain Samuel Lockwood, (by whose vigilance, both by night and day, with forty men, and a twelve-pounder, in a gondola, eleven armed vessels, with General Prescott, one hundred and thirty officers and soldiers, and one hundred and thirty seamen were taken at Sorel,) and the undaunted resolution shown during the whole conflict by Captains Oswald, Thayer, and Topham; Lieutenants William Heath, Peter O'Brien Bruen, (Charles Potterfield, and John McGuire, volunteers,) all of Captain Morgan's company; Steel, of Smith's; Moody, of Lamb's; Tisdale, of Ward's, and several other subalterns, &c., has not only crowned them with honour as soldiers, but entitles them to the applause of their bleeding country.

Adjutant Febiger, (a Danish gentleman, who holds a lieutenancy in the King of Denmark's service,) behaved with all the resolution, calmness, and intrepidity, peculiar to an old veteran and an experienced officer; and has given many specimens of his great military abilities.

In justice to Mr. Matthew Duncan, a volunteer from Philadelphia, who was made a prisoner the day after, owing purely to his enterprising spirit, in coming voluntarily to know whether the detachment were in possession of the lower town, agreeable to a report then prevailing in the camp, I do assure the publick, that the enemy gave him the character such a young adventurer deserves; and that many of them appeared surprised so young a man could be able to maintain the justness of the cause in which he was engaged with so much spirit, sensibility, and firmness. Indeed, it was frequently mentioned, that his zeal carried him so far as to insult, in his turn, some of the principal officers, as they marched him to the main guard; meaning (I suppose) his asking Colonel Maclean, in a sarcastical manner, if he did not land at New-York, alluding to a belief then entertained, that he was there obliged to give his parole for his future conduct.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM BARTLETT.

Cambridge, January 17, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform you, by command of his Excellency, that Archibald Templeton, James Crawford, Joseph Douglass, James Hamilton, and John McIver, who belonged to the ship Concord, Captain Lawrie, have his permission to go on board our armed vessels.

You will please to observe, that his Excellency would not wish that too great a number of them should be in one vessel; for, though these men may be well disposed to serve us, it is only right to guard against accidents.

I am, &c.,

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL GATES.

Winter-Hill, January 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I enclose you a letter from some gentlemen at Newburyport, for some cannon-shot, which beg you to lay before the General; and, if you please, inform him that there are a great number of those shot which I sent from New-Hampshire to Medford, which have never been called for, or taken into account. If it is agreeable to his Excellency, I will spare a part of those to the gentlemen, to enable them to fix out the privateer they are about; otherwise, shall not beg an answer per bearer, and am, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To General Gates.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO THE GENERAL COURT OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Winter-Hill, January 17, 1776.

I was favoured with your letter respecting the affair of Colonel Stark and Colonel Hobart, which I immediately laid before the General. He showed me your letter to him, with a copy of Colonel Hobart's to you; and a trial would immediately have taken place, but Colonel Stark was gone into the country recruiting. He is now returned, and a Court of Inquiry will sit upon him to-morrow or next day.

You may depend that, notwithstanding I esteem Stark as a worthy, good officer, I will do every thing in my power to punish any insult he may have been guilty of offering to the Colony.

I repeatedly told Colonel Hobart, the evening after the affair happened, when I found him and Stark together, at my house, on my return from Head-Quarters, that I would confine Stark immediately, if he desired it, and even his whole regiment, if necessary; but he chose to omit it.

MESHECH WEARE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Colony of New-Hampshire, Exeter, January 17, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's letter of the 13th instant, setting forth the difficulty of providing fire-arms for the Army, came to hand yesterday. The General Court, now sitting, immediately took the contents under consideration, and find that all the publick arms of the Colony have been delivered out to the soldiers in the Continental Army, and at our garrisons in Portsmouth.

Upon a return lately made from the several towns in the Colony, we find that not more than two-thirds of the inhabitants capable of using arms are furnished therewith, and many of them such as would not be thought fit to be trusted to in the Continental Army.

The scarcity of workmen, as well as steel, has hitherto prevented our having any considerable number made in the Colony; for which reasons, together with the apparent need of our keeping a considerable body of troops to defend our seaport, brings us to the disagreeable necessity of informing your Excellency it is not in our power, at present, to supply any arms for the purpose you mention. We are fearful that the detention of the arms of the Militia, (now at the camp,) against their consent, will create such an uneasiness in their minds, that it would hinder their exerting themselves if called upon hereafter.

In consequence of a former request from your Excellency, we have procured one hundred and forty blankets, which we shall forward to the camp immediately; and if any more can be obtained, they shall be sent along without delay.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am, with great esteem and respect, your Excellency's most humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A CAPTAIN OF AN ENGLISH TRANSPORT TO HIS OWNERS, IN LONDON, DATED BOSTON, JANUARY 17, 1776.

I have the pleasure to acquaint you of my safe arrival here on the 1st instant, having had one continued storm of wind since my last letter to you, dated at sea, November 6th. The sea continually washed over us, and froze so excessively hard, that, had it not been for our masts, we might have been taken for an island of ice.

I was told that I might depend on meeting a good many cruisers at a distance from the land, who would conduct us safe into port; but I did not see ship or vessel for three weeks after I got over St. George's Bank, and my orders from the Admiralty forbade me to go into any port without first speaking with a King's ship, who was to conduct me into port, or inform me of a place of safety.

After being baffled about for three weeks, with only six men fit for duty, the rest being frost-bitten, or sick through fatigue, (having, besides, had the misfortune to lose one, washed overboard,) I made for the land, and got, as I judged, from my reckoning, within three leagues of Boston light-house, when, it coming on to blow a gale of wind, and meeting neither cruiser nor pilot, I was forced out to sea again, and continued in a storm, at sea, eight days more. I got in with the land again, with the wind at north, and, though thick, snowy weather, I stood in boldly, and made the light-house, and met one of the King's schooners, and asked for a pilot, but he could not spare one, as he was going on a cruise. Soon after, I got to an anchor in Nantasket Road, and found several King's ships, I believe ten sail, in all. To them I applied for a pilot; but they had none to spare, and were so weakly manned that they could give me no assistance. They told me there were many privateers out, well manned and armed, and that they were going to cruise for them; but, if they meet with any bad weather, as I have done, they are so badly manned they will make no hand of it.

At last I got a pilot from Boston, who tells me that a ship with ordnance stores is taken by the Rebels, and that, likewise, several coal and porter ships are taken, which I find, now, to be likely, for there are only eight sail, of the forty, arrived yet, and they had no force to resist.

They have not begun to unload us yet. We have split several of our sails, and the rest are much the worse for wear. All our running rigging is bad; our ropes cracked like glass, and we broke our maintopmast backstay; and all our rigging is much damaged.

I can see the Rebels' camp very plain, whose colours, a little while ago, were entirely red; but, on the receipt of the King's speech, (which they burnt,) they have hoisted the Union Flag, which is here supposed to intimate the union of the Provinces.

About a week ago, the Rebels made an excursion into Charleston, and burnt down some few houses that were left standing, and carried off a sergeant and four men prisoners; but, at present, all is quiet.

You had better, if any of your ships should come out, get higher freight, for the loss, in wear, is greater than I expected, and no supply can be had. If you send some naval stores, they will sell well. There are a great many privateers out, and more will be soon ready; but I suppose the ships, after this, will come with convoy.

I am, &c.

P. S. I brought but fourteen hogs alive; and another ship, that had one hundred and thirty sheep, brought in five, and all as thin as you could expect, and, as the sailors say, only fit for lanterns.

The House taking into their consideration, that this Province, by means of the necessary attendance of some of its Deputies now in Convention, is at present unrepresented in Congress, directed the President to know of Mr. John Hall, whether it was convenient for him to attend in Congress; and Mr. Hall having signified that it was very inconvenient to him at this time, and that it was his wish, that some other gentleman might be appointed in his stead, and it being represented that Mr. Robert Goldsborough, through long indisposition, is at present unable to attend that service, it is, therefore,

The said Francis Baker appeared, acknowledged his offence, and expressed great contrition and sorrow for the same, and prayed a remission of the penalty annexed by the Congress to his crime, that he might not be declared an enemy to America, but be permitted to enjoy the rights of a member of this community, on such terms and conditions as this Convention may think proper to impose; and promised a strict compliance with all Continental and Provincial Resolutions; whereupon, it is

Resolved, That the seat of the said Francis Baker be vacated, and that the Electors of Talbot County elect another person as a Member and Committee-man for that County, in the room and place of the said Francis Baker, the Committee giving ten days' notice of the election, excluding the days of notice and election, and any three of their Members to be judges thereof: That the said Baker not offering himself for any office of trust, his offence be not published, nor any further proceedings had against him.

The Proceedings of the Committee of Kent County, relative to the conduct and behaviour of the Reverend John Patterson were read, and are as follow:

"At a meeting of a special Committee held for Kent County, on the 16th day of August, Anno Domini 1775, present, Thomas Smyth, Chairman, and thirteen Members.

"This Committee being informed that the Reverend Mr. John Patterson, of Kent County, had some time past publicly spoken words which reflected upon the Convention; upon which the matter was considered, and

"Resolved, That summons issue to the said Patterson, for him to appear before the next Committee to be held for the County aforesaid, on Monday, the 21st instant; to which time this Committee is adjourned."

"Monday, the 21st day of August, the Committee met according to adjournment, present, thirty-one Members.

"The Reverend John Patterson appeared in consequence of the summons issued at the last meeting, and being interrogated with regard to the disrespectful words which it was alleged he had spoken against the Convention, confessed that he had reflected on the Proceedings of the Convention, as well that held in December last, as the one held in July last; that the first had undertaken to preclude persons who were not members of the Committee, from judging of the propriety of their proceedings; that he conceived the said Convention had entered into that resolution to cover a duplicity of conduct of the Continental Congress; that it was depriving men of their liberty, and that he considered himself brought as a criminal, to receive a mock trial; that the multitude were deluded; that he did not see why he should not judge upon the Proceedings of the Convention, it was a liberty the people of New-York had taken; upon being asked who, in New-York, he answered, Doctor Cooper and Doctor Chandler, and said that he should think it a higher honour to be ranked with those gentlemen, than to have the approbation of this Committee, or even the Convention; that the last Convention had treated James Chrystie in a tyrannical, cruel, and oppressive manner, and that there was more liberty in Turkey than in this Province; that the Convention had forbid him from passing any censure on the Congress; that he had not done it since, and that if the Committee should forbid him from passing any censure on the Convention, he would not, but should then confine himself to censures on the Committee.

"Upon which, it was unanimously voted, That the whole proceedings against said Patterson be transmitted to the Council of Safety for this Province, for them to take order therein.

"A true copy from the Minutes:

"W. HALL, Clerk Committee."

Whereupon, it is Resolved, That the Committee of Observation for Kent County be requested immediately to take into custody the Reverend John Patterson, and send him under a guard of four of the Militia to this Convention.

On motion, That Mr. Robert Buchanan, elected a Delegate for Kent County, attend his duty in Convention, on Monday next, the 18th of this present month, and that the Committee of Observation for that County procure a copy of this order to be served on Mr. Buchanan as soon as may be.

The previous question was called for and put, whether the above question be now put? Carried in the negative.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of the Western Shore pay to Samuel Chase, or his order, forty Pounds, common money, to be accounted for.

On motion, Resolved, That no Boat or other Vessel belonging to this Province, go out of this Province without license in writing from this Convention, the Council of Safety hereafter to be appointed, or from some Committee of Observation, and that the particular place such Boat or Vessel shall be designed to go to, shall be expressed in all licenses granted by the Committees of Observation. And if any such Boat or Vessel shall be navigated beyond the limits of this Province without such license, or if, after having obtained such license, the skipper thereof shall, without absolute and inevitable necessity, go to, or touch at, any place out of this Province, other than that mentioned in such license, or shall carry any person, or letter, of which he shall not give previous notice to such Committee, or shall bring back any person, or letter, of which he shall not give notice to some Committee of Observation, as soon as may be after his return, such skipper, and all other persons accessory to such misbehaviour, may be punished by imprisonment; but it is understood that this Resolution is not to prohibit the crossing Potomack, although the Boats or Vessels employed or used therefor should go up the creeks or arms of Potomack River making into Virginia, or to prohibit passing or repassing at the Ferry on Potomack River.

On motion, Resolved, That no Member of this Convention depart the House without leave thereof.

Adjourned till three o'clock.

Resolved, That a small Saltpetre Work be erected at a principal Inspecting House, or in the neighbourhood of Tobacco Houses, or in some other publick and convenient place, in each County, at the publick expense, for the making Crude Nitre; that thus, besides the advantage immediately accruing from carrying on so many Works, in different parts of the Province, the good people thereof may be generally instructed in the art of making Crude Nitre; and as a further inducement thereto, and that this art may be still more extensively diffused and practised, that a liberal price ought to be allowed for all Crude Nitre manufactured in private families; that all the Crude Nitre, whether made by individuals or at the County Manufactories, be carried to one Refinery, where the same may be purified by a skilful Refiner, in large quantities; without waste, and made fit for manufacturing into Gunpowder.

That each of the said Supervisors be empowered to lay out the residue of his one hundred pounds, in hiring labourers to assist a skilful workman, who shall be employed in each of the said Works, and in procuring and removing earth impregnated with Nitre, fit to be used at the said Works.

That the Supervisor of each of the said Works employ a skilful workman to carry on, direct, and manage the process of making Crude Nitre at the said Works, respectively; and that the same Supervisor pay to the said workman one shilling, common money, for each pound of good Crude Nitre that he shall manufacture and deliver at the same Works, as his wages and reward for his skill and labour.

And the several Supervisors shall, from time to time, send all the Crude Nitre which shall be made at the said Works, and otherwise come to their hands, as aforesaid, to the said Publick Refinery.

That each Supervisor draw from the Treasurer of his Shore, as well the said one hundred pounds, as the sum of two shillings, common money, and no more, per pound, for all Crude Nitre by him sent to, and delivered at, the said Refinery.

That each of the said Supervisors render an account of his transactions to every Convention, by the third day of every session thereof; and that, on such account, he be allowed all the said disbursements, the actual expenses of sending the Crude Nitre to the Refinery, and, for his trouble, the sum of two pence for every pound of rough Nitre made at the Works under his care, and the sum of one penny for every other pound of Crude Nitre by him collected, as aforesaid, and sent to the said Refinery; and that he pay the balance of the money in his hands into the publick Treasury, for the use of the publick, if so ordered.

That it be strongly recommended to such of the good people of this Province, whose circumstances and conveniences will allow them to pursue the following directions, to place in open houses, or sheds admitting the air, but excluding the rain and sun, the stalks and trashy leaves of tobacco, trodden straw, the sweepings of stables, mixed with rich mould, collected from the floors of barns and out-houses, and from time to time to sprinkle with urine, brine, or water, this collection of various substances, so as to occasion the fermentation and speedy putrefaction thereof, that the whole mass, when perfectly rotten and digested, may be dug, stirred up, and thoroughly blended, and thus left, without further damping, so loose and light as to attract more readily, and be more plentifully impregnated with Nitre, for future use.

The Convention took into consideration the following Report, to wit:

In obedience to a Resolve of the honourable Convention, the Committee appointed to receive all Proposals relating to the establishment of Manufactories of any kind within this Province, and report their opinion thereon, do report: That the following Proposals and Petitions have been laid before them, to wit:

The Petition of Mr. Fielder Gaunt, setting forth: That, about four months ago, he had discovered a vein of Lead Ore in Frederick County, between Fredericktown and the Catoctin Mountain; that, upon an examination of the same, appearances were so favourable that he hoped to be able, in a short time, to supply this Province with a sufficient quantity of Lead during our present unhappy disputes; and prayed that two hundred pounds might be advanced to him for the term of one year, without interest, upon giving bond, with sufficient security, at the end of that term to repay the same. Your Committee further report, that Mr. Gaunt hath, in person, informed them that he has, by sinking a shaft thirty-eight feet in the earth higher up the hill, found another vein of Lead; and that both the said veins run under a large rock, where it was too expensive, on his own capital, to pursue the same; and that the quantities of Lead Ore taken out of said veins were not considerable. Your Committee beg leave, further, to report thereon: that, in their opinion, a Manufactory of Lead in this Province would be of great advantage to the publick, and, of course, merits the attention and encouragement of this Province; and that the sum requested for that purpose is not unreasonable.

Your Committee further beg leave to report: That Alexander McFaddon, of Frederick County, by his Petition, hath expressed his desire of erecting a Linen, Woollen, and Cotton Manufactory, in or near Fredericktown; that he is, also, well acquainted with the business, and would undertake to carry on the same, with the publick encouragement and assistance, and proposed that a sum, not exceeding four thousand pounds, should be advanced to him, from time to time, by the Province, on giving bond, with good security, for the payment of the money lent, with four per cent. interest, after the expiration of three years from the advancement thereof. Your Committee further report: That Mr. McFaddon, in person, informed them that, although he proposed, by the above scheme, to carry on the same so extensively as thereby to manufacture, annually, fifty thousand yards, yet, if it did not meet with the approbation of the honourable the Convention, he was willing to undertake to set up a Manufactory on having not less than one-half of the above sum advanced to him; that he proposed to begin, at first, with the sum of five hundred pounds, and draw out, to the amount of the sum stipulated, in proportion as he should purchase the materials to manufacture; that he would not engage to deliver any certain quantity of Linen or Woollen Cloth, unless he could be assured of purchasing the rough materials, nor could he agree for any price, as he was uncertain on what terms he could purchase the same; that, if he could buy them, he would furnish the Province with any quantity within his power, at a reasonable price, on their paying him for the same; and that the original sum borrowed would be absolutely necessary for him to carry on the Manufactory aforesaid, entire, during the time aforesaid.

Your Committee further beg leave to report: That Edward Parker, of Cecil County, by his Petition, hath set forth, that he hath erected a house, provided himself with all manner of implements necessary for carrying on a Linen and Woollen Manufactory, and had, also, engaged a number of weavers; but found it absolutely impossible to carry on the same with spirit, and in an extensive manner, without a considerable sum of ready cash, and, therefore, prayed that the sum of three hundred pounds, out of the publick Treasury, might be advanced to him, upon his giving bond, with undoubted security, for the delivery of the value of two hundred pounds in good strong merchantable Linen Cloth, manufactured in this Province, on or before the first day of May next, and the value of one hundred pounds in good merchantable Linen or Woollen Cloth, manufactured in this Province, on the first day of November next, of such quality as he may be directed, and at such prices and rates as this or a future Convention, on his producing the same, may be pleased to allow. The said Edward Parker, in person, acquainted your Committee that he kept five looms constantly employed in manufacturing.

Your Committee beg leave to report, thereon, their opinion, that the establishment of Linen and Woollen Manufactories is of the greatest importance to this Province, as not only a number of poor people may be employed, fed, and clothed thereby, but necessary Cloth for the use of the Province be manufactured therein; and that, for the above purposes and other valuable ones, a Manufactory for making the above Cloths should be established in every County in this Province; that the sum of five thousand pounds be appropriated and set apart for the above purpose, to be distributed in manner and form following, to wit: Five hundred pounds for Frederick County, and three hundred pounds to each of the other Counties; which sum, in the opinion of your Committee, will employ eighty looms, and the produce thereof amount to from eighty to one thousand yards of Cloth, at a moderate calculation, suitable for tents, hunting and soldiers' shirts, and supplying the necessitous poor; that three gentlemen, in whom confidence may be placed, be appointed in each County, and styled Contractors; and that they, or any two of them, be empowered to draw the several sums above mentioned out of the Treasuries, as occasion may require, agree with such persons as will undertake to carry on the work, receive the Linen and Woollen, and take bond, with sufficient security, in double the sum lent, payable to —, conditioned for the return of the value of the money lent, in good coarse Linen or Woollen Cloth, in the following manner, to wit: One-third thereof by the first of May next, one other third by the first of August next, and the remainder by the first of December next; and that the said Contractors shall transmit the bonds so taken to the President of the Convention, (should the Convention be sitting,) or, if in their recess, to the Council of Safety for the time being, that, if it should happen that undertakers could not be found, or should not apply in any one or more of the Counties on or before the first day of March next, the Contractors in any other of the Counties may be empowered to draw out, for the purposes aforesaid, and on the above terms, the proportion, or proportions, allotted such County or Counties as may not apply.

Your Committee further beg leave to observe, that several Proposals have been made to them respecting a Sheet- ing and Slitting Mill to be erected in this Province, but that they are not fully prepared to report on that subject.

Signed per order:

JOHN CALLAHAN, Clerk Committee.

On reading the first part of the above Report, the question was put, That the House concur therewith? Resolved in the affirmative.

Resolved, therefore, That two hundred Pounds, common money, out of the publick Treasury, be advanced to Mr. Fielder Gaunt, of Frederick County, for the purposes mentioned in the said Report, for the term of one year, on his giving bond, with sufficient security, to repay the same at the end of one year, without interest; the security to be approved by the Convention, or Council of Safety hereafter to be appointed, and the bond to be made payable to Mr. President, Mr. Carroll, Barrister, and Mr. T. Johnson, Jun.

On reading that part of the said Report relating to the establishment of a Linen, Woollen, and Cotton Manufactory, by Mr. Alexander McFadon, the question was put, That the House concur with the proposals of Mr. McFadon? Carried in the negative.

On reading the third paragraph of the said Report, in which is contained the proposal of Edward Parker, of Cecil County, the question was put, That the House concur therewith? Resolved in the affirmative.

Resolved, therefore, That the sum of three hundred Pounds, out of the publick Treasury, be advanced to the said Edward Parker, upon his giving bond, with good security, for the delivery of the value of two hundred Pounds in good, strong, merchantable Linen Cloth, manufactured in this Province, on or before the first day of May next; and the value of one hundred Pounds in good, merchantable Linen or Woollen Cloth, manufactured in this Province, on the first day of November next, of such quality as he may be directed, and at such prices and rates as this or a future Convention shall allow.

On reading that part of the said Report which relates to the establishment of Linen and Woollen Manufactories in each County in this Province, the question was put, That the House concur therewith? The Counties were equally divided; and, therefore, the House does not concur.

Mr. Mackall has leave of absence.

The Convention adjourns till to-morrow morning, half after nine o'clock.

Mr. Hooe appeared in the House.

The Convention took into consideration the Report from the Committee appointed to consider what alterations and amendments were necessary in the regulation of the Militia of this Province; and, thereupon, came to the following Resolutions:

That no Minute-Men be hereafter enrolled under the Resolutions of the late Convention. That where Minute Companies are already formed, no commissions issue to the Officers thereof, unless the Officers desire to have their commissions. That no Minute Companies be continued beyond the 1st day of March next, and that a sum of money sufficient for the purpose, be lodged in the hands of the Committee of Observation in each respective County where a Company of Minute-Men hath been enrolled, viewed, and allowed to pay and discharge the expense of such Company for the time past, and, also, for the time to come, if such Company continues till the 1st day of March next, and that such Committee receive the Rolls of such Companies, and the times of the attendance of the men, proved by the oath of some one, at least, of the Commissioned Officers, return the balance of the money, if any, into the publick Treasury, and render an account of their transactions herein to the next Convention; but no person chosen for a Commissioned Officer in any Company of Minute-Men, shall be compellable to serve in the Militia in a lower rank or station than he was elected to in the Minute Company.

That all publick Arms in the hands of the Minute-Men, immediately after the 1st day of March next, or as soon as they disband, where they disband sooner, be delivered to the Committee of Observation for their respective County, to be by the said Committee kept and preserved for the publick use.

That every able-bodied effective Freeman within this Province, between sixteen and fifty years of age, (Clergymen of all denominations, practising Physicians, and the household of his Excellency the Governour, excepted,) who hath not already enrolled himself in the Militia, shall, on or before the 1st day of March next, enroll himself in some Company of Militia, agreeable to the form of the enrollment prescribed by the last Convention, and that every Minute or Artillery Man, except Commissioned Officers, shall in like manner enroll in the Militia, within one month next after he shall cease to act as a Minute or Artillery Man. And if any able-bodied, effective Freeman shall refuse or delay to enroll himself in the Militia as aforesaid, every such person shall pay for the present year, which shall be reckoned from the 15th day of September last, such sum of money, not less than forty shillings, nor more than ten pounds, as shall be assessed by the Committee of Observation of his County, for the use of the publick. And the Committee of Observation in each respective County shall, by warrant under their hands, appoint and empower any person or persons they shall judge proper, to collect and receive all moneys by them so assessed, which shall be paid within one month after notice of such assessment, and in default thereof, the person or persons so empowered, may distrain the goods and effects of the defaulters, and sell and dispose of the same in the same manner that goods may be distrained and sold by law for County levies. And every Collector shall, on or before the 1st day of July next, pay the money by him collected, after deducting seven and an half per cent. for his commission, to the Treasurer of his Shore, and leave with the same Treasurer an account containing the names of those from whom he hath received the same, and the sums from them respectively collected.

That every person who shall refuse and delay to enroll as aforesaid, shall, on or before the 10th day of March next, deliver to the Committee of Observation for his County, all his Fire-Arms, if he hath any, except pistols; and if any such person shall refuse or delay to do the same, then such Committee shall empower some person, or persons, by warrant under their hands, to seize the said Fire-Arms, and deliver the same to the said Committee; and the said Committees shall cause all the Arms which shall come to their hands to be valued, by indifferent and honest men, on oath, and shall keep a list of such Arms, to whom they belong, and their respective values, and may deliver out such Arms at their discretion, to the Captains of Militia in their County, taking the Captains' receipts therefor, and the Captains being liable for the redelivery thereof, may deliver the same to the unarmed men of their Companies; and every Committee of Observation shall transmit an account of all assessments by them made, as well as of all Arms by them received as aforesaid, and how they have disposed of the same, to every Convention; but because some persons who do not enroll in the Militia may be so poor that they cannot pay the said assessment of forty shillings, and their omitting to enroll may not proceed from disaffection to the cause of America, or perverseness, it is provided, that where the real and personal Estate of any effective Freeman, who shall refuse or neglect to enroll himself in the Militia as aforesaid, shall not, in the judgment and estimation of the Committee of his County, be of the value of thirty pounds, the same Committee may in their discretion omit to assess any sum of money on such person, the same Committee certifying to the Convention, or Council of Safety, the name of the person, and the reasons wherefore they do not assess him.

That all fines which have been already set and adjudged, according to the Resolutions of the last Convention, on Militia Officers or men, and have not been paid, or which shall hereafter be so set and adjudged, shall, if the same be on a Field-Officer, be paid into the hands of the Quartermaster of the Battalion to which he belongs, and if on any Officer of inferior rank to a Field-Officer, or on a non-Commissioned Officer or Private, be paid into the hands of such persons as hath or shall have been appointed to receive the fines for the Company to which such person belongs, or if no such Receiver hath or shall have been appointed, then the same shall be paid into the hands of the Captain of such Company, and on refusal to pay the same fine, and such refusal being certified to the Committee of Observation for the County where such person resides, the same Committee shall grant a warrant under their hands, empowering any other person or persons of the same County to levy such fine by distress and sale as aforesaid, of the party's goods and effects, but the Officers who set and adjudged the fine may commit the offender to a Sergeant according to the Resolution of the late Convention, if they choose that as the best method to compel payment.

That in cases where it may greatly promote the ease of the inhabitants, a number not less than forty, nor exceeding eighty privates, may, with the especial permission of the Committees of Observation, enroll in any one Company of Militia, but any of those already enrolled in any Company, where the privates do not exceed seventy-four, shall not be permitted to leave such Company, for the purpose of enrolling in a new one. That in those Counties where only part of the Militia are appointed to join in Battalion, the respective Committees of Observation form the other Companies into Battalion, if there are sufficient in number for that purpose, and in those Counties where there are not any Battalions formed, that the said Committees proceed, as soon as may be, to divide their Militia into Battalions, according to the Resolves of the late Convention.

That within the general description of able-bodied effective Freemen of this Province, are intended to be included, overseers, and those who are bound by contract made within this Province, to serve in any particular quality or capacity, being able-bodied effective men, between sixteen and fifty years of age.

That a Brigadier-General, a Quartermaster, and an Adjutant-General, be appointed by the Convention over every eight Battalions, and to include within that command, all Artillery Companies and other Militia within the District.

That the Counties ballot for the rank of Colonels and Battalions from number one to number sixteen, and so the County drawing number one to have its Second Battalion the Seventeenth of the Province, &c., and all Field and Commissioned Officers to rank according to their commissions, and as to those who bear the like commissions, according to the number of the Battalion to which they belong.

The Convention resumed the consideration of the Instructions for the Deputies representing this Province in Congress, which were read, considered, and agreed to, and are as follow:

In Convention, January 12, 1776.

To the Honourable Matthew Tilghman, Esq., Thomas Johnson, Jun., Robert Goldsborough, William Paca, Samuel Chase, Thomas Stone, Robert Alexander, and John Rogers, Esquires.

The Convention, taking into their most serious consideration the present state of the unhappy dispute between Great Britain and the United Colonies, think it proper to deliver you their sentiments, and to instruct you in certain points, relative to your conduct in Congress, as Representatives of this Province.

The experience we and our ancestors have had, of the mildness and equity of the English Constitution, under which we have grown up to, and enjoyed a state of felicity, not exceeded among any people we know of, until the grounds of the present controversy were laid by the Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, has most strongly endeared to us that form of Government from whence these blessings have been derived, and makes us ardently wish for a reconciliation with the mother country, upon terms that may ensure to these Colonies an equal and permanent freedom.

To this Constitution we are attached, not merely by habit, but by principle, being in our judgments persuaded it is, of all known systems, best calculated to secure the liberty of the subject—to guard against despotism on the one hand, and licentiousness on the other.

Impressed with these sentiments, we warmly recommend to you, to keep constantly in your view the avowed end and purpose for which these Colonies originally associated—the redress of American grievances, and securing the rights of the Colonists.

As upon the attainment of these great objects, we shall think it our greatest happiness to be thus firmly united to Great Britain, we think proper to instruct you, that should any proposition be happily made by the Crown or Parliament, that may lead to, or lay a rational and probable ground for reconciliation, you use your utmost endeavours to cultivate and improve it into a happy settlement and lasting amity, taking care to secure the Colonies against the exercise of the right assumed by Parliament, to tax them, and to alter and change their Charters, Constitutions, and internal polity, without their consent—powers incompatible with the essential securities of the lives, liberties, and properties of the Colonists.

We further instruct you, that you do not, without the previous knowledge and approbation of the Convention of this Province, assent to any proposition to declare these Colonies independent of the Crown of Great Britain, nor to any proposition for making or entering into alliance with any foreign Power, nor to any union or confederation of these Colonies, which may necessarily lead to a separation from the mother country, unless, in your judgments, or in the judgments of any four of you, or a majority of the whole of you, (if all shall be then attending in Congress,) it shall be thought absolutely necessary for the preservation of the liberties of the United Colonies; and should a majority of the Colonies in Congress, against such, your judgment, resolve to declare these Colonies independent of the Crown of Great Britain, or to make or enter into alliance with any foreign Power, or into any union or confederation of these Colonies, which may necessarily lead to a separation from the mother country: then we instruct you, immediately, to call the Convention of this Province, and repair thereto with such proposition and resolve, and lay the same before the said Convention, for their consideration; and this Convention will not hold this Province bound by such majority in Congress, until the Representative body of the Province, in Convention, assent thereto.

Desirous as we are of peace with Great Britain, upon safe and honourable terms, we wish you, nevertheless, and instruct you, to join with the other Colonies, in such military operations as may be judged proper and necessary for the common defence, until such a peace can be happily obtained.

At the same time that we assure you we have an entire confidence in your abilities and integrity, in the discharge of the great trust reposed in you, we must observe to you, as our opinion, that, in the relation of constituent and representative, one principal security of the former is the right he holds to be fully informed of the conduct of the latter. We can conceive no case to exist in which it would be of more importance to exercise this right than the present, nor any in which we can suppose the Representative would more willingly acquiesce in the exercise of it. We, therefore, instruct you, that you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolve of Congress, that the votes given by the Colonies on every question agitated in Congress, shall appear upon the journals thereof; and if such resolve be obtained, that you, at the expense of this Province, procure copies of the said journals, except such parts thereof as relate to military operations and measures taken to procure arms and ammunition, and, from time to time, lay the same before the Conventions of this Province, showing the part you, as Representatives of the Province, take in such questions.

And we further instruct you to move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolve of Congress, that no person who holds any military command in the Continental, or any Provincial regular forces, or marine service, nor any person who holds or enjoys any office of profit under the Continental Congress, or under any Government assumed since the present controversy with Great Britain began, or which shall hereafter be assumed, or who directly or indirectly receives the profits, or any part of the profits, of such command or office, shall, during the time of his holding or receiving the same, be eligible to sit in Congress.

Convention adjourns till to-morrow morning, half after nine o'clock.

Ordered, That no commission issue to Mr. John Thomas, First Major of the South River Battalion, in Anne Arundel County, he having declined that office, or to any of the Officers of Mr. John Burgess's Company, or to Mr. William Gambrill, a Lieutenant of Mr. John Boone's Company, during the sitting of this Convention, but that the same be referred to the Council of Safety.

49. No sutler shall be permitted to sell any kind of liquor, or victual, or to keep his house or shop open, for the entertainment of soldiers, after nine o'clock at night, or before beating the reveilles, or upon Sundays, between the hours of ten and one o'clock, on penalty of being dismissed from all future settling.

50. No officer commanding in any camp, garrison, fort, or station, shall lay any duty or imposition upon, or be interested in the sale of any victuals, liquors, or other necessities of life, or merchandise which are brought or offered for sale for the use of the soldiers, nor shall receive or have any gratuity or reward for any license to any sutler, on penalty of being discharged from the service.

51. Any commissioned officer who shall be guilty of any fraud or embezzlement, shall forfeit all his pay due at the time of his conviction, make restitution, and be discharged from the service.

52. Any non-commissioned officer or soldier, who shall embezzle or destroy ammunition, provisions, tools, or any other thing belonging to the publick stores, shall be punished as may be adjudged.

53. Any officer or soldier, who shall wilfully, or through negligence, disobey any general or special orders, shall be punished as may be adjudged.

54. B., do swear, that you will well and truly try, and impartially determine the cause of the prisoner now to be tried, according to the rules for regulating and governing the forces in the service of this Province. So help you God." Provided, That when any person is to be tried for his life, the Council of Safety shall appoint twenty-four members at least, two of which to be Field-Officers, and ten at least to be Captains, out of a list of whom the offender may strike all above the number of fifteen, leaving at least one Field-Officer and five Captains; and sentence of death shall not be pronounced, unless twelve of the Court-Martial concur in such sentence.

55. That no Inferior Court-Martial shall consist of a less number than five commissioned officers, unless in such cases where that number cannot be conveniently assembled, when three shall be sufficient; but no person on or against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed, shall be a member of any Court-Martial for the trial thereof; and in such cases where three, for that reason, cannot be had of the same corps, garrison, party, or station, of the offender, then with those who are competent of that corps, garrison, party, or station, and the next most convenient thereto; such Inferior Court-Martial shall be constituted of five members at least.

56. That all Inferior Court-Martials shall be appointed by the Colonel or commanding officer of the battalion, corps, garrison, party, or station, to which the offender belongs, and the members thereof shall take the same oath, to be administered in like manner as the members of a General Court-Martial,

57. That every Court-Martial administer an oath to every witness produced before them in the following words, to wit: "You do swear, that the evidence you shall give in the case in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

58. That the members of every Court-Martial shall take the same rank as they hold in the Army, and shall behave themselves with calmness, decency, and moderation, and, in giving in their votes, shall begin with the lowest in commission; and the sentence of the Court shall be given according to the majority of votes, except in capital cases, as before mentioned.

59. That in all trials of Field-Officers, two-thirds of the number that constitute the Court-Martial shall be of the degree of a Captain at least.

60. That no person shall suffer death under any article, unless the pain of death is expressly annexed by such article to his crime, nor shall any person be punished for any crime or offence, except for shamefully abandoning his post in an engagement, until he shall be convicted thereof by a General or Inferior Court-Martial.

61. That no Inferior Court-Martial shall be competent to pass sentence for any greater punishment on a commissioned officer, than a pecuniary fine, not exceeding twelve dollars, or reprimand, or concession, or to ask pardon; or on a non-commissioned officer or soldier for a greater punishment, than a pecuniary fine, not exceeding half a month's pay, or for five days' close imprisonment, or for whipping on the bare back not exceeding fifteen lashes.

62. That in all cases where the sentence is discretionary, no General Court-Martial shall adjudge the offender, if a commissioned officer, to suffer any greater punishment than a fine or forfeiture of his pay to the amount of ten pounds, to make proper concessions, or to ask pardon, to be reprimanded or cashiered, or discharged from the service; or if the offender be a non-commissioned officer or private, a forfeiture of his pay for one month, or a fine to the value thereof, close imprisonment not exceeding ten days, or whipping with thirty-nine lashes on the bare back, and drumming out of the company.

63. No sentence of death shall be executed on any offender before the proceedings shall be certified to, and approved by, the Council of Safety, who may, in their discretion, pardon the offender; nor shall any sentence of a General or Inferior Court-Martial for whipping, be executed before the same shall be made known to, and approved by, the commanding officer of the battalion, corps, garrison, or station, to which the offender belongs, and such commanding officer may, in his discretion, remit such punishment.

64. All fines shall be paid into the hands of such persons as shall be directed by the Court-Martial that set the same, and shall be applied to the relief of the sick of the company to which the offender belongs.

65. That these Rules shall be openly and distinctly read at the head of every corps, garrison, company, or part of a company, stationed at any one place, once at least, in every month, under the penalty of twenty pounds on the officer commanding such corps, garrison, company, or part of a company.

Post Meridiem.—Convention met.

On motion, Resolved, That two hundred and forty copies of the Association, ordered by the last Convention to be tendered to and subscribed by the freemen of this Province, be forthwith printed; and that forty of the said copies be sent to the Committee of Observation for Baltimore County, forty of the said copies to the Committee of Observation for the Upper District of Frederick County, and the residue of them in equal proportions to the Committees of the several Counties; and the Committees aforesaid, of Baltimore County and the Upper District of Frederick County, shall cause the said Association to be tendered, on or before the first day of April next, to every freeman in the Hundreds of their County and District, respectively, where the said Association hath not been already generally tendered to the said freemen, to be subscribed by them, according to the Resolutions of the late Convention; and every person who shall not sign the said Association at the time of tendering the same to him, or within ten days thereafter, shall be in the same condition as if the same had been tendered to him according to the said former Resolutions, and he had refused or neglected to have subscribed the same; and the Committee of Observation for each County shall leave one or more of the Association Papers in the custody of some person, or persons, to be by them, respectively, appointed, at some house in their County town, and also at Georgetown and Hagerstown, in Frederick County, and shall give publick notice thereof by advertisements, so that such of the freemen of this Province, who have not done so already, may subscribe the same.

That every freeman within this Province who hath not already, nor before the eleventh day of April next, shall have subscribed the Association aforesaid, shall within five days after the said last mentioned day, deliver up to the Committee of Observation for his County, all his fire-arms, if he hath any, except pistols; and every person who shall neglect to do the same, may be disarmed by order of the Committee of Observation for his County, in like manner as those who ought to enroll in the Militia and refuse to do so, and the arms of the non-Associators shall, and may be, disposed of in the same manner as the arms of those who refuse to enroll in the Militia; and, moreover, the Committee of Observation of each County in this Province, may, in their discretion, award and order any freeman of this Province, not associating as aforesaid, found within their County, whether such freeman be a resident of their County or not, to enter into bond with good and sufficient security, in such penalty as they may think fit, payable to the President of the Convention, for the time being, by name, conditioned, that if such non-Associator shall behave himself peaceably and quietly in the present unhappy contest between Great Britain and the Colonies; that he shall not directly or indirectly betray or give intelligence to the enemy of any councils or preparations of the Congress, or any Convention or Assembly, or Council or Committee of Safety of this or any other Province or Colony; and that he shall not directly or indirectly correspond, by letter, message, or otherwise, during the said contest, with any British Minister, Secretary of State, Member of Parliament, or any person out of this Province, holding an office, civil, or military, immediately under the Crown, or with any other person in arms against these Colonies, knowing such person to be in arms, then the above obligation to be void. But if any such non-Associator shall choose to quit this Province and go beyond sea, then the Committee of Observation of the County to which he belongs, may, and is hereby empowered to grant him a passport to leave this country in peace, and go beyond the sea, carrying with him his property, or any part thereof; and any person refusing to sign the said Association, and to give bond as aforesaid, and continuing to reside within this Province, may be imprisoned by the Committee of Observation of the County in which such non-Associator resides or may be found, until the Convention then next after such imprisonment shall have taken order therein. And in case any non-Associator shall quit this country and leave an Estate in this Province, such Estate shall be burdened with a proportionate part of the expense incurred by this Province in defence of American liberty; but these Resolutions are not to extend to the household of His Excellency the Governour. All which Association Papers that shall be subscribed as aforesaid, as well as a list of the names of all those who shall refuse or neglect to subscribe the same, and all original bonds taken as aforesaid, shall be returned to the next Convention. Provided, That where any person hath not, nor shall actually refuse to subscribe the Association, but shall only have neglected to subscribe the same, if he doth afterwards sign the same before the Committee of Observation of his County, he shall not be disarmed for his neglect, nor compellable to give any such bond as before mentioned.

On motion, Resolved, That where there are any Companies of Militia in the several Counties, which are left out of their Battalions already formed, or where there may be any surplus Companies in the several Counties, after forming the Militia into Battalions, as directed by the last Convention, the Brigadier-General of the District may, at his discretion, form the said Companies into Corps, and return the same to the Council of Safety, who may appoint and commission such Field-Officers as may by them be judged proper and necessary to command such corps.

The following Report was taken into consideration:

The Committee appointed to consider the truth of the facts set forth in a Memorial from the Justices of Baltimore County Court, and report their opinion thereon,

Do Report, That the uneasiness in the minds of many of the Inhabitants of Baltimore County, arises from the uncommon increase of Taxes therein, extraordinary assessments being made for the erecting publick Buildings and Bridges, clearing, straightening, opening, grubbing, and stoning Roads, and paying their proportion towards building a Prison, Court-House, &c., in Harford County.

That sundry Inhabitants of Baltimore County were, and are averse to clearing, opening, and straightening, said Roads, and intended to petition the Legislative Body of this Province for a repeal of the law authorizing the same, or an alteration thereof, in such parts as they apprehended aggrieved them; but being prevented by the unhappy disputes subsisting between the Colonies and Great Britain, from making application for redress of such apprehended grievances, to the Assembly of this Province, they have been led into an unlawful and unwarrantable opposition to the collection of the publick Taxes, which the necessary embargo laid on our ports has tended greatly to increase.

That a great number of the said Inhabitants have paid the said Taxes, and they being imposed by virtue of sundry acts of the Assembly, your Committee are of opinion, the residue of the said Inhabitants are in duty bound to pay those already assessed, as they clearly had it in their power to discharge them, the ports being open, and a price offered for all manner of country produce, till the 10th of September last.

That the remainder of the said money, directed by the said acts of Assembly to be levied, ought, by the Justices of the said County, pursuant to the said acts, to be assessed; but if trade and commerce should not be restored in such manner as to enable the people of the said County to discharge the said taxes, that the legislative authority for the time being ought, in such circumstances, to suspend the payment of the same (except such part thereof as shall be assessed for the paying for the building of the Poor-House and Inspection-House in said County,) or take order therein in such other way as to them shall seem most expedient.

That it is the opinion of this Committee, that the Money appropriated for loan, to the Inhabitants of Baltimore County, for clearing and opening Roads, by act of Assembly, and delivered out by the Commissioners for emitting bills of credit to the Supervisors of said Roads, or so much thereof as hath been unexpended, and all sums levied, or hereafter to be levied, on the Inhabitants of said County, for the purpose of repaying the same, shall be paid into the hands of the said Commissioners, to be by them let out upon interest, (except so much thereof as hath been expended, in the same manner as by the said act they are directed to let out on interest the bills of credit of this Province; and that the said sum of money, so collected, or to be hereafter collected, of the said Inhabitants—except so much thereof as hath been expended) with interest thereon accruing, ought to be appropriated to such use of the said County as shall be ordered and directed by the legislative authority, for the time being.

That the Supervisors of the said Roads, in said County, shall, respectively, render to the said Commissioners, by them to be laid before the legislative authority for the time being, a true, full, and fair account, on oath, of all moneys by them, respectively, laid out and expended, by virtue of the said act of Assembly, and to whom, and for what the same shall have been paid and expended.

That the sum of money collected, or to be collected in said County, for the building of a Prison and Court-House in Harford County, &c., ought to be paid into the hands of the Commissioners of Harford County, aforesaid, and be by them put out on interest, for the use of the same County, until the dispute in the same County, relative to the place where said Prison and Court-House, &c., shall be erected and built, be hereafter determined by the legislative authority for the time being.

All which is submitted to the consideration of the honourable House.

After consideration of the same, the question was put, That the House concur therewith?

Resolved, in the affirmative.

Convention adjourns till to-morrow morning, half after nine o'clock.

Wednesday, January 17, 1776.

Convention met. All Members present, as on yesterday, except Mr. J. Dashiell and Mr. Ware. The Proceedings of yesterday were read.

On motion, Resolved, That the residue of the sum of Money directed by act of Assembly to be assessed and levied on the Inhabitants of Harford County, for building the Court-House, Prison, &c., be, pursuant to said act, assessed and levied by the Justices of said County, on the Inhabitants thereof; but, if trade and commerce shall not be restored, so as to enable the people of said County to discharge the said tax, the legislative authority, for the time being, will suspend the payment of the same, or otherwise order therein, as to them shall seem expedient.

That the money already collected, or hereafter to be collected for the same, shall be paid into the hands of the Commissioners of Harford County, aforesaid, and be by them put out on interest for the use of said County, until the dispute therein, relative to the place where said Court-House and Prison shall be erected, be hereafter determined by the legislative authority for the time being.

Ordered, That Edward Davis be discharged from further custody.

On motion, Resolved, That Captain Thomas Johnson, Junior's, and Captain William Hyde's Company of Militia, in the City of Annapolis, be Independent Companies, but subject to the same rules and regulations as the other Militia of this Province, where such rules and regulations will apply to their circumstances, as well when the said Companies are in actual service as otherwise. And, that Captain Richard Harwood, Junior's, William Brogden's, Edward Tillard's, John Weems's, John Steward's, John Deale's, and Richard Chew's Companies of Militia, in Anne Arundel County, compose a Battalion, any thing in the Resolves of the last Convention, or the Proceedings of the Committee of Observation for Anne Arundel County, to the contrary notwithstanding.

On motion, Resolved, That there be a District in Frederick County, bounded on the east by Licking Creek, to include all that part of the said County which lies to the west of the said Creek.

That the freemen, and others, entitled to vote for Delegates in Convention, by the Resolves of the last Convention, meet at Skipton, in the said District, on a day to be appointed, and choose, by ballot, one discreet and sensible freeman, of the said District, to join the other Delegates from Frederick County, and vote in Conventions hereafter to be held for this Province.

That the said election be held under the inspection of such persons as may be chosen and appointed by the freemen of that District for the purpose, and be conducted in the same manner, and under the same rules, as laid down by the last Convention for choosing Delegates.

That the freemen of the said District choose fifteen discreet and sensible men, of the same District, to be a Committee for the said District, any seven of them to act; and that the election be made agreeable to the Resolves of the last Convention.

On reading a second time the Petition from the Inhabitants of the City of Annapolis,

Resolved, That the same be referred for consideration till the next session of Convention.

Adjourned till three o'clock.

Post Meridiem. Convention met.

Resolved, That this Convention do highly disapprove of the negligence of many of the People of this Province, in not paying off their levies, which ought to have been paid and discharged the last Summer; and much more so, of the combinations in some few parts of this Province, against the payment of levies; such conduct evidently leading to throw this Province into the disorder, confusion, and anarchy, desired by the inveterate enemies, and dreaded by the real friends to American liberty.

Resolved, therefore, That this Convention will, if necessary, aid the officers with their utmost power, in the collection of the levies which ought to have been paid in the Summer past; yet those officers are requested not to distrust the effects of those whose extreme poverty disables them from paying.

Resolved, That the Justices of the several County Courts ought to assess the Inhabitants of their Counties, agreeable to the acts of Assembly of this Province; but, as the People may not be able, if the unhappy differences with Great Britain should continue, to pay the whole of the assessments for building Court-Houses, Churches, and for the like extraordinary charges, and a Convention will, probably, again meet before the time of payment, the legislative authority, for the time being, will make further order, as to the payment of such assessments, as the circumstances of the people may require, and the application of the money assessed will admit; it being the fixed intention of this Convention to support order in the community, and ease the good people of this Province as far as possible.

On reading the following application of John Archer and James Harris, of Harford County:

"December 6, 1775.

"GENTLEMEN: We are fully convinced of the publick utility of Factories, and would, therefore, make an overture to you, to undertake a Flax or Hemp Manufactory.

"To carry on the above branch of business to any effect, we should stand in need of three hundred pounds, which we would engage to remit in linen, of such sizes as you would recommend, at the following times:

"One-third of the above sum the 1st of June next; one-third more on the 1st of September; and the remaining third the 1st of December, 1776. The cost we will cheerfully transmit therewith, and leave the price to the honourable Convention.

"JOHN ARCHER,
"JAMES HARRIS.

"To the Delegates of Harford County, now sitting in Convention."

Resolved, That the sum of three hundred Pounds, out of the Treasury of this Province, be advanced to the said John Archer and James Harris, agreeable to their application aforesaid, on their giving bond, with good security, payable to the Honourable Matthew Tighman, Esq., Thomas Johnson, Jun., and Charles Carroll, Barrister, Esquires, conditioned for the performance of the terms in the said application mentioned.

Resolved, That a new election of two Representatives, for Charles County, in the room of William Smallwood and Francis Ware, Esquires, a new election of one Representative for St. Mary's County, in the room of John Allen Thomas, Esq., and one in Cecil County, in the room of Nathaniel Ramsey, Esq., whose seats will become vacant on their acceptance of commissions in the Regular Forces of this Province, be had, as soon as conveniently may be, in the presence of two, or more, of the Delegates of those Counties, respectively; the elections to be by ballot, and in like manner as the election of Delegates is directed by Resolutions of the last Convention, ten days' notice, at least, excluding the day of notice and day of election, of the times of each of the said elections, respectively, being given, by advertisements set up in the most publick places in the said Counties.

On motion, Resolved, That in all cases where judgments have been, or shall be obtained, (except in ejectment, trespass, trover, replevin, detinue, real actions, actions for words, for money, and tobacco, actually had and received by one person for the use of another, attachment under the late act of Assembly, and against non-residents, and actions upon Loan Office bonds,) the Creditor shall, at his election, have a right to demand of the Debtor a bond, with security, for the debt and costs of the said Judgments, or to take, by ieri facias, any tobacco, wheat, or corn, (but no other effects,) of the Debtor, leaving to such Debtor sufficient to support his family; but, that no capias ad satisfaciendum be issued, in any case, (except in the cases above excepted,) where the Debtor will give bond and security, when required, as aforesaid, or where the effects, aforesaid, are tendered to the Creditor, at such price as may be settled by the Committee of Observation for the County in which such Debtor resides.

On motion, Resolved, That all Rents, other than Rents for Houses, may be hereafter paid, and shall be received, in tobacco, and other country produce, at a reasonable value, to be set by the Committees of Observation; and that no Rents ought to be changed into money, from tobacco, and other country produce, in which they have been, heretofore, usually paid.

Resolved, That seven persons, four of whom residing upon the Western, and three upon the Eastern Shore, be chosen, by ballot, to constitute a Council of Safety, for the Province of Maryland, to superintend and execute the Resolutions of this Convention, and to promote the prudent and necessary preparations for the defence and protection of the said Province, and to give such necessary assistance to the neighbouring Colonies as may, by the said Council be judged proper.

That each member of the said Council of Safety be allowed and paid fourteen Shillings, common money, out of the Treasury of this Province, for every day such member shall sit, or be absent from home on publick business.

That any four or more of the said Council of Safety convened, or the major part of them, direct and regulate the operations of the Regular Forces, the Minute-Men and Militia of this Province, and may grant all military commissions, appoint and commission all Field and Commission Officers, and regulate the rank of all Military Officers, not appointed by this Convention, and, in the recess of Convention, call forth the Regular Forces aforesaid, and Minute-Men into action in any place, or places, within this or the neighbouring Provinces, and the Militia into action in any place, or places, within this Province, at such time and times, in such proportions, and on such occasions as the said Council may judge necessary, and do all such other matters and things for the defence, protection and security of this Province, and for the aid and assistance of the neighbouring Provinces, as they shall deem necessary and expedient.

That any Officer of the said Regular Forces, Minute-Men, or Militia, may be suspended from the exercise of his commission by the said Council of Safety, and if the said Council of Safety shall think proper, they may displace any Officer, and appoint and commission another in his stead, and may, on the death, resignation, or removal of any Officer in the Regular Forces, Minute-Men, or Militia, appoint and commission another in his stead, and the said Council of Safety may fill up all vacancies in the Regular Troops aforesaid, Minute-Men and Militia, by whatever means occasioned.

That the said Council of Safety be authorized and empowered to draw out of the bills of credit emitted, or ordered to be emitted by this Convention, (except such part thereof as is appropriated to call in and exchange the bills of credit emitted by the last Convention,) any sum, or sums, which may by them be judged necessary to carry the several Resolutions of this Convention into execution, for paying and discharging all contracts made, or to be made, for, and on behalf of, this Province, and for the defence and protection of this Province, or for paying and defraying the expenses of any part of the said Regular Troops and Minute-Men, which may be ordered to any of the neighbouring Provinces.

That the said Council of Safety have power and authority to arrest, and, on hearing, confine and imprison till the next Convention, all such persons within this Province as shall have been, or may be, guilty of high and dangerous offences, tending to disunite the people of this Province in their present opposition, or to destroy the liberties of America; and, also, have power and authority to hear, try and imprison till the end of the next Convention, or banish all such offenders, guilty of the offence aforesaid, as may be sent to them by the several Committees of Observation.

That the said Council of Safety have full power and authority to pardon all offenders upon whom sentence of death shall be pronounced by a Court-Martial, under the Rules passed by this Convention for governing the Forces raised, or to be raised, within this Province, for the defence thereof.

That the said Council of Safety may call a meeting of the Convention of Maryland before the time to which it may be adjourned, and that any two Members may call a meeting of the said Council of Safety.

That the said Council of Safety may draw upon the Treasuries of the Western and Eastern Shores for all charges and expenses incurred in the execution of their office.

That the said Council of Safety sit constantly, if the service requires it, and that their ordinary sessions be held at the City of Annapolis or Baltimore Town, but the place of sitting may be changed, at the discretion of the said Council, to any other part of the Province, where the publick service may require it.

That every Member of the said Council of Safety, before he enters on the execution of his office, take, before some Justice of the Peace, the following oath, to wit: "You, A. B., do swear, that any matter or thing which shall come to your knowledge as a Member of the Council of Safety; which is ordered to be kept secret by a majority of the said Council of Safety, you will not divulge, unless to the Deputies in Congress for this Province, with the permission of the said Council of Safety, or to a Convention of Delegates, or Member of the said Council of Safety, or with the permission of the said Council of Safety or Convention. So help you God." And that the Clerk of the said Council of Safety shall take an oath in the said form, except instead of the words, "as a Member of the Council of Safety," inserting, "as Clerk to the Council of Safety."

That the said Council of Safety continue till the end of the next Convention, and no longer, unless otherwise ordered by the next Convention, and that they render an account of their Proceedings, and always be subject to the control of the Convention.

That the Honourable Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., and Charles Carroll, Barrister, John Hall, and Benjamin Rumsey, Esquires, of the Western Shore, and James Tilghman, Thomas Smyth, and Thomas Bedingfield Hands, Esquires, of the Eastern Shore, be the said Council of Safety.

That if any person, or persons, elected or appointed to be of the said Council of Safety, shall decline or refuse to act, or shall die before the next Convention, the other Members of the said Council of Safety, (being four at the least,) may elect and appoint one other in the room of each person who shall so decline, or refuse to act, or die, which person, or persons, so elected and appointed, shall take the same oath, and have the same powers and authorities, in conjunction with the other Members, as are given by this Convention to the said Council.

The Journal of Accounts was read and assented to.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of the Western Shore pay the several Claims allowed in the same.

Convention adjourns till to-morrow morning, half after nine o'clock.

Thursday, January 18, 1776.

Convention met. All Members present as on yesterday, except Mr. W. Enalls, Mr. G. Dashiell, Mr. Potter, Mr. Dickinson, and Mr. Mason. The Proceedings of yesterday were read.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of the Western Shore pay to Mr. Edward Parker, of Cecil County, or his order, out of the bills of credit in his hands, three hundred Pounds, common money, to enable him to carry on his Linen and Woollen Manufactory.

Whereas, it is necessary for securing the evidences of the property of the good people of this Province, that the Records of the Land Office, Secretary's, and Commissary's Offices; and, also, the Records of Anne Arundel County Court, should be removed from the City of Annapolis to some place of greater security,

Resolved, That the Council of Safety send the said Records, packed in chests, by the respective Clerks, to some fit and secure place, first having prepared a proper house for the reception of the same, and that the said Council commit the said Records to the care and management of one of the Clerks of the said offices, respectively.

Resolved, That each of the said Clerks so employed by the Council of Safety, do, respectively, take the care and management of the Records of the office to which he belongs, and deliver copies of the said Records to the people of this Province, when thereunto required, upon being paid for the same.

Resolved, That any extraordinary expenses of the said Clerks, in taking care of the said Records, be paid by the Convention of this Province.

On motion, Resolved, That such young gentlemen as resort to the Regular Troops, in the quality of Volunteers, or Cadets, with the consent of the Colonel of the Battalion, for their improvement in the art of war, be furnished with one ration per day, each, at the publick expense.

On motion, Resolved, That the Committees of Observation for the several Counties may remove the Records of their respective Counties to some place of safety, if they think proper.

The Convention took into consideration the King's Speech to Parliament, on the 27th day of October last, and after some time spent therein,

Resolved, unanimously, That the following Declaration be entered on their Journals:

We, the Delegates of the Freemen of Maryland, in Convention, affected with the deepest concern by the opinion declared in the King's Speech to Parliament, on the 27th day of October last, and expressed in the Address of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal to His Majesty, in answer thereto, that the necessary preparations for defence made by these Colonies, are carried on for the purpose of establishing an independent empire, and being desirous to remove from the mind of the King an opinion which we feel to be highly injurious to the People of this Province, and to declare and manifest to His Majesty, to the Parliament, the People of Great Britain, and to the whole world, the rectitude and purity of our intentions in the present opposition to the measures of the British Ministry and Parliament, do declare,

That the People of this Province, strongly attached to the English Constitution, and truly sensible of the blessings they have derived from it, warmly impressed with sentiments of affection for, and loyalty to, the House of Hanover, connected with the British nation by the ties of blood and interest, and being thoroughly convinced, that to be free subjects of the King of Great Britain, with all its consequences, is to be the freest members of any civil society in the known world, never did, nor do entertain any views or desires of independency.

That as they consider their union with the Mother Country, upon terms that may insure to them a permanent freedom, as their highest felicity, so would they view the fatal necessity of separating from her, as a misfortune next to the greatest that can befall them.

Descended from Britons, entitled to the privileges of Englishmen, and inheriting the spirit of their ancestors, they have seen, with the most extreme anxiety, the attempts of Parliament to deprive them of those privileges, by raising a revenue upon them, and assuming a power to alter the Charters, Constitutions, and internal polity of the Colonies without their consent. The endeavours of the British Ministry to carry those attempts into execution, by military force, have been their only motive for taking up arms; and defend themselves against those endeavours, is the only use they mean to make of them. Entitled to freedom, they are determined to maintain it at the hazard of their lives and fortunes.

Ordered, That James Hollyday, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, and Gustavus Scott, Esquires, revise the Journal and Proceedings of this Convention, and direct what parts thereof shall be published.

Convention adjourns till the second Tuesday in April next, to sit at this place, but the Council of Safety may convene the Convention at any other time, or place, if they shall judge it necessary.

Signed by order of the Convention:

GABRIEL DUVAL, Clerk.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO THE COMMITTEE OF LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA.

January 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress have received your several letters of December 21st, January 3d, and 10th. A multiplicity of important business has retarded their answering them sooner.

Your civility to the officers who are prisoners, in giving them time to make choice of their places of residence, and permitting them to remain with you till their baggage shall arrive, is approved. Their complaint, that a separation from the soldiers is a breach of General Schuyler's solemn engagement, we apprehend not to be well-founded. All the stipulations of a capitulation ought, undoubtedly, to be held sacred, and faithfully fulfilled, because something is then given up or received, as a condition or equivalent; but no such stipulation is to be found in the capitulations upon which those gentlemen surrendered; nor had General Schuyler a right to make fresh terms with his prisoners, after they were in his power, without the consent of the Congress. Nevertheless, we should have paid a respect to his opinion and advice in the matter, had he given it, but we have not heard a word from him on the subject.

We have no objection to your permitting two or more of the officers to come, at proper times, from their places of residence to Lancaster, for the purpose of settling with, and paying, their soldiers. Major Preston, being applied to, absolutely refuses to supply the soldiers with clothing or blanketing. We must, therefore, desire you will take care that they do not suffer for want of those articles, nor any other that are necessary for their comfortable subsistence in this inclement season. What you have already done of that kind, in furnishing them with firing, bedding, &c., is well approved, and the expenses will be defrayed. The inhabitants are at liberty to purchase bills drawn by the officers for their support and accommodation; but this is to be at the risk of the purchasers, and not to exceed what is, evidently, necessary for these purposes, wherein it is to be considered the Congress advances each officer two dollars a week for his subsistence.

We approve of your regulations for preserving the peace of the Borough, and of your placing a guard and ordering a patrol for that purpose, the expense of which will be paid.

The agent of the Army's Contractor refusal to supply the soldiers' wives and children with any meat or bread, surprises us. We know not the motives of such conduct, but we must approve of those humane sentiments which induced you to provide for them in their distress. The expenses will be allowed in your accounts.

Upon the whole, gentlemen, you have judged rightly in supposing that every measure you have taken, to render the situation of our prisoners as comfortable as possible, would be agreeable to us. As men, they have a claim to all the rights of humanity; as countrymen, though enemies, they claim something more. You have, therefore, the thanks of the Congress; and I am, in their behalf, gentlemen, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Committee of Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

JOHN HANCOCK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 18, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Captain F. Gurney, has the charge of conducting five hundred thousand dollars for the use of the Army under your command. I wish it safe to hand. I shall, this evening, despatch an express to you with sundry matters of importance.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO ESECK HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, January 18, 1776.

SIR: As this, perhaps, may be the last opportunity we may have to write you before you go to sea, we thought it necessary to give you every intelligence that is come to our knowledge. We shall first give you the disagreeable intelligence, brought hither by an express from Quebeck, of an unsuccessful attack that was made to storm that city on the 31st of December, in the morning, in which General Montgomery, his Aid-de-camp, Captain Macpherson, and Captain Cheeseman, both by his side, were all shot instantly dead by the grape-shot of one cannon; upon which, his party rather deserted their duty. Colonel Arnold, who conducted a different attack, proceeded awhile, successfully; but, upon his receiving a wound, and falling, after he had entered the city, (although the party were afterwards commanded and behaved with great bravery,) by the other attack failing, were overpowered and surrounded by numbers, and, after a most gallant defence of four hours, were obliged to surrender themselves prisoners of war, and, we hear, are very kindly treated by General Carleton. This is the substance of what we heard from thence.

We have just received a report from New-York, that three men-of-war and eighteen transports had sailed from Boston, to what place not known, but supposed to be for Newport, New-York, or Virginia; thus much of the report is certain, that the Asia and Phenix are lying in the East-River, in New-York, and that the Viper is lying at Sandy-Hook. From Virginia we have heard nothing material, but what you are well acquainted with. From the Carolinas we are informed that Lord William Campbell, with the Tamer, sloop, and Cherokee, cutter, has departed from Charlestown Road; that Governor Martin, in the Scorpion, sloop-of-war, has also departed from Cape-Fear. It is supposed that both these are gone to Savannah, in Georgia, in order to seduce the Province, if it is in their power, from the union of these Colonies, and get provisions, if they can, to subsist on. Should it be your fate to go southward, as far as Savannah, it is very probable you may have these Governors to dine with you on board your own ship, and increase your naval strength by the Tamer, Scorpion, and Cherokee.

The Congress have determined to erect a splendid monument to the memory of the gallant Montgomery, and to every other commanding officer bravely fighting and falling in his country's cause.

We wish you a successful cruise, and are your sincere friends,

STEPHEN HOPKINS,
JOSEPH HEWES,
SILAS DEANE.

To the Honourable Eseck Hopkins, Esq., Commander-in-chief of the American Fleet.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 18, 1776.

SIR: On Saturday evening Colonel Heard communicated to me the orders of Congress of the 10th instant, relative to my furnishing him with three companies to join the Minute-Men on the expedition into Queen's County. The next morning I went over to Woodbridge, to concert with Colonel Heard the necessary manoeuvres, and agreed to furnish the companies strong, as his party was rather deficient. He has now with him near three hundred of my regiment, completely armed, accoutred, and provisioned for four days. As the men of my regiment went partly from Brunswick and Amboy, as well as this place, I thought it best, yesterday morning, after regulating the embarkation from the Point, to go to Staten-Island to regulate the like there, and to assist Colonel Heard in whatever might be necessary. I had sent off a party of thirty-six men the evening before to guard the mouth of the Kills. About eleven, yesterday, the first division, notwithstanding the most boisterous wind, crossed over to Bergen Point; Colonel Heard followed about noon; Major De Hart, with the first division of my regiment, followed soon after; and the whole, who had passed, marched for Bergen town. The wind continued extremely violent; night coming on, and the men much fatigued, I ordered the remainder to halt, and be quartered in the several parts of the Island they then were. At daybreak this morning, those on Staten-Island began to pass over. I remained there till about noon, when the chief of the whole had passed over to Bergen Point, and then came to this place. I am this moment informed, that the first division landed safely in the City of New-York yesterday evening from Paulus Hook; that Major De Hart, with about two hundred of my regiment, landed there about eleven this evening; and that the rest were following them, without the least movement about the men-of-war, or any of their boats. I have high confidence in Colonel Heard's management of this affair, yet I cannot but regret that I have not the command of it. However, I shall always most implicitly obey the order of Congress, and endeavour to serve the cause by every exertion in my power.

I have the honour to be your most humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY (CONNECTICUT) CONVENTION.

At a County Convention held at Fairfield, in and for Fairfield County, on the 18th day of January, 1776, Jonathan Sturges, Esq., Chairman.

This Convention, taking into consideration the Resolves of the Continental Congress, lately published, dated the 2d day of January, 1776, and attending to the true meaning and spirit thereof, and the principles of humanity and kindness therein recommended; and, also, taking into consideration an Act of the General Assembly of this Colony, passed in their last sessions, entitled "An Act for restraining and punishing persons who are inimical to the liberties of this and the rest of the United Colonies, &c.,"

Resolved, That all those persons who have, heretofore, been advertised as enemies to their country, or otherwise proceeded against as such, shall be restored to the esteem and friendship of the country: Provided, They honestly and sincerely declare to the Committee of Inspection in their respective towns where such persons dwell, or to the Committee of Correspondence, where there is no Committee of Inspection, that they will abide by the Continental Regulations, in every case where they are not hindered by a religious tie of conscience; and that they will, in no case, directly or indirectly, oppose the country in the measures taking for its defence. The honesty and sincerity of such declaration to be left to the Committees aforesaid; and their fire-arms shall be restored them whenever they shall engage in the defence of the County, if any have been disarmed.

For the more effectually carrying into execution the Continental Association, it is resolved and recommended, that no forcible measures ought to be used to prevent any mischief, or remove any difficulty, where no express provision is made by the Act of the General Assembly, or of the Continental Congress, before the Committee of Inspection of the town where such difficulty happens, or of the next adjoining town, wherever it shall happen that any town is destitute of such Committee, be consulted, and their advice be attended to and pursued, where such advice may be had before it be too late to prevent any mischief; that every thing may be done with good order and decency.

A true copy from the Minutes:

ANDREW ROWLAND, Clerk.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, January 18, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed is copy of intelligence brought me in the evening of the 16th instant, on which I immediately convened my Council of Safety. On consideration of the necessity of a reinforcement in that quarter, have agreed to raise a regiment of seven hundred and fifty men, officers included, with all possible expedition, by voluntary enlistments, on the same encouragements given by the Continent, to serve until the 1st November next, unless sooner discharged, with expectation that the General Congress will take the same into their service. It seemed necessary that no time be lost. Have set the same forward, until we can be made acquainted whether other provisions are made that may render this step unnecessary, or what may be suggested to us on the subject. Please to favour me with your answer by this express.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Montreal, January 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: With the greatest distress of mind, I now sit down to inform you of the event of an unfortunate attack made upon Quebeck, between the hours of four and six, of the morning of the 31st of December; unfortunate, indeed, for us; in it fell our brave General, Montgomery, his Aid-de-camp, Macpherson, Captain Cheeseman, Captain Hendricks, of the riflemen, and two or three subaltern officers, and between sixty and a hundred privates, (the number not certainly known,) and about three hundred officers and soldiers taken prisoners, among which are Lieutenant-Colonel Greene, Major Bigelow, Major Meigs, and a number of Captains and inferior officers. Colonel Arnold was wounded in the leg, in the beginning of the action, as was Major Ogden, in the shoulder, and brought off to the General Hospital.

I have not time to give you all the particulars, but thus much will serve to show you that, in consequence of this defeat, our prospects are rendered very dubious; and, unless we can be quickly reinforced, perhaps they may be fatal, not only to us, who are stationed here, but, also, to the Colonies in general; the frontiers, especially, greatly, very greatly, depend upon keeping possession of this country.

You know, as well as any man, the temper, disposition, and character of the Canadians; they are not persevering in adversity; that they are not to be depended upon, but, like the Savages, are extremely fond of choosing the strongest party: add to this, our enemies in this country, of whom there are very many, use every method to excite the Canadians against us; among other things, they tell them that the United Colonies intend to abandon the country. The clergy refuse absolution to all who have shown themselves our friends, and preach up damnation to all those who will not take up arms against us, and tell them that, even now, it is not too late; that we are but a handful of men, &c., &c.

I have sent an express to General Schuyler, General Washington, and the Congress; but you know how far they have to go, and that it is very uncertain how long it will be before we can have relief from them; therefore, let me beg of you, to collect, immediately, as many men as you can find, (six or seven hundred, if it can be done,) and, some how or other, get into this country, and stay with us till we can have relief from the Colonies.

You are sensible we have provisions, of all kinds, enough, and the weather, in this country, is far, very far, from being so frightful as many have imagined.

You will see that proper officers and soldiers are appointed under you, and both officers and soldiers shall be paid as other Continental troops. It would be well for your men to set out as fast as they can be collected; not so much matter whether together, or not; but let them set out by tens, twenties, thirties, forties, or fifties, as they can be first collected, for it must have a good effect upon the minds of the Canadians, to see succours coming on.

You will be good enough to send copies of this letter to the people below you.

DAVID WOOSTER.

To Colonel Warner.

January 15, 1776.

The foregoing is a copy of a letter sent, by express, from General Wooster to Colonel Warner, and from thence forwarded to me.

We are raising men here, to go to Montreal, as soon as possible. Doubt not but you will think it of importance that recruits be immediately sent up, and hope you will forward as many as possible from your regiment.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

MARK HOPKINS.

To Colonel Barrett.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, January 18, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received your favour of the 13th instant, with its enclosures, and am heartily sorry, and most sincerely condole with you, upon the unhappy fall of the brave and worthy Montgomery, and those gallant officers and men who have experienced a like fate. In the death of this gentleman, America has sustained a heavy loss, as he had approved himself a steady friend to her rights, and of ability to render her the most essential service.

I am much concerned for the intrepid and enterprising Arnold, and greatly fear that consequences, of the most alarming nature, will result from this well-intended, but unfortunate attempt.

It would give me the greatest happiness, if I could be the happy means of relieving our fellow-citizens now in Canada, and preventing the Ministerial troops from exulting long, and availing themselves of the advantages arising from this repulse; but it is not in my power, since the dissolution of the old Army. The progress in raising recruits for the new has been so very slow and inconsiderable, that five thousand Militia have been called in to the defence of our lines. A great part of these are gone home, the time they engaged for being expired, and the rest retained with the utmost difficulty and persuasion, though their going away would render the holding of them precarious and hazardous, in case of an attack. In short, I have not a man to spare.

In order that proper measures might be adopted, I called a council of General Officers, and upon Mr. John Adams, and other members of influence of the General Courts, and laid before them your letter and proposition. After due consideration of their importances, they determined that the Province of Massachusetts, and Colonies of Connecticut and New-Hampshire, should each, immediately, raise a regiment, to continue in service for one year, and to march, forthwith, to Canada, agreeable to the route proposed in your letter to Congress. This determination, with a copy of your letter, and the several enclosures, will be immediately transmitted to the different Governments, for raising those regiments, which I have reason to believe will be complied with, from the assurances I have received from such of the Members of the Court as attended in Council, and the General Officers promising to exert their utmost interest and influence in their respective Colonies.

If these regiments should not be raised so soon as I could wish, yet, I would willingly hope, from the accounts we have received, that Colonel Arnold and his corps will be joined by a number of men under Colonel Warner, and from Connecticut, who, it is said, marched off directly on their getting intelligence of this melancholy affair. If this account be true, I trust they will be in a situation to oppose and prevent Mr. Carleton from regaining possession of what he has lost, and that, upon the arrival of the reinforcement from these Colonies, which we have judged necessary to be sent, the city of Quebeck will be reduced to our possession. This ought to be effected before the Winter is entirely over, otherwise it will be exceedingly difficult, if not impracticable, as the enemy will, undoubtedly, place a strong garrison there. Should this desirable work be accomplished, our conquest in that quarter will be complete. But, yet, the loss of General Montgomery will ever be remembered.

It gives me pleasure to find that you will continue in service, and afford your assistance to relieve your country from the distresses which, at present, threaten her in the North. I am much obliged by your sending the clothing, but they are not arrived.

None of the letters give an account how this unfortunate affair ended. In Colonel Campbell's letter of the 31st ultimo, the division which Colonel Greene was in, he seems to think, was in a very disagreeable situation, and drawing it off at night, or throwing in a party to sustain it, was an object he had much in view; here his information stops. In his letter of the 2d January, he says nothing about it. Wishing for the best, I hope they have not fallen a sacrifice. But I dread further intelligence in the matter.

General Putnam is of opinion, that it will be better for the troops which may be raised in the western parts of Connecticut to go by Albany, than the route you have mentioned, by Number 4, and that you must have pointed out this way from a supposition that the reinforcement would be detached from this Army. You will please to consider of what he has said, and, if you concur with him in sentiments, inform Governour Trumbull of it by letter, that he may give the necessary orders.

I am, dear sir, with great respect and esteem, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

COLONEL ENOS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Cambridge, January 18, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: When the hostilities of our enemies made it necessary to raise an Army, for the common defence of the liberties of America, roused by the sacred call of my country, I thought it my duty to exert my best abilities, acquired by former services, for its protection, and, therefore, without reluctance, bid adieu to the tranquil pleasures of private life, and joined the Army, in which I served during the last campaign, (if not with good fortune, at least without censure,) and should have been happy still to have continued in the publick service, in a military capacity, could I do it with that confidence which, I think, I am entitled to, and without which no man of honour would choose to serve.

By some misfortune or other, I am satisfied I do not stand in that character, at Head-Quarters, which, as a Field-Officer, is necessary to my being serviceable to the great cause in which we are engaged; I must, therefore, beg your Excellency's permission to resign my command, as Lieutenant-Colonel of the Sixteenth Regiment, to which I was appointed for the present campaign. No dislike to the service, but a regard to my honour, solely, is the motive of this request.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient, very humble servant,

ROGER ENOS.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General, and Commander-in-chief of the Forces of the Thirteen United Colonies.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Winter-Hill, January 18, 1776.

MUCH ESTEEMED GENTLEMEN: It is with the most sensible pain I sit down to write you the melancholy tidings of our Army's being defeated at Quebeck, on the 31st December, with the loss of one hundred and fifty killed and wounded, (according to the best accounts we can collect,) and between three and four hundred taken prisoners; among the latter, are a number of our intrepid New-Hampshire friends, who marched from thence with Colonel Arnold. The whole of his party, except himself, and some few that retired with him when he was wounded, are either killed or taken prisoners. The brave, the intrepid, but, alas! too unfortunate General Montgomery, fell, and, with his departing spirit, courage and resolution forsook the troops he commanded. He attacked the lower town of Quebeck, at the Point Diamond; on the opposite side Colonel Arnold, with his party, attacked a place called St. Roque, and, after an hour's engagement, carried a two-gun battery, with the loss of about twenty, killed and wounded.

They then attacked a second battery, and carried it, sword in hand; but gaining the second battery proved their defeat, for, by possessing themselves of that, they advanced beyond the Palace Gate, that leads from the upper town to the lower, from which the enemy immediately issued, and, falling on their rear, drove them into the lower town, from whence they could not escape, as the enemy were possessed of the passage through which they entered; and, on the opposite side, the unfortunate Montgomery's parties were defeated, and had retired, so that the victors, turning round to oppose, brought the small, but brave and resolute party between two fires. They took possession of the lower town about seven in the morning, and, though exposed to a fire in front and rear, as I mentioned, as, also, to a fire in flank, from the upper town, they bravely maintained their ground till night, when, despairing of succour, and growing weary of slaughter, they surrendered themselves prisoners of war.

The brave Montgomery, with his Aid-de-camp, were killed the first fire, and, I believe, that struck such a damp on his party, that little more was done by them.

Colonel Livingston, with his party of Canadians, made a feigned attack on the upper town, to favour the real attacks on the lower; but this was extremely ill executed. You will soon hear more particularly about the matter, and how the whole country is in motion to assist our friends there. All the people west of Springfield are gone. Colonel Warner, with his Green-Mountain Boys, marched, immediately, to join the party which they had left, by being, (as they thought,) ill-used by General Montgomery.

You will find, by the enclosed letter, that the General Council have determined that a regiment from each of the frontiers of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, are to march, with all possible expedition, to secure our conquests, and, if possible, retrieve the honour of the American arms. This resolution induced us to release one of the regiments wrote for in my last, to serve here two months, and, instead thereof, for New-Hampshire to furnish one here, and one for Canada, the latter to be enlisted for twelve months. I have a prospect of raising one for this place, from among the recruits here, in the manner I formerly mentioned; so you need give yourselves no other trouble about that, but advancing, upon the credit of the Continent, a month's pay, advance, which beg you to do.

The party going for Canada, I suppose General Washington has called upon you to furnish them with money, &c. Upon my soul, it gives me pain to find that our Continental chest is so often empty, and that parsimony and indolence, which has destroyed so many powerful States, is but too likely to destroy ours. To this, alone, was owing that fatal defeat at Quebeck, as the deceased Montgomery's letters will fully show, for he seemed to prophesy his defeat from the want of money to pay off the troops.

I have selected officers for the regiment to be stationed here, as I mentioned, (Captains Waldron, Chesley, and Place,) to take the command as Field-Officers, and have taken some of the best Captains and Subalterns.

I should rejoice if Captain Mooney would, in conjunction with the bearer, Lieutenant Clough, and two subalterns, appointed by you, or them, undertake to bring in a company. The residue I can furnish myself, without giving you any trouble, except what I mention.

With respect to the regiment bound to Canada, you will excuse my suggesting the necessity of raising that in the western parts of the Colony. Colonel William Stark now happens to be in camp, and says he can, undoubtedly, raise the men. He is well acquainted with the country, and with the nature of such a march. I would, therefore, for the good of the service, beg leave to recommend him, unless you have some other person, more suitable, in view. I have directed him to wait on your Honours, and receive your commands.

Captain John Parker, who was here some days since, was soliciting license from General Washington, and myself, to raise four or five companies, and march to Canada; we, knowing of no necessity therefor, refused him. Perhaps he may be of some advantage in raising men; but many among you know the man, and his communication. All these hints I throw out for the good of the service; I have no particular person in view, barely for his own sake. The good of my country is what I mean to promote: where I mistake the proper means to attain that desirable end, you will please to correct me, as an ignorant offender, and believe me to be, as I really am, a true friend to my country, and your much obliged and humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the General Assembly of New-Hampshire.

P. S. The General has enclosed you copies of most of the important letters from Canada. My extreme hurry will, I hope, apologize for incorrectness.

Yours,

J. S.

JOSEPH MAYHEW TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Chilmark, January 18, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: Judging it to be of importance to the County of Dukes, whereto I belong, that the honourable Council of this Colony be informed of the state of civil affairs here, I think it to be my duty to give your Honour the following intelligence, with respect hereto, to be by your Honour communicated, if you shall think fit.

Now, four, out of the nine, commissioned to be Justices in this County, viz: Jonathan Allen, John Worth, Enoch Coffin, and Thomas Cook, Esquires, and, also, William Mayhew, Esq., appointed Sheriff, and Mr. Robert Allen, appointed Coroner, remain unsworn, appearing unwilling to be so, and neither of them, except Jonathan Allen, Esq., being present, when the other civil officers here were sworn, which was done on the 22d of November last.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. IV.

Of the five Justices who have been sworn, two, viz: Ebenezer Smith and Bariah Norton, Esquires, live at Edgartown; and two, viz: James Athearn and Shubael Cotter, Esquires, at Tisbury, and 1, only, at Chilmark; and the only person Coroner, Mr. Ebenezer Norton, lives at Edgartown.

As I have thus informed your Honour who, of those who have been commissioned to be civil officers, have declined being sworn, I hope it will not be thought impertinent if I account for this in the following manner:

The real state of things here, sir, as I apprehend, is this: There are some here who are really not well-affected to the present Government, nor to the measures now pursued in defence of our civil liberties, and these ill-affected persons endeavour to embarrass the establishing of civil government in this County, and, through their suggestions, in part, at least, many persons here, perhaps near one-half of the people of this County, imagine that it is best for us, considering our situation, to be still, and in no way to show ourselves to be on the side of the assertors of our civil liberties, lest we, thereby, provoke the invaders of our coasts to ruin us; and it is (as, I think, I have sufficient reason to believe,) through such an apprehension as this, that so many of those, who have been lately appointed civil officers, are unwilling to be sworn.

I mean, sir, that many here were thus intimidated, till the honourable General Assembly of this Colony discovered their late resolution, with respect to the defence of this country; but how far people here, are, hereby, emboldened to appear in defence of their rights and liberties, I cannot yet tell. And as, for aught I know, some, or all of those whom I have above-mentioned, are unwilling to be sworn, may have their fears so far removed as to manifest a desire to have the oath administered to them, and I am at a loss what we, who are empowered to administer the oath, ought to do in this case, I am very desirous of the direction of the honourable Council herein.

As to a Sheriff for this County, about the want of which officer here, I am peculiarly concerned. I hope it will not appear assuming in me, if I mention Major Peter Norton as a suitable, and, perhaps, all things considered, the most suitable person to be Sheriff of this County, and, also, to be Colonel of the Regiment of Militia here, the latter of which offices, he, as I perceive, prefers. And if he is not made Sheriff, I humbly propose that he be made a Justice of the Peace at least, if not a Justice of the Peace also, for this County. A great part of this letter may, perhaps, appear as a vain repetition of what I wrote above a month ago to the Hon. Colonel Otis, as President of the honourable Council; but having reason, sir, to fear that my letter has miscarried, I have thought it proper for me to write as above.

This, honoured sir, with great respect and deference to the honourable Council, and to your Honour in particular, is from, honoured sir, your Honour's most obedient, and most humble servant,

JOSEPH MAYHEW.

To the Honourable President of the Council.

CAPTAINS SALTER AND DANIELS' RETURN OF SHOALERS.

In Congress, at Exeter, January 5, 1776.

Voted, That Captain Titus Salter and Captain Eliphalet Daniels, be appointed to go over to the Isle of Shoals, and inform all the inhabitants there, that it is the opinion of this Congress that the situation of the said islands is such, that the inhabitants are exposed to our enemies in the present unhappy controversy, and may be obliged by their weak, defenceless circumstances, and inability to defend themselves, to assist our enemies; and that, for said reasons, it is absolutely necessary that they should, immediately, remove themselves, with their effects, to the main land, (to tarry during the present dispute,) to such place, or places, as they may choose; and, provided they neglect to comply herewith for the term of ten days after this notice, that they be informed that they must be brought off by authority.

Extract from the Minutes of Congress:

Pursuant to the above vote of Congress, we repaired to the Island of Shoals, on the 16th instant, being the first

VIRGINIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Williamsburgh, January 19, 1776.

The Committee of Safety will proceed on Monday, the 12th of next month, to the choice of the several Officers for the Company of Artillery, directed by the General Convention, to wit: One Captain, three Lieutenants, one Sergeant, four Bombardiers, and eight Gunners. All persons inclined to be employed therein, and who can be well recommended, are desired to attend on that day.

By order of the Committee of Safety:

J. PENDLETON, Clerk.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO RICHARD HARRISON.

[No. 1.] Annapolis, January 19, 1776.

SIR: You have, enclosed, an invoice and bill of lading of thirteen hundred and eighty-six barrels of flour, in the Brig Sam, Robert Forsythe, master, with ninety-one barrels of bread; also, four thousand staves, on account of the Province, which you will dispose of in the best manner to your general instructions, and the letters heretofore sent you. We have only engaged this vessel to deliver her cargo to you. As soon, therefore, as she is unloaded, if you should have no further use for her, you may discharge her. We shall be glad to hear of her safe arrival, and likewise, to have intelligence from you, of your transactions, by every good opportunity.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Richard Harrison, Martinico, per Brigantine Sam.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN FORSYTHE.

Annapolis, January 19, 1776.

SIR: You are to proceed from hence, to the Island of Martinico, and there deliver the enclosed letter, and your cargo, to Mr. Richard Harrison. If Mr. Harrison should not be at the Island of Martinico, address to Mr. McCreary, and if he should not be there, you are, in that case, to open the letter addressed to Mr. Harrison, sell your cargo at the very highest prices you can get. The money arising from the sales, you must lay out in gunpowder, if you can get it, if not, in muskets, fitted with good bayonets, and if they are not to be had, saltpetre and sulphur, and if you cannot get those articles, then lay out the whole in coarse strong linens and Russia duck, and take care you are not imposed on in your purchases. As soon as you have done your business, make the best of your way home, and avoid speaking with vessels on the coast. When you come into the latitude of our Capes, if you have a strong fair wind in, push up the Bay as fast as possible, and if you find it failing run into some small harbour, and there wait until you have a favourable opportunity to get into Potomack, Patuxent, or Annapolis. If you find a better chance of getting into any of the inlets between Cape Charles and Cape Henlopen, than into our Bay, you may push into one of them, and send an express to the Council of Safety, letting them know where you are, and what you have got, but take care and land your goods under the care of a Committee as soon as you can, for fear of being followed by the tenders. In going out, you had better take a brisk gale of wind, or get out of nights, as tenders commonly keep a strict watch at the Capes in the day time; but hope you will behave with care and industry on this voyage. If you are chased, and find you must be taken, throw all your papers overboard, with weights to sink them.

To Captain Robert Forsythe.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 19, 1776—3 o'clock, P. M.

DEAR SIR: I embrace this opportunity to inform you, that the whole party, destined for the Queen's County expedition, got safe into New-York yesterday, the last division of Minute-Men in the evening, and doubt not they are chiefly on Long-Island by this time.

I am, your most obedient, most humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 22, 1776.—Referred.]

Trenton, January 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 12th current, covering sundry resolutions of the Congress, relating to the officers and soldiers, prisoners in this town, I duly received, and our Committee met, and made the officers acquainted with the determination of Congress. The officers have made choice of Bordentown, for the place of their residence, and request that the band of music, and their servants, may go with them, which was agreeable to our Committee, and hope it will meet the approbation of Congress. They requested some short time to consider the matter respecting their drawing of bills, for the payment of the expense already incurred.

I beg leave to return two commissions, which were filled up wrong through misinformation, and request you will send me two blank ones, signed as formerly; two more were in the same predicament, which I have made answer, and which occasioned my former application for four. If agreeable, the commissions for the third battalion may be sent at same time. I must again repeat, that near one half the new-raised two battalions are without arms. We have got no fund in this Colony to avail ourselves of money to purchase them with. The six thousand dollars advanced by Congress is expended, and unless four thousand more is advanced, as far as I am able to determine, you will have near one battalion supported at a very great expense, without arms, (which can be had for money,) and, consequently, unfit for service. Mr. Lowrey was with me this morning, and is of the same opinion.

I am ordered by our Committee of Safety to write to you. I have enclosed a copy of their order, that you may have their full meaning; and have the honour to be, with all due respect to the Congress, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

New-Jersey Committee of Safety, Princeton, }
 January 13, 1776. }

Ordered, That the President write to the Continental Congress, acquainting them that the Congress of this Province is to meet 31st instant, at New-Brunswick, at which time they will, undoubtedly, give all due attention to raising the battalion ordered in this Colony. Being firmly persuaded that the appointment of officers by the Congress will give much greater satisfaction in the Colony than if appointed by the Committee, this Committee have, for weighty reasons, deferred issuing warrants, until the meeting of Congress; at the same time recommend Azariah Dunham, Esq., to be appointed Commissary for supplying such Battalion when raised.

By order of the Committee:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 27.—Referred to Mr. Lynch, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Sherman, Mr. Ward, Mr. Samuel Adams.]

Cambridge, January 19, 1776.

SIR: Taking it for granted that General Schuyler has not only informed you of the fall of the brave, and much to be lamented, General Montgomery, but of the situation of our affairs in Canada, (as related by General Wooster, Colonel Arnold, Colonel Campbell, and others,) I shall not take up much more of your time on this subject, than is necessary to enclose you a copy of his letter to me, with the result thereon, as appears by the Council of War, which I immediately summoned on the occasion, and at which Mr. Adams, by my particular desire, was good enough to attend. It may appear strange, sir, as I had not men to spare from these lines, that I should presume, without first sending to Congress, and obtaining an express direction, to recommend to the Governments of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New-Hampshire, to raise each a regiment, on the Continental account, for this service. I wish, most ardently, that the urgency of the case would have admitted of the delay; I wish, also, that the purport of General Schuyler's letter had not, unavoidably, as it were, laid me under an indispensable obligation to do it. For, having informed you in his letter (copy of which he enclosed me) of his dependance on this quarter for men, I thought you might, also, have some reliance on my exertions; this consideration, added to my fears of the fatal consequences of delay, to an information of your having designed three thousand men for Canada; to a belief, founded chiefly on General Schuyler's letters, that few or none of them are raised; and to my apprehensions for New-York, which led me to think that no troops could be spared from that quarter, induced me to lose not a moment's time in throwing in a force there, being well assured, that General Carleton will improve, to the utmost, the advantages gained, leaving no artifices untried to fix the Canadians and Indians, (who, we find, are too well disposed to take part with the strongest,) in his interest.

If these reasons are not sufficient to justify my conduct in the opinion of Congress, if the measure contravenes any resolution of theirs, they will please to countermand the levying and marching of the regiments as soon as possible, and do me the justice to believe, that my intentions were good, if my judgment has erred.

The Congress will please, also, to observe, that the measure of supporting our posts in Canada, appeared of such exceeding great importance, that the General Officers, (agreeing with me in sentiment, and unwilling to lay any burden which can possibly be avoided, although it may turn out an ill-timed piece of parsimony,) have resolved, that the three regiments for Canada shall be part of the thirteen Militia regiments which were requested to reinforce this Army, as appears by the Minutes of another Council of War, held on the 16th instant.

I shall, being much hurried and fatigued, add no more in this letter than my duty to Congress, and that I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I enclose you a copy of my letter to the Governments of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New-Hampshire; also, a copy of a resolution of this Colony, in answer to an application of mine for arms.

G. W.

Since writing the above, I have been informed by a message from the General Court of Massachusetts, that they have resolved upon the raising of a regiment for Canada, and appointed the Field-Officers for it in the western part of this Government. I am also informed, by express from Governor Trumbull, that he and his Council of Safety had agreed upon the raising of a regiment for the same purpose, which was anticipating my application to that Government. If commissions (and they are applied for) are to be given by Congress to the three regiments going to Canada, you will please to have them forwarded, as I have none by me for that purpose.

G. W.

Albany, January 13, 1776.

I wish I had no occasion to send my dear General this melancholy account. My amiable friend, the gallant Montgomery, is no more; the brave Arnold is wounded; and we have met with a severe check in an unsuccessful attempt on Quebeck. May Heaven be graciously pleased that the misfortune may terminate here. I tremble for our people in Canada; and nothing, my dear sir, seems left to prevent the most fatal consequences, but an immediate reinforcement, that is no where to be had but from you, and the only route that which I have pointed out in my letter to Congress, copy of which you have enclosed; nor do I think that a less number than I have mentioned, will suffice. Should your Excellency think proper to send the troops, you will please to let me know it by express, that I may send provisions to Onion River.

Congress has wrote to me on the subject of my request to retire. Our affairs are much worse than when I made the request; this is motive sufficient for me to serve my country in any way I can be thought most serviceable; but my utmost can be but little, weak and indisposed as I am.

The clothing is gone to Cambridge.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

At a Council of War, held at Head-Quarters in Cambridge, January 16, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington, the Honourable John Adams, Member of the honourable Continental Congress, Major-General Ward, Major-General Putnam, Brigadier-General Heath, Brigadier-General Spencer, Brigadier-General Sullivan, Brigadier-General Greene, Brigadier-General Gates.

His Excellency the Commander-in-chief, laid before the Council Letters received last night from Major-General Schuyler, enclosing copies of Letters from Brigadier-General Wooster, Colonel Arnold, and Colonel Donald Campbell, containing the melancholy account of the death of General Montgomery, the wounding Colonel Arnold, and the consequent failure of the success of the assault upon the city of Quebeck, on the 31st of December last.

His Excellency then requested the opinion of the Council, whether it be proper, in the present circumstances of the lines, to detach a reinforcement from hence, to the succour of the troops in Canada.

The question being put, it was Resolved, That in the present feeble state of the Regiments here, it was improper to detach any force from these lines to Quebeck, or Canada.

The General then asked, whether in the present critical situation of affairs in Canada, he should, in their opinion, stand justified in requesting, in behalf of the Continent, a supply of Troops from the New-England Governments, which was, unanimously, resolved in the affirmative.

The Council then, unanimously, advised his Excellency the General, immediately to apply to the Legislature of each of the above-mentioned Colonies, Rhode-Island excepted, forthwith to raise a regiment of seven hundred and twenty-eight men, officers included, and direct them to march with all possible expedition, by the route prescribed by Major-General Schuyler, to Canada, to be continued until the 1st of January next, as part of the Continental Army, should the affairs of the Continent require it.

His Excellency then demanded the opinion of the Council, whether ten regiments of Militia of seven hundred and twenty-eight men each, officers included, to be added to the troops now in the lines, and expected to be enlisted, would not be a sufficient number to answer all the purposes of offence and defence ordered and intended against the Ministerial army in Boston.

Resolved, unanimously, That as matters are at present circumstanced, it is best that the three regiments intended for Canada, should be taken out of the thirteen which have been requested to reinforce the Army in these lines, and that ten regiments, only, be marched to Cambridge, to serve until the 1st of April next.

The Council were, unanimously, of opinion, that in the present situation of the affairs of the Colony of Rhode-Island, continually subject and exposed to the attacks of the Ministerial fleet, and detached bodies of troops, it was neither prudent nor reasonable to demand any more troops from thence.

At a Council of General Officers, held at Head-Quarters in Cambridge, January 16, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington, the Honourable John Adams, the Honourable James Warren, Major-General Ward, Major-General Putnam, Brigadier-General Heath, Brigadier-General Spencer, Brigadier-General Sullivan, Brigadier-General Greene, Brigadier-General Gates.

The Commander-in-chief laid before the Council a state of the regiments in the Continental Army, the consequent weakness of the lines, and, in his judgment, the indispensable necessity of making a bold attempt to conquer the Ministerial troops in Boston, before they can be reinforced in the Spring, if the means can be provided, and a favourable opportunity offer, and then desired the opinion of the Council thereon.

The Council agreed, unanimously, that a vigorous attempt ought to be made upon the Ministerial army in Boston, as soon as practicable, all concurring circumstances favouring the wished-for success; and advised His Excellency to request from this, and the neighbouring Colonies, thirteen regiments of Militia to his aid, to be at Cambridge by the 1st of February, and to consist of the same number of men and officers, as those upon the Continental establishment, and to remain (should occasion require) until the last of March, application to be made to the General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay for seven of those regiments; to Connecticut, for four; and to New-Hampshire, for two; exempting Rhode-Island from their quota of men, on account of the repeated insults of the enemy's ships of war, and the exposed situation of the sea-coasts of that Colony.

His Excellency also informed the Council of the great deficiency of arms, and the small prospect of a supply, (the Recruiting Officers having signified to him, that the recruits would not bring arms without an allowance for the use of them, and be assured they might carry them home at the expiration of their services.)

The Council, thereupon, advised the General to procure arms upon those terms, as there seemed no probability of getting imported arms, and the service must be put to the utmost hazard without.

Cambridge, January 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosures herewith sent, convey such full accounts of the sad reverse of our affairs in Canada, as to render it unnecessary for me, in my present hurry, to add ought to the tale. Your spirited Colony will, I have no doubt, be sufficiently impressed with the expediency of a vigorous exertion to prevent the evils which, otherwise, must follow from the repulse of our troops. It does not admit of a doubt but that General Carleton will improve this advantage to the utmost, and if he should be able to give different current of sentiment to the Canadians and Indians, than those they seemed inclined to adopt, words are unnecessary to describe the melancholy effect that will, inevitably, follow. I am persuaded, therefore, that you will exert yourselves to the utmost, to throw in the reinforcement, (by the route mentioned in General Schuyler's letter,) that is now required of your Colony, as the doing of it expeditiously may prove a matter of the utmost importance. You will perceive, by the Minutes of the Council of War enclosed, that the regiment asked of you for Canada is one of the number applied for in my letter of the 16th instant, and that the only difference with respect to the requisition, is the length of time, and place of service, as no good would result from sending troops to Canada for a shorter period than the Continental Army is raised for, to wit: till the 1st of January, 1777.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the General Court of Massachusetts-Bay.

A Letter similar to the preceding was sent to the Governments of Connecticut and New-Hampshire.

January 19, 1776.

The Committee of both Houses, appointed to take into consideration his Excellency General Washington's Letter to this Court, of the 15th instant, have attended that service, and report as followeth, viz:

That his Excellency be informed that it is the opinion of this Court, there would be a general supply of fire-arms brought into the camp, if he would give publick notice that if the recruits would come well armed, they should be allowed for the use of their arms, and, if lost in the service, the just value of them should be paid; and that their arms shall not be detained from them when their time of service shall expire. And that, to detain the arms of the Militia, without their consent, would neither promote the good of the service, nor facilitate the arming the forces, as it would produce a general uneasiness through the country. And that his Excellency be also informed, that this Colony have in store, but about two hundred fire-arms, part of which are out of repair; such as will do for the service, although provided for the particular use of this Colony, we shall be ready to deliver, if they shall be needed, and do all in our power to aid his Excellency in arming the troops.

By order:

JAMES PRESCOTT.

In Council, January 16, 1776: Read and sent down.
PEREZ MORTON, Deputy Secretary.

In the House of Representatives, January 16, 1776: Read and accepted, and thereupon, Ordered, That the Committee appointed to wait upon His Excellency General Washington, on the subject of his Letter of the 10th current, be a Committee to present him a copy of the within Report. Sent up for concurrence.

JAMES WARREN, Speaker.

His Excellency, the Commander-in-chief, having been pleased to order an advertisement in the several newspapers of this and the adjoining Colonies, commanding "all Officers, non-Commissioned Officers, and Soldiers, now absent upon any leave or pretence whatsoever, to join their respective Regiments, at Roxbury and Cambridge, by the 1st day of February next, and all Officers neglecting to pay due obedience thereto, will be forthwith cashiered, and every non-Commissioned Officer and Soldier, failing therein, to be tried and punished as Deserters," the Colonels, and Commanding Officers of Regiments and Corps, are now positively ordered not to grant any more furloughs, or leaves of absence to any Officer, non-Commissioned Officer, or Soldier, any former order or permission heretofore given notwithstanding. His Excellency, therefore, expects every Colonel, and Commanding Officer of Regiments and Corps, will direct all those absent from their Regiments or Corps, to pay strict obedience to this Order, that no person may plead, or be allowed to plead, ignorance thereof.

Notwithstanding the repeated orders issued in the course of the last campaign, forbidding all officers commanding Guards, to suffer any of their Guard to be absent day or night from their Guard until regularly relieved, yet it is with surprise the General hears that it is a common practice, even at the advanced posts next the enemy. Any officer commanding at any of the guards or outposts, who shall, for the future, suffer any of their officers or men to be absent, until regularly relieved, will be put in arrest, and tried for disobedience of orders.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Cambridge, January 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosures herewith sent convey such full accounts of the sad reverse of our affairs in Canada, as to render it unnecessary for me, in my present hurry, to add ought to the tale.

Your spirited Colony will, I have no doubt, be sufficiently impressed with the expediency of a vigorous exertion to prevent the evils which must follow from the repulse of our troops. It does not admit of a doubt but that General Carleton will improve this advantage to the utmost; and if he should be able to give another current of sentiment to the Canadians and Indians, than those they seemed inclined to adopt, words are unnecessary to describe the melancholy effect that must inevitably follow.

I am persuaded, therefore, that you will exert yourselves to the utmost to throw in the reinforcement by the route mentioned in General Schuyler's letter, that is now required of your Colony, as the doing of it, expeditiously, may prove a matter of the utmost importance.

You will perceive by the Minutes of the Council of War, enclosed, that the regiment asked of you, for Canada, is one of the seven applied for in my letter of the 16th instant, and that the only difference with respect to the requisition is the length of time and place of service, as no good would result from sending troops to Canada for a shorter period than the Continental Army is raised for, to wit, till the first of January, 1777.

I am, gentlemen, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Honourable General Court of Massachusetts-Bay.

To the Honourable Matthew Thornton.—A letter of the same date and similar to the preceding one.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, &c.—A letter of the same date and similar to the preceding ones to the Honourable General Court of Massachusetts-Bay, and the Honourable Matthew Thornton, Esq., with this postscript: Your favour of the 15th instant now lies before me, but the hurry in which I am engaged, at present, allows no more than time for acknowledgment of it.

Yours, &c.

G. W.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO COLONELS WALDRON AND CHESLEY.

Winter-Hill, January 19, 1776.

A requisition being made upon the Colony of New-Hampshire for a regiment of men, consisting of seven hundred and twenty-eight, including all officers, I have, after consulting his Excellency General Washington, thought proper to raise and officer a regiment out of the officers and soldiers lately come in from that Colony, to remain in the Continental service until the first day of April next. I have named eight Captains, and have nominated you, the said John Waldron, as chief Colonel of said regiment, and you, the said Alpheus Chesley, as Lieutenant-Colonel thereof, and have wrote to the General Assembly upon the measure I have adopted, and requested them to furnish one month's pay, advance, for said regiment, upon the credit of the Continent.

You are, therefore, requested, immediately, to repair to the General Assembly, wait on them with my compliments and these orders; receive their commands, and, immediately, proceed to complete the regiment proposed, and return to Head-Quarters by the first day of February next. You will please to pay strict obedience to the commands of that Assembly, and on all occasions give notice of your proceedings to your humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN,

Brigadier-General of the Continental Army.

To John Waldron and Alpheus Chesley, Esquires.

SAMUEL DEXTER TO PEREZ MORTON.

Woodstock, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 1st instant, wrote by direction of the major part of the honourable Council, informing me of my appointment to be first Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, for the County of Suffolk, did not come to hand till the arrival of the third post after its date, or I should sooner have returned the answer expected from me.

At a time when my declining a seat in the General Court has removed all ground of objection from any supposed impropriety of acting, both in a legislative and judiciary capacity, I should not choose to excuse myself from accepting this trust, did not the ill state of my health absolutely require it.

My complaints, which have been, gradually, increasing for more than two years past, are chiefly of the nervous kind, and forbid any degree of mental application beyond what is indispensably necessary for the management of my private concerns. I cannot promise myself strength sufficient even for matters of such comparatively small importance.

Such of the honourable gentlemen with whom I formerly sat in Council will testify for me, that, however poorly I acquitted myself in the discharge of my duty to the publick, I ever appeared solicitous to act a part that should meet with approbation.

Although in the department designed me, but moderate attention and study may be thought requisite, yet even that I am, by indisposition of body, which affects my mind, rendered totally unfit for.

Some time since I came to a determination never to engage in any new kind of employment of a publick nature; and, for the future, to do no more than a conscientious regard for my oath should demand of me in the office I have, for divers years past, sustained; and I have, sir, to request that you would, by communicating this letter, make their Honours acquainted with a resolution which I have, upon mature thought, found it needful to enter into.

I am no less desirous that the honourable Board should know that I have a grateful sense of the honour they have done me; and that I wish their happiness with a fervency not to be expressed, although exceeded by the ardour with which I pray for the salvation of my country.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

SAMUEL DEXTER.

To Perez Morton, Esq., Deputy Secretary of Massachusetts-Bay, Watertown.

ON OPENING THE PORTS OF THE COLONIES TO THE VESSELS OF FRANCE AND SPAIN.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, January 20, 1776.

As the Ministry, and their tools, have persisted in charging America with a desire of independence, and in spite of all the most solemn declarations on her part, that she is still (or rather, I hope, was) willing to be subject to Britain, as completely as she was in the year 1763, and as we have good reason to suppose, great as their lust of power is, that avarice has the greatest share in influencing their conduct, and that, therefore, not merely an empty title to superiority is claimed, or even a substantial revenue, but that something more is insisted on, the total monopoly of our trade; I say, as these things are evident, we have just cause of complaint, and may well resent such low suspicion and base treatment.

Whoever considers the acts of Parliament, laying restrictions on the trade of the Colonies, before the year 1763, will be astonished to find that the Congress, after one of their petitions had been treated with contempt, and a bloody, perfidious, and inhuman war was entered into against them, should consent that those acts should still be binding on them!

When we entered into an association not to trade with Great Britain, provided she had been contented to try who could hold out longest, and see who would repent first, and make the first overtures of accommodation, it would have been right to have contented ourselves with our own manufactures: but when they not only laugh at our efforts in this way, and affect to despise our whole trade, as of no importance to them, but also have, by levying against us a heavy and savage war, obliged us to incur many and great expenses, and to neglect, in many parts of our country, agriculture and manufactures, we must be fools, indeed, not to open our ports, and to try what value may be put on our trade by France and Spain, and how we may, thereby, influence them in our favour, and endeavour, by our trade, to procure every thing necessary for the support of the war, and our defence and comfort. By doing this we pave the way to a powerful alliance, and by it may humble the pride of our enemies, may show them we bid defiance to their attempts to enslave us, and that, so far from being sufferers for want of their trade, we can do ten times better without it.

If the ports were open to all nations, except the British, we might soon sink our paper money, and our estates would be of ten times their present value. Our tobacco, hemp, flax, cotton, tar, pitch, turpentine, iron, lead, staves, and lumber; our wheat, oats, barley, rye, rice, Indian corn, peas, beans, &c., &c., might be sold for their real value, in cash, or such commodities as we might wish to barter them for. Our tobacco would then always command a good price, and ready money; we should seldom get less than thirty or forty shillings a hundred for it in cash; good wheat would sell for six or seven shillings a bushel, and all other things in proportion; and, instead of paying the high price we now do for British goods, bought of Scotch factors, at an extravagant rate after selling them our tobacco for a mere nothing, we should buy every thing equally good, if not better, at half price, and often get them in exchange for articles of our produce which now we never attend to: The truth of this can be asserted by those who have traded in French, Spanish, Dutch, or Italian ports. Claret would then be as cheap as Madeira wine, and velvet as broadcloth, and rum, sugar, molasses, wine, oil, olives, French brandy, arrack, tea, spices, &c., &c., would be exchanged here for such necessities, or rarities, as would be wanted in the different ships, by the captains, factors, or men, and by their friends and customers, at the different ports they come from. Our ports would then be filled with ships, and our towns with respectable merchants; the value of our country would soon be known abroad, and numbers of people, of ingenuity and property, would come and settle among us. We should have the trade protected against our present oppressors, the amplest means of defence afforded us, and even Great Britain herself would soon court our favour, and be willing to form a commercial league with us.

Let any one consider these things, and then let him say, whether he would hesitate a moment to open our ports.

AN AMERICAN.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS. [No. 2.]

Annapolis, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By a resolution of the Convention, the city of Annapolis, and the town of Baltimore, are to be fortified, if it be practicable. As we are much at a loss for cannon, and as we hear they have more at New-York and Philadelphia than they have occasion for, we imagine they may be willing to spare some of them. We must, therefore, request you will be pleased to inquire of the gentlemen of those Provinces, in Congress, or of the Committee of Philadelphia whether it will be agreeable to them to lend us any of them, and acquaint us with their answer. We shall want about thirty or forty eighteen-pounders; if we are favoured with the loan of them, they shall be returned, or paid for if lost or damaged. As there will be great danger in attempting to get them round by water, if we borrow them from the Province of New-York, we judge it may be best to get them down by land to Delaware Bay, from thence, over short carrying-places, they may be got into our Bay. Any money that may be necessary to defray the expenses in getting down, shall be sent you, or lodged where you think proper. We enclose you a copy of the resolutions of the Convention for emitting bills of credit, as some clauses require particular duties to be performed by yourselves. We are, respectfully, gentlemen, yours, &c. To the Deputies for Maryland, in Congress.

STEPHEN STEWARD TO CHARLES WALLACE.

West-River, Saturday, January 20, 1776.

DEAR CHARLES: I have long been thinking of a machine of some sort, to save your town. I think, I have now fell on one, that shall withstand against any ship in the navy that they can trust before your town. The machine must float, and carry twenty eighteen-pounders; it must be about one hundred and eight feet long, thirty-two feet, or less, broad, five and a half feet deep, the sides and ends to be glazed, so that the men shall fight under cover, and the sides and ends cannon proof. This machine, I think, may be completed in two months, at the expense of two thousand five hundred pounds, or less. The friendship I have from yourself, T. Hyde and T. Harwood, has partly employed my mind this six weeks past. If the Committee of Safety think well of this matter, there is no time to be lost, and you must come down to me to-morrow morning, as I can wait neither on you, nor the Committee, in all next week. If this machine, or floating battery, can be got ready in time, I think it will save your town from any thing that can be done to it by sea. Every man of you must attend to this matter, as one hundred men may be employed. I am, Charles, with sincere respect, yours,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

To Charles Wallace, Esq.

P. S. This machine may always keep a fire on the enemy, as there must be two cannon in each end, and eight on each side. She may carry fifty-two swivels on her sides and ends, to prevent her being boarded.

My friend I think ill used by both Congress and Convention. The Congress gave their ships to build to men that knows nothing of the business. Jack Steward, you know, has been used ill by Convention, but still I am ready to serve my country in every degree that lies in my power.

If any opportunity, send Thomas Johnson a copy of this to-day, as he desired I would think of something of this sort to save the town.

JAMES MURRAY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer hereof, Mr. James Campbell, who acted as a Captain of our Militia, had the honour, on application, of being appointed a Lieutenant of the Light Infantry Company at our last Convention.

I am to beg leave to introduce this gentleman to you, as particularly worthy your notice. I think, upon conversation with him, he may afford some very useful hints in those branches, that we, at this time, stand so much in need of; I mean gunnery and fortification. Have known him for several years, in character of a captain of a ship, the seafaring life having been his calling from his infancy, and think, to do him justice in that sense, or any other that he engages in, he will merit esteem. I believe he brings with him a plan of a floating battery, his own invention, which may, very possibly, afford matter for improvement, should the original fail. If you attempt fortification, and are not already supplied with an able hand, believe you will find him very clever in drawing and taking charts of your harbours and Bay, and pointing out the fittest place to erect fortifications on.

With due regard, I remain, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JAMES MURRAY.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

SIR: In my former letter, I mentioned the disagreeable news received from Canada. The Congress have taken that matter into consideration, and having examined Mr. Antill, and duly deliberated on the situation of our affairs in that quarter, they have come to sundry resolutions, which I have the honour to enclose.

I would just observe, that by Mr. Antill's examination, it appears our loss is greater than what is set forth in the despatches he brought; a copy of which was transmitted to you. Almost the whole of General Arnold's gallant detachment are taken prisoners, having, after four hours' resistance, been obliged to surrender at discretion. However, we have the satisfaction to hear the prisoners are treated with humanity.

The Congress are anxious, as well from motives of policy, as of justice and humanity, to repair our losses in that quarter, and if possible, to gain possession of Quebeck, and drive our enemies out of that country, before they can be reinforced in the Spring.

An active, able General is wanted to take the command there, and if such an one can be spared from the service at Cambridge, it is their desire you should send him.

The battalion from Pennsylvania, and that from New-Jersey, will set forward the beginning of next week.

As it is of great importance, as well for the security and relief of our friends, as for confirming the wavering, that speedy succours should arrive, I am directed to request you to detach from the camp, at Cambridge, one battalion, if the service there will permit you to spare one, with orders to march with the greatest expedition possible to Canada. If this cannot be complied with, you will use your utmost endeavours in stimulating the Governour of Connecticut and the Convention of New-Hampshire, to whom I write by this opportunity, to forward, with the utmost despatch, the very first companies that can be raised in those Colonies. You can easily conceive what effect the arrival of even one company will have on the minds of our friends, especially when they shall be satisfied it will soon be followed by more.

The Colony of South-Carolina has been so fortunate as to oblige Lord William Campbell, with the vessels of war, to quit their harbour. Being earnestly desirous of providing for their defence, they have resolved to fit out some armed vessels, but not having seamen among themselves, they have despatched Captain Cochran to the northward, to enlist a number of seamen for the service of that Colony. Lest the offers he was empowered to make might prejudice the service, the Congress have chalked out a plan for him to go by, as you will see in the enclosed extracts, and I am directed to desire you will please to forward this service.

Yesterday Doctor J. Smith, who made his escape from Frederick, was brought to this town. He was taken at the Little Meadows, on his way to Detroit, and had with him letters from Connelly to the commanding officer there.

I hinted to you in my former letter, that the Congress were taking measures for the defence of the Middle and Southern Colonies. For this purpose, over and above those destined for Canada, they have ordered four battalions to be raised in the Colony of New-York, two in New-Jersey, four in Pennsylvania, one in the Counties on Delaware, six in Virginia, three in North-Carolina, three in South-Carolina, and one in Georgia, each to consist of seven hundred and twenty-eight men, including officers, making in the whole, with those for Canada, thirty-four battalions.

I have the honour to be, &c.

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, January, 26, 1776.

SIR: In my former letter I enclosed you sundry resolutions, passed by Congress for the defence of Canada, and therein took the liberty of urging the necessity of sending speedy succours to that country.

The disagreeable news lately received from that quarter, and the repulse our troops met with in their attempt on Quebeck, in which we had the misfortune of losing the brave and gallant General Montgomery, render it still more necessary, with all possible despatch, to reinforce our Army there, as well for the security and relief of our friends, as for the better securing the rights and liberties, not only of that Colony, but of the other United Colonies.

In addition to the former, I have now the honour of enclosing sundry resolutions passed since the advice received, and I trust, from your approved zeal in the cause of America, that every endeavour in your power will be exerted to levy and forward the battalion ordered to be raised in your Colony.

You will easily conceive what life, spirit, and confidence, the arrival of but one company will give our friends there, especially when they understand it is quickly to be followed by more forces. You will, therefore, with the utmost despatch forward the first that can be got ready.

To prevent any delay, I send, enclosed, by order of Congress, blank commissions for the Field-Officers, Captains, and Subalterns, which you will please to fill up with the names of such gentlemen as you shall judge best qualified.

Time does not permit me to enlarge. I must, therefore, beg leave to refer you to the enclosed extracts, and have the honour to be, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Governour Trumbull.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In addition to the resolutions of Congress, passed the 8th instant, for the defence of Canada, I have now to add sundry others, which the advices lately received, and the repulse our troops met with, in an attempt on Quebeck, render absolutely necessary to be carried into execution, with all possible despatch.

There is every reason to hope that a timely reinforcement will not only secure our friends and retrieve our losses, but put us in possession of Quebeck before succours can reach our enemies. I am, therefore, directed most earnestly to press you with all possible expedition to levy and forward the battalion ordered to be raised in your Colony. And as you lie the most contiguous, I trust, from your wonted zeal, you will be the first to carry relief and succour.

You will easily conceive what life, spirit, and confidence, the arrival of but one company will give our friends there, especially when they understand it is quickly to be followed by more forces. You will, therefore, with the utmost despatch forward the first that can be got ready.

To prevent any delay, I send, enclosed, by order of Congress, blank commissions for the Field-Officers, Captains, and Subalterns, which you will please to fill up with the names of such gentlemen as you shall judge best qualified and proper for the service.

The money for defraying the expense of the battalion will be forwarded by your Delegate with all possible despatch. The encouragement given to the men will, I hope, facilitate your business, and I trust your zeal will not be wanting in the defence of our common liberties. Time will not permit me to enlarge. I must, therefore, beg leave, for other matters, to refer you to the enclosed extracts, only reminding you that the battalion is to consist of eight companies, and each company of one Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a drum and fife, and seventy-six privates; the Staff Officers: a Surgeon, a Quartermaster, an Adjutant, and a Chaplain.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Convention of New-Hampshire.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have the honour of enclosing you sundry resolutions passed by Congress, as well for the defence of your Colony, as for repairing the loss lately sustained in Canada, and succouring our friends there.

The shortness of the time will not permit me to enlarge. I must, therefore, beg leave to refer you to the enclosed extracts, and just inform you, that the Congress rely with confidence on your zeal for the cause, that you will exert your utmost endeavours to hasten the march of the troops ordered to Canada, and to raise those destined for the defence of your Colony. Herewith I send you blank commissions for the officers under the rank of Majors, which you will please to fill up. On the recommendation of General Schuyler, the Congress have continued Colonel Van Schaick, Lieutenant-Colonel Yates, and Major Gansevoort, in the service of the United Colonies, and have appointed them to the command of the battalion to be raised in your Colony for the defence of Canada; and they have directed me, agreeable to an established rule, to request you will please to transmit, as soon as possible, the names of a number of gentlemen, whom you shall judge duly qualified, at least two for each command, out of whom they may elect Field-Officers for the other battalions.

I am, gentlemen, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.To the Convention, or Committee of Safety, of New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

SIR: On Wednesday evening, Mr. Antill arrived with your despatches of the 13th instant, which were immediately communicated.

The Congress sincerely condole with you on the loss of your amiable friend, their gallant and much esteemed General.

Having conferred with Mr. Antill, and duly deliberated on the situation of our affairs in Canada, they have come to sundry resolutions, which I have the honour to enclose, and which you will please to communicate with the utmost despatch to General Wooster, as far as they relate to the defence of Canada, or are necessary for his direction.

The Congress rely with confidence that he will exert his best endeavours to keep up the spirits of his troops, especially, when you assure him, that every means will be used, with all possible expedition, to succour and support him. The battalions from Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, which were under marching orders, will set forward the beginning of next week; and despatches are sent to General Washington, and to the Colonies of Connecticut and New-Hampshire, to hasten up troops from thence.

Enclosed is a number of commissions for the battalions to be raised in Canada, which you will cause to be filled up with the names of such as you shall deem most suitable. As General Montgomery, to whom it was left to recommend proper officers, is now no more, you will endeavour to find out the most accomplished and suitable men, for the Canadian regiments; having a regard to men of influence, and such as are best attached to our cause.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.To General Schuyler.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by Congress to forward to you the enclosed resolutions, by which, you will perceive, it is their earnest desire, that you should exert your utmost endeavours in forwarding the march of the battalion to Canada.

As another battalion is ordered to be raised in your Colony, it is expected you will pursue the most effectual measures for levying the same with all possible expedition, and supplying them with arms, accoutrements, and other necessaries, that there may be no delay. I am directed to request you to send the names of such gentlemen as you judge best qualified, at least two for each command, out of whom the Congress may elect Field-Officers for said battalion. Blank commissions will be sent you to fill up with the names of such as you shall please to appoint officers under the rank of Major.

I must not omit pressing the necessity of attending to the collecting of specie, an article so necessary just at this juncture, that the safety of America depends upon it; for without it, an army cannot, at this time, be kept up in Canada, and the loss of Canada will, in all probability, involve us in an Indian war.

I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.To the Committee of Safety of New-Jersey.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress on the 8th instant, voted to raise one regiment in the western parts of our Province for the service in Canada. The news of the misfortune at Quebeck arriving here last Thursday, they voted yesterday to give the men a bounty of forty shillings, and one month's pay advance, to encourage the speedy enlistment and sending forward said regiment, and I hope you will do every thing in your power to hasten it, as the taking and securing Canada this Winter, or early in the Spring, before the arrival of British troops, will be of almost infinite advantage to the Continent, more especially to New-England, and to our Colony in particular. One regiment will begin to march from this place for Canada in a few days, and one regiment from New-Jersey in eight or ten days; orders are, also, given to raise men as soon as possible for the same service, besides those in New-Hampshire, one more regiment in Pennsylvania, one ditto, in New-Jersey, one ditto, on the western parts of New-York, and one ditto, in Connecticut, and this day I expect one will be ordered to be raised in Massachusetts for the same purpose. No cost or pains must be spared to secure the important Province of Canada.

I beg leave to renew my request, that Delegates may be appointed and sent here, as soon as possible, as in my opinion the representation of a Colony, at this important crisis, is too weighty and important to be intrusted to any one person. That you may see the necessity of a larger representation of our Colony, I would inform you, that beside Committees for special purposes, that are frequently chosen, there are four or five standing Committees appointed, some for secrecy, some for despatch; some of which Committees are intrusted with large powers; and that there may be no cause of complaint, those Committees consist of one Delegate from each Colony; sometimes two, sometimes three, of those Committees sit at the same time, so that, though I attend some one of the Committees almost every night and morning, before and after Congress, yet sometimes business of consequence is transacted by them without our Colony being represented, and sometimes the Committees sit while the Congress is sitting, so that our Colony must be unrepresented in one of them, while every other Colony may be represented in both.

I have been here almost five months, great part of the time without a colleague. I really find that I never knew what confinement, with business, was before, and that I want more exercise of body, and less of mind, at least for some time. I please myself with hopes I shall soon see Delegates here from our Colony, and that I may return to my family, and with my domestick affairs relax and unbend my fatigued mind.

The sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars, which the Congress ordered to be sent to you, to be used in raising our regiment for Canada, I shall send forward, as soon as I can. Please to acquaint me with the publick affairs of our Colony, as often as convenient, and, in particular, with your success, from time to time, in raising the regiment. As the Congress have intrusted you with appointing the officers, I know you will do the best you can to appoint proper persons, and hope you will be so fortunate as to give general satisfaction.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To the Provincial Committee of Safety of New-Hampshire

COLONEL BULL TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read January 20, 1776.]

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: An attachment to liberty, and a regard for the rights of mankind, were the only motives which induced me to take an active and leading part in the present unhappy, but, at the same time, most necessary struggle for the defence of the same. Being actuated by these motives, I offered my service, as Colonel of the First Pennsylvania Battalion, raised by order of your honourable House, to which command your Honours were pleased to appoint me. It would be the greatest satisfaction to me, personally, to oppose the enemies of my country, but finding myself ill-treated by many of the officers in my corps, and that near one-half of them threaten to resign their commissions if I continue in command, which, at a time when we are under immediate marching orders, might be productive of very bad consequences to the service, my regard to the publick interest obliges me to beg leave to resign my commission, which I hereby do, at the same time humbly requesting, that the Congress would proceed to a determination on the memorial exhibited against me by my officers, as I value my reputation more than life.* If I have erred, I have erred with those who have gone before me, and it has been the fault of my head and not of my heart.

The present untoward circumstances shall not alter my conduct, nor abate my zeal, and whenever I shall be called upon again to serve my country, I shall, with the greatest pleasure, obey the summons.

I am, gentlemen, with the utmost regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN BULL.

To the Honourable Continental Congress of the United Colonies, now sitting at Philadelphia.

TESTIMONY OF THE QUAKERS.

Ancient Testimony and Principles of the People called Quakers, renewed, with respect to the King and Government; and touching the Commotions now prevailing in these and other parts of AMERICA, addressed to the People in general.

A religious concern for our friends and fellow-subjects of every denomination, and, more especially, for those of all ranks, who, in the present commotions, are engaged in publick employments and stations, induces us earnestly to beseech every individual, in the most solemn manner, to consider the end and tendency of the measures they are promoting, and on the most impartial inquiry into the state of their minds, carefully to examine whether they are acting in the fear of God, and in conformity to the precepts and doctrine of our Lord Jesus Christ, whom we profess to believe in, and that, by him alone, we expect to be saved from our sins.

The calamities and afflictions which now surround us should, as we apprehend, affect every mind with the most awful consideration of the dispensations of Divine Providence to mankind, in general, in former ages, and that as the sins and iniquities of the people subjected them to grievous sufferings, the same causes still produce the like effects. The inhabitants of these Provinces were long signally favoured with peace and plenty. Have the returns of true thankfulness been generally manifest? Have integrity and godly simplicity been maintained, and religiously regarded? Hath a religious care to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly, been evident? Hath the precept of Christ, to do unto others as we would they should do unto us, been the governing rule of our conduct? Hath an upright, impartial desire to prevent the slavery and oppression of our fellow-men, and to restore them to their natural right, to true Christian liberty, been cherished and encouraged? Or have pride, wantonness, luxury, profaneness, a partial spirit, and forgetfulness of the goodness and mercies of God, become lamentably prevalent. Have we not, therefore, abundant occasion to break off from our sins by righteousness, and our iniquities by showing mercy to the poor; and with true contrition and abasement of soul, to humble ourselves, and supplicate the almighty Preserver of men, to show favour, and to renew unto us a state of tranquillity and peace? It is our fervent desire that this may soon appear to be the pious resolution of the people in general, of all ranks and denominations; then may we have a well-grounded hope, that wisdom from above, which is pure, peaceable, and full of mercy and good fruits, will preside and govern in the deliberations of those who, in these perilous times, undertake the transaction of the most important publick affairs; and that, by their steady care and endeavours, constantly to act under the influences of this wisdom, those of inferior stations will be incited diligently to pursue those measures which make for peace, and tend to the reconciliation of contending parties, on principles dictated by the spirit of Christ, who "came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them." Luke ix. 56. We are so fully assured that these principles are the most certain and effectual means of preventing the extreme misery and desolations of wars and bloodshed, that we are constrained to entreat all, who profess faith in Christ, to manifest that they really believe in him, and desire to obtain the blessings he pronounced to the makers of peace. Matthew, v. 9. His spirit ever leads to seek for, and improve every opportunity of promoting peace and reconciliation, and constantly to remember, that, as we really confide in him, he can, in his own time, change the hearts of all men in such manner, that the way to obtain it, hath been often opened, contrary to every human prospect and expectation.

May we, therefore, heartily and sincerely unite in supplications to the Father of Mercies, to grant the plentiful effusions of his spirit to all, and, in an especial manner, to those in superior stations, that they may, with sincerity, guard against and reject all such measures and councils as may increase and perpetuate the discord, animosities, and unhappy contentions, which now sorrowfully abound.

We cannot, but with distressed minds, beseech all such, in the most solemn and awful manner, to consider that, if by their acting and persisting in a proud, selfish spirit, and not regarding the dictates of true wisdom, such measures are pursued as tend to the shedding of innocent blood, in the day when they, and all men, shall appear at the judgment-seat of Christ, to receive a reward according to their works, they will be excluded from his favour, and their portion will be in everlasting misery. See Mat. xxv. 41; 2 Cor. v. 10. The peculiar evidence of Divine regard manifested to our ancestors, in the founding and settlement of these Provinces, we have often commemorated, and desire ever to remember with true thankfulness and reverent admiration.

When we consider, that at the time they were persecuted and subjected to severe sufferings, as a people unworthy the benefits of religious or civil society, the hearts of the kings and rulers, under whom they thus suffered, were inclined to grant them these fruitful countries, and intrusted them with charters of very extensive powers and privileges; that on their arrival here, the minds of the Natives were inclined to receive them with great hospitality and friendship, and to cede to them the most valuable part of their land on very easy terms; that while the principles of justice and mercy continued to preside, they were preserved in tranquillity and peace, free from the desolating calamities of war, and their endeavours were wonderfully blessed and prospered, so that the saying of the wisest of Kings, was signally verified to them, "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him." Prov. xvi. 7.

The benefits, advantages, and favours, we have experienced by our dependance on, and connection with, the Kings and Government under which we have enjoyed this happy state, appear to demand from us the greatest circumspection, care, and constant endeavours to guard against every attempt to alter, or subvert, that dependance and connection.

The scenes lately presented to our view, and the prospect before us, we are sensible, are very distressing and discouraging; and though we lament that such amicable measures as have been proposed, both here, and in England, for the adjustment of the unhappy contests subsisting, have not yet been effectual; nevertheless, we should rejoice to observe the continuance of mutual peaceable endeavours for effecting a reconciliation, having grounds to hope that the Divine favour and blessing will attend them.

"It hath ever been our judgment and principle, since we were called to profess the light of Christ Jesus, manifested in our consciences unto this day, that the setting up and putting down Kings and Governments, is God's peculiar prerogative, for causes best known to himself, and that it is not our business to have any hand or contrivance therein; nor to be busy bodies above our station, much less to plot and contrive the ruin or overturn of any of them, but to pray for the King and safety of our nation, and good of all men; that we may live a peaceable and quiet life, in all goodness and honesty, under the Government which God is pleased to set over us."—Ancient Testimony, 1696, in Sewell's History.

May we, therefore, firmly unite in the abhorrence of all such writings and measures as evidence a desire and design to break off the happy connection we have hitherto enjoyed with the Kingdom of Great Britain, and our just and necessary subordination to the King, and those who are lawfully placed in authority under him; that thus the repeated solemn declarations made on this subject, in the Addresses sent to the King, on the behalf of the people of America in general, may be confirmed, and remain to be our firm and sincere intentions to observe and fulfil.

Signed in, and on behalf of, a meeting of the Representatives of our Religious Society, in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, held at Philadelphia, the twentieth day of the first Month, 1776.

JOHN PEMBERTON, Clerk.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[Referred to Mr. Ward, Mr. Paine, Mr. Paca, Mr. Lee, and Mr. Rodney.]

In Committee of Safety, New-York, }
January 20, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: This will be delivered to you by Mr. John Foster, who was a member of our last Provincial Congress, and is a warm friend to American liberty. In the last Summer, during the continuance of our Provincial Resolve against the exportation of live stock, and before the non-exportation ordered by the Continental Congress took effect, he obtained from the Provincial Congress license to export live stock for the purpose of importing powder, the execution of which he suspended until he could send his vessel out without danger of molestation from the man-of-war; and, as the season of the year now gives him security against that danger, he is desirous of pursuing his object, for which end he has put himself to considerable expense. He, therefore, applied to us for a continuance of his permission, conceiving that, as it was originally granted before the non-exportation took effect, this Committee has the power to give such continuance. We informed him that we were clearly of opinion that he had lost his opportunity, and that we could not relieve him; he, thereupon, signified his intention of applying to the Continental Congress on that subject, as well as concerning a large ship which he is now building, and which he intends to offer for sale to Congress, and requested our recommendation, in hopes it would give his application weight. We, therefore, beg leave to recommend him, through you, to the Congress, as a gentleman worthy of the notice of that respectable body.

We have it much at heart to prevent, as effectually as possible, the importation of British and Irish goods. To this object our attention has been called by a late importation by the way of St. Eustatia. According to the present regulation, the reshipping of the goods is the only punishment, in point of property, to be inflicted on the offender; and we think it absolutely necessary to substitute confiscation, instead of the reshipping of the goods, as the most effectual means to check offences of that kind; and, in this view, we beg leave to recommend the proposed amendment to your attention.

We have thought it necessary to appoint a Barrackmaster for the City and County of New-York, in order that the barracks in this city may constantly be kept in a proper state for the comfortable accommodation of the Continental troops that may, from time to time, be posted here, or be marching through this city. We have nominated Garret Roorback to that office, and, therefore, entreat you to procure the settlement of this salary by the Congress.

In a resolve of Congress of the 8th instant, it is recommended to this Committee to inquire "whether the depth of water in Hudson's River, below the Battery, may not be easily lessened, so as to prevent large ships passing." We are at a loss to determine, with any certainty, what battery is meant, and request an explanation on that head.

We have appointed a person, agreeable to the resolve of Congress of the 2d instant, for collecting copies of all Petitions, Memorials, and Remonstrances which have been presented to the Throne and either of the Houses of Parliament since 1762, and the answer to them.

We agree that the reasons you assign against making application for liberty to export flax-seed are sufficient, and, therefore, think it best to withhold such application.

The business recommended to us in the former part of the resolve of the 8th instant, for securing the Port of New-York, has been some time under our consideration. We have had an accurate sounding of the channel, which, with the plan for the securing the port, and a calculation of the expense that will attend it, we shall communicate to you as soon as possible.

On the subject of the resolve of Congress for an exchange of Lieutenant Tylee, we beg leave to inform the Congress that, a few days before the receipt of that resolve, application was made to Captain Vandeput, under our directions, on that subject, by a person connected with Lieutenant Tylee, to procure his exchange. Captain Vandeput answered that it was not in his power to exchange him at present; that he had, long since, wrote to his Admiral for directions on that subject, the answer to which had miscarried; and that he had not any directions to exchange. We have appointed a member to request the Mayor of this city to use his influence with Captain Vandeput, or Captain Parker, to make a second application to the Admiral on that matter.

We have received from you, gentlemen, sundry requests about our accounts. We are so few in number, and continually so overpressed with the despatch of publick matters, that it has not yet been in our power to give due attention to that affair. We will endeavour to employ assistance, and have the accounts prepared as soon as possible.

We are, most respectfully, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants. By order of the Committee:

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Chairman.

To the Delegates of the Colony of New-York, in Congress.

JOHN BRICKELL TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As this Colony has vested you with the legislative power, and you are the only parents to whom we, as children, look up for justice and protection, I hope the application of an innocent, suffering individual, and a stranger, will not be considered as impertinent, or treated with neglect.

On Wednesday, the 12th instant, being abroad about my lawful business, some wicked persons, taking advantage of the publick disturbances, and of the opportunity which a number of soldiers, and others, being in the house where I lodged gave them, forced themselves in my chamber, broke open my chest and clothes-press, and robbed me of my linen apparel, and other things, to the value of ninety or one hundred dollars, a loss which, in my present circumstances, being at a distance from my friends, and having no means of obtaining a supply, is particularly grievous.

Now, gentlemen, as I have incontestable evidence that I have always spoken and acted as became a friend to America, since the commencement of the unhappy dispute with Great Britain, I am induced to hope you will take my misfortune into consideration, and afford me such relief as may be consistent with the publick honour and justice.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,

JOHN BRICKELL.

To the Honourable the Delegates of the Provincial Congress, for the Colony of New-York.

New-York, January 20, 1776.

I, the subscriber, do certify that I have known John Brickell to speak and act, since the commencement of our troubles, as became a friend to American liberty.

ROBERT HARPUR, Deputy Chairman.

COLONEL McDUGALL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I was this moment honoured with your Excellency's favour of the 13th instant, on the subject of cannon and shells. I should long ere now have forwarded the latter, agreeable to Colonel Knox's memorandum, if I had not been interdicted by a former favour. You may rest assured that all possible despatch will be given to expedite the shells; but, as the men-of-war's boats often row guard to where the stores lie, I shall be obliged to watch a suitable opportunity. The quantity of powder imported here was four hundred and sixty-five quarter barrels, less than six tons; and I can now inform you, without danger to the Colony, that, if three hundred pounds of that article would save the Colony from destruction, we could not command that quantity before the above supply. Part of this we have paid to Jersey, for powder borrowed of them last Summer, sent to your camp; and the Colony was so bare that many of the principal Counties have not had one grain of it. We judge it most prudent to supply the sea-frontier Counties first. We daily expect the arrival of more, and, whenever we have a tolerable supply for the most exposed parts of the Colony, you may depend on receiving from us all the assistance in our power. I hope your Excellency will excuse the informalities of this, as the post is detained for it.

I am, in haste, with great truth and regard, your Excellency's most obedient, and most humble servant,

ALEXANDER McDUGALL.

To General Washington.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 29, 1776.]

Lebanon, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I have to acquaint you that, on the requisition of General Washington, with advice of the Committee of Safety here, I gave orders for raising, by voluntary enlistment, two regiments, consisting of seven hundred and fifty men each, to aid General Lee in an enterprise he is pushing in the Colony of New-York. I understand that men are raised, with the addition of three hundred men, in the County of Hartford, for the same purpose; that, on the 16th instant, I had advice, by the copy of a letter from Brigadier-General Wooster, sent express from Colonel Burrell, of Canaan, informing that the army under the command of General Montgomery, at Quebeck, had met with a repulse, in attempting to storm the city; that the General, with sundry officers and privates, to the amount of between fifty and an hundred, were slain, and about three hundred more of the army taken prisoners, earnestly requesting relief, &c.; pursuant to which, I gave orders for raising, by voluntary enlistment, another regiment in the northern part of the Colony, consisting of seven hundred and fifty men, officers included, to march, forthwith, to reinforce our army at Canada, to be retained in the service till the 1st of November next, on the same pay, wages, and allowance, as the other troops already raised for the Continental service. No sooner were these orders issued, but an express arrived from General Washington, requesting a reinforcement from this Colony, of four regiments, to support the army near Boston, representing that the new levies were not filled up, and that the Minute-Men belonging to the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay would, undoubtedly, return from the camp by the 1st of February, and might leave the lines much exposed. As my Council of Safety were present, we apprehended it absolutely necessary to comply with the requisition, as far as it was in our power. Accordingly, orders are making out for that purpose, to raise, by voluntary enlistment, four regiments, to be retained in the service till the 1st of April next, on the Continental encouragements.

We are distressed for want of good arms; are forwarding the making arms, but this with difficulty. We have ordered a ship-of-war to be forthwith built, to carry twenty nine-pounders; and our other naval preparations are forwarding with all possible expedition. I hope no time will be lost to forward Continental bills, to enable us to promote the service, as our Treasury is nearly exhausted and this Colony largely in advance, and expenses are daily arising for the general cause.

We hope that provision will be made for the security of New-York, from that Colony, New-Jersey, and Pennsylvania, so as to render it unnecessary to call for men from this Colony. It appears necessary that the utmost exertion be used to prevent the mischievous operations of our enemies in that Colony.

I having no answer relative to my former request for bills, occasions my mentioning it in this; nor to my motion whether the three Canadian prisoners may not be suffered to return to the General at Canada; and several other things mentioned in former letters.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable President Hancock.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I have your favour of the 6th instant with the enclosed roll, have observed the contents, but no other rolls are come to hand to send by this opportunity. My time has lately been taken up in taking measures to aid and assist Major-General Lee, in the service he is charged with into the Colony of New-York. For that end, two regiments, of seven hundred and fifty men each, are ordered in the westward part of this Colony, and three hundred men are voluntarily going to his assistance from the County of Hartford. When this was done, I received Brigadier-General Wooster's letter of the 6th instant, giving the intelligence of the repulse of our troops before Quebeck, whereupon orders are given to raise another regiment, of seven hundred and fifty volunteers, in the northern parts of this Colony, to serve in the Northern Army until the first of November next, on the Continental pay, wages and allowances, to be done with all possible expedition. When this was just finished, I received a letter from General Washington, of the 16th, per Bennett, requesting four regiments to be enlisted forthwith, to serve at the camp before Boston, to supply the places of the soldiers who came off the 1st of February, until the 1st April next, to give time for the regiments to be filled. This is now under consideration. Please to give me intelligence of what has happened at Quebeck, and is doing, and must be done, at Albany, and the places adjacent. Concerning the arms left by our troops at the northward, as we have directed one-half of our men to expect arms at Ticonderoga and St. John's, we apprehend there are many more arms retained, which we shall want for our troops, and wish to have accounts of them, and of every intelligence needful.

I am, sir, your obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 18th instant I received this day, for which I return you my thanks.

Upon receiving the melancholy intelligence of the fall of the brave Montgomery and the repulse of our troops in their attempt against the city of Quebeck, I called a Council of General Officers to determine upon the necessary steps to be taken upon the alarming occasion. Of their determination I wrote you yesterday, to which I beg leave to refer you.

The early attention which you and your honourable Council have paid to this important business, has anticipated my requisition, and claims, in a particular manner, the thanks of every well-wishing American.

I am in hopes, by this time, that several are on their march, and that with the troops which will follow from your Government, this, and New-Hampshire, that our affairs, in a little time, in that quarter, will wear a more promising aspect than what they now do.

I am, sir, very respectfully, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

INSTRUCTIONS TO CAPTAIN CHARLES DYAR.

To Captain CHARLES DYAR, of the United Armed Schooner HARRISON :

SIR: You being appointed Captain and Commander of the armed schooner Harrison, in the service of the United Colonies, are to pay all attention and obedience to the following Instructions :

1st. You are to proceed, immediately, on a cruise against such vessels as may be found on the high seas, or elsewhere, bound inward or outward to or from Boston, in the service of the Ministerial army, and to take and seize all such vessels, laden with soldiers, arms, ammunition or provisions, going to or from said town of Boston, or, which you shall have good reason to suspect, are employed for the purpose of aiding or assisting the Ministerial troops or navy.

2d. If you should be so successful as to take any of said vessels, you are, immediately, to send them to the nearest and safest port to this camp, under a careful prize master, directing him to deliver said prize unto the Agent by me appointed for the port into which a prize is carried, (if any there;) if none should be in that port, notice is to be given to the nearest Agent thereto; at same time an account of such capture to be transmitted to Head-Quarters, with all particulars thereto belonging, by express.

3d. You are to be very particular and diligent in your search after all letters, or other papers, tending to discover the design of the enemy, or of any other kind, and to forward all such to me as soon as possible.

4th. Whatever prisoners you take must be treated with kindness and humanity; their private stock of money and apparel to be given up to them after being searched; and when they arrive at any port, they are to be delivered up to the Agent, if any there; if not, to the Committee of Safety of such port.

5th. For your encouragement, and that of the other officers and men, to diligence and activity, over and above their pay, which will be the same as in the Army of the United Colonies, you shall be entitled to one-third part of every vessel and cargo, after condemnation in the Court of Admiralty, which shall be by you taken and sent into port; if she is an armed vessel that resists, as an inducement for you, your officers and men, to act courageously, one-half of the vessel and cargo will be allowed to you, which parts are to be divided in the following proportions :

Captain, - - 6 shares.	Mate, - - - 1½ shares.
First Lieutenant, 5 do.	Gunner, - - 1½ do.
Second Lieutenant 4 do.	Gunner's Mate, 1½ do.
Ship's Master, - 3 do.	Private, - - 1 do.
Steward, - - 2 do.

6th. As Captain Manly is appointed Commodore of the four schooners now fitted out, he will fix upon proper signals by which you may know each other; and you are to obey him, as such, in all cases. If it should so happen that a prize is taken in sight of other vessels, fitted out at the Continental expense, or at the charge of individuals, the rule which takes place among private ships of war to be observed in the distribution of the prize money.

7th. You are to be extremely careful and frugal of your ammunition and other stores; by no means to waste any of it in salutes, or for any other purpose, but what is absolutely necessary.

8th. You, your officers and men, are, from the date hereof, to consider yourselves engaged in the service of the United Colonies, and in every respect subject to the rules and regulations formed by the Congress for the government of the Army raised for the defence of American liberty, or as near as possible, consistent with the difference of the land and sea service, a book of which rules and articles you will receive herewith; at the end of which you, your officers and men, must subscribe your names.

9th. As it is very apparent that the ill success which attended the major part of the armed vessels in former cruises was owing to the want of industry, and inactivity of the officers who commanded, you will, therefore, take notice, that a fondness to be on shore, indolence, or inactivity, will meet with their just deserts; for, if it appears that the Captain, or any of the officers, do not exert themselves and do all that they possibly can for their own and publick good, they shall be dismissed the service, and rendered incapable of serving their country in any honourable station hereafter, in the Army or Navy.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, the 20th day of January, 1776.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

NEWBURYPORT COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Newburyport, January 16, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday forenoon appeared in our Bay a brig and a ship, which were suspected to be enemy's vessels. These vessels were soon taken and brought safe into the river. The ship was from London eleven weeks since, and is named The Friends, Archibald Bowie, master, burden about two hundred tons, laden with coals, porter, pickled cabbage, vinegar, live hogs, &c., for Government service. The ship was to enter at Boston as a transport. The brig was from Cork about ten weeks since, and is named the Sukey, Mandatt Engs, master, burden about ninety tons, laden with beef, pork, butter, hams, tongues, potatoes, &c., and owned by Lewis Gray, of Boston. Both these vessels were bound to Boston. There were two passengers in the brig, viz: Lieutenant Hill, of Earl Percy's regiment, and Mr. John Gray, son of Harrison Gray, Esq. We thought it best to forward the two masters and these two passengers to the honourable Council, to dispose of them as they may think fit, and to make what inquiries they may choose.

Mr. Marsh and Mr. Mullikin of this town, (and the first gentleman of this Committee,) have undertaken to see them safe to Watertown. They bring with them all the papers of publick concern that were found in both vessels. We would observe to their Honours that there is, besides, a number of letters to officers and soldiers in Boston, a book of military orders or regulations, we did not know but might be a matter of curiosity, if not of service, at Head-Quarters, which you will present to the General if you please. Mr. Hill begs a return of it to him finally. Messrs. Marsh and Mullikin will present their bill of charges in this matter, which their Honours will order payment of as they shall think proper.

In behalf of the Committee of Safety for this town, I am, sir, your very obedient servant, JONATHAN JACKSON.

To the President of the Honourable Council for the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay.

In Council, January 20, 1776.

On examination of the Prisoners by the major part of the Council, Ordered, that a Letter be wrote to his Excellency General Washington, and sent with two of the Prisoners, viz: Lieutenant Hill and his servant, to be at his Excellency's disposal—that a Letter be wrote to the Committee of Safety at Newburyport, and that the two Captains of the two Vessels be sent to their care and disposal; and John Gray, the other Prisoner, be sent to the Jail in Newburyport, and held in close confinement, at his own expense, until further orders.

JOHN LOWELL, Deputy Sec'y, P. T.

Watertown, January 20, 1776.

SIR: The Board, upon examination of several persons who were sent here by the Committee of Safety, and were taken on board a ship from London and a brig from Cork, both bound to Boston, find that one of the passengers in the latter is a Lieutenant in the Fifth Regiment (Earl Percy's) now in Boston. They have, therefore, ordered the said Lieutenant Hill, with his servant, to be sent to your Excellency, to be disposed of as you may think proper.

In the name and by order of the Council :

W. SEVER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Council Chamber, January 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have sent to your care Archibald Bowie and Mandatt Engs, Masters of the two Vessels lately taken and carried into Newburyport, and you are requested to see that the above-mentioned persons do not go without the limits of said Town; and, if you see cause therefor, you are desired to confine said persons, or either of them, till the further order of the Council.

In the name and by order of the Council:

W. SEVER.

To the Committee of Safety, Newburyport.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO THE COMMITTEE OF NEWBURYPORT.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, with the enclosures No. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5.

His Excellency desires, through you, sir, to return the Committee of Newburyport, his sincere thanks for their great politeness in this instance, and wishes that these prizes may be succeeded by others. I am, &c.

To Jonathan Jackson, Esq., Chairman, &c.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO THE COMMITTEE OF STONINGTON.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 8th instant. As you, from having fully inquired into matters respecting the capture of Captain Denny's vessel, must be better able to determine the propriety of the same than he is, he again refers it entirely to your decision, in full confidence, that the same will be founded upon the principles of equity and the strictest justice. I am, &c.

To Joseph Dennison, Esq., Chairman, &c.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 15th instant. His Excellency is glad to hear of the vessels being libelled, and doubts not of your assiduity to have the legality of the captures determined, as soon as it shall be in your power.

His Excellency is well pleased that the schooner Harrison is yet good and fit for service; and, from the character you have given Captain Dyar, is willing you should give him the command of her, and to indulge such men as may offer their service to enlist only for six months. The Captain thinks that a squaresail, and some other small sails, will be of great advantage to her. This his Excellency leaves to your judgment. If they are necessary, in your opinion, and the expense will not be out of proportion to the benefit likely to be derived from them, you will please to provide them. You will immediately despatch the Captain upon a cruise, with such sails as he has, if they will answer. Those he wants may be made while he is out.

As to the vessels taken and carried into Dartmouth, by Major Tupper, his Excellency thinks they ought to be libelled.

I am, sir, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON, Aid-de-camp.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO STEPHEN MOYLAN.

Cambridge, January 20, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 19th instant was delivered early yesterday, and would have been answered before this evening, had not his Excellency's time been much employed in despatching expresses to sundry places.

His Excellency is much pleased that our fleet is likely to get out again, and wishes your return as soon as you have despatched them.

Herewith you will receive the commissions you wrote for; also, a copy of private signals used by the King's ships in the American service, which his Excellency desires you to furnish each of our Captains with, and to return the copy sent, when you come back.

As to the attempt on the Fowey, he thinks that the situation of our affairs, at present, will not justify it; but, on your arrival, will consider more of it, should there be the same prospect of success that you apprehend there is now.

The report you have had is too true, but not so bad, we hope, as you have heard. However, it is certain, that the great and gallant Montgomery is no more. He, with his Aid-de-camp, Captain Macpherson, and Captain Cheeseman of New-York, fell the first fire; also, Colonel Arnold is wounded in the leg.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Stephen Moylan, Esq.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Winter-Hill, January 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The bearer hereof, Mr. Adjutant Peabody, of Colonel Reed's Regiment, earnestly desiring to go to the relief of our distressed brethren in Canada, I beg leave to recommend him to the office of Second Lieutenant, and Adjutant, in the regiment bound there, which offices he has voluntarily resigned here, and cheerfully undertakes the fatigues of a long march to relieve our worthy friends at Quebeck. I can assure you that he has ever behaved well, and been highly esteemed here, as well for his conduct in the common business of his office, as for his courage and intrepidity at Bunker's Hill. Any favour you shall please to show him, shall be gratefully acknowledged by, your much obliged, and humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Honourable General Assembly.

COLONEL WOODFORD TO THE VIRGINIA CONVENTION.

Norfolk, January 21, 1776.

We have had a party, these ten days, upon Tanner's Creek, who yesterday had a brush with a tender's boat, attempting to land at Sprawl's plantation; they beat her off, and killed one man.

Eight o'clock at night.—About four this afternoon, another heavy cannonading began from the Liverpool and Otter, during which the enemy landed, and set fire to some houses that remained unhurt, near to which is called Town Point Wharf. I sent strong parties to reinforce our water guards. We had three fine men killed with cannon shot, and one wounded, who, it is thought, will lose his arm. We have found one sailor and two Negroes dead, and suppose many others were killed and wounded that were carried off in their boats. Captains Green and Markham arrived in the height of the fire.

I am, sir, &c.

GEORGE STRICKER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Fredericktown, January 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am informed that my company of Light-Infantry are to be armed with rifles; shall, therefore, esteem your directions to some person to contract for the same, they being to be had here. The gunsmiths have offered to furnish the company with the same, in a few weeks. Nothing retards me now, but the want of arms and recruiting cash. I have recruited twenty-one select men in two days, and make no doubt of completing my company in ten more.

Please to send, by the bearer, Mr. Benjamin Ford, or any one of my Lieutenants, the recruiting cash. Imagine shall want about two hundred and fifty pounds.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE STRICKER.

To the Council of Safety.

N. B. If a person is directed to contract for rifles, it will be necessary, also, to contract for bullet-pouches and powder-horns.

BERKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Standing Committee for Berks County, January 20, 1776:

Mark Bird, Esq., in the chair.

The Committee, taking into their consideration the present state of the Association in this County, and being persuaded of the pressing necessity of being prepared for defence, do earnestly recommend it to their brethren to sign the Articles of Association formed by the House of Assembly at their last meeting; this Committee trusting that such amendments will be made, at the next sitting of Assembly, as will make the Association not only more effectual, but more consonant to the principles of justice and equality.

And afterwards, at a meeting of the Committee, on the 30th of the same month,

Resolved, unanimously, That it is the opinion of this Committee, that it will be highly requisite, in case the Assembly should not think proper to make the necessary amendments in the said Association, that a Provincial Convention be held for that purpose; and they do, accordingly, appoint Edward Biddle, Mark Bird, Jonathan Potts, Daniel Broadhead, Baltzer Gheer, Collinson Read, Esquires, and Messrs. Valentine Rekert, Nicholas Lutz, Sebastian Levan, and Richard Tea, to attend the said Convention, in behalf of this County.

By order of the Committee:

COLLINSON READ, Secretary.

BUCKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Bucks County, January 21, 1776.

The Committee of Safety of this Province have lately published a process for the making of Saltpetre, with a view to induce the inhabitants of this Colony to set about the work; but, as no description, however exact, can so fully answer the purpose of instruction as an actual exhibition of the process, this Committee, at the request of the Committee of Safety, hath appointed James Wallace, Andrew Kichlein, and Joseph Fenton, Jun., to attend the Saltpetre Works in Philadelphia, so as to obtain a competent knowledge of the method practised at the Saltpetre Works there, that they may be qualified to exhibit the process to such persons as are desirous of being useful to their country, by entering into the manufacture of that useful and necessary commodity; and James Wallace is, also, appointed to receive all the Saltpetre that shall be made in this county, who will be furnished with Powder, to pay, in that article, one-fourth part the value of the Saltpetre, and the rest of the price will be punctually paid in cash by Mr. Wallace.

By order of the Committee:

JOSEPH HART, Chairman.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO LORD STIRLING.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, Sunday Evening,
8 o'clock, January 21, 1776. }

MY LORD: By the seizure of a man, brought up from the Hook by one of our pilots, from on board a transport, we, this instant, have learned her being in a distressed condition, and waiting there for direction and assistance from this port. She has been out thirteen weeks, destined for the Head-Quarters of the Ministerial troops, so that, if she receives relief, she will, doubtless, proceed for Boston. She is deeply laden with all kinds of stores for the army.

Our intelligence is from letters found on the prisoner, directed to certain persons under fictitious directions, which were intended to be conveyed, by him, on board of the man-of-war. It would greatly serve the publick cause could she be seized. There are the most evident reasons why we, in New-York, ought not, in point of prudence, to do it. We have two ships-of-war lying here, and our exports, as yet, happily, uninterrupted by them.

This discovery cannot be kept long a secret, and we think it our duty to submit this case to your immediate attention. Should it be known to the ships-of-war, they will, doubtless, send down their boats, which consideration has induced us, by express, to furnish you with this opportunity of serving the publick.

The above reasons point out the propriety of keeping the source of your information a secret, and, to this end, we beg you will destroy this as soon as read.

We are, my Lord, with great respect, your Lordship's most obedient.

By order of the Committee:

P. S. She is a ship of between three and four hundred tons, a galley-built ship, without a head; has yellow sides, blue quarter-boards, with the trophies of war painted on the quarter-boards; has six three-pounders on the quarter-deck. She has, it is thought, a quantity of ammunition on board. She has about twenty hands, and lies hovering off and on, without the Hook, and will not leave that station till she receives intelligence from shore. Captain William Rogers, the bearer of this, will be a proper person to take the direction of the undertaking.

To the Right Honourable the Earl of Stirling.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO JOSEPH HALLETT.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, January 21, 1776.

SIR: Through the misfortunes and indisposition of sundry members we are very few in number. We have only eight members, when all meet who are in town, or can be collected. We have had more cases than one, in which we should have thought it our duty to have spared a member from the Committee, for important matters at some distance, if our number would have permitted us so to do.

Thus situated, we think it our duty, to request you to come to New-York, and attend the Committee as soon as the situation of your health will admit.

[A similar letter was sent to Mr. John Inlay.]

GENERAL WOOSTER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Montreal, January 21, 1776.

SIR: I herewith enclose a letter just received from Colonel Arnold, and take this opportunity most heartily to condole with you for the loss of the brave and most amiable General Montgomery, and the other brave officers and soldiers who fell with him, and for the failure of success in the unfortunate attack upon Quebeck, the particulars of which, you will, doubtless, have received before this reaches you.

I should have gone down, immediately, upon hearing of the defeat, to the camp before Quebeck, but the necessity of securing this place, and the country round, in our interest, induced all the officers and our friends here, to request me not to leave this place, till we should have a reinforcement from the Colonies; when they arrive, I expect to proceed on with them. We have many enemies in this Province, particularly among the Clergy, who are using every artifice to excite the Canadians to take up arms against us; but I hope to be able to prevent any thing of the kind. I have called in many of the commissions given by Governor Carleton, and have given out new ones under the Congress, and expect soon to have them spread through the country, which, I expect, and indeed I perceive already, that it answers very salutary purposes; after receiving new commissions, they look upon themselves as bound, and unless we succeed, they will all be treated as Traitors. I allow each Parish to choose their own Captains, a circumstance which pleases them much; and there has been but few instances that they have not chosen a zealous friend to our cause.

The taking of Quebeck must be a matter of the greatest consequence to the Colonies, but at present we are very ill provided for it. The place is strong. I believe they are determined to defend it to the last extremity. We have but about four tons of powder in the Province. We have, I believe, a sufficiency of small cannon, none larger than twelve pounders, except two brass twenty-fours, which are at St. John's. We have expectations of having shot and shells cast at Three-Rivers.

In my opinion, it will not only be necessary to forward men and powder from the Colonies, but also, a number of heavy cannon, such as thirty-two pounders, and one thirteen inch mortar, if no more, and some small ones, if to be had. I understand that the large mortar from Ticonderoga, with a number of pieces of cannon, are gone to your camp. It is of the greatest importance, that whatever is sent from the Colonies, should be here by the middle of March, at farthest, for, after that time, the gentlemen here inform me, it will be impossible to transport any thing from this place to Quebeck, on account of the river's being filled with ice, and water, of consequence, overflows the flat country. Therefore, if any of our wants can be supplied from your camp, I could wish that whatever is sent may be forwarded as expeditiously as possible.

I am, sir, with the greatest esteem and respect, your most obedient servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To General Washington.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, January 21, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 6th instant I received, and laid before the General Assembly. It had great weight; and I believe that no supplies to the enemy's ships would have been permitted, had it not appeared to us that the members of the Continental Congress were of opinion that they should be continued. The following is an extract of a letter from our Delegates on that subject: "A memorial from the town of Newport, forwarded to us by express, having been referred to the General Assembly, we now enclose that with the papers pertinent thereto. We should not do justice to the benevolence of Congress, or to the distressed situation of the town, if we did not acquaint you that all the gentlemen who spoke in this debate, expressed the most tender regard for the distressed people, and gave it as their opinion, that, as long as the ships-of-war now in the harbour could be supplied with fresh provisions, beer, and such like, necessities for their own immediate support, consistently with the great principles of the general good and safety of America, the town ought to be permitted to furnish them; the greatest care being taken by Government that no more than the barely necessary supplies be furnished them, from time to time, lest the common enemy, in other parts of the Continent should, through them, obtain provisions." In consequence of which, the General Assembly have ordered that Captain Wallace should be supplied, as you will see by the enclosed vote. But, as he may cannonade, and even burn the town, a discretionary power, by a private vote, which it is designed should be kept a profound secret, is given to the commander of the forces on Rhode-Island, to permit supplies in cases of imminent danger, until the next session, to be holden on the last Monday in next month.

Similar measures to these taken by Connecticut, as mentioned in your letter, have been adopted by this Colony. Besides which, the commanding officer of any body of the Continental troops is empowered to impress carriages, &c.

The General Assembly ordered an address to the Congress, a copy of which I do myself the honour to enclose you. We are not without hopes that the Congress will take the whole brigade into their service, especially as the necessity arising from so powerful an invasion, of establishing the whole force we have ordered, is clear and manifest. From the nature of the war, and the circumstances of the Colonies, I think every idea of partial and colonial defence ought to be given up. There must be a supreme superintending power, to exert and direct the force of the whole for the defence and safety of all; otherwise the exertions and burdens will not only be very unequal, to the greatly endangering the union upon which the welfare of America depends, but Colony after Colony may be subdued, without the chance of making resistance. I shall only add, on this head, that unless the Continent enter upon the defence of the Colony, it must be abandoned, to the great detriment of the common cause. I beg the favour of your Excellency seriously to consider this matter, and to give us your assistance, with the members of the Congress, for procuring such a body of forces as the interest of this and the United Colonies, in general, shall require.

We had procured upwards of an hundred blankets, which were designed for the Army under your immediate command; but the descent upon Prudence obliged us to send forty of them to our troops upon that Island; and to supply the additional forces ordered to be raised, will demand every blanket that can be spared in the Colony.

I am, with great respect and esteem, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Colony of Rhode-Island, &c., in General Assembly, }
January 17, 1776. }

It is Voted and Resolved, That the Town Council of the town of Newport be allowed to supply Captain Wallace, so long as he shall remain peaceably within the Colony, without committing any depredations upon the Islands, or upon any of the lands in the Colony, weekly with two thousand pounds weight of Beef, and with Beer as usual, under the direction of the commanding-officer of the troops stationed on Rhode-Island; that he appoint the person to provide and deliver the said Provisions; and that no Member of either House of Assembly be appointed to deliver the same, or to go on board of either of the ships-of-war under said Wallace's command, on any occasion whatever.

And this Assembly considering the situation and defenceless state of the town of Newport, do advise, and strongly recommend it to the inhabitants of said town, forthwith to remove to some place of safety, all their aged people, women, children, and those who are unable to assist in defence of the place, together with their valuable effects.

And do further, Vote and Resolve, That the sum of two hundred Pounds, lawful money, be paid out of the General Treasury, to the Committee hereinafter appointed, which shall be improved in removing such poor persons in said town, as are incapable of removing themselves, and for no other use whatever. That Messrs. John Collins, John Cooke, Thomas Freebody, George Irish, and Daniel Holloway, or the major part of them be, and they are, hereby, appointed a Committee for that purpose. That the said Committee be empowered to settle the price of the transportation of the effects of the inhabitants of the said town to the places where they shall be shipped; and, also, the price of transportation over the ferries; and that each of the said Committee be empowered to impress teams, horses, and cattle, to remove such effects at the prices which shall be so affixed.

A true copy:

HENRY WARD, Secretary.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 21, 1776.

SIR: In the hurry of my last despatches to you, of the 19th instant, I forgot to intimate, that for the encouragement of the regiment destined for Canada, a month's advanced pay will be allowed officers and soldiers by me, on behalf of Congress. At the same time, I think it but right that you should be apprized of the intention of this Government to advance their regiment another month's pay, to enable the men to provide for so long and fatiguing a march, and, in the mean time, have something for their families to subsist on during their absence.

I have no doubt but that this last advance will be pleasing to Congress, and that the money will be speedily refunded; but as I have no authority to direct it, and would not appear, by any act of mine, to put these three regiments intended for Canada, upon a different footing from those which have been raising for this Army, I only give you a hint of the intention of this Government, if you think proper that the regiment from your Colony may be placed upon the same footing, as I know all kind of distinctions are considered by troops with an evil and jealous eye.

Such necessities, as are absolutely requisite for the march of this regiment, you will please to have provided upon the best terms you can, and a regular account, with vouchers thereof, left, that payment may be made. The importance of despatch will, I am persuaded, appear in so urgent and pressing a light to you, that I need add nothing on this head, but shall be glad to hear what progress you make in the business, being with the sincerest regard and esteem, sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

[Same to the Honourable Matthew Thornton, New-Hampshire.]

INFORMATION TO THE TOWN OF SAVANNAH, FROM GOVERNOUR WRIGHT.*

Thursday night, 10 o'clock, January 18, 1776.

The Governour sent for Doctor Jones and Joseph Clay, and acquainted them that he had sent for them as the only remaining Representatives of the town of Savannah, and acquainted them that the following men-of-war, with the packet and one or two other vessels, were arrived at Cockspur, viz: the Syren, of 28 guns; the Tamar, of 18 or 20 guns; the Raven, of 18 guns; the Cherokee, of 16 guns.

That he was very certain their orders were to treat any of the Colonies who were in arms, had raised fortifications, seized any of the Crown officers, or King's stores, as in a state of rebellion, and would, if in their power, destroy their towns and property, wherever they would come at them; and, he apprehended, they would look on us as in that state, and, as far as in their power, treat us accordingly.

That the Raven, man-of-war, was stationed here. That they were all in want of provisions, particularly the Tamar, the Cherokee, and the packet, which vessels, as well as the Syren, he believed, would depart the Province as soon as they were supplied with provisions. That if he, the Governour, could be assured from the inhabitants of the town that they would supply them with provisions, and permit their boats to come to town unmolested, and purchase such provisions as they can get, that he would go down on board these ships and endeavour to settle every thing with the officers in such a manner as to prevent their doing any injury to this town, or the inhabitants of the Province, or their property.

That if they could not be supplied with provisions, they certainly would take it by force, where they can find it, and will, if in their power, attack this town and destroy it, which, as several of the vessels were of an easy draft of water, he presumed they could get up to town and effect.

Savannah, Monday, January 22, 1776.

Doctor Jones and Joseph Clay waited on the Governour in consequence of a written request from him, when he informed them, that as soon as he heard there was a man-of-war in the river, which was on Tuesday last, he sent orders to Captain Lightenstone to go on board them and to inquire who they were and what number, and endeavour to learn their intentions. And as the Governour was apprehensive, if any of the man-of-war boats came up to town, it might be the occasion of disputes between them and the inhabitants, and, perhaps, bloodshed, for which reason he directed Captain Lightenstone to acquaint them that the town was in much confusion, and to request that they would not send any of their boats up to town.

But his orders reached Captain Lightenstone at Skidaway, on Wednesday morning, who, immediately, went on board the men-of-war, and returned from them on Thursday afternoon, and to Savannah this morning; who acquainted him, the Governour, that in pursuance of his orders, he had been on board the ships-of-war—that they informed him, by Lightenstone, that the Syren and the packet would, probably, go to sea this day or to-morrow; that the Tamar had sprung her main-yard and was in want of provisions, as was the Cherokee; that as soon as she (the Tamar) had got a new yard, which they expected to supply themselves with from Tybee, that she (the Cherokee) would, as soon as that was done, and they had supplied themselves with provisions, which they expected soon to procure, having already got five or seven beeves from Tybee, and expected to get some other provisions from Little Tybee, (which they were then about sending for,) go to sea also; and then there would be left in this harbour only the Raven, which is stationed here; and that he apprehended this town had nothing to fear from the men-of-war, unless they should attempt any thing in consequence of hearing of his, the Governour, being under arrest, which he assured us if they had, it was not from him or with his knowledge.

* On the 18th of January, Joseph Hoberham, Esq., who was then a member of the House, raised a party of volunteers, took Governour Wright prisoner, paroled him to his house, and placed a sentinel at his door; prohibiting all intercourse with the members of his Council, the King's officers, or other persons who were supposed to be inimical to the American cause. The Governour became tired of confinement, and with the assistance of John Malryne, effected his escape from the back part of his house, on the night of the 11th of February.—M-Call.

THOMAS JOHNSON, JUN. TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Fredericktown, January 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Stricker has accepted his commission, and has had, and I expect will have, good success in instilling. He proposes to be very particular in the men he takes, and much wishes his, the Light Infantry company, to be armed with rifles; both Mr. Price and he think rifles for a company may be soon got. Considering the difficulty of speedily arming our troops, I think with them, it will be advisable to lodge a sum of money in the hands of somebody here. Nobody will do more justice to the publick than C. Beatty, to purchase up what rifles can be got. My brother, this morning, let Stricker have one hundred of the two hundred which he brought up for building the town Jail, to assist him in recruiting. Mr. Ford will be a very proper hand to bring up what money you may think proper to send Stricker. I imagine the two hundred and fifty pounds he applies for, is not too much, as well as what you may think proper for Captain Barrett, many of whose company I expect will be very good riflemen, if collected in his neighbourhood, from where I think they may be best spared. Major Price tells me a good many publick arms, some of which have been repaired at the expense of those who have them, may be collected with industry. I should be glad you would send up an order for the Committee to collect all they can, and if you think as I do, to allow the people the reasonable expense of necessary repairs, where the muskets came to their hands out of order.

I understand that about one hundred gun-locks, fit for rifles, and that would do well enough to put to repaired muskets, are to be had in town. I wish you would send up about sixty pounds to purchase them. Mr. Beatty, my brother, or myself, will do it, if you please.

Price tells me he gained an acquaintance with one Royston, at the camp of the Artillery, who was a very clever young man, and desires to come to the South; and from Price's account of him, he would be very serviceable in our Second Artillery Company, and he would be well satisfied with a First Lieutenantcy. I wish, if there is still room, that he may be preferred to it. A trifling circumstance prevented his coming with Price, and he even talked of following him. Major Price writes to him that troops are raising in this Province, and that it is likely he will be employed, which, he says, he dare say, will bring him, with a strong recommendation from General Gates, to whom he is well known.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient,

TH. JOHNSON, JUN.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO STEPHEN STEWARD.

[No. 3.]

Annapolis, January 22, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety are informed that you have been at Philadelphia, and are acquainted with the method the Committee have taken there to prevent the approach of men-of-war and armed vessels to that city. As the Convention have resolved, that the sum of five thousand nine hundred pounds be appropriated to fortify Annapolis, and place obstructions in the channel of the river, the Council would be glad to see you, and take your opinion on any plans or designs, that may be thought necessary, in carrying this resolution of the Convention into execution. Mr. Wallace has been so kind as to lay before us your letter of the 20th instant, on which we shall be glad to confer with you. We are, with respect, sir, yours, &c.

To Mr. Stephen Steward, West-River.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM ROBERTS.

[No. 4.]

Annapolis, January 22, 1776.

SIR: A Company of Artillery, or Matrosses, was ordered to be raised, particularly for the city of Annapolis. This is a matter of consequence to all the inhabitants; we, therefore, choose to consult the Corporation with regard to the officers, and should be obliged to you to call a Corporation some day this week, or the next, at farthest, and let us know who that respectable body would recommend to us as proper persons for Captain and three Lieutenants.

We are, &c.,

To Wm. Roberts, Esq., Mayor of the City of Annapolis.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 25, 1776.—Referred to Committee of Correspondence.]

In Committee, Lancaster, January 22, 1776.

SIR: Pursuant to the directions of Congress, the Committee of this place communicated their resolves to the officers, prisoners of war in this town, and received from them the enclosed answer.

The Committee will, with cheerfulness, execute the orders of the Congress, but they are under some difficulties in this case, as we have reason to believe the officers will insist to remain with the privates, and will make no choice of residence. It will then fall on the Committee to fix the places for them; and, as those places, or some of them, may be in other Counties, we cannot compel the Committees to receive and take them into their charge, without particular direction from Congress for that purpose. But, should the Congress direct the places of their residence, they will be most punctually obeyed; and, as it is probable that, when they are removed from hence, they will refuse to give their parole, agreeable to the former resolves of Congress, we beg the Congress will direct in what manner the Committees shall proceed with them.

The bearer of this is one of the members of the Committee; his private business will detain him a day in Philadelphia, and by him we hope to receive the directions of the Congress.

I am, sir, with great esteem, your very humble servant,

By order of the Committee: GEORGE ROSS,
Chairman of the Committee.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.

Lancaster, January 20, 1776.

We, the undermentioned officers, having perused the Resolves of the Congress relative to us, transmitted to the Committee of this town, think proper to make the following answers to them:*

Answer to 1st Resolution.—That the officers are of opinion they may accept of the offer of drawing for their subsistence; at the same time, from the situation they are in, they cannot help expressing a doubt of their bills being honoured, as an alteration may take place in Great Britain, as well as in America, with regard to bills of exchange; but expect that, in this case, nothing detrimental be offered to their persons.

Answer to 2d Resolution.—That, although the officers at Lancaster do not think themselves, by any means, concerned in the article of the Resolve relative to the officers at Trenton, yet they think proper to declare, that their having been placed in taverns by those officers under whose conduct they were brought to this place, laid them under the necessity of living in a more expensive manner than they otherwise would have done, and that they had frequently made application for private lodgings, but without effect.

Answer to an article of said Resolution.—That the offer of an allowance of two dollars per week, for board and lodging, is so inadequate to the manner which they, as

* Agreed to set Dr. Huddleston at liberty on the terms he mentions; and sent by him a proposition to General Carleton, that it be stipulated on both sides, not only to release all Surgeons, but that, if, by the fortune of war, the hospital of either army should fall into the power of the other, the same care should be taken of the sick and wounded as if friends, and that neither they nor the attendants of the hospital should be considered as prisoners; and, if Governour Carleton should not agree to the present release of Surgeons, Dr. Huddleston is to be on his parole to return immediately.

Officers' Answer at LANCASTER.

1. To be left on the footing it was placed on in our letter of the 18th.
2. Resolve related merely to the officers at Trenton, no complaint having been received of those of Lancaster.
3. Two dollars per week was the allowance of Congress; the officers may refuse it or add to it on their own account, as they please.
4. Inquire the meaning, high accounts from Trenton.
5. See the Resolution of Congress; express stronger than before what relates to General Schuyler's promise.
6. We shall be extremely sorry to be reduced to the necessity of confining them in prison, if they cancel their parole.
7. Clothing ordered by us; their clothing ordered to be brought up.
8. Provided for in our former letter.
- 9 and 10. It is not desired to remove any officer to the prejudice of his health.

Directions given in former letter relating to the women and children.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. IV.

gentlemen and British officers, have been accustomed to live in, in every part of His Majesty's dominions, that they decline accepting of the loan.

That, as to the article respecting innkeepers' accounts, they do not, really, comprehend the meaning of it, and, therefore, request an explanation.

In answer to the last article, respecting the officers being separated from their men, they cannot help expressing their surprise at it, having had promises to the contrary, particularly General Schuyler's; that this promise from him, and a confirmation of it under the hands of the Congress, in their orders to Captain Nott, rendered them easy; that, in consequence of this, the officers, without hesitation, gave their parole to the Committee of this town, in the manner as has been already transmitted by them. The officers will be extremely sorry to be reduced to the disagreeable necessity of cancelling that promise.

The men are in great want of their clothing, not having, now, sufficient to cover them from the inclemency of the weather. Motives, therefore, of humanity and justice suggest to the officers the necessity of remaining with them, at least until the baggage arrives, which is daily expected, in order to make a proper distribution of it.

The officers beg leave to represent their own situation, which is such as will not admit of their changing quarters at this inclement season of the year; many of them lying in a bad state of health, and without the greatest part of their baggage, some, indeed, without any part of it.

The officers willingly embrace this opportunity of returning their thanks to the Committee and others, of this town, for their humanity in raising a subscription for the women and children, and, likewise, for other civilities.

CAPTAIN WILLIAMS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, January 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am now under the necessity of applying to your Honours, (in consequence of orders issued from Congress to hold myself in readiness to march at an hour's warning,) as I am, at present, without a First-Lieutenant, Mr. Davis, my late Lieutenant, being promoted to a Company; Mr. John D. Bankson, my late Ensign, being, likewise, promoted to a First Lieutenant by the Committee of Safety, and a certain Mr. Morgan was appointed by your Honours a First Lieutenant (formerly appointed by the Committee of Safety in one of your new battalions) in the First Battalion, who was to join my company; but, as the whole corps of officers in the First Battalion would rather wish your Honours would promote the officers in the said battalion, as they were at the great trouble of raising the company.

I cannot but think it would be in your power to allow Mr. Bankson to join my company, agreeable to Mr. Morgan's desire. Mr. Morgan is, at present, out of town, recruiting for the Captain whom he was first engaged with.

Your Honours will please to take it into consideration, and grant the above request; and you will much oblige your obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Capt. J. P. B.

To the Honourable President of Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read February 2, 1776.]

Albany, January 22, 1776.

SIR: When I did myself the honour to write to you on the 13th instant, the distress of mind occasioned by the melancholy accounts I then transmitted, the hurry in preparing for the excursion into Tryon County, and greatly oppressed by the asthma, were so many obstacles which prevented my answering your polite letters of the 30th of November and 2d instant, which were delivered me on the 12th by Mr. Tilghman. I now sit down to answer those, and to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 10th instant, covering several resolutions of Congress, which were delivered me on the 18th.

That my little services should have attracted the notice of Congress, so far as to merit their thanks, I can only attribute to the conviction which, I flatter myself, that respectable body entertains of my wishes and endeavours to serve my country in this hour of danger. I cannot, sir, find words to convey my feelings on the occasion. Let it suffice, that I consider it as a reward the most glorious, since it is conferred by the representatives of a people still free, and who are virtuously struggling to transmit the blessings of freedom to millions of their posterity. May indulgent Heaven so smile on their honest endeavours, that America may be a lasting monument to remind tyrants of their impotency, when they attempt to tyrannize over a free people. To you, sir, my best thanks are due, for the polite manner in which you have conveyed to me the sense of Congress, and believe me, sir, that I feel a grateful sense of the attention which I have experienced from you.

I frankly confess, sir, that I have been greatly chagrined to see the little order that prevailed in the troops under my command, and that, added to my very bad state of health, were the only inducements which made me wish to retire. The first, I hope, will not so much prevail in future; but I am sorry that I have no prospect that the latter will ever mend. Much indisposed when I set out for Tryon County, the severity of the weather, and the fatigues incident to the command of an undisciplined and enraged multitude, ready to run into imprudences of the most dangerous nature, and only to be prevented by the greatest attention and vigilance, has greatly increased my disorders, a complication of which now confine me to my room. But, sir, the affairs of my country are in a worse situation than when I requested to retire; this is motive sufficient for me to continue in any station, however inconvenient, in which my countrymen and my superiors are pleased to think I can be of service. I will continue, then, to do what I can. My country may justly claim my last services. It shall have them.

The resolutions of Congress of the 10th, 11th, and 17th of November, so far as they respect me, shall be strictly complied with; that of the 26th, respecting the lead at Crown-Point, I have already given order about. What was left at Ticonderoga was on its way to Cambridge when I received General Washington's account of the capture of the store-ship; I, therefore, stopped it here, and it will be much wanted for our troops that are going into Canada.

General Prescott was already considerably advanced on his way to New-Jersey, when I received the order of Congress, of the 2d instant, for putting him in close custody.

The resolution of Congress, permitting the officers, who are prisoners, to sell their bills for their subsistence, I have already communicated to those still here, which are the French officers, Major Hughes, Captain Gamble, and Lieutenant Barrington, all of which would have been moved last week if my time had not been engaged otherwise.

I shall take the next opportunity that offers, to transmit to the Treasury an account of my disbursements to the officers. The receipts I cannot, as they are written in a receipt-book containing many others.

The Conductor of Artillery, whom I had, through necessity, appointed, is Mr. Hubbard Brown. He appears to me active, honest, and capable, and now acts in the double capacity of Conductor and Barrackmaster of Ticonderoga; for the former he was to have five shillings, and for the other an additional shilling, New-York currency. I found Gysbert Marselis, Esq., a Barrackmaster here, and employed by the Committee of Albany; he still remains in the office. Mr. Peter Schuyler I appointed to take charge of the arms in this place; he has a considerable number already repaired. For a Storekeeper at this place, I beg leave to recommend Mr. Philip Van Rensselaer.

I have given Mr. Trumbull, the Paymaster-General, copies of the resolutions relative to his Department. I hope they are not founded on a supposition that there had been any negligence in that Department. On the confusion which had arisen in the Army accounts, is much to be imputed to officers commanding companies.

The resolve of the 8th instant, "that shipwrights be immediately sent from New-York and Philadelphia, to build batteaus," I could wish not to be put into execution, as one Albany shipwright will do nearly as much of that kind of work as two that are not accustomed to it. I can also make them work early and late, which the others will not; besides, there will be great saving in the travelling charges.

I shall immediately desire General Wooster to cause the river St. Lawrence to be explored, agreeable to the resolution of Congress, but I fear he is much in want of an Engineer for the purpose, as well as for a proper person to ascertain what kind of armed boats it would be most expedient to build.

Does Congress intend that I should issue warrants for completing the regiment to be raised in this Colony, or is it to be done by the Convention? In my former letters, I advised Congress that I had issued warrants for raising four companies.

I shall immediately proceed to get every thing in readiness for building batteaus at Fort-George, as Wood-Creek cannot be cleared this Winter, and shall send up all the provisions and other stores.

I fear I shall not be able to get a sufficient quantity of nails made in time at this place; what I can get, I shall be obliged to pay fifteen pence per pound for.

Part of the troops which I sent Colonel Warner to raise, are already on their march; the first party, I have reason to think, is, at farthest, within a day's march of St. John's. I have ordered them off by fifties, as they could get ready, a regiment on the last Continental arrangement, in the County of Berkshire; part of it is already marched. I was, however, obliged to give the like bounty as I did to Colonel Warner. It is commanded by Colonel Fellows, and all the officers were nominated by the General Committee of that County. They will not engage beyond the 15th of April. It was, however, lucky that I took those measures, for General Washington writes me that he cannot spare a man. Enclose you a copy of his letter. A few hours before I received it, I wrote him by express, that the necessity of sending troops from Cambridge to Canada appeared to me to be superseded, because of those going which I have mentioned above, and that there were two regiments on their march from Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, which, in all probability, would reach Canada as soon as any lie could send.

Governour Trumbull, in a letter of the 20th instant, advises me that a regiment is raising in Connecticut to march immediately to Canada, to be engaged to the first day of November next.

As I have had no accounts from Canada since those which Mr. Antill brought, I conclude that nothing material has happened since the unfortunate affair of the 31st ultimo.

I have, in a former letter, observed that all the heavy cannon and mortars were ordered to Cambridge; I suppose they are there now. Should Quebeck not fall into our hands this Winter, we shall want a considerable number of those. Whence are we to be supplied? And from whence are we to get ammunition?

January 24, 1776.

Some of the troops that accompanied me into Tryon County refused to move unless I promised pay for their carriages; and these same people insist upon pay as Minute-Men. Many of the people, however, expect no pay for their carriages, nor for themselves. Expeditions of this kind would be very expensive at this rate. I cannot think that Congress intended pay for the men on such occasions. I shall wait their orders.

I have just now received a letter from the Committee of Safety at New-York, enclosing copies of the resolutions of Congress of the 8th of January. They observe that several things are left indeterminate "in that resolve which orders a large quantity of provisions and stores to be sent to Fort-George." In answer, I have wrote them that "I cannot believe Congress intended any thing more by sending the resolution to them, than that they should supply me with what I might want; the almost impossibility of sending a large quantity from New-York to Fort-George, at this season, would countenance this construction."

They have also wrote to me on the subject of the shipwrights. I have given them an extract of what I have above said to Congress on the occasion, and requested that they would not send any until I applied for them.

They also seemed to think that they were to procure batteau-men, and ask what wages are to be allowed them. I have promised to write to Congress on that head. I believe they would be best got in the vicinity of this place. If Congress thinks so, I wish to know what pay to allow the officers and men.

Congress will please to attend to the Naval Department in this quarter. Perhaps Commodore Douglass will remain. I could wish a Captain Wynkoop to be employed under him; he is active and brave.

I am, sir, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, January 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Colonel Warner succeeds fast in sending men to Canada. From the County of Berkshire, in the Massachusetts-Bay, a regiment will, also, immediately be sent, part of which is already on its march. By a letter just received from Congress, dated the 10th instant, I am advised that a regiment from Pennsylvania, and another from New-Jersey, were ordered immediately to march for this place, and to put themselves under my command. As these corps can be in Canada at least as early as any your Excellency can send from Cambridge, the necessity of sending of those which I had the honour to request of you, will be superseded.

Since the unfortunate accounts which I transmitted you by my last express, I have heard nothing more from Canada, whence, I conclude, that our affairs in that quarter are not in a worse situation than when Mr. Antill came away. The enclosed copy of a letter from Colonel Arnold was forgot to be sent you per last.

I returned last night from Tryon County, into which I marched a body of Militia to disarm the malignants, which I have effected. Six of the chiefs of about two hundred and fifty or three hundred Scotch Highlanders, are to go prisoners to Pennsylvania, as are six others of the English and Dutch inhabitants of that County. We have taken four six and four-pounders, together with a number of swivels and blunderbusses.

I hope all is well with your Excellency. Be pleased to present my compliments to your family. I am, sir, with sincere respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, and very humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL LEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 26, 1776.]

Stamford, January 22, 1776.

SIR: As General Washington has informed the Congress of his motives for detaching me, it is needless to trouble you upon the subject. I am, therefore, only to inform you, that I have collected a body of about twelve hundred men, from the Colony of Connecticut, whose zeal and ardour, demonstrated on this occasion, cannot be sufficiently praised. With this body I am marching directly to New-York, to execute the different purposes for which I am detached. I am sensible, sir, that nothing can carry the air of greater presumption, than a servant's intruding his opinion, unasked, upon his master; but, at the same time, there are certain seasons, when the real danger of the master may not only excuse, but render laudable the servant's officiousness. I, therefore, flatter myself that the Congress will receive, with indulgence and lenity, the opinion I shall offer.

The scheme of disarming, simply, the Tories, seems to me, totally ineffectual; it will only embitter their minds, and add virus to their venom. They can, and will, always be supplied with fresh arms by the enemy. That of seizing the most dangerous will, I apprehend, from the vagueness of the instruction, be attended with some bad consequences, and can answer no good one; it opens so wide a door for partiality and prejudice, to the different Congresses and Committees on the Continent, that much discord and animosity will, probably, ensue, it being next to impossible to distinguish who are, and who are not, the most dangerous.

The plan of explaining to these deluded people the justice and merits of the American cause, is, certainly, generous and humane, but, I am afraid, will be fruitless. They are so riveted in their opinions, that, I am persuaded, should an angel descend from Heaven, with his golden trumpet, and ring in their ears that their conduct was criminal, he would be disregarded. I had lately, myself, an instance of their infatuation, which, if it is not impertinent, I will relate:

At Newport, I took the liberty, without any authority, but the conviction of the necessity, to administer a very strong oath to some of the leading Tories, for which liberty I humbly ask pardon of the Congress. One article of this oath was, to take arms in defence of their country, if called upon by the voice of the Congress. To this, Colonel Wanton, and others, flatly refused their assent. To take arms against their Sovereign, they said, was too monstrous an impiety. I asked them, if they had lived at the time of the Revolution, whether they would have been Revolutionists? Their answers were, at first, evasive, circuitous, and unintelligible; but, by fixing them down precisely to the questions, I, at length, drew from them a positive confession, that no violence, no provocation on the part of the Court, could prevail upon them to act with the Continent. Such, I am afraid, is the creed and principles of the whole party, great and small; sense, reason, argument, and eloquence, have been expended in vain, and in vain you may still argue and reason, till the end of time. Even the common feelings and resentments of humanity have not aroused them, but rather, with a malignant pleasure, they have beheld the destruction of their fellow-citizens and relations. But, I am running into declamation, (perhaps, impertinently presuming,) when I ought to confine myself to the scheme I submit to your consideration.

It is, sir, in the first place, to disarm all the manifestly disaffected, as well of the lower as of the higher class; not on the principle of putting them in a state of impotence, (for this, as I observed before, will not be the case,) but to supply our troops with arms, of which they stand in too great need. Secondly, to appraise their estates, and oblige them to deposit, at least the value of one-half of their respective property, in the hands of the Continental Congress, as a security for their good behaviour. And, lastly, to administer the strongest oath that can be devised, to act, defensively and offensively, in support of the common rights.

I confess, that men so eaten up with bigotry, as the bulk of them appear to be, will not consider themselves as bound by this oath, particularly, as it is, in some measure, forced; they will argue, that it is by no means obligatory. But, if I mistake not, it will be a sort of criterion, by which you will be able to distinguish the desperate fanatics from those who are reclaimable. The former must, of course, be secured, and carried into some interior parts of the Continent, where they cannot be dangerous.

This mode of proceeding, I conceive, (if any can,) will be effectual; but, whether it meets with the approbation or disapprobation of the Congress, I most humbly conjure them not to attribute the proposal to arrogance, self-conceit, or pragmatical officiousness, but, at worst, to an intemperate zeal for the publick service.

Notwithstanding the apparent slowness of the authority, as I am myself convinced that it is substantial, I think it my duty to communicate a circumstance to the Congress. I have with me here, sir, a deserter from Captain Wallace's ship, before Newport. It is necessary, previously to inform you, that this Captain Wallace has the reputation of being the most imprudent and rash of all mortals, particularly when he is heated with wine, which, as reported, is a daily incident; that, in those moments, he blabs his most secret instructions even to the common men. This deserter, then, informs us, that the Captain, a few days ago, assembled the sailors and marines on the quarter-deck, and assured them, by way of encouragement, that they were to proceed, very soon, to New-York, where they were to be joined by His Majesty's most loyal subjects of White-Plains, Poughkeepsie, and Long-Island, and, at the same time, bestowed, abundantly, his curses on the Admiral and General, for their dilatoriness and scandalous conduct, in not availing themselves, sooner, of the invitation they had received from these worthy gentlemen.

The Congress will make what comments they please on this information, which, I must repeat, I thought it my duty to communicate. Upon the whole, sir, you may be assured, that it is the intention of the Ministerialists to take possession (and immediately) of New-York. The intercepted letters, the unguarded expressions of their officers, in their interviews with ours, on the lines, but, above all, the manifest advantages resulting to their cause from this measure, put their intention beyond dispute.

With submission, therefore, to the wisdom of the Congress, it behoves them, I should think, not to lose a moment in securing this important post, which, if in the hands of the enemy, must cut the Continent in twain, and render it almost impossible for the Northern and Southern Colonies mutually to support each other. This is not a crisis, when every thing is at stake, to be over-complacent to the timidity of the inhabitants of any particular spot. I have now under my command a respectable force, adequate to the purposes of securing the place, and purging all its environs of Traitors, on which subject I shall expect, with impatience, the determination of the Congress. Their orders I hope to receive before, or immediately on my arrival.

This instant, the enclosed express, from the Provincial Congress of New-York, was delivered into my hands; but, as these gentlemen, probably, are not fully apprized of the danger hanging over their heads, as I have received intelligence from camp that the fleet is sailed, and that it is necessary to urge my march, I shall proceed, with one division of the forces under my command, to that city. A moment's delay may be fatal.

The force I shall carry with me is not strong enough to act offensively, but just sufficient to secure the city against any immediate designs of the enemy. If this is to give umbrage, if the Governor, and Captain of the man-of-war, are pleased to construe this step as an act of positive hostility, if they are to prescribe what number of your troops, and what number not, are to enter the city, all I can say is, that New-York must be considered as the Ministers' place, and not the Continent's.

I must now, sir, beg pardon for the length of this letter, and, more so, for the presumption in offering, so freely, my thoughts to the Congress, from whom it is my duty simply to receive my orders, and, as a servant and soldier, strictly to obey, which none can do with greater ardour and affection than, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

In Committee of Safety, New-York, January 21, 1776.

SIR: The inhabitants of this city are much alarmed at various confident advices of your destination, with a considerable body of forces for active service here. Confident, however, as those advices may appear to people without doors, we cannot readily credit them, as we conceive it most probable that, were you preparing to execute any plan of that kind, it would be preceded by some intimations to us on the subject, from the Continental Congress, General Washington, or yourself. We, therefore, should not have troubled you with this application, had it not been to procure such information from you as may enable us, in a prudent use of it, to allay the fears of our inhabitants, who, at this inclement season of the year, will continue, as they have already begun, to remove their women and children, and which, if continued, may occasion hundreds to perish for want of shelter.

This Committee, and the Congress, whose place we fill in their recess, are, we flatter ourselves, as unanimously zealous in the cause of America, as any representative body on the Continent; so truly zealous, that both the one and the other will cheerfully devote this city to sacrifice, for advancing that great and important cause. But, to acquit ourselves in the judgment of the Continent, which, in point of public aid, is deeply interested in the preservation of this metropolis, and to our constituents, who expect our prudent care of their lives and properties, we think it our indispensable duty to inform you, that, though we have advices that General Washington has been informed of the arrival of a large quantity of powder among us, we have not a sufficiency to enable you to act hostilely against the ships-of-war now in port. Our whole quantity of publick powder is less than three tons.

No works are erected to annoy the enemy in their present situation. Should it be practicable, at this juncture, to erect hasty works for that purpose, to what shift are we to betake ourselves, after our trifling supply of ammunition shall be expended? The commencement of hostilities, for which we are now so unprepared, will preclude the possibility of a supply, even for our musketry, in the ensuing campaign. The strict guard against the exportation of ammunition from the foreign ports in Europe, we have great reason to fear, will cut off all hopes of supply from that quarter, as well to us as the Continental Congress. We have sent sundry adventures thither, some of which have failed; for this reason, we are daily pushing adventures to the West-Indies, with the article of provisions, as a necessary expedient in the present uncommon scarcity of bullion. The ships-of-war give no interruption to our vessels despatched on those adventures, a favour we cannot expect should hostilities begin. And, even should we be fortunate enough to oblige the ships-of-war to quit this port, by expending the little powder we have, (an event which our most sanguine hopes cannot promise us,) the attention of our enemies will effectually prevent our expected importations.

For these reasons, we conceive that a just regard to the publick cause, and our duty, to take a prudent care of this city, dictate the impropriety of provoking hostilities at present, and the necessity of saving appearances with the ships-of-war till, at least, the month of March.

Though we have been unfortunate, in our disappointments, with respect to some of our adventures, yet, be assured, sir, we have not been idle. Our intrenching tools are almost completed to a sufficient number; we are forming a magazine of provisions for five thousand men, for a month, in a place of safety, and at a convenient distance from this city; we have provided ourselves with six good brass field-pieces, and have directed carriages to be made for our other artillery, and are raising a company of Artillery for the defence of the Colony, on the Continental establishment. These things, with other smaller matters, when accomplished, and, with the arrival of some powder, the prospect of which is not unpromising, will enable us to face our enemies with some countenance.

We, therefore, ardently wish to remain in peace, for a little time, and doubt not we have assigned sufficient reasons for avoiding, at present, a dilemma, in which the present entrance of a large body of troops into this city, will, almost certainly, involve us. Should you have such an entrance in design, we beg, at least, that the troops may halt on the western confines of Connecticut, till we shall have been honoured, by you, with such an explanation on this important subject, as you may conceive your duty may permit you to enter into with us, the grounds of which, you will easily see, ought to be kept an entire secret, and to assure you that we are, with great esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient servants.

By order of the Committee:

PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT, Chairman.

To Major-General Lee.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, January 22, 1776.

SIR: Orders were just given for raising a regiment of seven hundred and fifty men, to go for the help of our friends in Canada, to serve till the first of November next, and sent an express to your Excellency, when I received your letter of the 16th, per Bennett. We then proceeded to make provision for the four regiments requested for your camp.

The 20th, at evening, yours of the 19th came to hand; whereby the number is reduced to three, which will be raised with all possible expedition. But money seems necessary to facilitate their march. Wish some provision could be made for it.

It is with difficulty we can furnish our men with arms, and depend that none of them will be detained when the service of these three regiments is ended. No arms can be supplied from this Colony for the Continent. The old gun-barrels brought from Ticonderoga, are retarded for want of locks; there are very few or none to be purchased, and the number made here are brought in but slowly. When your hurry will permit, please to send me a return of an account of the arms retained from this Colony, their appraisal, and the way to obtain payment, as the owners complain for want of them or their value.

I am, with great esteem and regard, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To General Washington.

JAMES WILKINSON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Monday Evening, January 22, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of your friendly proposal yesterday, I have waited on General Gates. He is pleased with your intention, and will readily afford me every assistance in his power, but thinks it necessary that you should mention the affair to General Washington, who, he makes no doubt, will assent to your request. If I have the honour of being established in your brigade, I shall particularly study the execution of my duty, and ardently endeavour to introduce that friendly intercourse between the northern and southern gentlemen, which is truly essential to our common interests.

I beg an excuse for this scrawl, and am, very respectfully, your much obliged and really humble servant,

JAMES WILKINSON.

To General Sullivan.

P. S. Lest this is the only idle time which I expect to enjoy while I continue in the Army, I apply it in gratifying a curiosity I entertain of seeing Cape Ann; for which place I purpose setting out early to-morrow morning.

J. W.

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp at Roxbury, January 22, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I enclose you a copy of General Orders, providing arms, &c. Have sent Lieutenant Huntington to purchase for my regiment. As the time allowed him by the order is short, I fear he will not be able to look up many among individuals, from whence, I suppose, they must come. If he should be so happy as to find a considerable number together, he may accomplish the business by the time. He is directed to procure one hundred, which I hope will be sufficient, with what the soldiers will furnish themselves. I have ordered him to let you know what success he meets with, that you may take such measures for a supply as you shall think proper and necessary.

We much lament the death of the brave General Montgomery; hope it will be rightly improved by the Army there and here. The impatience of the soldiers, and perhaps of the subordinate officers, was the immediate cause of it; it will teach us, (and there is too much need of the lesson,) not to depend on an arm of flesh.

Please give my love and duty to mother, son, brother, &c. I am, most affectionately, and dutifully, yours,

JEDEDIAH HUNTINGTON.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull.

MESHECH WEARE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Exeter, January 22, 1776.

SIR: We have just received your Excellency's favour of yesterday's date, for answer to which, we beg leave to refer to the enclosed letter, in which it may be observed, our Assembly had taken up the matter of advance wages to the soldiery destined for Canada, in the same manner as intended by the Massachusetts Government.

We shall duly note your Excellency's kind intention, of refunding to this Colony the money they advance, as soon as the General Congress may remit you a sufficient supply; and we shall give the necessary directions that all accounts respecting these matters, may be correctly kept, and proper vouchers produced for the same.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am your Excellency's humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President of Council.

To His Excellency General Washington.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Colony of New-Hampshire, Exeter, }
January 21, 1776. }

SIR: Your Excellency's favour of the 19th current, with the several enclosures, came to hand yesterday noon, bringing us the melancholy advices of the defeat of our Army before Quebeck, and the death of the brave General Montgomery, with a number of our friends and fellow-soldiers. A sad reverse this, indeed, of our affairs in Canada, which we are extremely sorry for, and regret.

Our Council and Assembly were just upon the point of adjourning to Monday, when your Excellency's packet was brought us, which determined us upon sitting again in the afternoon. The subject of your letters was immediately taken into consideration. The Assembly very readily and cheerfully agreed to, and resolved upon, raising a regiment in the western frontiers, as therein recommended, to march directly into Canada for the reinforcement of our brethren there; the regiment to consist of the number directed in the Continental establishment. The command is assigned to Colonel Timothy Bedel, who, having approved himself well at the siege of St. John's, is just returned from Canada, and we think will readily enter on the duty. The other Field-Officers being residents near Connecticut River, well acquainted with the people and country, we doubt not will be able soon to raise the whole number of men. The Lieutenant-Colonel, Joseph Waite, one of our Assembly, is already sent, and carries with him inlisting orders and money for the purpose, the Assembly having voted to pay each man two months' wages in advance for their encouragement. Directions are, also, gone out for the procuring provisions, and other necessities requisite for their march from Connecticut River over to Onion River. We trust your Excellency will give General Schuyler timely advice, that he may forward what provisions may further be necessary to meet the troops at Onion River.

In our last to your Excellency, we mentioned our having in readiness one hundred and forty blankets to forward to Head-Quarters, which were just going, when, upon receiving these last advices, it was thought absolutely necessary to stop them, that they might be sent westward for the use of this regiment, as it is impossible to provide any quantity of blankets in that part of the country.

We are truly sensible of the expediency of a vigorous exertion to prevent the evils which may follow the repulse of our troops in Canada, and you may depend, sir, we shall not fail to do our utmost to forward this reinforcement.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am, with great esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE COMMITTEE TO WAIT ON GENERAL WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable MATTHEW THORNTON, Esq., and JOSIAH MOULTON, Esq.:

You being appointed a Committee to wait on his Excellency General Washington, on the subject of his requesting a regiment from this Colony, to assist in guarding the lines two months, you are, therefore, desired to proceed to the camp, and inquire what number of men are there inlisted, or likely to engage in the regiment officered by General Sullivan for said purpose; and if they are not, and cannot be mostly raised there, under the proposed officers, to consider whether the officers appointed by this Court will be likely better to effect the purpose of raising the regiment.

Likewise wait on General Washington, and lay before his Excellency all the letters received from General Sullivan, on the subject, and represent to him the difficulties that have, and likely may arise by General Sullivan's doing things that this Colony suppose ought to be done by their legislative authority. And, if it is absolutely necessary to advance a month's pay to said regiment, you may engage it. You are desired to inquire whether the people, that came in on the Lexington alarm, are likely to be paid by the Continent. Also, in what manner commissions and processes issue in the Massachusetts Colony.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COLONELS
MOREY AND BELLOWES.

In Committee of Safety, January 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You are desired, immediately, to procure on the best terms the following articles, for the use of the regiment now raising on the frontiers of this Colony, to march into Canada under the command of Colonel Timothy Bedel, there to join the Northern Continental Army, and to deliver to each soldier his proportion of the same, of the provisions, at the rate of one pound of pork, and one pound of bread, and half a pint of peas, each day, for their march from Connecticut River, through the woods to Onion River, which it is estimated will be fifteen days at least; and you are to keep an exact account of the delivery of the whole:

Twelve thousand pounds salt pork, at seven pence; 400 bushels of wheat, to be ground into flour; 500 pair of men's shoes; 50 moose skins for moccasins; 720 pair rackets or snow shoes; 688 hatchets, or tomahawks; 688 blankets, at fifteen shillings, to be allowed each soldier; if the blanket cost more, the soldier to pay the overplus, if less, to be made up to him; 120 tin camp kettles; gunpowder; musket balls; flints; ground ginger; 200 gallons rum; 200 yards coarse cloth, for Indian leggins; 200 yards coarse cloth, for shirting; 200 yards coarse cloth, for men's clothes.

By order of the Committee:

MESHECH WEARE, Chairman.

To Colonel Morey and Colonel Bellowes.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COL. WAITE.

In Committee of Safety, January 21, 1776.

To JOSEPH WAITE, Esq.:

You being appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of a Regiment of Rangers, to be commanded by Timothy Bedel, Esq., to serve in the Northern Continental Army, you are hereby authorized and desired immediately to proceed on the inlisting the said Regiment; the several Companies to consist of eighty-six able-bodied, effective men, including four Sergeants, four Corporals, one Drummer, and one Fifer, well accoutred with arms and blankets, until the 1st day of January next, unless sooner dismissed. And you may assure them they shall have the same pay as the other Continental troops.

By order of the Committee:

MESHECH WEARE, Chairman.

ROBERT WILSON, }
JAMES COCHRANE, } Committee of Safety.

MAJOR-GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, January 22, 1776.

MY LORD: I have the honour to inform your Lordship that His Majesty's ship, Centurion, arrived the 18th instant, and that she spoke three weeks ago with the Argo, transport, having three companies of the Forty-Sixth Regiment on board, in good health at that time.

Major-General Clinton sailed the 20th, in the morning, in the Mercury, frigate, the Falcon, sloop, being before sent directly to Cape Fear to wait the arrival of the transports. A copy of your Lordship's despatch of the 22d October, is given as the principal guidance of his conduct, while local circumstances, and good intelligence, determine him in pursuing the main objects of his expedition. He has blank commissions for his officers, in case it should be found at any time advisable to embody Provincials for the service; and I have sent commissions to three gentlemen who have been long in North-Carolina, to secure the attachment of the Highlanders settled in that Colony, on a promise from General Gage, that they should have appointments in the Second Battalion of Royal Highland Emigrants, to be formed as soon as the first was known to be completed, which it has been for some time, as appears by collecting all the returns received in their dispersed situation.

In prosecution of General Gage's intentions, I have likewise issued commissions to two Captains in this corps, who have actually raised their companies in Nova-Scotia, and to two others who have been employed on the regiment's duty, and whose complement of men appears, also, to be raised. However, I shall proceed no further in forming the Second Battalion, until more certain accounts of their success in recruiting are received; and as I am furnished with no particular instructions concerning this corps, I could wish to be honoured with His Majesty's commands relative thereto.

Robberies, and housebreaking in particular, had got to such a height in this town, that some examples had become necessary to suppress it. Two soldiers, late of the Fifty-Ninth Regiment of Foot, have been tried, convicted, and sentenced to suffer death, for breaking into and robbing the store-houses of Messrs. Nathaniel and William Coffin; one of them has suffered; the other, Thomas Owen, as a young offender, and having other circumstances to plead in his favour, I have thought proper to reprieve, conforming to the power expressed in my commission, as follows: "We giving you power to reprieve any person under sentence until our pleasure be known." And I humbly entreat your Lordship to recommend the said Thomas Owen for His Majesty's Royal pardon.

I am, &c.,

W. HOWE.

ADDISON MURDOCK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

January 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have been honoured by the Convention with the enclosed commission, which I now return to you, with a prayer to be excused from accepting it. The precarious and declining state of my health renders me incapable of executing the office, either with benefit to my country, or reputation to myself, and, therefore, I think it my duty to refuse it.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient humble servant,

ADDISON MURDOCK.

To the Honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COMMITTEE FOR PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY.

[No. 5.] Annapolis, January 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The late Convention having resolved that the records should be removed from the city of Annapolis, and directed the Council of Safety to provide a fit and proper place for them, and we having determined they should be carried to Upper Marlborough, if a safe and convenient place can be procured for them there, request you will examine into the state and condition of the Court-House of your County, in which, if it will answer, we had rather the records should be lodged, but if it will not, of any of the vacant houses in the town, and provide one, which you may apprehend best adapted to the purpose, upon such reasonable rent as you may agree for.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Prince George's County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[No. 6.] Annapolis, January 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Maynard, who will deliver this to you, is going with letters to New-York, from the Governor to Mr. Foxcroft. The package covers three other letters, which are intended to go by the packet, two of them to William Eden, Esq., which the Governor, on his honour, assures us, contain nothing unfriendly to America, the other to Lord Dartmouth, which we have seen, enclosing copies of the Instructions of the Convention to their Deputies in Congress, and, also, of the Declaration, with his assurances to the Ministry, that he believes they contain the real sentiments of the people of this Province.

The Governor has taken this measure in consequence of a free conversation with Messrs. Matthew Tilghman, Thomas Johnson, Thomas Stone, and James Hollyday, and ourselves, on the subject. The step cannot be productive of an ill effect. It may be of the greatest service. It may possibly bring about some overture to a general reconciliation. He has promised you shall have the perusal of what he has wrote, when you come to Maryland. We intimate this to you to prevent the letter being stopped, on suspicion of its containing any information or intelligence unfriendly to America.

We do not doubt but you will think with us, that the sooner it reaches England the better, in the present critical situation of our affairs, and that you will give Maynard the proper passports to New-York. We are, &c.

To the Deputies of Maryland, in Congress.

P. S. There are some few other letters, which, from the Governor's information, we believe are from Colonel Sim and others, to Thomas Eden & Co., on private business.

COLONEL MAXWELL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, January 23, 1776.

SIR: You will receive this by Captain John B. Scott, of my regiment, who escorts General Prescott and Captain Chase, to your honourable House. I suppose the Committee of this town will write you, by Captain Scott, of General Prescott's behaviour here, therefore I shall omit it. I find the Congress has ordered my regiment to Canada immediately. I hope I shall always obey them cheerfully, but must beg leave to mention to them, at all times, what the regiment wants to complete it; and with a presumption that I have leave, I must inform you it wants a great part of every thing but men. We want, for the regiment about two hundred and eighty stand of arms, four hundred and five bayonets, and a great many of the arms want repairing; we have them at so many smiths we cannot get an exact return. They have got their hats, shoes, and stockings, I believe, in general, but they want much warmer clothing to go into Canada than if they stayed here. There are a good many cartouch-boxes and cross-belts, some haversacks, and frocks here. Mr. Lawrey, I suppose, has the rest of the articles making, in different places, but still, I am afraid, not so quick as I could wish, possibly for want of materials. He is gone to the eastward, to pay off Lord Stirling's regiment. I shall send off an express to-morrow morning, to hurry him here, and leave the paying that regiment to his clerks.

I have sent to Burlington, yesterday, for a return of the part of this regiment there; when I get it, I will endeavour to make you a complete return of the regiment, with their arms, &c.

I refer you to Captain Scott for further particulars; you will find him very intelligent.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM MAXWELL, Colonel.

To the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress, in Philadelphia.

N. B. Articles necessary, that I have not seen any of, viz: Axes, tomahawks, camp-kettles, canteens, moccasins, caps, &c. If the powder, lead, and flints, are to be sent to Lord Stirling, this would be a good opportunity by Captain Scott, with his returning wagons.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 25, 1776.—Referred to Committee of Correspondence.]
Trenton, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 20th, covering resolutions of Congress and a letter to Lieutenant Hamer, I received, and delivered Mr. Hamer his letter, for which he said he was much obliged. I shall lay your letter and the resolutions before our Provincial Congress, which meets on Tuesday next, to which, I dare say, they will pay proper attention.

Your favour of the 22d, we received this morning, and immediately waited on General Prescott and Captain Chase; on the former a guard was set, as we have informed in our letter of yesterday. The General said he should be glad, if it could be, that his setting off might be deferred until to-morrow morning, to which we readily consented. He and Captain Chase are coming in a light covered wagon, guarded by a detachment of Captain Scott, by whom this will be delivered.

I have the honour to be, (for the Committee,) your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER, Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

LIEUTENANT HAMER (A PRISONER) TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, January 23, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure of your favour of the 19th instant, for which I beg leave to tender you my best thanks, and to assure you that I shall always be ready to pay such attention to the future resolves of the Congress as will entitle me to receive their indulgence during this unhappy contest.

I am, sir, your most obedient, and humble servant,

IBBETSON HAMER,
Lieutenant Royal Fusiliers.

RICHARD HUDDLESTON (A PRISONER) TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 25, 1776.—Referred to Committee of Correspondence.]
Trenton, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Amongst all civilized nations at war it has been a practice when a Surgeon is taken prisoner to release him immediately, as being esteemed a friend to both sides. In a sick or wounded soldier he never sees an enemy, but affords him all the relief in his power. When the Surgeons in your army before St. John's applied to me on the route here, for some medicines they stood much in need of for their sick, I gave them to them with pleasure, and every assistance in my power I readily afforded to the sick they sent over the Lake with us. This humanity called on me to do, as it would on your Surgeons in like case. The scarcity of Surgeons, at present, in Canada, will make the miseries of this unhappy war doubly felt, on both sides, in that country. I, therefore, sir, beg you to request permission of the Congress for my return to Quebeck, if not taken, and to assure them, that if the fortune of war throws any of their sick or wounded men under my care, they shall be treated with the greatest care and tenderness. Quebeck is not destitute of Surgeons. Mr. Mabane, my own mate, and some other Surgeons are there; therefore it is not for that reason I apply for leave to return; but I wish to see a practice observed between England and America for mutual benefit, which, as I said before, is always observed between civilized nations, and was, to my own knowledge, last war in Germany. I am certain, if any Continental Surgeon was taken prisoner, he would be immediately released. If Congress permits me to return, I solemnly declare I have not, nor will have, any view by this request of carrying any intelligence, &c.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

RICH. HUDDLESTON, 7th Reg't Foot.

NEW-JERSEY COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 24, 1776.]

Trenton, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to orders received from the Congress, we waited on the officers, prisoners in this place, for their bills, to repay the money advanced for Mrs. Stelle's account, to which they returned the enclosed paper, and beg the Congress to reconsider the matter; because, if they are to repay the bill, they would wish to examine it, and their discharging it would preclude the necessity of condemning it as luxurious and extravagant. Captain Algee says, that his wife and family, and all that he has, is in Quebeck. The communication being stopped, disables him from receiving cash from thence, and should it be taken by storm and plundered, as apprehended, he will not have a shilling left to support himself and family. His age, and unexceptionable behaviour, plead strongly for the generous consideration of Congress. Major Rigauville, it is apprehended, is in similar circumstances. Lieutenant Hamer agrees to draw for his proportion of Mrs. Stelle's account.

Since our last, Colonel Wynkoop has brought to this town General Prescott, who absolutely refuses to give his parole; we have, therefore, confined him to his room, and Colonel Maxwell very cheerfully furnishes a guard till further directions from Congress, which we hope will be despatched with all convenient speed. The other gentlemen of his suite very readily complied with the requisition.

The Committee having information that Dr. William Bryant, of this place, a Surgeon on half-pay, was likely to join the Army, agreeable to orders, at Boston, thought it their duty to take his parole, which is also enclosed; his limits are extended because he practises sometimes about Princeton, and has business to transact in Philadelphia.

We are, sir, with great respect, your very humble servants,

SAMUEL TUCKER, Chairman,

ISAAC SMITH,

ABRAHAM HUNT.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. Your favour of yesterday we this moment received, to which we shall pay due attention, and carry the directions into execution.

SAMUEL TUCKER, Chairman.

I do give my parole of honour to the Continental Congress, that I will not go farther than twelve miles from my present place of residence, except to Philadelphia, without leave of the Congress.

Witness my hand, this 22d day of January, 1776.

WILLIAM BRYANT.

Taken by order of the Committee of Trenton.

SAMUEL TUCKER, Chairman.

TRENTON COMMITTEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Referred to Mr. Lynch.]

Trenton, January 24, 1776.

Enclosed is a copy of General Schuyler's orders to Captain Hulbert, delivered to our Committee by the officers confined in this town, with their observations, which I have neglected to send as was intended in a former letter, which happened by forgetfulness.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO CAPTAIN HULBERT.

Ticonderoga, November 1, 1775.

SIR: Enclosed is a list of the officers and men that were made prisoners at Chamblay. You will be particularly attentive that no person, who may have forgotten the rights of mankind, and the principles of Englishmen, offer the least insult to any of the gentlemen, their soldiers, their wives, or children.

Your good sense, and your own feelings, will point out to you, that officers are to be treated with the utmost attention and politeness. It is sufficient barely to mention this to a gentleman of your character; they are in all places to be entertained at the publick expense, for which you will pay; and I therefore enclose you a warrant on the Paymaster-General; you will keep accounts of your disbursements and transmit them to me as early as possible. The non-commissioned officers and privates, prisoners as well as your men, will be supplied with provisions at Albany, to carry them to Connecticut, for which you will apply to the Commissary-General, who I have ordered to provide sloops to carry them down to Mr. Hoffman's wharf, from whence the travel to Connecticut will be short and commodious; you will send both the subalterns, with the privates, and all your party, except ten. At Canaan, you will meet with Governour Trumbull's directions for their future route. You will give fifty pounds to the eldest subaltern, for such expenses as may necessarily incur, (which cannot be many,) as I have ordered the Commissary-General to provide the sloops and carriages, who will pay for them; you will give a copy of these orders to the eldest subaltern; you will also furnish the Commissary-General with a copy of this, who will find lodgings for the officers, and Monsieur Rigauville. I have wrote to him respecting their entertainment at Albany, of which he will take care, and all expenses incurred there he will discharge; the non-commissioned officers and privates are to be in the barracks during their stay at Albany.

The Commissary-General will procure a sloop, and every thing necessary for the passage, on board of which you and that part of your party that is to accompany you, are to embark, as also the Honourable Major Stopford, Mr. Harrison, Mr. Shuttleworth, Mr. Hamer, Mr. Huddleston, and Monsieur Rigauville. You will then proceed by water, to Haverstraw Landing, where you will disembark, and procure carriages to carry you to Newark, where it is possible you may fall in with the stage coach, to carry you and the officers to Trenton, their servants' baggage and your party following them in wagons; on your arrival at Trenton you are to provide good lodgings, and see that the gentlemen are properly entertained; and then you are to proceed to Philadelphia, and report to Congress what you have done in obedience to these orders, and take theirs for your future conduct.

Captain Godwin and Mr. McCulloch have requested to remain here until the fate of St. John's is determined, which I have consented to, as the former gentleman has his lady and family in Canada, and the latter, a widower, has two small children there.

The Honourable Major Stopford having requested, that if he should determine at Albany, to take the band of musick with him, as also his sutler, that he might be permitted, and to which I readily consented, you will accordingly comply with the requisition, should he make it.

Mr. Algee has my leave to go to New-York on his parole of honour, and to remain there fourteen days, then to repair to Trenton.

Mr. Barrington being indisposed remains at Saratoga. I am, sir, your humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Captain Hulbert.

In consequence of the Resolves of Congress, of January 12, 1776, the Officers of the Garrison of Chamblay, now prisoners at Trenton, beg leave to send in General Schuyler's orders, and Captain Hulbert's proceedings in consequence of them.

The officers were placed by Captain Hulbert at a tavern; that he afterwards went to Philadelphia, and reported to Congress what he had done; on his return to Trenton, he told the women of the house, and likewise some gentlemen of the Committee of Safety, that we were to live at the Continent's expense, agreeable to the orders he received from General Schuyler, till she, or they, heard from Congress to the contrary, and that they were so busy at that time that nothing could be settled, but would be soon.

The officers imagine, that the bill already delivered in by Mrs. Stelle, and their lodgings, that the gentlemen of the Congress do not mean the officers should pay, as they were placed there by Captain Hulbert, by General Schuyler's instruction, and confirmed by him, on his return from Philadelphia, to several gentlemen of the Committee of Safety.

ROBERT OGDEN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

January 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of yesterday, directed to the Earl of Stirling, came express five o'clock; and as my Lord was set off in the morning, with a party of men, as supposed, in order to take the vessel, and went by the way of Perth-Amboy, the Committee immediately met, and concluded to send three boats, with a hundred men, well armed, to assist in taking said vessel. This resolution, with the letter from your Committee, we sent express at seven o'clock, to my Lord, and the one hundred men, well equipped, set off in the boats about twelve o'clock, and hope, on their return, will be able to give a good account of the vessel.

We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT OGDEN, Chairman.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

JOHN IMLAY TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-Brunswick, New-Jersey, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 21st, I received last night, and for answer, I am sorry to inform you, I cannot, with any propriety, leave home at this time; my wife being very unwell, and has been so for several days. Neither do I see any prospect of my attending the Committee of

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. IV.

Safety as soon as I could wish. I have, for several years past, been afflicted with a scorbutick complaint on my hands and legs, which is very troublesome to me in cold weather, and has been so bad for these two weeks past, that I have been unable to put on my clothes without help. Neither can I travel in cold weather without, in some degree, endangering my life. I am really sorry I cannot attend for the discharge of my duty. As soon as the health of my family and self will permit my leaving home, I shall give my attendance in Committee.

I am, with great respect, sir, your humble servant,

JOHN IMLAY.

JOHN GRAHAM TO COLONEL M'DOUGALL.

Guard-Room, January 23, 1776.

SIR: I flatter myself you will pardon this intrusion, but hope my present unhappy situation will be a sufficient apology.

I was, unfortunately, cast away on the 23d of December last, on Squan-Beach, in the sloop Polly and Nancy, which vessel was laden by his Excellency Governor Tryon, for Boston, with sundry articles as a present to General Howe, and immediately was taken prisoner, by order of the Committee of Freehold, in Monmouth County. As I only went passenger, by permission of his Excellency, in order to get my son home to New-York, think it is cruel; my state of health, at present, is such, that if I have not my enlargement soon, I must inevitably perish.

I now presume to beg you will be kind enough to procure me at least a hearing; your compliance will be gratefully acknowledged by, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN GRAHAM.

To Colonel McDougall.

JOHN BLACKLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Guard-House, January 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: My long confinement obliges me to beg you will let me know my doom. If I have done any thing deserving of punishment, let me suffer. I have now been deprived of liberty forty-three days. I was ingenuous in my confession, which is strictly true. Every gentleman must think it hard to be deprived of the benefit of enjoying a sufficient competency for the remainder of his days. This is truly my situation, was I but in England. As to my character here, I hope it is beyond the reach of malice to traduce. Necessity has obliged me to take the method I did, without a thought of depriving any individual of the city, of a farthing. I never received a remittance from home, but first I discharged my debts, which, I believe, my very enemies will say. My behaviour, since under confinement, can be attested for by the whole barracks.

As most of the gentlemen on the Committee, when I was first brought down, knew me at the time I lived with Mr. John Amul, and his own recommendation found in my pocket-book, will, I hope, be a sufficient proof of my behaviour since my residence here.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN BLACKLER.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, January 23, 1776.

SIR: On the evening of the 21st I returned from Tryon County. The following is a narrative of that little excursion:

As I had no troops here, to carry into execution the resolutions of Congress, I was under the necessity of communicating to the sub-Committee of this County, which I did, having previously administered an oath of secrecy. Whilst the Committee were devising the means to collect a body of men for this service, and much puzzled what reasons to give for doing it, the letter and affidavit from Tryon County (copies of which I had the honour to transmit you by my last express) came to hand, and the accounts contained in them were made the ostensible reasons for raising the Militia.

Although I thought two or three hundred men, with the Tryon County Whigs, sufficient to complete my business, yet I readily consented that seven hundred should be called upon, at once, to discourage the Tories in other parts of the country, and to give confidence to the Whigs, in all parts; but, such was the zeal and alacrity of the people, that, although the weather was cold in the extreme, it was impossible to prevent their coming up, which they did in such numbers, that, by the time I reached Caughnawaga, I had very near, if not quite, three thousand men, including nine hundred of the Tryon County Militia.

On Tuesday, the 16th, I marched to Schenectady, and, on the evening of that day, a deputation from the Mohawk Indians met us, and delivered me the following speech, in a very haughty tone:

"We intended to have gone down to Albany, in order to speak to you, but, thank God, that He has given us an opportunity to meet you here, as we have some matters to communicate to you."

To which I gave the following Answer:

"I am very glad to see you here, and I shall be glad to hear what the brothers have to say, as my ears are always open to them."

Whereupon, Abraham proceeded as follows:

"Brothers: You lately sent to our place four men, who arrived to us last Sunday morning. They told us they were sent up to us by you, to inform us of those military preparations which were making down in this quarter. By them, you let us know that you thought it not prudent to send armed men amongst us, without previously notifying us. Likewise, brothers, your messengers informed us of the reasons of your coming in this manner.

"You informed us, that you had heard that there were a number of men embodied at Sir John's, about Johnstown. You told us, likewise, that as soon as they had completed their body, they intended to destroy the settlements, up and down the river. You informed us, that you were coming up to inquire into the truth of the report, and who it was that gave out commissions, and what were their designs.

"At the same time, you assured us that no harm was intended against us, the Six Nations, as we had, last Summer, publicly engaged that we would take no part against you in your dispute with the great King over the great water.

"Brothers, you told us that you would come to search into the truth of the report, and you assured us, also, that you would not be the first aggressor, and that it should be their own fault if any blood was spilt.

"You told us that you would acquaint the Lower Castle first, of the design; that they should send up to the Upper Castle; and they to the Oneida; and they to the Onondaga; and so, through the whole Six Nations.

"Brothers, we thanked your messengers for the speech delivered to us, and we would consider of it for some time, to return them an answer. Accordingly, brothers, a small number of us, who take care of the news, met in council on this occasion.

"We thanked your messengers for informing us first, of your designs. We said, we know the agreement which was entered into with the whole Twelve United Colonies. At that meeting, you remember, it was agreed to remove all obstacles out of the way of the path of peace, to keep it open, that we might pass and re-pass, without being annoyed.

"Brothers, you told us that you came to inquire into the truth of the report, which might be done by four, or six, without any danger in making the inquiry.

"We proposed your sending up six persons, to inquire into the truth of this matter, as it would be a shame to interrupt them, as no person would be so mean to give them any obstruction.

"As for sending your belt forward, we thought to retain it until we had heard whether our proposal had been accepted or no. And we desire that you would consider this matter, and keep your troops at home, and let us know your mind; and if, after considering of our proposals, you do not agree to them, that you will then let us know what you intend to do.

"They, likewise, sent word to you, that when they had heard from you whether you accepted of our proposals, that we would then do as you desire, in sending up the news.

"Brothers, we expected an answer to our proposals, but none arrived, until we were informed, by a woman, who returned from Albany, that those preparations were actually making, and that troops were actually marching in the country. We then, brothers, took the matter into consideration, and determined it was best for a party to meet you, and you see us this day, brothers, arrived.

"We come, brothers, to beg of you, that you take good care and prudence of what you are going about. We beg of you, brothers, to remember the engagement which was made with the Twelve United Colonies, at our interview last Summer, as we then engaged to open the path of peace, and to keep it undefiled from blood; at the same time, something of a different nature made its appearance. You assured us, brothers, that if any were found in your neighbourhood inimical to us, that you would consider them as enemies. The Six Nations then supposed that the son of Sir William was pointed at, by that expression. We then desired, particularly, that he might not be injured, as it was not in his power to injure the cause, and that, therefore, he might not be molested. The Six Nations then said they would not concern themselves with your operation, in other parts, but particularly desired that this path might be free from blood.

"And now, brothers, we repeat it again, we beg of you to take good care, and not to spill any blood in this path; and the more especially, brothers, as it is as but of this day that the Six Nations had so agreeable an interview with the Colonies; and our Chiefs are now hunting in the woods, and not dreaming that there is any prospect that this path is, or will be, defiled with blood.

"We informed you, brothers, that we had heard, of a woman, that you was advancing, and that you had cannon; we then took it into consideration; we thought it strange, that cannon should be brought into the country, as the Twelve United Colonies had so lately opened the path of peace; as, you will remember that this path was opened last Spring, and the Six Nations agreed to keep it open. We then thought, what could influence the Twelve United Colonies to open this path? And, from the present appearance, it is as if with a design that the cannon should pass free from all obstruction.

"Brothers, attend! It was your request, and a matter agreed upon by the Twelve United Colonies, that we should mind nothing but peace; therefore, brothers, as we mean to observe that agreement, we have expressed ourselves as above, and, as brothers, we mind nothing but peace; we look upon ourselves as mediators between the two parties.

"Therefore, brothers, as your messengers declared that you would not be the aggressors, we informed Sir John of this, and earnestly begged of him not to be the aggressor, or the means of shedding blood, and, at the same time, assured him, that if we found he should be the aggressor, we would not pay any further attention to him; and, likewise, told them, that if our brothers of the United Colonies were the aggressors, we should treat them in the same manner.

"This is what we told Sir John, as we look upon ourselves to be mediators between both parties, and, as we have said before, desired him not to be the aggressor. To which Sir John replied, that we knew his disposition very well, and that he had no mind to be the aggressor. He assured us that he would not be the aggressor, but, if the people came up to take away his life, he would do as well as he could, as the law of Nature justified every person to stand in his own defence.

"According to the news we have heard, it is as though Sir John would shut up the path of peace in that quarter; but that is impossible he should do it, as he has but a mere handful of friends. But, brothers, if this company, who are now passing by, should go up, and any thing bad should happen, we shall look on you as shutting up the path.

"It has been represented to you, brothers, that it seems that Sir John is making military preparations, and that he is making a fort round his house; but, brothers, as we live so near him, we should certainly know it, if any thing of that nature should be done, especially, as we go there so frequently, on account of our father, the Minister, who, sometimes, performs divine service at that place. We have never seen any hostile preparations made there; there is no cannon, nor any thing of that kind, and that all things remained in the same situation it was in the lifetime of Sir William.

"Brothers, we would not conceal any thing from you; it would not be right to use deceit, neither do we mean to do it; the minds of our counsellors are very much grieved, and aggrieved, at that part of the disposition of those whom we may call our warriors, as there are some among us of different minds, as there are among you.

Brothers, our counsellors remembering the covenant we, last Summer, made with our brethren, the Twelve Colonies, have, all along, strongly urged our warriors to peace, and have checked them when a contrary disposition appeared. Our minds are very much grieved to find any of our warriors of a different sentiment. We have, hitherto, been able to restrain them, and hope still to be able to do it, for matters are not now carried to extremity; but, if they are, our warriors will not be restrained, because they will think themselves deceived if this military force comes into the country.

"We have declared to you, brothers, that we would not deceive, and that we mean to declare our minds to you openly and freely. We, the Sachems, have all along inculcated to the warriors sentiments of peace, and they have hitherto been obedient to us, though there have been frequent rumours that they should be disturbed, yet we have, hitherto, been able to calm their minds. But now, brothers, so large a party coming alarms the minds of our warriors.

"They are determined, brothers, to go and be present at your interview with St. John, and determined to see and hear every thing that should be there transacted; and if it shall then appear, that this party shall push matters to extremes, we then cannot be accountable for any thing that may happen. But, as for us, brothers, the counsellors are fully determined ever to persevere in the path of peace.

"Brothers, attend! Though I have finished what I had purposed so say, yet I will add one thing more. When the news of your approach arrived at our town, it caused great confusion; some were ready to take to their arms, observing, that those reports respecting the unfriendly disposition of the Colonies were now verified. I begged of them, brothers, to possess their minds in peace for a few days. I told them, that I, myself, would go to Albany and inquire into the truth of the matter. I was so conscious of my own innocence, that no hostile appearance could deter me however formidable. I therefore desired them to sit still, until my return home, which might be in two days if I went to Albany. This, brothers, is the present situation of our people; they are waiting to see what news I bring.

"Brothers, when I made this request to the warriors, that they should sit still till my return, they told me that they would, which they are now in expectation of, and will do nothing until I get back. But, brothers, after my return, I will repeat to them the speech you will now make to me, and if any of our people should still persist to be present at your interview with Sir John, we hope, brethren, you will not think hard of us as counsellors, as it is not in our power to rule them as we please. If they should go, and if any thing evil should happen, we beg to know, brothers, what treatment we may expect who remain at home in peace.

"Brothers, this is all we have to say; this is the business which has brought us down, and we now expect an answer, to carry home to our people."

To which I delivered the following Answer, which it was easy to be perceived, had the desired effect:

"Brothers of the Mohawk Nation: We the Commissioners, appointed by the Congress, and by your brothers of Albany and Schenectady, have paid great attention to the speech you have delivered to us; we now desire you to open your ears, and attentively listen to what we have to say in answer.

"Brothers, it pleased us to hear you declare, that you would speak your minds freely; we assure you that we shall do the same, and hide nothing from you of what is in our thoughts.

"Brothers, we were in hopes that the message which we sent you by Mr. Bleecker would have eased your minds, and have convinced you, that we had no hostile intentions against you or any other Indians, for if we had, we would not have sent you that message, neither would we have supplied you with powder, as we did last Summer, and again the other day.

"Brothers, we are extremely sorry that you have not complied with our request, to send the speech which we sent you by Mr. Bleecker to the Six Nations, in the manner which we required.

"Brothers, you told us that five or six men would have been sufficient to have gone to Johnstown, and to have inquired what was transacting there, and that these people would have been in no danger, as it would have been a shame to have interrupted them. We acknowledge, brothers, that it would have been a shame if we had sent them, and they had been interrupted; but we have full proofs that many people in Johnstown, and the neighbourhood thereof, have, for a considerable time past, made preparations to carry into execution the wicked designs of the King's evil counsellors.

"Brothers, it is very true, that last Summer the United Colonies promised that the path to the Indian country should be kept open. They again repeat that promise; and although it is by the special order of the Congress, that this body of troops are now marching up, yet it is not to shut the path, but to keep it open, and to prevent the people in and about Johnstown from cutting off the communication between us and our brethren of the Six Nations, and our other brethren living upon the river.

"Brothers, although we have before observed, that the people living in and about Johnstown are making hostile preparations against us, yet we will not shed a drop of their blood, unless they refuse to come to an agreement, by which we may be safe, or unless they oppose us with arms. We do not mean that any of our warriors should set their foot on any of the lands you possess, or that of the Six Nations, unless our enemies should take shelter there, for those we are resolved to follow wherever they go. We again repeat, that we have no quarrel with you, and we do expect that you will not interfere in this family contest, but stand by as indifferent spectators, agreeable to the engagement of the Six Nations made to us last Summer at their own request.

"Brothers, we assured you last Summer, that, as we had no quarrel with any Indians, we would not touch a hair of their heads; yet when our warriors were at St. John's they were attacked by Indians; two of your tribe, and some others, were killed. You have never blamed us for it, because you well know that as our lives are dear to us, we had a right to kill any man who attempts to kill us; you ought, therefore, not to be surprised, if we take every precaution to prevent being destroyed by the friends of the King's evil counsellors.

"Brothers, in a little time we may be called upon to go and fight against our enemies to the Eastward, who are employed by the King's evil counsellors, and can you think it prudent that we should leave a set of people who are our enemies, in any part of the country, in such a situation as to be able to destroy our wives and children, and burn our houses in our absence? Would you leave your wives and children in such a situation? The wisdom by which you have conducted your affairs, convinces us that you would not; and yet so cautious are we that no blood may be shed, that we shall send a letter to Sir John, inviting him to meet us on the road, between this place and his house, which if he does, we make no doubt but every thing will be settled in an amicable manner. And, that he may be under no apprehensions, we do now assure you, that if we do not come to an agreement, he will be permitted safely to return to his own house.

"Brothers, we thank you that you have concealed nothing from us; and we assure you that we scorn deceit as much as you do, and, therefore, we shall now speak our minds freely on what you have said respecting the conduct which your warriors mean to hold. We have no objection, nay, we wish that you and they should be present to hear what we shall propose to Sir John, and the people in and about Johnstown, who are our enemies. But we beg of you to tell your warriors, that although we have no quarrel with them, yet, if we should be under the disagreeable necessity of fighting with our enemies, and your warriors should join them and fight against us, that we will do as we did at St. John's, and repel force by force.

"Brothers, you have asked us if your warriors should go, and if any thing evil should happen, what treatment you may expect who remain at home in peace.

"Brothers, in the treaty held at Albany last Summer, you and your warriors were present, and you and they jointly promised to remain neuter, and not to interfere in this quarrel; should your warriors, therefore, now take up arms against us, we must consider it as a breach of the treaty, so far as it respects the Lower Mohawk Castle, of which breach we shall complain to our brethren of the other Nations; and, at the same time lay the matter before our Great Council, at Philadelphia, whose determination thereupon will be our future guide.

"Brothers, we are surprised that the least doubt should remain on your minds with respect to our friendly intentions towards you, after the many instances we have given you of our love and friendship. But we must impute it to the wicked insinuations of our mutual enemies; who wish for nothing so much as to see the ancient covenant which has so long subsisted between us broke.

"Brothers, you have observed that you would pay no regard to that party that should be the first aggressor. We cannot be the aggressors, for if our enemies in and about Johnstown had had no evil intentions against us, we should never have come thus far with an army. Whoever takes up arms against another, although he has not yet struck, must be considered as the aggressor, and not he who tries to prevent the blow.

"Brothers, we have now freely and fully disclosed to you our minds. We hope you will remember what we have said, and repeat it to your brother counsellors and warriors; and lest you should not be able to recollect every part of this speech, you may have your brothers Karagh-quadirhon and *Tezedonderon to attend you if it be agreeable to you.

"Brothers, your women have sent us a belt. We beg you to assure them of our regard, and to entreat them to prevent your warriors from doing any thing that would have the least tendency to incur our resentment, or interrupt that harmony which we wish may subsist to the end of time."

To this they made the following short Reply:

"Brother SCHUYLER, the Great Man, attend!

"We have this evening heard what you have to say, and we are glad of it, and thank you for it.

"Every thing that has been said to us, brother, has been perfectly agreeable to us.

"I shall not attempt, brother, to make a particular reply to every thing that has been said to us; indeed it would not be proper at this time.

"We are very glad, brother, that you have determined to write to Sir John, requesting an interview with him, in hopes of an amicable agreement.

"Brother, you mention, that it would be agreeable to you that the warriors and counsellors, or Sachems, should attend.

"Brother, we, the Sachems, will attend, even though we should do it at the risk of our lives.

"Brother, we should be glad if you would inform us of the time and place of your interview with Sir John. You likewise told us, that if it was agreeable to us that your interpreters should attend, to recapitulate the speech you have made, which, likewise, is agreeable to us; and we desire that they may go with us, for by that means all mistakes may be prevented.

"Brother, you may depend on it that we will use our utmost influence with our warriors, to calm their minds.

"You may depend on it likewise, that our sisters will use their utmost influence for the same purpose."

I then assured them again, that as we had no hostile intentions, they might rest assured that nothing disagreeable would happen to them, and that, if they attended at Johnstown as friends, they would receive the protection due to them as mediators, after which they returned.

Early on Wednesday, the 17th, I marched, having previously sent a letter to Sir John Johnson, of which the following is a copy:

"Schenectady, January 16, 1776.

"SIR: Information having been received that designs of the most dangerous tendency to the rights, liberties, properties, and even lives of those of His Majesty's faithful subjects in America, who are opposed to the uncontutional measures of his Ministry, have been formed in part of the County of Tryon, I am, therefore, ordered to march a body of men into that County, to carry into execution certain resolutions of my superiors, and to contravene these dangerous designs.

* Deane and Bleecker, interpreters.

"Influenced, sir, by motives of humanity, I wish to comply with my orders, in a manner the most peaceable, that no blood may be shed; I, therefore, request that you will please to meet me to-morrow at any place on my way to Johnstown, to which I propose then to march. For which purpose I do hereby give you my word and honour, that you, and such persons as you may choose should attend you, shall pass safe and unmolested to the place where you may meet me, and from thence back to the place of your abode.

"Rutgers Bleecker and Henry Glen, Esquires, are the bearers hereof, gentlemen who are entitled to your best attention, which I dare say they will experience, and by whom I expect you will favour me with an answer to this letter.

"You will please to assure Lady Johnson, that whatever may be the result of what is now in agitation, she may rest perfectly satisfied that no indignity will be offered her.

"I am, sir, your humble servant,

"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"To Sir John Johnson, Baronet."

He accordingly met me about sixteen miles beyond Schenectady, accompanied by some of the leading Scotchmen, and two or three others, when I delivered him the following terms:

"Terms offered by the Honourable PHILIP SCHUYLER, Esq., Major-General in the Army of the Thirteen UNITED COLONIES, and commanding in the NEW-YORK Department, to SIR JOHN JOHNSON, Baronet, and all such other persons in the County of TRYON, as have evinced their intentions of supporting His Majesty's Ministry to carry into execution the unconstitutional measures of which the AMERICANS so justly complain, and to prevent which they have been drawn to the dreadful necessity of having recourse to arms.

"First. That Sir John Johnson shall, upon his word and honour, immediately deliver up all cannon, arms, and other military stores, of what kind soever, which may be in his own possession, or which he has caused to be delivered into the possession of any persons whatsoever, either directly or indirectly, or that, to his knowledge, may be concealed in any part of the said County; that he shall distinguish all such military stores, of what kind soever, as belong to the Crown, or were furnished with the design of arming the Indians, or the inhabitants of Tryon County, from those which may be private property, in order that a proper inventory may be taken of the last articles, that the same may be restored, or the value of them refunded when this unhappy contest shall be over.

"Secondly. General Schuyler, out of personal respect to Sir John, and from a regard to his rank, consents that Sir John shall retain, for his own use, a complete set of armour, and as much powder as may be sufficient for his domestick purposes.

"Thirdly. That Sir John Johnson shall remain upon his parole of honour in any part of Tryon County, which he may choose to the eastward of the District of unless it should appear necessary to the honourable Continental Congress to remove him to some other part of this, or any other Colony; in which case, he is immediately to comply with such orders as they may think proper to give for that purpose.

"Fourthly. That the Scotch inhabitants of the said County shall, without any kind of exception, immediately deliver up all arms in their possession, of what kind soever they may be, and that they shall each solemnly promise, that they will not any time hereafter, during the continuance of this unhappy contest, take up arms without the permission of the Continental Congress, or of their general officers; and for the more faithful performance of this article, the General insists that they shall immediately deliver up to him six hostages of his own nomination.

"Fifthly. That such of the other inhabitants of Tryon County, as have avowed themselves averse to the measures of the United Colonies, shall, also, deliver up their arms, of what kind soever they may be, and enter into the like engagement as is stipulated in the preceding article, both with respect to their future conduct, and the number of hostages.

"Sixthly. That all blankets, strouds, and other Indian articles, belonging to the Crown, and intended as presents to the Indians, shall be delivered up to a Commissary appointed by General Schuyler, in the presence of three or more of the Mohawk Chiefs, in order that the same may be dispersed amongst the Indians, for the purpose of cementing the ancient friendship between them and their brethren of the United Colonies, for which sole purpose they ought to have been furnished.

"Seventhly. If Sir John Johnson, and the people referred to in the foregoing articles, shall justly abide by, and perform what is thereby required of them, the General, in behalf of the Continental Congress, doth promise and engage, that neither Sir John Johnson, nor any of those people, shall be molested by any of the other inhabitants of the said County, or by any of the inhabitants of the Thirteen United Colonies; but that, on the contrary, they will be protected in the quiet and peaceable enjoyment of their property, the sole intent of this treaty being to prevent the horrid effects of a civil and intestine war betwixt those who ought to be brethren. That all the arms, which shall be delivered up in consequence of the preceding articles, shall be valued by sworn appraisers. That if the Continental Congress should have occasion for them they may be taken. If not, they will be delivered to the respective proprietors when this unhappy contest shall be at an end."

He assured me that the Indians would support him, and that some were already at Johnson-Hall, for that purpose, and others on their way down.

In return, I told him that, although averse to shedding any blood, yet, if he resisted, that force would be opposed to force, without distinction, and that the consequences would be of the most serious nature, unless he complied with my requisitions. He begged time to answer, until next evening, to which I consented.

About an hour after he had left me, Abraham and another of the Mohawks called upon me; I acquainted him of the information I had received from Sir John, which he denied to be true, giving me assurances that the Mohawks would not interfere otherwise than as mediators; I answered, that I hoped they would not, but that, if they did, I should surely not hesitate one moment to destroy all that should appear in arms against us.

On Thursday the 18th, I approached to within four miles of Johnstown, and about six o'clock, received the following answer to my terms:

"Terms proposed by Sir John Johnson, Baronet, and the people of Kingsborough and the adjacent neighbourhood, to the Honourable Philip Schuyler, Esq., Major-General in the Army of the Thirteen United Colonies, and commanding in the New-York Department.

"First. That Sir John Johnson, and the rest of the gentlemen expect, that all such arms of every kind as are their own property, may remain in their possession; all the other arms shall be delivered up to such person, or persons, as may be appointed for that purpose. As to military stores belonging to the Crown, Sir John has not any.

"Secondly. Answered in the first.

"Thirdly. Sir John expects that he will not be confined to any certain County, but be at liberty to go where he pleases.

"Fourthly. The Scotch inhabitants will deliver up their arms, of what kind soever they may be; and they will each solemnly promise, that they will not at any time hereafter, during the continuance of this unhappy contest, take up arms without the permission of the Continental Congress, or of their general officers. Hostages they are not in a capacity to give, no one man having command over another, or power sufficient to deliver such; therefore, this part of the article to be passed from, or the whole included. Women and children to be required, a requisition so inhuman, as we hope the General will dispense with.

"Fifthly. Answered in the fourth.

"Sixthly. Sir John has not any blankets, strouds, or other presents, intended for the Indians.

"Seventhly. If the above proposals are agreed to, and signed by the General, Sir John and the people referred to will rely on the assurances of protection given by the General.

"JOHN JOHNSON,

"ALLAN McDONELL.

"To the Hon. Philip Schuyler, Esq., Major-General.

"Johnson-Hall, January 18, 1776."

To which I returned the following Answer:

"Cagnuage, January 18, eight o'clock P. M., 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: MESSRS. Adams and McDonell have delivered me your answer to my proposals of yesterday's date. The least attention to the articles I offered, when compared with yours, must convince you that you omitted replies to several of them, consequently, what you have sent me is very imperfect, and, also, unsatisfactory. I waive pointing out some inconsistencies in your proposals, as the whole are exceptionable excepting the last.

"I must, therefore, obey my orders, and again repeat, that, in the execution of them I shall strictly abide by the laws of humanity; at the same time assuring you, that, if the least resistance is made I will not answer for the consequences, which may be of a nature the most dreadful.

"If Lady Johnson is at Johnson-Hall, I wish she would retire, and, therefore, enclose a passport, as I shall march my troops to that place without delay.

"You may, however, have time to reconsider the matter; and, for that purpose, I give you until twelve o'clock this night, after which, I shall receive no proposals, and I have sent you Mr. Robert Yates, Mr. Glenn, and Mr. Duer, to receive the ultimate proposals you have to make. This condescension I make from no other motive than to prevent the effusion of blood, so far as it may be effected without risking the safety of the country, or being guilty of a breach of the positive orders I have received from the honourable Continental Congress.

"I am, gentlemen, with due respect, your humble servant,
"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"To Sir John Johnson and Mr. Allan McDonell."

Immediately after I had sent this away, the Sachems, and all the Warriors of the Lower Mohawk Town, and some from the Upper, called upon me, and informed me that Sir John Johnson had related to them the contents of the terms I had offered to him and his associates; that Sir John declared he only meant to guard himself from any insult that might be offered by riotous people; that he had no unfriendly intentions against the country, and begged that I would accept of the terms he had offered. In reply, I explained my proposals, and Sir John's answer; pointed out the impropriety of closing with him on the conditions he wanted, and told them that I had given him until twelve o'clock to comply, after which, I should take such measures as would force him, and whoever assisted him, to a compliance. They were contented with the reasons I gave, but begged, that if his answer was not satisfactory, that I would give him until four o'clock in the morning, that they might have time to go and shake his head, (as they expressed it,) and bring him to his senses; and they begged it as a favour, to be charged to them, that I would not remove him out of the County; they apologized for the threats of their warriors, said that they were not all present at the treaty of Albany, but that now they were all here, and declared that they would never take arms against us.

I paid them a compliment on their peaceable intentions, and informed them, that, although Sir John's conduct was extremely obnoxious, and that we should be justified in making him a close prisoner, yet, I would grant their request, for two reasons; first, to show our love and affection to them, and to convince them that they could obtain that by asking it as a favour, which they could not by threatening; secondly, that by leaving him they might, by their advice and example, teach him to alter his conduct.

At twelve, the following answer from Sir John came to hand:

"Answers to the Terms proposed by the Honourable Philip Schuyler, Esq., Major-General in the Army of the Thirteen United Colonies, and commanding in the NEW-YORK Department, to Sir JOHN JOHNSON, Baronet, the Inhabitants of KINGSBOROUGH, and the neighbourhood adjacent.

"First and Second Articles agreed to, except a few favourite family arms.

"Third. Sir John Johnson having given his parole of honour not to take up arms against America, and conceiving the design of this military operation to be with no other view than that of removing the jealousies of which his countrymen are unhappily and unjustly inspired with against him, can, by no means, think of submitting to this article in its full latitude, though, for the sake of preserving peace and removing any suspicions of undue influence, he consents not to go to the westward of the German-Flats and Kingsland Districts; to every other part of the Continent to the southward of this County, he expects the privilege of going.

"Fourth. Agreed to, except to that part of the Article which respects the giving hostages. After the Scotch inhabitants have surrendered their arms, the General may take any six prisoners from amongst them, as he chooses, without resistance. They expect, however, that the prisoners taken will be maintained, agreeable to their respective rank, and that they may have the privilege of going to any part of the Provinces of New-Jersey or Pennsylvania, which the General, or the Continental Congress, may appoint. They likewise expect, from the General's humanity, that provision will be made for the maintenance of the prisoners' wives and children, agreeable to their respective situations in life. Yet, for the sake of promoting the harmony of the country, they will not break off this treaty merely on that account, provided the General thinks he cannot exert a discretionary power in this matter, in which case they rely upon the General's influence with the Continental Congress, who, they cannot persuade themselves, will be inattentive to the voice of humanity, or to the feelings of parents who may be torn from their families. Those to whose lot it may fall to be taken prisoners, it is expected they will be allowed a few days to settle their business, and the gentlemen to wear their side arms.

"Fifth. Neither Sir John Johnson, nor the Scotch gentlemen, can make any engagement for any other persons than those over whom they may have influence. Neither can they possibly know the names of all such persons who have shown themselves averse to the measures of the United Colonies. They give their word and honour, that so far as depends on them, the inhabitants shall give up their arms and enter into the like engagement with the Scotch inhabitants. The General has it more in his power to discover those who are obnoxious, and to make as many as he pleases prisoners; neither shall they adopt the quarrel of any such persons as their own.

"Sixth. Sir John gives his word and honour that he has no blankets, strouds, or other presents, belonging to the Crown, intended for the Indians, and, therefore, this requisition cannot be complied with.

"Seventh. If the above proposals are agreed to, and signed by the General, Sir John, and the people referred to, will rely on the assurances of protection given by the General. But as it will be impossible for the arms to be collected till Saturday next, at twelve o'clock, all the men referred to in the above articles, will be then paraded in Johnstown, and ground their arms in the presence of such troops as the General may appoint.

"JOHN JOHNSON,
"ALLAN McDONELL.

"Johnson-Hall, January 18, 1776."

Upon which I told the Indians that I believed the matter would be settled in a peaceable manner. They then retired, with repeated expressions of their approbation of my conduct, and of esteem for Congress.

I then sent the following to Sir John, viz:

"Cagnuoge, January 19, 1776.

"General Schuyler's feelings as a gentleman induce him to consent that Sir John Johnson may retain the few favourite family arms, he making a list of them.

"The General will, also, consent that Sir John Johnson may go as far to the westward as the German-Flats and Kingsland Districts, in this County, and to every other part of this Colony to the southward and eastward of said Districts, provided he does not go into any seaport town; the General, however, believes that if Sir John's private business should require his going to any of the other ancient English Colonies, that he will be permitted it, by applying to Congress for leave.

"The General will take six of the Scotch inhabitants prisoners, since they prefer it to going hostages. It has been the invariable rule of Congress, and that of all its officers, to treat prisoners with the greatest humanity, and to pay all due deference to rank. He cannot ascertain the places to which Congress may please to send them; for the present they will go to Reading or Lancaster, in Pennsylvania. Nor can he make any promises with respect to the maintenance of the women and children. His humanity will certainly induce him to recommend to Congress an attention to what has been requested on that head.

"General Schuyler expects that all the Scotch inhabitants, of whatever rank, that are not confined to their beds by illness, shall attend with their arms, and deliver them on Saturday, at twelve o'clock, which, if not faithfully performed, he will consider himself as disengaged from any engagements entered into with them.

"General Schuyler never refused a gentleman his side-arms.

"The prisoners, that may be taken, must be removed to Albany immediately, where the General will permit them to remain a reasonable time, to settle their family affairs.

"If the terms General Schuyler has offered, on the 17th instant, are accepted, with the above qualifications, fair copies will be made out and signed by the parties, one of which will be delivered to Sir John and Mr. McDonell, signed by the General. To prevent a waste of time, the General wishes Sir John and Mr. McDonell immediately to send an answer.

"He remains with due respect, Sir John's and Mr. McDonell's humble servant,

"PHILIP SCHUYLER."

Which was agreed to, and, on Friday, the 19th, I marched to Johnstown, having first detached parties to different parts of the County to bring in the other Tories, not comprehended in the agreement with Sir John. In the afternoon, the arms and military stores in possession of Sir John were delivered up; a much smaller quantity than I expected.

On Saturday, the 20th, at twelve o'clock, I drew my men in the street, and the Highlanders, between two and three hundred, marched to the front, where they grounded their arms; these secured, I dismissed them with an exhortation, pointing out the only conduct which could insure them protection. I then sent for two of the persons mentioned in Conner's affidavit, the rest not being in the County, and tried, by every means in my power, to make them confess what Conner charged them with; they strenuously denied the charge, and when I produced Conner, they called him a perjured wretch, and declared their willingness to be hanged, if, upon further examination, I should have just grounds to conclude that his charge was supported. I then sent several field-officers and a party, with Conner, to the spot where the arms were supposed to be hid. He pointed out a small artificial oval island, in a duck pond, the greatest diameter of which was about twenty-eight feet, and the shorter about twenty, and raised about three feet above the surface of the water in its highest part, and sloping down to the pond. On its being observed that it was too small to hide so many arms, he said they were put up in four piles. The ground was then cleared of the snow and broke up; it was immediately perceived that the ground had not lately been broken up; they, however, dug down until they got as low as the surface of the water, and then tried with sticks, swords, and other instruments, but found nothing. The gentlemen present unanimously reported that they were convinced that Conner was an impostor. As such I shall keep him confined, until I receive further directions from Congress.

On Saturday evening I returned to Cagnuoge. Some of the parties I had sent on the preceding day were returned with about fifty Tories; sixty more were brought in on Sunday, the 21st. I left Colonel Herkimer, and the Committee of Tryon County, to receive the arms of the remainder, and to fix on six of the principal leaders, and send them to me. I expect the whole disarmed, or to be disarmed, will amount to above six hundred. Not being satisfied with the ammunition, &c., delivered me by Sir John, I wrote him the following Letter :

"Cagnuage, January 21, 1776.

"SIR: Although it is a well-known fact that all the Scotch people that yesterday surrendered arms, had not broad-sword when they came to the country, yet many of them had, and most of them were possessed of dirks; and as none have been given up of either, I will charitably believe that it was rather inattention than a wilful omission. Whether it was the former or the latter must be ascertained by their immediate compliance or non-compliance with that part of the treaty which requires that all arms, of what kind soever, should be delivered up.

"After having been informed by you, at our first interview, that the Scotch people meant to defend themselves, I was not a little surprised that no ammunition was delivered up, and that you had none to furnish them with. These observations were immediately made by others as well as me. I was too apprehensive of the consequences which might have been fatal to those people, to take notice of it on the spot. I shall, however, expect an éclaircissement on this subject, and beg that you and Mr. McDonell will give it me as soon as may be.

"I am, gentlemen, with due respect, your humble servant,
"PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"To Sir John Johnson, Baronet."

And then marched back to this place. I have had much anxiety, and an incredible deal of trouble to prevent so large a body of men, collected on a sudden, with little discipline, from running into excesses. I am, however, happy that nothing material has happened that can reflect disgrace on our cause.

I forgot to observe, that previous to my leaving this place, I had sent a message to the Mohawks, advising them of my intended march into the County of Tryon, and assuring them that no violence was intended them, copy of which, with copy of their answer, I enclose.

After I had finished in Tryon County, I despatched Mr. Deane, the Interpreter, with a speech and belt to the Six Nations.

Congress will perceive that my speeches are very crude and inaccurate; but, although at best incompetent, yet, at this time, I have another excuse from the hurry and confusion which the command of such a multitude must necessarily create. Indeed, I never had, during the whole time, less than thirty people about me, nor was it possible to retire to any place where the same inconveniency would not have attended.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Your favour by Bennett, of the 20th instant, he delivered me yesterday. Since General Wooster's letter of the 5th instant, I have not heard a word from Canada, whence I conclude that our affairs are not in a worse condition than when the General wrote. Part of the troops which I directed Colonel Warner to raise, are already so far advanced that I believe they will reach St. John's to-day or to-morrow. I believe the whole under Colonel Warner's command will amount to about seven hundred; he thinks more. A regiment is also raising in the County of Berkshire, of about that number. Part of these, also, are already marched, and a regiment is on its way from Pennsylvania, and another from New-Jersey; the two last in consequence of my former application for troops to be sent to Canada; and I learn, with pleasure, that you are raising another.

I enclose your Honour a return of what arms and accoutrements were delivered into store by the troops raised in the Colony of Connecticut. I believe they are far short of your expectations, and they are very bad, as all those that had good arms refused to deliver them. They are chiefly at this place, undergoing repairs; so that, such of your men as may not be supplied, will be provided here, on their way up. I have taken every step, the confusion and hurry of business would allow me, to prepare for the march of these troops, and I believe they will not find the difficulties any thing like so great as are generally imagined. The Tories in Tryon County are disarmed, and disarming, to the number of between six and seven hundred. I have made six of the chiefs of the Highland clan of the McDonells prisoners, and six more are to be sent me of the ancient English, Dutch, and German inhabitants.

I wish that the accounts of whatever money may be advanced to the regiment, now raising with you, should be transmitted to the Paymaster-General, that the accounts may be regularly kept and the men paid off.

I am, sir, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

GENERAL LEE TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Stamford, January 23, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday, on the road, I had the honour of receiving yours, and ought to make you a thousand apologies for not having answered it immediately; but the circumstance of being on the road, together with the necessity of finishing some despatches to General Washington, and to the Continental Congress, rendered it almost impossible.

I should certainly, sir, have apprized you of my march, had I not concluded that you would have learnt it time enough from the Congress. The letter which I have from the General, directed to the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, I was ordered to deliver with my own hand.

With respect, sir, to the alarms of the inhabitants, on the suspicion that my business was to commence active hostilities against the men-of-war in your harbour, I can assure you that they may be perfectly easy—such never was the intention of the General, and I hope you will believe that I never entertained a thought of transgressing the letter of my instructions. The motive of the General for detaching me was solely to prevent the enemy from taking post in your city, or lodging themselves in Long-Island, which we have the greatest reason to think, sir, is their design. Some subordinate purposes were likewise to be executed, which are much more proper to be communicated by word of mouth than by writing; but I give you my word that no active service is proposed, as you seem to apprehend.

If the ships-of-war are quiet I shall be quiet, but I declare solemnly, that if they make a pretext of my presence to fire on the town, the first house set in flames by their guns shall be the funeral pile of some of their best friends; but I believe, sir, the inhabitants may rest in security on this subject.

I am convinced, and every man who considers a moment must be convinced, that the destruction of the seaport towns would, if possible, be a severer stroke to the Ministry, and their instruments, than to the inhabitants themselves. The seaport towns are the only holds they have on America; they are considered as the pledges of servitude; the menacing destruction to them may be of admirable use to them, but the real destruction of them must extinguish all hopes of success.

In compliance, sir, with your request, I shall only carry with me into town a force just strong enough to secure it against any designs of the enemy until it shall please the Continental Congress to take measures for its permanent security. The main body I shall leave on the western frontiers of Connecticut, according to your directions.

I hope, sir, and persuade myself, that the Committee and inhabitants can have no objection to this plan. If Mr. Tryon and the captains of the ships-of-war are to prescribe what numbers are, and what numbers are not to enter the town, they are absolute dictators to all intents and purposes. The condition is too humiliating for freemen to put up with.

You take pains to assure me, sir, that your Congress and Committee are not less zealous in the cause of American liberty, than any representative body on the Continent. I give you my word, sir, that this assurance was unnecessary. I am not one of those who have entertained a bad opinion of the virtue of New-York, or made it my business to asperse them; on the contrary, I have condemned loudly the illiberal, impolitic, and unjust reflections I have heard frequently thrown out. I should not have taken the liberty of troubling you with the opinion, good or bad, which an unimportant individual like myself may entertain of so respectable a body as your Committee, or Congress, had not this particular paragraph of your letter thrown the temptation in my way.

I am, sir, your most obedient, and devoted servant,
CHARLES LEE.

To Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Cambridge, January 23, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 16th instant, and am exceedingly sorry to hear that Congress countermanded the embarkation of the two regiments intended against the Tories on Long-Island. They, I doubt not, had their reasons; but, to me, it appears that the period is arrived, when nothing less than the most decisive and vigorous measures should be pursued. Our enemies from the other side of the Atlantic, will be sufficiently numerous; it highly concerns to have as few internal ones as possible.

As Congress seem to have altered their views in this instance, and the men which went with you from Connecticut are upon a very different footing from what I expected, it will be right to give Congress the earliest notice of your proceeding, and to disband your troops as soon as you think circumstances will admit of it.

In consequence of the melancholy reverse of our affairs in Canada, an application was made to me for succour, and happy should I have been if the situation of this Army could have afforded it. All I could do, was, to lay the matter before this, and the Governments of Connecticut and New-Hampshire, and urge the expediency and necessity of their sending a reinforcement of three regiments there immediately. Mr. Trumbull, and his Council of Safety, had anticipated my request; the other two Colonies have adopted the measure. The three regiments are now raising, and, I would willingly hope, will arrive in time to reinstate matters in that quarter, and give them a more agreeable aspect than they now have.

I shall be much obliged, by your pressing Colonel McDougall to forward the shells mentioned in his letter of the 2d instant, as they are much wanted; and, also, to spare me some powder, if he possibly can. You know our stock of this necessary article is small and inconsiderable, and you know, too, that we have a demand for a further supply.

The progress in raising recruits for the new Army being very slow, I have applied to this Colony, Connecticut, and New-Hampshire, for ten regiments of Militia, to continue in service till the 1st of April next, which they have granted me. As soon as they come in, and I can get provided with proper means, I am determined to attempt something. Of this, I would have you take no notice.

Within a few days past, several persons have come out of Boston; they all agree that General Clinton has gone upon some expedition. Some say he has between four and five hundred men; others, part of two regiments. What his force consists of is not precisely known; but, I am almost certain he has gone with some. His destination must be south of this, and, very probably, for New-York.

I thought it necessary to give you this information, that you may be upon your guard, and prepared to receive him as well as you can.

I shall be glad to hear from you frequently, and to be informed of any occurrences you may think material.

I am, dear sir, with great regard, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO JOSEPH REED.

Cambridge, January 23, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Real necessity compels me to ask you, whether I may entertain any hopes of your returning to my family. If you can make it convenient, and will hint the matter to Colonel Harrison, I dare venture to say, that Congress will make it agreeable to you in every shape they can.

My business increases very fast, and my distresses, for want of you, increase with it. Mr. Harrison is the only gentleman of my family that can afford me the least assistance in writing. He, and Mr. Moylan, whose time must now be solely employed in his department of Commissary, have, heretofore, afforded me their aid; and I have hinted to them, in consequence of what you signified in some former letter, that, as they have really had a great deal of trouble, each of them should receive one-third of your pay, reserving the other third, contrary to your desire, for yourself.

My distress and embarrassment are in a way of being very considerably increased by an occurrence in Virginia, which will, I fear, compel Mr. Harrison to leave me, or suffer considerably by his stay. He has written, however, by the last post, to ascertain if his return cannot be dispensed with. If he should go, I shall really be distressed beyond measure, as I know no persons able to supply your places in this part of the world, with whom I would choose to live in unbounded confidence.

The business, as I hinted to you before, is considerably increased, by being more comprehensive, and, at this time, perplexed, by the great changes which are happening every day; so that you would want a good writer, and a methodical man, as an assistant or copying clerk. Such a one, I have no doubt, will be allowed, and the choice I leave to yourself, as he should be a person in whose integrity you can confide, and on whose capacity, care, and method, you can rely.

At present, my time is so much taken up at my desk, that I am obliged to neglect many other essential parts of my duty. It is absolutely necessary, therefore, to have persons that can think for me, as well as execute orders. As it may be essential that the pay of the under secretary should be fixed, that you may, if you incline to return, and should engage one, know what to promise him, I have written to Colonel Harrison and Mr. Lynch on this subject. I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Joseph Reed, Esq.

COLONEL HARRISON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Cambridge, January 23, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to inform you, that General Gates handed him your letter of the 22d instant, containing a gross estimate of the pay you supposed would be due the New-Hampshire Militia, when the time they are engaged for shall expire.

His Excellency says, that he cannot possibly give a warrant on this estimate, and that each Captain must make out a particular list of their respective companies, noticing the time when any of their men enlisted in the regiments, (if that shall have been the case,) and, on the other side, an abstract of the pay due. There is a necessity for this, because the list and abstract are vouchers for, and the foundations of, the warrant annexed to them; the time when any of the men enlisted in the regiments must be mentioned, and pay only drawn till then, as they will be, from thence, included in the regimental abstracts.

Having made out lists and abstracts in this way, the Captains will give credit for the money they have received.

It is, also, necessary that each Captain should subjoin an affidavit to the foot of his abstract, similar to the copy enclosed. This mode has been, and will be, invariably pursued, respecting the Militia of this Colony. It is necessary, and founded on the difference between the regiments which continue in the service, and the Militia, which do not. In the abstract for the pay of the former, an affidavit is not material, because, if there should be any mistake or error in them, it may, and can be discovered, and rectified at a future day. It is otherwise with the latter; after they are gone, this cannot be done, and, therefore, their abstracts should have some authenticity; not that any intentional mistakes are apprehended to be made, but that the publick may be satisfied.

When the lists are made out in the manner directed, and the time of their engagement expired, his Excellency will give the proper warrants for payment. He would not have any objection to giving them sooner; if he was not fearful that some of them might go off after receiving their pay.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your humble, obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan.

By the Great and General Court of the Colony of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

A PROCLAMATION.

The frailty of human nature, the wants of individuals, and the numerous dangers which surround them, through the course of life, have, in all ages and in every country, impelled them to form societies and establish governments.

As the happiness of the people is the sole end of Government, so the consent of the people is the only foundation of it, in reason, morality, and the natural fitness of things; and, therefore, every act of Government, every exercise of sovereignty against, or without the consent of the people, is injustice, usurpation, and tyranny.

It is a maxim, that, in every Government there must exist, some where, a supreme, sovereign, absolute, and uncontrollable power; but this power resides, always, in the body of the people, and it never was, or can be delegated to one man or a few; the great Creator having never given to men a right to vest others with authority over them unlimited, either in duration or degree.

When Kings, Ministers, Governors, or Legislators, therefore, instead of exercising the powers intrusted with them according to the principles, forms, and proportions, stated by the Constitution, and established by the original compact, prostitute those powers to the purposes of oppression, to subvert, instead of supporting a free Constitution, to destroy, instead of preserving the lives, liberties, and properties of the people, they are no longer to be deemed magistrates vested with a sacred character, but become publick enemies, and ought to be resisted.

The Administration of Great Britain, despising equally the justice, humanity, and magnanimity, of their ancestors, and the rights, liberties, and courage of Americans, have, for a course of years, laboured to establish a sovereignty in America, not founded in the consent of the people, but in the mere will of persons a thousand leagues from us, whom we know not, and have endeavoured to establish this sovereignty over us against our consent, in all cases whatsoever.

The Colonies, during this period, have recurred to every peaceable resource in a free Constitution, by petitions and remonstrances, to obtain justice, which has been not only denied to them, but they have been treated with unexampled indignity and contempt, and, at length, open war, of the most atrocious, cruel, and sanguinary kind, has been commenced against them. To this, an open, manly, and successful resistance has, hitherto, been made. Thirteen Colonies are now firmly united in the conduct of this most just and necessary war, under the wise councils of their Congress.

It is the will of Providence, for wise, righteous, and gracious ends, that this Colony should have been singled out, by the enemies of America, as the first object both of their envy and their revenge, and, after having been made the subject of several merciless and vindictive statutes, (one of which was intended to subvert our Constitution by charter,) is made the seat of war.

No effectual resistance to the system of tyranny prepared for us could be made, without either instant recourse to arms, or a temporary suspension of the ordinary powers of Government and tribunals of justice. To the last of which evils, in hopes of a speedy reconciliation with Great Britain upon equitable terms, the Congress advised us to submit; and mankind has seen a phenomenon without example in the political world: a large and populous Colony subsisting, in great decency and order, for more than a year, under such a suspension of Government.

But, as our enemies have proceeded to such barbarous extremities, commencing hostilities upon the good people of this Colony, and, with unprecedented malice, exerting their power to spread the calamities of fire, sword, and famine through the land, and no reasonable prospect remains of a speedy reconciliation with Great Britain, the Congress have

"Resolved, That no obedience being due to the Act of Parliament for altering the Charter of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, nor to a Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, who will not observe the directions of, but endeavour to subvert that Charter, the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of that Colony are to be considered as absent, and their offices vacant; and, as there is no Council there, and inconveniences arising from the suspension of the powers of Government are intolerable, especially, at a time when General Gage hath actually levied war, and is carrying on hostilities against His Majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects of that Colony, that, in order to conform, as near as may be, to the spirit and substance of the Charter, it be recommended to the Provincial Convention, to write letters to the inhabitants of the several places which are entitled to representation in Assembly, requesting them to choose such Representatives; and, that the Assembly, when chosen, do elect Counsellors, and that such Assembly and Council exercise the powers of Government, until a Governor of His Majesty's appointment will consent to govern the Colony according to its Charter."

In pursuance of which advice, the good people of this Colony have chosen a full and free representation of themselves, who, being convened in Assembly, have elected a Council, who, as the Executive branch of Government, have constituted necessary officers through the Colony. The present generation, therefore, may be congratulated on the acquisition of a form of Government more immediately, in all its branches, under the influence and control of the people, and, therefore, more free and happy than was enjoyed by their ancestors.

But, as a Government so popular can be supported only by universal knowledge and virtue in the body of the people, it is the duty of all ranks to promote the means of education for the rising generation, as well as true religion, purity of manners, and integrity of life, among all orders and degrees.

As an army has become necessary for our defence, and, in all free States the civil must provide for and control the military power, the major part of the Council have appointed magistrates and courts of justice in every County, whose happiness is so connected with that of the people, that it is difficult to suppose they can abuse their trust. The business of it is, to see those laws enforced, which are necessary for the preservation of peace, virtue, and good order. And the Great and General Court expects, and requires, that all necessary support and assistance be given, and all proper obedience yielded to them, and will deem every person who shall fail of his duty in this respect towards them, a disturber of the peace of this Colony, and deserving of exemplary punishment.

That piety and virtue, which, alone, can secure the freedom of any people, may be encouraged, and vice and immorality suppressed, the Great and General Court have thought fit to issue this Proclamation, commanding and enjoining it upon the good people of this Colony, that they lead sober, religious, and peaceable lives, avoiding all blasphemies, contempt of the holy Scriptures, and of the Lord's day, and all other crimes and misdemeanours, all debauchery, profaneness, corruption, venality, all riotous and tumultuous proceedings, and all immoralities whatsoever; and that they decently and reverently attend the publick worship of God, at all times acknowledging, with gratitude, his merciful interposition in their behalf, devoutly confiding in him, as the God of armies, by whose favour and protection, alone, they may hope for success in their present conflict.

And all Judges, Justices, Sheriffs, Grand-Jurors, Tything-Men, and all other civil officers within this Colony, are hereby strictly enjoined and commanded, that they contribute all in their power, by their advice, exertions, and examples, towards a general reformation of manners, and that they bring to condign punishment every person who shall commit any of the crimes or misdemeanours aforesaid, or that shall be guilty of any immoralities whatsoever; and that they use their utmost endeavours to have the resolves of the Congress, and the good and wholesome laws of this Colony, duly carried into execution.

And as the Ministers of the Gospel within this Colony have, during the late relaxation of the powers of civil Government, exerted themselves for our safety, it is hereby recommended to them, still to continue their virtuous labours, for the good of the people, inculcating, by their public ministry and private example, the necessity of religion, morality, and good order.

In Council, January 19, 1776.

Ordered, That the foregoing Proclamation be read at the opening of every Superior Court of Judicature, &c., and Inferior Common Pleas, and Court of General Sessions for the Peace within this Colony, by their respective Clerks; and at the annual town meetings in March, in each town. And it is hereby recommended to the several Ministers of the Gospel throughout this Colony, to read the same in their respective assemblies on the Lord's day next after their receiving it, immediately after Divine service.

Sent down for concurrence.

MAJOR-GENERAL HOWE TO THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Boston, January 23, 1776.

MY LORD: The box containing your Lordship's despatches by the Centurion having been received on board when the Captain was on shore, by a mistake of the steward's, was put into a store-room, without the Captain's knowledge, which has occasioned my not getting them before this day.

The letters from your Lordship are your secret duplicate and separate, of the 5th September, one of the 15th, and one of the 22d, following.

Copies of letters from your Lordship to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, of the 22d September, from Lord Rockford to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, of the 21st September.

Extracts from your Lordship to General Gage, of the 2d August; two from Governor Martin, of the 30th June, and 6th July; and one from Lord William Campbell, of 19th July.

A Letter from Mr. Secretary Pownall, of the 26th September, and a duplicate from him of the 8th; a list of Indian goods shipped on board the Grand Duke of Russia, the Grosvenor, and Harcourt, transports; the two first are arrived.

A list of store-ships for America, also a despatch from your Lordship to Governor Martin, which shall be forwarded by Captain Collet, who is daily expected from Halifax, and will proceed, without loss of time, to North-Carolina; he will, also, be the bearer to General Clinton of copies of the extracts of Governor Martin's letters of the 30th June and 6th July.

The matter contained in your Lordship's secret letter of the 5th September, having been notified to me in a former letter, I have only to add my wishes that a part of the foreign troops therein mentioned, at least eight thousand, may be sent to this part of America, although I fear they cannot arrive for the early operations of the campaign, upon which the future success of it so much depends; and your Lordship's despatch of the 22d October, having amply set forth the business contained in your letter of the 15th September, and which is answered in nine of the 16th instant, I do not trouble your Lordship with any thing further upon this subject. The other letters received in this package have already been answered from the early receipt of your Lordship's letters upon the same subject.

The enclosed memorial from the officers in the marine corps, serving in the army, I beg leave to recommend to your Lordship's consideration; and if your Lordship should think with me, that there is not any impropriety in it, that you would be pleased to lay the same before His Majesty. It is my duty to add, that the officers concerned have acted here with the greatest spirit, diligence, and attention to the service.

By intelligence received this morning from the enemy's quarters, I learn that about the 1st of this month the Rebels, headed by Mr. Montgomery, made an assault upon Quebeck, and that they entered the town, but were repulsed with considerable loss by their own acknowledgment. Mr. Montgomery, with many other officers, and seventy men, were killed; Colonel Arnold and three hundred wounded and taken prisoners. Two deserters that have come over this day confirm the above intelligence, and further say that it has been published in one of their newspapers.

I am, &c.,

W. HOWE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CORK (IRELAND) TO A GENTLEMAN IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED JANUARY, 1776.

The following occurrence must give satisfaction to the friends of suffering America. When Colonel Ethan Allen, with about fifty other prisoners, arrived in the Solebay, two gentlemen went on board to inquire into their situation, and to assure them of the disposition of several gentlemen in this city to alleviate their distresses. Colonel Allen was so affected with this instance of unexpected generosity, that the expression of his gratitude could hardly find utterance.

His treatment on board the Solebay is far different from the barbarous and cruel usage he experienced in his passage from Quebeck, being then handcuffed and ironed in the most dreary part of the vessel, and basely insulted with cruel and unmanly reflections by some officers of the ship, whom he challenged in Cornwall without receiving satisfaction.

A subscription was begun this morning among some friends of the cause, and near fifty guineas collected to buy clothes for his men, and necessities for himself; and, if liberty can be got of Captain Williams to put live stock on board, I can assure you Colonel Allen will be extremely well provided. We this day sent a hamper of wine, sugar, fruit, chocolate, &c., on board for his immediate use, and to-morrow intend to prepare the sundry articles of which he sent a list. I enclose you a rough copy of his answer to our letter. Should he have permission to come on shore, he will be entertained by some of the first gentlemen of this city. I have not been refused by a single person on the subscription.

Copy of Colonel Allen's Note.

GENTLEMEN: I received your generous present this day with a joyful heart. Thanks to God there are still the feelings of humanity in the worthy citizens of Cork towards those of their bone and flesh, who, through misfortune from the present broils in the empire are needy prisoners.*

Dated Cork, January 24, 1776.

SPOTTSYLVANIA COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Spottsylvania County, at the Town-House in Fredericksburgh, the 24th day of January, 1776, present, Fielding Lewis, Esq., Chairman, and nineteen Members.

The said Committee proceeded to the choice of Officers to command two Companies of Regulars to be raised in the said County, agreeable to an Ordinance of the honourable Convention; whereupon the following gentlemen were chosen by ballot, viz: George Stubblefield and Oliver Towles, Captains; Robert Dudley and Nathaniel Fox, First Lieutenants; Charles Tutt and Peter Minor, Second

The Acteon put in at Falmouth, and took on board Colonel Ethan Allen and his fellow-prisoners, who had been confined in irons in Pedenais Castle, in order to carry them back to America. No assistance was given to Allen in England; but when the ship arrived at Cork, a subscription for him was begun in Ireland, and an ample supply of necessities given to him, of which he and his friends were in great need.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN CHEW, JUN., Clerk.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, January 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress ordered me to send you the sum of twelve thousand five hundred dollars, for the use of the regiment to be raised for Canada. I have agreed with Mr. Wheat, of Connecticut, (who carries the same sum to Connecticut;) to deliver it to you, or to Colonel Gilman, the Treasurer, at Exeter, for which he is to have thirty-six dollars, which you will please to pay him, and take his receipt; which receipt you will enclose to me, that I may receive the same out of the Continental Treasury, as the money is to be sent on the cost of the Continent.

I am, gentlemen, yours,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To the Provincial Committee of Safety, or Nicholas Gilman, Esq., Colony Treasurer.

P. S. As I was not certain whether the President had sent you the resolves of Congress of the 17th, I have enclosed them. The ten shillings mentioned, is this currency, equal to eight shillings, L. M. J. B.

RICHARD SWOOPE TO PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

York, January 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take the liberty of troubling your Honours with these few lines, as Mr. Nelson, the bearer hereof, proposes to raise a rifle company in the back country. If there should be any more men wanting for the service at present, I would take the liberty to recommend him to the Board as a proper person, (as Captain of a company of riflemen,) so far as he stands recommended to me.

Gentlemen, you have been kind enough to send me by Captain Schryak, twenty-five extracts from the votes of the House of Assembly, of the rules and regulations; and as that number is not half enough, I hope you will be pleased to send about thirty more by the first opportunity.

So, no more at present, and from, gentlemen, your most obedient, and humble servant,

RICHARD SWOOPE.

To the Committee of Safety at Philadelphia.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[January 27.—Referred to Mr. Wythe, Mr. Sherman, Mr. Ward, and Mr. S. Adams.]

January 24, 1776.

SIR: On Monday last I received intelligence that a transport, laden with stores for the Ministerial Army at Boston, was hovering off Sandy-Hook in distress, and waiting for assistance from the men-of-war at New-York. I thought it a matter of so much importance, that I immediately set out for Amboy, and there seized a pilot-boat, and, with forty men, was just pushing out, about two, yesterday morning, when I was joined by three other boats from Elizabethtown, with about forty men each, many of them gentlemen from Elizabethtown, who voluntarily came on this service, under the command of Colonel Dayton and Colonel Thomas. We found her about six leagues south-east of Sandy-Hook. We boarded and took her without opposition. She proves to be the Blue Mountain Valley, commanded by Captain James Hamilton Dempster, laden with coal, porter, sour-kroot, &c. (I wish it had been with arms and ammunition, as I expected.) We are now off Amboy, and intend to push in, this evening, into the Sound, between Staten-Island and the main. I write, now, in the hurry and noise incident to these occasions; I will write the particulars as soon as possible. And am, your most humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. She is a ship of about one hundred feet, from stem to stern, above; capable of making a ship-of-war of twenty-six-pounders, and ten three-pounders. I shall impatiently expect the orders of Congress.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Camp before Quebeck, January 24, 1775.

GENTLEMEN: I wrote the 14th instant, advising you of our present situation, and that of the enemy, and took the liberty of presenting you my sentiments on a future plan of operations, for which my zeal for the publick service, I hope, will apologize; since which, I have made an estimate (which I now enclose) of such artillery, stores, ammunition, &c., which, I imagine, will be necessary, if it is thought proper to carry on a siege in form. Of this I can be no judge, as I know not if powder can be spared from below; or shot, shells, &c., sent up in season. The artillery, except a twelve-inch mortar, (at Crown-Point;) is all in this country. I have also enclosed a list of such ammunition, stores, &c., as we have on hand. A list of such articles as can be procured at Montreal, St. John's, and Chambly, will be taken, and sent you by General Wooster.

I had encouragement from Monsieur Pelissier, at Three-Rivers, of being furnished with shot, shells, &c., in all the month of March. I have this minute received advice from him, that the want of coal will prevent his supplying those articles before May. As coal is his only objection, I have wrote him to procure it, at all events, if it can be done, to supply shells, &c., by the 1st of April, of which the bearer, Major Ogden, will inform; this measure, I hope, will meet your approbation, as the expence of bringing shells from below will be great, and, if not wanted here, the cost will be trifling.

It is very probable the city would surrender before half, or, perhaps, one quarter of the shot, shells, &c., in my memorandum were expended; but, if they should make an obstinate resistance, perhaps the whole will be necessary.

A gentleman, now present, assures me, that the King's Magazines, containing upwards of three thousand barrels of powder, were all full, and that three hundred barrels, his private property, taken from him by Government, was obliged to be stored in a private vault; add to this ten thousand stand of arms, seven thousand of which are new, and arrived last Summer; also, seven thousand complete suits of new clothing, with a large quantity of artillery stores; two frigates, with a number of other vessels, in the harbour, &c., &c., &c. The above-mentioned articles, exclusive of securing an extensive country in our interest, and liberating three or four hundred of our brave men, appears an object of the greatest importance to us under our present circumstances. I make no doubt every necessary measure will be adopted for reducing the city.

Yesterday, arrived here, a reinforcement of one hundred men, from Montreal; sixty men are soon expected. We are still very weak handed. Of course the duty is severe; however, the enemy have not dared to come out, though they are double our number. Desertions from the garrison are frequent. They are in want of fuel, and have attempted to supply themselves by cutting down the houses in St. Roque's suburbs, (under their guns,) to prevent which, I have burnt most of them, with several vessels they had broke up; every artifice is used by Governour Carleton to procure provisions, and induce the Canadians to take arms against us, to no effect, though seconded by the clergy, our bitter enemies. I make no doubt of continuing the blockade until a proper reinforcement arrives to make use of more coercive measures.

Major Ogden, the bearer of this to Montreal, who came out with me a volunteer, proposes going down to Philadelphia. I beg leave to recommend him as a gentleman who has acted with great spirit and activity through our fatiguing march, and at the attack on Quebeck, in which he was wounded.

General Montgomery, on his arrival in this country, was pleased to appoint Mr. John Halstead Commissary; he is a gentleman, has been very active and zealous in our cause, is a merchant, and capable in his department, in which I beg leave to recommend his being continued.

Our finances are low; we have been obliged to beg; borrow, and squeeze, to get money for our subsistence; and, but for Mr. Price, who has been our greatest resource, we must have suffered.

I have the agreeable intelligence from General Wooster, that the Paymaster is at hand.

I am, with great esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, and very humble servant,
BENEDICT ARNOLD.
To the Honourable Continental Congress.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Stamford, January 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: It was unnecessary sooner to trouble you with my scrawl, as I could give you no information the least interesting. I find the people through this Province more alert and zealous than my most sanguine expectation. I believe I might have collected ten thousand volunteers. I take only four companies with me, and Waterbury's regiment, which is so happily situated on the frontier. Ward's regiment, I have ordered to remain at their respective homes until they hear further. These Connecticutians are, if possible, more eager to go out of their country than they are to return home when they have been out for any considerable time.

Enclosed, I send you my letter to the General Congress. That of the Provincial Congress of New-York to me, with my answer, I hope will have your approbation.

The Whigs, I mean the stout ones, are, it is said, very desirous that a body of troops should march and be stationed in their city; the timid ones are averse, merely from the spirit of procrastination, which is the characteristic of timidity. The letter of the Provincial Congress, you will observe, breathes the very essence of this spirit; it is woefully hysterical. I conclude, I shall receive the orders of the General Congress before, or immediately on my arrival, otherwise I should not venture to march into the Province, as, by the late resolve, every detachment of the Continental troops is to be under the direction of the Provincial Congress in which they are—a resolve, I must say, with submission to their wisdom, fraught with difficulties and evils—it is impossible, having two sovereigns, that any business should be carried on.

Have you seen the pamphlets Common Sense? I never saw such a masterly, irresistible performance. It will, if I mistake not, in concurrence with the transcendent folly and wickedness of the Ministry, give the coup-de-grace to Great Britain. In short, I own myself convinced, by the arguments, of the necessity of separation.

Poor, brave Montgomery! But, it is not a time to cry, but to revenge. God bless you, my dear General, and crown us with the success I am sure we merit from the goodness of our cause. My love to the ladies. I shall write a long letter to Gates, when I have time and materials. Adieu. Yours, most affectionately,

CHARLES LEE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, January 24, 1776.

SIR: Your letters of the 20th and 21st instant, are received. I thought fit, this morning, to acquaint Colonel Burrell, appointed to command the regiment destined to Canada from hence, that a month's pay will be advanced to officers and men by you. This additional encouragement will enliven them to the service. Also, to inform, that I understood the route of the Massachusetts and New-Hampshire Regiments would probably be by Number Four to Onion River, with a Commissary to attend such as went that way. A month's pay was promised the men by my proclamation, and, on being acquainted with the readiness of the men, one of the Committee of Pay-Table should attend for the payment thereof at Litchfield, to prevent delay. Am unable to inform how and when the money from you may be received.

The men in that quarter are well spirited and zealous, but have yet received no intelligence of the progress made in the business; shall give you every necessary intelligence as it comes to my knowledge. Every necessary requisite for the march of this regiment will be provided on the best terms in my power. Shall forward the three regiments destined for your camp without delay.

I am, with sincere esteem and regard, your Excellency's most obedient, and humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read February 9, 1776.]

Cambridge, January 24, 1776.

SIR: The Commissary-General being at length returned from a long and painful illness, I have it in my power to comply with the requisition of Congress, in forwarding an estimate of the expense attending his office, as also that of the Quartermaster-General. You will please to observe, that the Commissary, by his account of the matter, has entered into no special agreement with any of the persons he has found occasion to employ, (as those to whose names sums are annexed are of their own fixing,) but left it to Congress to ascertain their wages; I shall say nothing, therefore, on this head, further than relates to the proposition of Mr. Miller to be allowed one-eighth for his trouble, and the delivery of the other seven-eighths of provisions, which, to me, appears exorbitant in the extreme, however conformable it may be to custom and usage. I, therefore, think that reasonable stipends had better be fixed upon. Both the Quartermaster and Commissary-Generals assure me, that they do not employ a single person uselessly, and as I have too good an opinion of them to think they would deceive me, I believe them.

I shall take the liberty, in this place, of recommending the expediency, indeed, the absolute necessity, of appointing fit and proper persons to settle the accounts of this Army. To do it with precision requires time, care, and attention; the longer it is left undone, the more intricate they will be, the more liable to error, and difficult to explain and rectify; as, also, the persons in whose hands they are, if disposed to take undue advantages, will be less subject to detection. I have been as attentive as the nature of my office would admit of, in granting warrants for money on the Paymaster, but it would be absolutely impossible for me to go into an examination of all the accounts incident to this Army, and the vouchers appertaining to them, without devoting so large a portion of my time to the business, as might not only prove injurious, but fatal to it in other respects. This ought, in my humble opinion, to be the particular business of a Select Committee of Congress, or one appointed by them, which, once in three months, at farthest, should make a settlement with the officers in the different departments.

Having met with no encouragement from the Governments of Massachusetts and New-Hampshire from my application for arms, and expecting no better from Connecticut and Rhode-Island, I have, as the last expedient, sent one or two officers from each regiment into the country, with money, to try if they can buy; in what manner they succeed Congress shall be informed as soon as they return.

Congress, in my last, would discover my motives for strengthening these lines with the Militia. But whether, as the weather turns out exceedingly mild, (insomuch as to promise nothing favorable from ice,) and no appearance of powder, I shall be able to attempt any thing decisive, time only can determine. No man upon earth wishes more ardently to destroy the nest in Boston than I do; no person would be willing to go greater lengths than I shall, to accomplish it, if it shall be thought advisable. But if we have neither powder to bombard with, nor ice to pass on, we shall be in no better situation than we have been in all the year—we shall be worse, because their works are stronger.

I have accounts from Boston, which I think may be relied on, that General Clinton, with about four or five hundred men, hath left that place within these four days; whether this is part of the detachment which was making up, as mentioned in my letter of the 4th instant, and then at Nantasket, or not, is not in my power to say. If it is designed for New-York, or Long-Island, as some think, throwing a body of troops there may prove a fortunate circumstance. If they go farther South, agreeable to the conjectures of others, I hope there will be men to receive them.

Notwithstanding the positive assertions of the four Captains from Portsmouth, noticed in my letter of the 14th, I am now convinced, from several corroborating circumstances—the accounts of deserters and of a Lieutenant Hill, of Lord Percy's Regiment, who left Ireland the 5th of November, and was taken by a privateer from Newburyport, that the Seventeenth and Fifty-fifth Regiments are arrived at Boston, and other troops at Halifax, agreeable to the information of Hutchinson and others. Lieutenant Hill says that the transports of the two regiments only were forced into Milford-Haven.

Congress will think me a little remiss, I fear, when I inform them that I have done nothing yet towards raising the battalion of marines, but I hope to stand exculpated from blame, when they hear the reason—which was, that already having twenty-six incomplete regiments, I thought it would be adding to an expense, already great in officers, to set two entire corps of officers on foot, when, perhaps, we should not add ten men a week by it to our present numbers. In this opinion the General Officers have concurred, which induced me to suspend the matter a little longer.

Our inlistments for the two last weeks have not amounted to one thousand men, and are diminishing. The regiment for Canada, it is thought, will soon be filled, as the men are to choose all but their Field-Officers, which are appointed by the Court.

On Sunday evening thirteen of the Caughnawaga Indians arrived here on a visit; I shall take care that they be so entertained during their stay, that they may return impressed with sentiments of friendship for us, and also of our great strength. One of them is Colonel Louis, who honoured me with a visit once before.

I have the honour to be, with much respect and esteem, sir, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 21, 1776.

(Parole, Granby.) (Countersign, Monckton.)

The Colonel, or commanding officer of each regiment, is forthwith to send out one or two prudent and sensible officers to buy up such arms as are wanted for his regiment. These officers to be also good judges of arms, and they are directed to purchase none but such as are proper and in the best repair, and, if possible, to get them with bayonets, but not to refuse a good firelock without. The officers going upon this duty are to be furnished with cash, from the respective Colonels, or commanding officers, out of the money designed for the month's advance pay, for the recruits, which money will be replaced as wanted. The names of the officers sent upon this business, with sums advanced them, are to be immediately returned to the Adjutant-General by the Colonels. These officers are not to be absent longer than the 4th of February next.

All recruits who shall furnish their own arms (provided they are good) shall be paid one dollar, for the use of them, shall have the privilege of carrying them away, when their time is out, and in case they are lost (through no default of their own) shall be paid for them at the end of the campaign.

All persons having business with the Adjutant-General, are to apply to him at his office, at the entrance next to the front of the Head-Quarters

(Parole, Fairfax.) (Countersign, Vernon.)

Timothy Downing, tried at a General Court-Martial for "desertion," being found guilty, is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes upon the bare back, with a cat-o-nine-tails; and it appearing to the Court, that as the prisoner is worthless and incorrigible, they order him to be drummed out of the Army.

A Court of Inquiry to sit upon Thursday morning next, at General Greene's, on Prospect-Hill, to examine into a complaint exhibited against Colonel Stark, of the Fifth Regiment of Foot, by Samuel Hobart, Esq., Paymaster of the New-Hampshire forces. All evidences and persons concerned to attend the Court. Brigadier-General Greene, President. Colonel Nixon, Colonel Webb, Colonel Hitchcock, Colonel Varnum, members. The Judge-Advocate to attend the Court, which will sit precisely at ten o'clock.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 24, 1776.

(Parole,) (Countersign,)

The Barracks are to be finished as speedily as possible, that the Militia Regiments, which are expected, may be accommodated. The Quartermaster-General and his Assistants are to look out in time for other quarters, if the Barracks are thought insufficient to entertain the troops. The Regiments are to be brigaded in the following manner, viz:

Brigadier-General Thomas's Brigade: Learned's, Joseph Reed's, Whitcomb's, Ward's, and Bailey's Regiments.

Brigadier-General Spencer's Brigade: Parson's, Huntington's, Webb's, and Wyllis's Regiments.

Brigadier-General Greene's Brigade: Varnum's, Hitchcock's, Little's, and Bond's Regiments.

Brigadier-General Heath's Brigade: Prescott's, Sergeant's, Phinney's, Greaton's, and Baldwin's Regiments.

Brigadier-General Sullivan's Brigade: James Reed's, Nixon's, Stark's, and Poor's Regiments.

Brigadier-General Brigade: Glover's, Patterson's, Arnold's, and Hutchinson's Regiments.

Whitcomb's, Webb's, and Hutchinson's Regiments are to join their respective Brigades, as soon as provision is made for it; at any rate before the 1st February, that they may get fixed before the Militia come in. The Brigadier and Quartermaster-General is to see that each Brigade is as compactly quartered as the Barracks will admit of. The Barrackmaster is to see that each room has its complement of men, and the officers placed contiguous to them.

The custom of manning the lines, and each regiment repairing to its alarm-post at reveille beating, is to be strictly and invariably practised, until countermanded. The Brigadiers are to take especial care, that proper alarm-posts are assigned to every regiment, that no confusion may arise upon an alarm.

Neither provisions, nor the value of them, are to be issued to officers or soldiers when upon furlough. Furloughs are always considered as injurious to the service, but too often granted for the gratification of individuals. The General was, therefore, not a little surprised to find that it had, contrary to custom and common justice, become a question whether absentees were not entitled to the same allowance of provisions, as if they were present and actually doing duty.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 25, 1776.

(Parole, Niagara.) (Countersign, Hampton.)

To the Honourable the Continental Congress, now convened at PHILADELPHIA.

The Memorial of JOSEPH TRUMBULL, sheweth:

That your Honours were pleased, in July last, to appoint your memorialist Commissary of Stores and Provisions. That he has found it necessary to perform the duty of his place in the Continental Army, to employ a number of persons in several different businesses, agreeable to the annexed list, who have had no pay or allowance for their services, nor has any pay or allowance therefor been established by your Honours. Wherefore, your Honours' humble memorialist prays your Honours to resolve, order, and direct, such pay and allowance to each person, employed in the several services, agreeable to the annexed list, as to your Honours shall appear adequate to their several services; and he, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 23, 1776.

SIR: As you have directed me to give you a list of the persons employed under me, their several departments, and what pay they ought to have, and likewise myself, in answer to which would say, that I shall not trespass on your time, in giving you a long detail of the great trouble and fatigue there must arise, both in body and mind, to any person who gives close application in the office to which you was pleased to appoint me. I shall say only this, that I have done the utmost in my power to serve the cause I am employed in; and I doubt not, whenever I am called on, I shall be able to make that appear by my books and vouchers. As to my reward, it has always been the custom to allow the Commissary one-eighth for wantage and leakage, and a small salary; so that, with what savings he could make out of the one-eighth allowance, he made a tolerable pay to himself. However, I shall set down content with being obliged to deliver seven-eighths of all the provisions, &c.; and what may remain, after wantage and leakage is deducted, for my pay.

There are many reasons which might be offered for paying the Commissaries in the above-mentioned way, of which no doubt you know. As you were pleased to inform me those matters were to be laid before General Washington, I write with due submission to his and your judgment in the matter. I should be much obliged to you if you would get settled what rations I am to draw, which, I suppose, will be according to the rank I stand in with the Army; and likewise, whether the Clerks will be allowed more than a single ration.

Below you have a list of the Clerks and Assistants. At your desire I have fixed the pay, which, in my opinion, they ought to have; which, I hope, will be agreeable to you.

I am, with great esteem, your most humble servant,
CHARLES MILLER.

To Joseph Trumbull, Esq.

Peter Roe Dalton, first Clerk, 4s. 8d. per day; Ebenezer Perry and Thomas Durant, Clerks at Store, 3s. 4d. ditto; William Brown and Josiah Brown, Clerks at Scales, 3s. 4d. ditto; Robert Davis, Clerk, Deliverer of part of Weekly Allowance, &c., 3s. 4d. per day; eight Assistants, 2s. 8d.; one Cooper, 2s. 8d.; one Cook, 2s. 8d.

Besides the above persons employed as above, I employ divers persons as Magazine-keepers, about twenty miles back from camp, who are owners of the stores they improve. I also employ gentlemen in New-York, Newburyport, Providence, &c., &c., who procure flour, rum, &c., &c. The commissions to be allowed them are unsettled.

The prices annexed in the foregoing list are such as the persons employed, and their friends, propose for them. I have never agreed with any one person for certain pay, but that they should have and receive such pay as the Congress shall see fit to establish for them.

The Issuing Storekeepers, as per Mr. Miller's letter, given in herewith, proposes as proper pay for them, the savings on the one-eighth, commonly allowed for leakage and wastage. This mode of pay may make them very careful and saving.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO MAJOR HAWLEY.

Cambridge, January 24, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to send you herewith a commission, for such person as you may think qualified to muster the regiment raising in Hampshire and Berkshire. As his appointment is for that particular purpose only, his Excellency is of opinion that you had better agree with him on the terms on which he is to execute this business, and then fill up the blank in the commission with his name. The form of a muster-roll is enclosed.

You are referred to the letter for the Committee of Safety for Northampton, which you will now receive, and is open for your perusal, relative to the pressed men under their care; also, to the restricting the officers to Northampton district.

There are, also, two letters, one for Mr. Stanhope, and one for Mr. Knight, which you will please to forward with the one for the Committee of Safety.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
 STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To the Honourable Major Hawley, Berkshire.

By His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-chief of the Army of the UNITED COLONIES.

814 To ROBERT BRICKET, Gentleman:

You being recommended to me as a proper person to muster the Regiment raising by order of the General Court of this Province, in the Counties of Hampshire and Berkshire, for the Continental service, I do, therefore, by virtue of the powers and authorities to me given by the Continental Congress, constitute and appoint you Commissary for that particular purpose; willing and commanding all officers, soldiers, and persons any ways concerned, to be obedient and assisting to you in the execution of this commission. Neither Negroes, (being slaves,) old men, or boys, unable to bear arms, and to endure the fatigues of the campaign, or persons labouring under any bodily infirmity whatsoever, are to be allowed to pass muster, of which you are to take due notice.

460 Given under my hand and seal, at Head-Quarters, Cambridge, this 24th day of January, Anno Domini 1776.

540 GEORGE WASHINGTON.

656 [GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY FOR NORTHAMPTON.

Cambridge, January 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am commanded by his Excellency General Washington, to inform you, that Major Hawley laid before him your letter of the 4th instant, as to discharging the persons therein mentioned from confinement. His Excellency leaves the matter entirely with you, either to do it generally, or to give them a permit to work and keep within certain limits; he thinks before either is granted, that something more than bare assertion should be had, to prove that they were pressed into the service, and their friendly disposition towards us. There must not be too many instances of such indulgence, or we shall have no security for the good treatment of our soldiers and citizens that may fall into the hands of the Ministerial troops, nor shall we have any to give in exchange for them.

His Excellency, also, received your favour of the 17th instant, in answer to which I am to inform you, that it is his pleasure, that the gentlemen of the navy under your care, should be confined to Northampton, and not to be permitted to go out of its limits. When he granted them permission to go five miles from thence, he did not advert to the extent of the towns in these Governments.

I am, &c.

To the Committee of Safety for Northampton.

GENERAL GATES TO CAPTAIN STANHOPE.

Head-Quarters, January 24, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by his Excellency General Washington, to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 16th instant, requesting leave to go into the town of Boston, to solicit the Admiral for your exchange. The Admiral has already declined every negotiation for exchange of prisoners, and has not permitted any money to be sent to those gentlemen now in the hands of the United Colonies, though frequently acquainted with their necessities, and pressed to relieve them. Certain prisoners, taken by a Frigate, have been, by the Admiral's order, sent to England; so that it is not now in his power to give any exchange for those in their hands; and from the Admiral's behaviour in other matters, it very clearly appears you would not be permitted to come back to your parole, should his Excellency even allow you to go into the town of Boston. These reasons, you must allow, are sufficiently convincing, to oblige the General, at present, to decline complying with your request.

I am, sir, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To Mr. Stanhope.

GENERAL GATES TO LIEUTENANT KNIGHT.

Head-Quarters, January 24, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment wrote to Captain Stanhope, and given him, by his Excellency's command, such reasons for not immediately granting his request, as cannot but be satisfactory; the same reasons, you will clearly see, hold good with respect to you. The General is truly concerned it is not at present in his power to grant you leave to go to Nova-Scotia to your family; the first moment that it can be done with propriety, you may be assured that indulgence will be granted.

When his Excellency granted you the district of the town of Northampton, and five miles around, for your place of confinement, he understood that Northampton and Hadley were towns like those to the southward, of moderate extent; since, upon better information, he finds that each of those towns contain a district of a very large extent of country. He directs me to acquaint you, and desires you will acquaint all the gentlemen upon their parole at either of those towns, that they must keep themselves within the legal limits of the town they live in. The Committee of Safety at Northampton and Hadley have, by this conveyance, received his orders upon this head. I have regularly forwarded all letters to and from Boston, that you or any of the gentlemen have sent to Head-Quarters.

I am, sir, &c.,

H. GATES.

To Mr. John Knight.

HANOVER COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee appointed and held for Hanover County, at the Court-House, on Thursday, the 25th of January, 1776.

Bennet White appeared before the Committee, agreeable to a summons, to answer sundry charges lodged against him, which are as follows: "That he had been guilty of having a subscription ball; that he assured his subscribers, that if the Committee should notice it he would take the whole blame on himself; and that he had allowed gaming in his house." Which charges being examined into, were sufficiently proved; but the said Bennet White declaring his uneasiness for having done any thing that had caused the displeasure of the Committee, begged that they would pass it over as the first offence, and that he would pay the strictest regard to the Association in future, as well as demean himself in every respect, a firm friend to the rights of America. These concessions being deemed satisfactory, Mr. White was discharged from further prosecution.

Extract from the Proceedings:

WILLIAM BENTLEY, Clerk.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee for the County of Prince Edward, January 25, 1776.

John Hamblin, an inhabitant of this County, having been summoned to appear before this Committee in consequence of an information lodged against the said Hamblin, as having acted as an enemy to the American cause, appeared, and acknowledged that once he was unfriendly to the measures adopted in America; but, that since he had been convinced of his error, and would, for the future, conduct himself, on every occasion, as a friend to his country, as far as his abilities would permit him, and hoped for the forgiveness of this Committee and his countrymen in general; and promised willingly, to sign the Association of the honourable the Continental Congress, which he had, hitherto, refused.

Resolved, That from the contrition of the said Hamblin, he be, for the future, considered as a friend to his country, and he is recommended to the publick for their forgiveness.

JOHN NASH, JUN., Chairman pro tempore.
BENJAMIN LAWSON, Clerk.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Philadelphia, January 25, 1776.

The present Committee, having been chosen to serve till the 16th day of February, and no longer, recommend to the Freeholders and Electors of the City and Liberties, to meet at the State-House on that day, at ten o'clock, before noon, to proceed to the election by ballot of a new Committee, to consist of one hundred members, viz: For the City, seventy-six; for the Northern-Liberties, twelve; and for Southwark, twelve; who are to serve for six months.

And that the election may be conducted agreeable to the intention of the Congress, in their resolution directing a Committee to be chosen in every city, &c., "by persons having a right to vote for Representatives in Assembly," the Committee recommend to the electors in the several Wards and Districts, that they meet on the 15th of said month, between the hours of two and four o'clock in the afternoon, in their respective Wards and Districts, to choose an Inspector from each, to superintend the General Election.

And the following gentlemen are appointed to attend, and conduct the proceedings, at the houses herein mentioned, in the different Wards and Liberties, and to notify the persons chosen thereof, viz:

NORTHERN LIBERTIES: At Jeremiah Baker's; Major Coats, Captain Williams.

MULBERRY WARD: At Peter Hayes's; G. Schlosser, J. Shreiner.

UPPER DELAWARE: At the New Ferry; Captain Furman, S. Massey.

NORTH WARD: At Razors's; Captain Wilcocks, B. Harbeson.

HIGH STREET: At Whitebread's; Major Bayard, W. Ball.

MIDDLE WARD: At . . . ; B. Marshall, J. Cresson.

SOUTH WARD: At M. Duff's; S. Delaney, J. Reed.

LOWER DELAWARE: At Robert Turner's; Captain Pryor, C. Massey.

CHESNUT WARD: At Captain Bradford's Book Store; Colonel Dean, Captain Bradford.

WALNUT WARD: At the Fish-House; Captain Willing, J. Milligan.

DOCK WARD: At Allen Moore's; Captain Moulder, J. Wetherill.

SOUTHWARK: At; Captain Alexander, S. Engles.

To the Inspectors so chosen, it is, also, recommended, that they meet at the State-House, one hour before the General Election shall begin, and make choice of three reputable Freeholders, to assist in conducting the election agreeable to the laws of this Province, and of so many Clerks as may be deemed necessary; the said Inspectors, Judges, and Clerks, before they proceed to open the election, declaring, upon their honour, in the presence of at least three of the above-mentioned Ward Inspectors, that they will superintend this election, during the continuance of it, and conduct it to the best of their judgment, and, as near as may be, according to the act of Assembly for regulating elections, &c., passed 25 George II. And that if any person shall offer a vote, who is not known to some one of them to have a right to vote, they will require of him, instead of an oath, a solemn declaration, upon honour, of his having a right to vote for Members of Assembly, and inform him, at the same time, that, if it shall appear, hereafter, that he has declared falsely, he shall be publicly advertised in the newspapers, as having abused and insulted his distressed country.

The Inspectors shall then proceed to receive the votes of the Freeholders, &c., qualified to vote for Members of General Assembly, within the limits aforesaid; and, having received all such votes as may be offered, agreeable to the above regulations, shall, about eight o'clock in the evening, give the usual notice, that the election will be closed in half an hour, and shall close it, accordingly, if no persons qualified shall then appear to give a vote, or as soon after as they shall find no votes appear.

Having closed the election, and counted off the tickets carefully, and determined who are duly elected to be of said Committee, the Inspectors and Judges shall make out and certify two complete lists of the Committee so chosen, and deliver one to the printer of that newspaper in which it can be first published, together with a request to that Committee, to meet on the day of said publication, at the Philosophical Society's Hall, at five o'clock, P. M., to proceed on the duty for which they were elected; the other copy to be given to the Chairman of the present Committee.

Agreeable to the inclination of the electors of the Northern Liberties and Southwark, it is proposed, that the Members for the City, the Northern Liberties, and Southwark, shall be balloted for in three distinct tickets, by the electors of each District, severally. By order of the Committee for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia.

J. B. SMITH, Secretary.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COMMITTEE OF TRENTON, NEW-JERSEY.

Philadelphia, January 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 23d being received, was immediately communicated to the Congress.

The necessity of the service requires that Colonel Maxwell's Regiment should march as soon as possible. When the orders were first given for their march, inquiry was made what articles were wanting, and a considerable sum of money was lodged in the hands of Mr. Lowrey, for providing the same; but, as arms and blankets were not mentioned, the Congress have ordered a draft in your favour for the sum of four thousand dollars, to purchase arms (which you say may be had for money) for such as want them.

I would just observe, that in order to supply the battalion ordered to march from Pennsylvania, the Committee of Inspection, of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, went round from house to house, and procured blankets from the inhabitants.

I trust neither you, nor the inhabitants of your Colony, will be behind your neighbours in zeal for the cause of your country. The owners of the blankets will be allowed the value of them, according to your estimation.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. IV.

I write, by this opportunity, to Colonel Maxwell, to stimulate him, and I hope you will give him all the aid in your power. I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Committee of Trenton, New-Jersey.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COLONEL MAXWELL.

Philadelphia, January 25, 1776.

SIR: When the Congress, on the 8th instant, ordered your battalion to march to Canada, they appointed a Committee to inquire what was wanting to fit them for the march.

The Committee having taken time to make the necessary inquiry, made report on the 10th, "That, before your battalion could be fit to march, the following articles ought to be provided, viz: six hundred and eighty-eight haversacks; six hundred and eighty-eight cartouch-boxes and cross-belts; six hundred and eighty-eight tomahawks; sixty-four pitching-axes, and nine baggage-wagons."

No notice being taken of arms, blankets, or clothing, it was presumed your troops were properly supplied with these articles. In order, therefore, that the articles wanting might be provided, they immediately ordered a very considerable sum to be put into the hands of Mr. Lowrey, with orders to purchase the same, and to pay the men up to the 1st of February, deducting out of their pay the price of the articles furnished the men, more than what was allowed in lieu of bounty.

By these means, the Congress expected your battalion would have been properly equipped, and that the first company that could be got ready, would be immediately ordered to set out on their march.

The urgency of the service requires that your battalion should begin their march with all possible expedition. It will be vain to send men without arms; but, as the Committee of Trenton have informed Congress that arms can be purchased, I have, by this opportunity, transmitted to them, by order of Congress, four thousand dollars for the purchase of suitable arms, and have desired them to take measures for supplying you with blankets. I hope I need not use arguments to stimulate you in this matter.

I would only observe, and have you take notice, that it is the desire of Congress that you would send forward the first company that can be got ready, and that it be followed by the other companies, one at a time, as fast as they can be provided with necessaries, without waiting till the whole are equipped. I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Colonel Maxwell.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO THOMAS LOWREY.

Philadelphia, January 25, 1776.

SIR: On the 11th instant, there was a draft on the Treasury in your favour, for thirty-five thousand dollars, out of which you were directed to provide sundry articles wanting for the Second New-Jersey Battalion, which was ordered to march to Canada.

By a letter this day received from Colonel Maxwell, the Congress are informed that the articles are not yet provided.

The necessity of the service requires that the battalion should march with all possible expedition. I am, therefore, directed to press you to exert your utmost endeavours to provide the articles, and facilitate the march of the companies, as fast as they can be got ready, by all the means in your power. I am, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Mr. Thomas Lowrey.

COLONEL ROBERDEAU TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Half past five o'clock, P. M., January 25, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of the commands of Congress through you this moment, [for placing a guard over General Prescott and Captain Clace,] and shall not fail in duty.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DANIEL ROBERDEAU.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

THOMAS LOWREY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 27, 1776.]

Perth-Amboy, January 25, 1776.

SIR: Give me leave to congratulate you and your honourable House on the success of Lord Stirling, by the capture of the transport-ship, Blue-Mountain-Valley, Captain Dempster, the particulars of which Lord Stirling writes you by this conveyance. I was on board the ship last evening, in Amboy-Bay. Some of the sailors informed one of our men that there was a quantity of arms and ammunition in the hold. The ship is now gone up to Elizabethtown-Point, to wait your orders.

The bearer, Mr. Barbarie, is owner of a sloop which was taken off Sandy-Hook by some of the men-of-war's tenders, and retaken on her passage to Boston, by Captain Manly, or some other New-England Captain. Mr. Barbarie is looked upon as friendly to our cause, and now goes down for instructions from Congress, how to proceed to regain his sloop and cargo.

I am, with due respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS LOWREY.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. A number of our Militia, with three companies of Lord Stirling's regiment, are on Long-Island, and are disarming the Tories, without opposition. We expect them back in a few days.

WILLIAM DE HART TO SAMUEL TUCKER.

Staten-Island, January 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am now on my return from Long-Island, and expect to see you at Elizabethtown to-morrow morning. All our men are well, no accident by land or water, nor the appearance of it. I could not join Colonel Heard, at Bergen town, by reason of excessive weather and distance, of bad roads, and late at night, and pointed in the boats for Paulus-Hook, but was unable to reach it, by reason of the high wind, and obliged to put into New-York, where I provided good quarters for our men in the barracks. Early next morning I proceeded to join Colonel Heard, who I came up with about four miles out of town. But a few of Colonel Heard's Militia having come up, I was obliged to quarter our men at Hellgate, and the next day got as far as Jamaica, staid there two days, and then marched to Hempstead, and staid at that place two days more, when we joined, which I think might have been much earlier. Discovered that a much smaller number might answer our purpose, and Colonel Heard proposed to me to separate, which I humbly agreed to, and informed him of my approbation of going or staying, as might be most agreeable to him; but suggested the hint, as less troops might serve, which would be less expensive to the Continent. However, he informed me that it was a Militia business, and it was most proper for them to stay, and ordered me to return home, which I heartily consented with, and left him last Wednesday, with about six or seven hundred Militia at Hempstead, where great numbers of Tories were every hour coming in, and delivering up their arms without the least appearance of opposition. I suppose they may deliver up about five hundred arms, and if they transport them by water, they may be worth the freight.

I have the happiness of informing you, that our men have behaved with the greatest degree of civility towards the inhabitants of Long-Island, but some little complaint happened about some New-York Volunteers, which, upon examining into, proved of very little consequence. I am now happy in returning from a place being deserving of correction, and effected with so little difficulty, from the consideration of their being our neighbours.

I am your Lordship's most humble servant,

WILLIAM DE HART.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read February 2, and referred to Mr. Wythe, Mr. E. Rutledge, and Mr. McKean.]

Albany, January 25, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment received a letter from General Wooster, copy of which, with copies of sundries enclosed, I now do myself the honour to transmit to you. I shall order him to send every person from Canada that may be dangerous to our cause if left in that country.

From General Wooster's letter one would be led to imagine that I had sent back vast numbers of dangerous persons; he has before wrote to me on the occasion with an unbecoming jubbacity. I, therefore, trouble you with the detail. Sears, whom he mentions, was sent to me from Connecticut with a recommendation from the Committee of to permit him to return to Canada, which I did, ordering him to wait on the commanding officer; Captain Goodwin and Lieutenant Schalk I permitted to remain at Ticonderoga at the request of General Montgomery, until they could be informed if their wives and children, whom they had left at Quebeck, were gone to England, or had come to Chambly. If to the latter, then he wished they might be permitted to return and convey them into these Colonies. They, their wives and children, are now at Chambly. Mr. McCullough, a Commissary, was another, a widower, who had left four small children in Canada, and whom I likewise permitted to return on the same account; these, together with the Canadian peasants taken at St. John's are all that I recollect to have sent back, and not even the last without the approbation of General Montgomery first had. The peasantry were too insignificant to have any influence, and there seemed at that time little danger from the others, and yet I took the precaution of their word of honour, not to say any thing on the subject of the controversy. If they have abused my confidence they are scoundrels, and I will treat them accordingly, without repenting that I gave them the indulgence, for that was an act of humanity. If they are not culpable they are injured, and I too. I shall sift the matter to the bottom, and my resentment, without any kind of exception, shall be experienced by those that deserve it.

I have just received at letter from Colonel Warner, of which the following is a copy:

"Bennington, January 22, 1776.

"SIR: My prospect in raising men seems very encouraging, one hundred and upwards I have sent forward; a number more is ready to march soon. I have twelve companies raising, though the men shall be sent forward as fast as possible. More money is necessary, as I have paid the chief out that I received. Two companies more I expect to raise, as they have sent me they wish to engage. Major Safford will be the receiver of what money will be disbursed for said purpose. From your humble servant,

"SETH WARNER."

In answer to this I sent the following, which I showed to Mr. Livingston our brother delegate, and of which he approved.

"Albany, January 25, 1776.

"SIR: Major Safford has delivered me your letter of the 22d instant. I was in hopes that by that time a much larger number of men had marched than what you mention; the bounty I promised was in consideration of their immediately marching; when, therefore, as many men are actually marched, (which I expect will be without delay,) as I gave you the bounty for, I shall furnish you with a further sum to send as many more as will amount to a regiment on the present Continental establishment, which is seven hundred and twenty men, officers included; but I do expect that the whole will march by the 1st day of February; such as are not marched by that time will not be entitled to any part of the bounty."

January 26.—I was last night informed that the better part of the troops to be raised in the County of Berkshire were already marched. I have sent Governour Trumbull a return of the arms that were delivered into store by the men raised in the Colony of Connecticut—he cannot furnish the regiment raising there, and I propose to return those arms, or a like number, that they may not be a Colonial charge against the Continent.

I am, sir, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c., &c.

Montreal, January 14, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 31st ultimo, I received per post, also a number of letters for General Montgomery, all of which I opened, not knowing but they might contain something of a publick nature. The private letters I shall enclose with this. You will, doubtless, send them to his friends.

I am glad to hear that we may soon expect a Paymaster. We have drained our friends here of most of their cash, and it is next to impossible to do any thing without it.

Some of the persons you have sent back have really behaved very illy; one Sears especially, whom I have now in confinement, immediately upon coming into the country, circulated a report, that the Colonies had given over the thoughts of keeping this Province; that there were no soldiers at Ticonderoga or Fort-George, nor any expected, and so few at St. John's that it would be an easy matter to take it, and indeed all the rest; a story very illy calculated for us in our present delicate situation. Some others of the prisoners which were sent back, I hear have made themselves very busy in reporting stories to our prejudice. I shall, therefore, be obliged to return to you some of them, and perhaps some others, ringleaders of the Tories in this country, with the prisoners who were left here, in a few days.

The four fusils taken by Major Lockwood, are put up in a box, according to capitulation, and are now at St. John's ready to be sent over the Lakes. It was a mistake of Colonel Flemming's, or the fusils would have been taken from all the officers.

They capitulated upon the same conditions as the garrison of St. John's, and if you look into that, you will see that the officers were all allowed their side-arms; but their fire-arms were to be put up in a box and delivered to them when these unhappy disputes were ended, unless they chose to dispose of them before.

I have great hopes, however arduous and difficult it may be, that our little army at Quebeck will keep up the blockade till they can be relieved, provided a reinforcement is sent on in a short time. I have sent them an hundred and twenty men from this garrison, which was all that could with prudence be spared. Colonel Clinton has gone down with Mr. Price. I dare say they will take every possible measure for the safety of the army, and preserving the blockade. I enclose you copies of two letters from Colonel Arnold, with the translation of one sent by Lanaudiere out of Quebeck, received since my last.

Just after Mr. Antill left this place, I despatched an express to Onion River, in order to get a reinforcement from the Green-Mountain Boys. I wrote to Colonel Warner in the most pressing manner to bring a regiment into this Province, and remain here under Continental pay till they can be relieved, a measure which the present exigency, I think, will justify. Whether they will come or not you know is uncertain.

Quebeck is strongly fortified, and so well stored with provisions, that many think they will be able to hold out till they can be relieved in the Spring. It is a great chance if they do not make out to get in some provisions, should the river there break up, before our army can be augmented.

How then are we to take the place? We have at St. John's two twenty-four pounders, brass. I understand they have a number of thirty-two pounders at New-York. Will it not be well to send for them (if the heavy cannon are taken from Ticonderoga and Fort-George), and with such mortars as you have, with proper ball, shells, &c. &c., send them forward as quick as possible. I am of the opinion, that heavy cannon will be necessary in taking of that place. I wrote you in my last, that we had but a trifle of powder. We have at Quebeck a howitzer which throws an eight-inch shell. I am informed that one Pelissier, at Three-Rivers, can cast shells, shot, &c., of any size; but whether he will be able to do it soon enough, I cannot yet find out.

All kinds of liquors and West-India goods, are so extravagantly dear here, that I am confident they may be brought over the Lakes to great advantage.

In order, therefore, in some measure, to remedy the great difficulty in procuring hard cash, suppose ruin and sugar should be forwarded for the soldiers, and a number of Sutlers should be encouraged to come over with every kind of article wanted in the Army, for which we are obliged to pay hard money here at the most extravagant rates. The Sutlers would be able to sell them to us full as low, and many things much lower, and take in pay Continental money. The people in the country seeing the money pass freely among us, perhaps will be induced to give it a currency.

By the enclosed letters, especially the one which was wrote in French to General Montgomery while he was at Quebeck, and before the unhappy defeat, (since when, our enemies are more bold in their measures against us,) you will see the great necessity of sending many of their leaders out of the Province, and of forwarding a reinforcement immediately, not only for continuing the blockade of Quebeck, but for preserving the country.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To General Schuyler.

Holland-House, January 4, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: A person going to Three-Rivers presents an opportunity of informing you that nothing of consequence has happened since I wrote you yesterday morning. We have a number of Canadians joined us, most of them without arms, which are much wanted. I make no doubt you will send all you possibly can, with three or four hundred pair of snow shoes, a few barrels of sugar for the Hospital, and fifty light shovels.

Our cash is nearly expended. Enclosed is a letter I received this minute from Montreal. I have sent back Lieut. Hull, but detained his party at Point-aux-Trembles. He has in charge Captain Bélat, the villain who destroyed the powder; he has behaved exceedingly ill here. I think it necessary to confine him in Montreal, or send him into the Colonies. I must also beg leave to observe, the lenity shown to our prisoners heretofore in Montreal and places adjacent—it may be justified by principles of humanity at the time, under our present circumstances would be highly imprudent and dangerous. It is my opinion that every soul who were in office at the reduction of the country, and others who are looked upon as inhuman, should be immediately sent over the Lake without respect of persons. If they are suffered to remain in the country, and we defeated, the consequence will probably be the loss of the whole country. You will be good enough to excuse the incorrectness of my letter, which I am obliged to write lying on my back. If there is any absent officers belonging to the regiment here, perhaps it may further the service to order them to join immediately. Colonel Nicholas went from this yesterday morning for Montreal, without liberty or taking leave.

I am, dear General, with esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD, Colonel, &c.

To General Wooster.

P. S. I hope you will think it necessary to send back every soldier who has deserted from us under pretence of his time being out.

B. A.

Holland-House, January 5, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Last night, a faithful Acadian, belonging to our train of artillery, and who was taken prisoner in the unhappy affair of the 31st, was sent out of town by Carlton and Lanaudiere, with the enclosed note and seal, previous to which he was terrified with threats of being hanged, and when thought a true convert, he was told to carry the note to one Mange, at Verrenne, who was to raise two hundred men, &c. The seal was to be delivered to Mr. Jacob Jordan, the King's Commissary at Montreal. This man seemed to consent to, when they promised him his fortune should be made. He was further ordered to call on the Captains of Militia on his way up, and endeavour to prevail on them to raise their Parishes against us; the needful to be done in consequence of this intelligence, I have no occasion to mention. I make no doubt of your sending those people out of the way of danger and mischief. Every thing remains quiet here at present. I believe the enemy dare not venture out, though they threaten it. I pray God they may not, for we are in a miserable condition to receive them.

We have brought three pieces of cannon from our battery. I intend getting the whole here as soon as possible, for defending our Magazine. As there were several French prisoners in town, who will, doubtless, be tampered with, and may not be proof against their artifice, I have thought proper to send an express, on purpose that you may guard against their plots. I find, by an exact return made the 2d instant, we have not quite eight hundred men, including Colonel Livingston's Regiment of about two hundred. Some of the country people have come in to our assistance. In general, they appear friendly, and concerned for us; many offer to join us who have no arms. I have given out several commissions to the inhabitants, who are raising men. We are entirely out of lead. Enclosed is a list of sundry articles much wanted, which, with such as have been wrote for before, I make no doubt you will order as soon as may be. I am very anxious to see you here. The burden lies very heavy on me, considering my present circumstances; I find myself unequal to the task. My wound is in a fair way and less painful. I hope the express will meet you on your way down, and am, very respectfully, dear General, your most obedient and very humble servant,

B. ARNOLD, Colonel, &c.

To General Wooster.

We have drubbed the Rebels. We have taken seven hundred killed, wounded and prisoners, and their General, Montgomery. It remains with you to completely drive away our enemies. We fear nothing here, and will soon give you proofs, my dear fellow-citizens. Signalize yourselves to retrieve the honour of the Canadians, and to gain every happiness to your Parish. The others will all follow your example. Two hundred men will destroy the remains of these miserable wretches, for you will raise all the other Parishes coming down.

LANAUDIERE, JUN.

The 4th, in the evening.

SPEECH TO THE SIX NATIONS SENT BY MR. DEANE, JANUARY 21, 1776.

Brothers, Sachems, and Warriors of the Six-Nations:

When we had the pleasure of meeting you last at Albany, we promised to send our brother Deane to you, that when any thing happened he might inform you, that no false reports, contrived by wicked men, might come to your ears. He now carries you a belt with this speech; open your ears and listen attentively to what he shall say, for he repeats my words.

Brothers, our great Council at Philadelphia have been informed that many wicked men, in the County of Troy, were preparing themselves for war against us—that they had procured arms, and would attack us with the first favourable opportunity. They ordered me to inquire into the matter, and told me that I must carry up my warriors, that I might be able to secure some of the head men amongst them, and disarm the others.

Brothers, when I received this order from our Great Council-Fire, I said to myself, our brothers, the Mohawks, will be alarmed to see so many warriors march into the country in which they live; I must, therefore, send them a speech and belt, which I did by Mr. Bleecker, and I desired that our brothers, the Mohawks, would send it on to the end of the house of the Six Nations. When I had taken this precaution, that our brothers, the Mohawks, might not be offended, I marched my warriors up to Schenectady; from thence I sent a letter to Sir John Johnson, informing him that I would settle the matter without shedding blood if I could, and, therefore, invited him to meet me. He accordingly came, and we had an interview in a small house near by Colonel Johnson's, and there I proposed terms of peace and reconciliation, and desired his answer by the next night. When his answer came, it did not please me, and I sent three of our counsellors to bring him to reason, for my warriors grew very impatient, and I did not want that his blood should be shed. He grew wise, at last, and consented that all the Scotch people should be disarmed, and that I should take six of them prisoners, and that he would not interfere if I disarmed his other friends, who had hostile designs against us.

Brothers, our brothers, the Mohawks, desired me to show some kindness to Sir John. I was glad that they asked the favour, because I knew that he had relations amongst them, and that I might have an opportunity of showing my respect to our Mohawk brethren, and I granted it. But, brothers, he did not deserve it, for we found out that he had given guns to the Scotch people, and to many others who were not our friends, and had prepared his great guns. I could hardly restrain my warriors when they found he had done this. The designs of which said military preparations, they judged, were intended against them. But as I had given my word that he should not be hurt, provided he delivered up the guns and cannon, my warriors did not touch him, and he is now safe at home, and I and my warriors are returning home.

Brothers, I have thus opened the path of peace which we promised you last Summer should be kept open, and which these wicked men designed to stop up, that we might not any more eat, and drink, and smoke with our loving brothers, the Six Nations. It is now again clear, and no obstacles remain, and we can go to you and you can come to us.

Brothers, your brother, Mr. Deane, will inform you of my kind expressions and intentions towards all my brethren of the Six Nations; and I now again assure you, on the behalf of the Thirteen United Colonies, that they love and respect you, and will strictly abide by every agreement they have made, and they have not the least doubt but you will faithfully perform the same.

Farewell, brothers. May God keep you in his protection, and make you a happy people.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, January 25, 1776.

SIR: I have consulted the General Committee upon the subject of your letter of the 16th instant. For many years past the inhabitants of this Colony, surrounded on the land side by Connecticut and the Massachusetts-Bay, thinking themselves in a perfect state of security, entirely neglected military discipline, and disposed of their arms so generally, that, at the breaking out of the present war, the Colony was, in a manner, disarmed. We have taken every method in our power by purchasing, by employing manufacturers, and by importation, to procure a sufficient quantity, but are still so deficient that the same arms which have been rated at six and eight dollars, at Cambridge, are readily bought here at ten and twelve. Indeed, we shall scarcely be able to find arms for the troops we have ordered to be raised for our immediate defence. Besides which, the peculiar situation of the Colony requires that every man in it should be furnished; and the Assembly have, accordingly, ordered that every man should be furnished by the 15th day of April next, under severe penalties. In these circumstances I do not think your Excellency can depend upon any supplies of muskets from this Colony.

I am, with great respect, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Cambridge, January 25, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 22d instant, and am much obliged by your assurance that the three regiments of Militia for this camp will be raised as fast as possible; they are much wanted. I wish it was in my power to facilitate their march, by sending a necessary supply of money for it; but it is not, as our Treasury is exhausted. I hope in a little time it will be replenished, with a sufficient sum to answer every demand.

I am sorry that arms are so scarce with you that none can be furnished on account of the Continent, at this critical period. I know not what will be done. Those of the three regiments they will be allowed to carry away, when their service is ended, unless they choose to sell them. I will gladly buy, but never had an idea of detaining them against their consent.

For the arms which were detained and appraised, I have given warrants to the several Colonels to whose regiments they belonged, upon the Paymaster-General, as fast as the number and value have been brought in, and will take care to have a return made to you.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, January 25, 1776.

SIR: Your letter to his Excellency of the 23d instant, is come to hand, by Lieutenant Wigglesworth. His conduct respecting Mr. Dote, in giving up the First Lieutenancy to him, will be taken due notice of on a future occasion. He carries the commissions and cartridge-paper.

The General doubts not your endeavouring to get out as soon as possible. Yours, &c.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

JOSEPH ROBSON TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF MARYLAND.

Cambridge, January 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I observe, by a resolve of the late Convention, that the Minute-Company of Dorchester County, which I have the honour to command, is ordered to march down into Virginia; and, as the gentleman who was my First Lieutenant has thought proper to resign his commission, I have herewith enclosed it to you. Lest you should be unacquainted with a person suitable to fill that station, have, in some measure, thought it my duty to inform; with your approbation, could wish it supplied by the appointment of him who now acts as my Second Lieutenant, Mr. Moses Le Compte, Jun.; and, if your Honours have not in view a person more worthy to act as Second Lieutenant, take the liberty of naming Mr. Matthias Traverse, if you approve of him.

I am, gentlemen, with due respect, your obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH ROBSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

P. S. As I cannot possibly march until the officers are complete, I hope the messenger will be despatched as quick as possible.

JOHN HANCOCK TO GENERAL LEE.

Philadelphia, January 26, 1776.

SIR: This morning I was favoured with your letter, by express, which I laid before Congress, in consequence of which they have appointed a Committee of three of their Members, viz: Colonel Harrison, Mr. Lynch, and Mr. Allen, immediately to repair to New-York, and confer with you and the Committee of Safety of that Colony on the subject of your letter, which supersedes the necessity of my being particular, as I must refer you to those gentlemen.

I have only to add my best wishes for your health, and that success may attend your important exertions.

I have the honour to be, with esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Major-General Lee.

JOHN GRAHAM TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Guard-Room, Upper Barracks, January 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Please to pardon my intrusion of the following lines, as I am one of the unfortunate among mankind, and my health so much impaired that this close confinement, I find, daily drives a nail in my coffin.

I hope you will take the above into your wise consideration, and set me at liberty; or, should these unhappy times determine it otherwise, if it should seem meet, grant me the parole.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN GRAHAM.

P. S. I wrote a letter, dated 23d instant, to Colonel McDougall, setting forth the reason of my going in that sloop that was cast away on Squan-Beach, New-Jersey, the 23d December, 1775, which was matter of fact, which I hope has appeared before the honourable Committee.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN THE EXPEDITION ON LONG-ISLAND, DATED AT JERICHO, JANUARY 26, 1776.

We set out from Woodbridge on Wednesday, the 17th instant, with about six hundred Militia, and were joined, at New-York, with a detachment from Lord Stirling's battalion, consisting of near three hundred, and on Friday morning we crossed, with all our troops, at Horne's-Hook, near Hellgate, and met with no opposition; proceeded on our way to Jamaica, took in custody some of the principal persons proscribed, sent out parties and brought in many of those who voted against sending Delegates, disarmed them, and required them to sign an obligation we had drawn up, in which we enjoin them not to oppose either the Continental or Provincial Congresses, but to be subject to them, and not aid or assist the Ministerial troops in the present contest.

From Jamaica we went to Hempstead town, where we expected the warmest opposition, but were disappointed, for the inhabitants came in and brought in their arms voluntarily, for two days, as fast as we could conveniently receive them. We have got about three hundred stand of arms, and a considerable quantity of powder and lead. We are now on our way to Oyster-Bay, and shall scour the country as we go, and shall exert ourselves to discharge the trust enjoined on us.

Colonel Heard sent the detachment home last Tuesday, as he thought the Militia sufficient. He is indefatigable in discharging his duty, treats the inhabitants with civility and the utmost humanity, and even the delinquents express themselves well pleased that a detachment of Jerseymen (and not of New-England) were sent to disarm them. Many of those who were proscribed as principals have either fled or secreted themselves; several we have in custody. Some others, I believe, are yet to be had; but, by some means or other, they have had a list of the persons pointed out as principals before our arrival. We are making inquiry how they got their intelligence, but are not yet informed. Those that have come in and surrendered their arms, are much irritated with those who have led them to make opposition, and have deserted them in the day of difficulty. I conceive they will be as safe, if not safer, in our custody than at present among their neighbours, of which some of them seem very apprehensive, and complain that they have met with insults already.

DECLARATION SIGNED BY SUNDRY INHABITANTS OF QUEEN'S COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

January 19, 1776.

Whereas, we, the subscribers, inhabitants of Queen's County, on Long-Island, in the Province of New-York, have given great uneasiness to the good people of the neighbouring Provinces and the Continent in general, by our not choosing a Committee agreeable to the orders of the Continental Congress, by our not paying that attention to the directions of our Provincial Congress, which we ought to have done, and by our opposing the General Instructions of the Continental Congress in almost all our conduct and actions. Therefore, (in order to relieve the minds of the virtuous inhabitants of America, and those of this County in particular, engaged in the common cause,) we, the subscribers, do most solemnly and sincerely promise, that we will, hereafter, in all cases, implicitly obey all orders and instructions enjoined on us by our Provincial and Continental Congresses, that we will act in conjunction with the inhabitants of this and the neighbouring Provinces, in the defence of American liberty, that we never will take up arms against the Americans, and that we will not, directly or indirectly, countenance, aid, assist, or by any means join with, any of His Majesty's troops in the present contest between Great Britain and America. Given under our hands, this 19th day of January, 1776.

We, the subscribers, in the presence of Almighty God, do most solemnly and sincerely swear, that the fire-arms, side-arms, powder and lead, we respectively delivered up to Colonel Heard, and his party, or by them taken from us, are all the fire-arms, side-arms, powder and lead, that belong to us, or that are in our possession or power; and that we have not destroyed, concealed, or otherwise disposed of, any of our said arms or ammunition, in order to evade or obstruct the execution of Colonel Heard's orders from the Continental Congress, for disarming the inhabitants of Queen's County, on Long-Island, who are disaffected to the opposition now making in America against Ministerial tyranny.

To the Honourable the Council of the Colony of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY:

Reading, January 26, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: It being generally reported that a number of warlike vessels are to be fitted for sea for the protection of our trade, likewise to take, seize, and destroy, all enemies to the liberties of America, as it is not doubted but that a number of gentlemen will make applications to your Honours, we beg leave to recommend Mr. John Lambert, a gentleman who has followed the seas for fourteen years past, whose character in private life has been unexceptionable, and his publick conduct merits the esteem of all the friends to America.

We are your Honours' most obedient, humble servants,

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Winter-Hill, January 26, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: I have this day had the pleasure of seeing the worthy gentlemen you were pleased to appoint as a Committee. They relieved me much, when they informed me that you had voted to advance the money for the new regiment, and that you approved of my plan for raising it, which, by information received before, I thought was not the case. I had not time before, nor have I even now, to assign all the reasons for such an attempt, one weighty reason was, that all the new troops that come in are bound to pay a tax to the climate by sickness; this the present Militia have gone through, and, therefore, will much better endure the severities of the next campaign. I hope to have a great part of the regiment from those, but lest a deficiency should happen, I obtained leave to furlough some officers for the purpose of inlisting some in the country.

I have now no doubt upon my mind about the completing the regiment by the time, since you have been kind enough to advance the month's pay. This money, I entreat you, to put into the hands of Major Coffin, that he may forward it to Waldron and Chesley, as soon as possible, and I will be answerable for the disbursements after the regiment is on the ground. Shall send you a list of the men and officers, and beg you to grant the commissions, and in this and every other matter shall cheerfully acquiesce in your determination, and exert myself to obey any of your commands.

We, Samuel Clowes and John Polhemus, do acknowledge ourselves to be indebted to Colonel Nathaniel Heard, in the sum of five hundred Pounds, New-York money, to be paid to the said Nathaniel Heard, his executors, administrators or assigns, and for the payment thereof, we bind ourselves jointly and severally, and our heirs, firmly by these presents to the said Nathaniel Heard.

Sealed with our seals, dated this 29th day of January, 1776.

The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above-said Samuel Clowes, shall, and do surrender himself up to the said Nathaniel Heard, at Jamaica, in Queen's County, on Tuesday, the 30th instant, then the above obligation to be void, otherwise in full force.

S. CLOWES, [SEAL.]
JOHN POLHEMUS, [SEAL.]

Sealed and delivered in the presence of,

JOHN KISSAM.

COLONEL MOYLAN TO THE GENERAL COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Cambridge, January 26, 1776.

SIR: I am desired by his Excellency to know from you, what mode he is to make use of, previous to his drawing for the money this Province has been pleased to offer to advance him, for the use of the United Colonies. Your

Gentlemen, I am with much respect, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Honourable General Assembly of New-Hampshire.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, January 26, 1776.

SIR: This, per express, comes to inform your Excellency that Commodore Manly took, yesterday, off Cohasset-Rocks, after an hour's engagement, (having one man wounded in the breast, not dangerous,) two ships from White-Haven, bound for Boston,* laden with sea-coal, potatoes, &c., enclosed are bills of lading.

Your Excellency will please to direct in what manner I shall conduct with these vessels. The prisoners will be treated with kindness, and will be sent forward to-morrow. I am getting the ships to the wharf, and shall secure the small articles from pilferers, who frequently infest vessels in these circumstances. I congratulate your Excellency on this reiterated instance of Commodore Manly's success, and wish sincerely that all the servants of the American Republic were equally industrious with Manly.

I am, most respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient, much obliged, very humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

N. B. The express brings all the papers taken in the ships.

P. S. I would acquaint your Excellency that the engagement referred to in my letter, was with a tender of eight guns, and full of men, which had these ships under convoy, which circumstance I forgot to mention through hurry. Yours as before,

WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COSMOPOLITAN, NO. VI.

To the Inhabitants of the AMERICAN Colonies:

It has been asked, "What was become of Cosmopolitan?" What of his promise, that a further catalogue of vices, which blackens the escutcheons of an Hutchinson, and gives him a plenitude of infamy, should be the subject of some future number? The reasons of that engagement, and the motives for its present performance, are of a similar nature. Truth is his object, freedom his wishes, and seasonable, manly exertions the scope of all his lucubrations. I shall not attempt to trace the vestiges that mark the character of our hero from early to more advanced life: this would be both tedious and useless. As a child of ambition, and tainted with avarice, I might describe him a wretched compound of plausibility and hypocrisy, shrewdness and weakness, cordiality and deceit, extravagance and rapacity, artifice and sophistry, in those very Departments in which he was placed by the mistake of his countrymen, and in which he dazzled his friends by a blaze of counterfeited virtues. But the event has proved what many suspected, that he was then cankered at heart. From a vain conceit, and an arrogant superciliousness, they suspected the dark, crafty, and designing inhabitant within, and presaged that great duplicity and treachery lurked in an uncommon complaisant, simpering phiz. His abilities, to do him justice, though not of the greatest size, were sufficiently ample. Had they been employed in the service of his country, the cause of virtue, and the support of liberty, he had been respected, and raised monuments to his memory. But a prostitution of the faculties of the head has rendered the qualities of his heart the more formidable, the more to be hated and despised. His perversion of private confidence and abuses of public trust are what every man of honour despises, and every lover of his country is bound to execrate. I doubt whether those who have been the most distinguished by the sunny beams of his beneficence, and drank the largest from the cup of servility, have any reason for benedictions. His talents were well calculated to take hold on minds cast in the mould of an easy credulity, and of those of a grasping and grappling complexion. By the insinuation of address, by a feigned sanctity of manners, and an hypocritical gravity of deportment, he practised upon those who could not fathom the dark train of his laboured dissimulations. By the proffered charms of the insolence of office, and the sweets of increasing emolument, he fettered the souls of the aspiring and the avaricious, and chained them fast to his measures. Thus had he paved the way for opening that tragical scene in which all America is interested. Pollution, and the expanded influence of the venal, were his means, and slavery his object.

In my third number, to which this is an appendix, I asserted that America had for several years been trembling under the rod of oppression; that her neck had been galled by the yoke, and her spirits greatly depressed; that the shackles have been forged, and even put upon our hands, though unriveted; that we have enjoyed little more than the formality, without the real essence of liberty; that under the habits of regularity, real anarchy, confusion, and concealed abominable tyranny, had made an amazing progress; that the condition of war, the consequence of an independency, that no situation can be more depressing to the spirits of freemen, than the state we have been in. Instances were then adduced to evince the assertions. In obedience to the voice of the publick, the calls from the Congress, I now add to their number, and ask once more for the attention, patience, and candour of my abused, wretchedly abused, countrymen.

When riches and lawless domination are made the standard of good and evil, the object of pursuit, and the idol of the times, the Prince and his Court are seized with the infection. The strength of Government, the force of the Treasury, and the arts of minions, are perverted to turn subjects into property, and to command their possessions for profit or for pleasure. Military force is employed to extort, ingenuity, policy, and fraud to decoy and seduce, or the hire of the venal, the wages of prostitution, to buy an accession to their interest. Hence is (says a great Court writer) the speedy change of Governors, which obliges those temporary tyrants to be more expeditious and rapacious, that they may accumulate sufficient wealth before they give place to their hungry successors. Made by their master with a separate interest, they have been strangers to the checks of the governed, the direction of law, the restrictions of justice, the confidence of the people, and the welfare of the community. Rapacity and instructions have been their predominant motives. Nor is it strange that, under the sway of a needy dependant, whose errand is the reparation of a ruined, or the acquisition of a needed fortune, a quarrel for the extension of prerogatives, and a pilfering of rights, the oppressor and the oppressed should form the only division in the State. We might illustrate this by the petty tyranny of a Barnard, influenced by his plotting insidious successor. The then polity was the mere practice of rapine to enrich individuals; chartered prerogatives the forms of speculation to rob the publick; commerce too much a system of snares and impositions; legislation, by turns, feeble and divided, cruel and oppressive; and the meetings of the Assemblies little more than a quarrel between their several branches, and the mere conception of necessary law, which, by the barbarity of the instructed Egyptian, was sure to die a fetus. The bridle of despotism was put into our jaws, and a military force threatened to chill our feelings and benumb our spirits. Restrictions and impositions on trade, with fines and forfeitures, were multiplied for the emolument of a Governor and Admiralty-Judge, a Commissioner, or a wretched informer: and even these profits accumulated, and plunder increased by compositions, bribery, and intrigue. These animals have been the incessant drains to our wealth and plagues to our Provinces.

* CAMBRIDGE, February 1, 1776.—Last Thursday morning Captain Manly being on a cruise in the Bay discovered a ship a league or two southeast of Boston light-house; he immediately gave chase to, and took her within sight of the ships in Boston harbour. He then stood for a snow, which he espied off Cohasset, and soon coming up to her, she struck to him without hesitation. Just as Captain Manly had manned his last prize, a schooner of eight carriage guns, with many swivels, and full of men, conveying two little provision vessels from Hali-fax, came up, and began an engagement with Captain Manly, but being soon convinced of her error, she sheared off for Boston. Captain Manly would undoubtedly have taken her also, with the two provision vessels, had not his crew, (which was at first much short of the complement,) been weakened by manning the two prizes. In the engagement his gunner was wounded, and his rigging something damaged. We have not heard what loss the enemy sustained. Both of the prizes, which were loaded with coal from Whitehaven, in England, Captain Manly got safe into Plymouth the ensuing night.

This was the period in which the present stain to humanity, the detestation of America, paved his way to the first seat of magistracy, by showing a head replete with dangerous designs to his country, and an inveterate hatred to the rights of civil society. Well educated in the Marchiaellian school, he begun his exalted career flushed with the expectation of certain success. His revering disciples were exceedingly docile under his culture. The lessons he taught them may be learned from his letters. The schemes that he laid were as deep as the centre, and as black as they were deep. His accession to the chair filled many an honest heart with anxious concern, and almost every discerning head with a vigilant distrust. While congratulatory addresses were cooked up to his delicate taste by the deceiving and deceived, the Representatives of the people nobly spurned at the fawning servility, and proposed, in its stead, an address of condolence for the misfortunes of their country. This was very humiliating to one who so eagerly caught at the empty trash or unmerited applause. His sublimated system began gradually to creep from under its mask. The supreme inherent right of Parliament was totally denied. How to establish it, and punish its bold (and, to be sure, its traitorous) opposers, was his unwearied study. For the latter, the penalties of a premonition were thought an adequate measure.* The man who had the unparalleled presumption to deny that himself, his wife, his children, his property, his life, his conscience, and his very all, were at the entire disposal, and bound in all cases whatsoever by the subjects of Great Britain, was to be put out of the protection of the law, his lands and tenements, goods and chattels forfeited to the King, and his body to remain in prison at the King's pleasure, or during life. The former was to be effected by disguising, abusing, twisting, extending, and perverting the prerogatives of the Crown and the right of regulating trade, as founded upon the consent of the Colonies. From these premises was deduced his pitiful policy. These materials formed one of his infernal engines. With these instruments he was determined to coerce the nauseous dose. The prostituted hand of Royal prerogatives was sorely pressed on every side. The gripings of this he expected would blunt our senses, and render us unfeeling to the less obvious weight of Parliamentary pressure. We were to be familiarized to acts of Parliament, by constant and abominable expansions of the regulating power. By a pious, fraudulent delusion the principle was to be established. And then its exertions were too wanton in all their rigour. The experiment was tried: it failed of success. The Americans, says the European Cicero, augur misgovernment from principle, and snuff the approach of tyranny in every tainted breath. In the meantime, whole Colonies were to be annihilated, and swallowed up by their reluctant neighbours; Constitutions prostrated, and Charters puffed away. Broils, contentions, discords, and animosities were to be increased between Colony and Colony, and their attendants, rancour and revenge, maintained and cherished in every quarter. For the fomenting of the one, and food for the other, the benevolent, the humane, and the sanctified Mr. Hutchinson pledged his most engaging genius. The following are words taken from his published letters: "I wish every other Government may desert us, and that we may go to quarrelling one Government with another. I think," says he, under the conscious intoxication of his matchless genius, "I could find bones to throw among them, to continue contention, and prevent a renewal of their union."

A stranger to the comforts of unsullied purity, deaf to the voice of honest sincerity, hot in the pursuit of honour and wealth, tormented by the sight of American liberty, he was determined to sap her foundation by his insidious wiles, or perfidious stratagems. Those failing, his next resort was by open storm. Determined as he was, at any rate, that sooner or later she should strike to the displayed banner of despotic sway, he opened his doors to Court adulators, and his ear to his servile minions. Together they formed their plans, and hugged the expectations of riotously wantoning on the spoils of the subjugated. Together they turn their backs on virtue and the tenderest ties of the social connexion. The misfortunes and pains of their bleeding country nourish their suspended souls, and sooth their tedious toils. The menaces of tyrants, arms and bayonets, racks and tortures, gibbets and halters, lords and manors, masters and vassals, are the sweet, animating topics of their confidential communion. In the rapturous enjoyment of these delicious morsels, I shall leave them for the present, and produce, for their increasing consolation, a line or two from Euripides:

"God hates the violent, commanding all
To live on what their honest pains procure,
And not to feed their wants on mutual spoils.
Oppressors should be banished human race,
Unworthy of the name. One common Heaven
Gives light and air to man; one earth a seat,
A scene of industry, where all may strive
To raise their stock, and spread their fortunes wide;
But not to rob, or force the public rights."

D. SANTERRE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Cape St. Dominique, January 27, 1776.

MY GENERAL: I am a French officer, First Captain of my regiment. I have served twenty-four years. I have been in Germany all the last war. When I thought to have reaped the fruits of my long service and my fatigue, I have been most cruelly used by a puissant chief, against whom I have it not in my power to take my revenge. I have demanded justice. Intrigue, money, and the great credit of my adversary, have rendered my complaints of no effect. I have quitted, forever, a country where I have experienced such heart-breaking vexations.

I pray you, my General, to let me know whether you will grant me an asylum, and, in your service, I will devote to your nation my blood, and the little fortune which I can pluck from the greedy hands which persecute me. I will serve your country with all that zeal and fidelity which you have a right to expect from an officer, whom honour has been the only cause of his misfortunes.

Give me, my General, the power, the glory, to die in defence of your laws and your liberty, I will become one of your citizens. I will, with pleasure, seal with my blood this title which I now solicit from you. If the war should spare me, I will finish my days amongst your countrymen, to whom I make account of attaching myself by the most sacred ties.

I burn to open the next campaign with you, nor do I desire that you will put the least confidence in me, until I have, in the field of battle, deserved it.

I am, with profound respect, my General, your most obedient, and most humble servant,

D. SANTERRE,

First Captain of the Regiment of Martinique.

To the General of the Confederated Provinces of New-England.

VIRGINIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF MARYLAND.

In Committee of Safety, Virginia, }
January 27, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: As we are so closely connected, by inclination as well as interest, our situation strongly points out the propriety of attending to the operations which may be necessary for our mutual defence. We are desirous of establishing, and keeping up, a constant intimate correspondence with you.

We think it proper to inform you, that we have resolved to build, for the protection of the Potomack-River, two row-gallies, one of them to carry one twenty-four-pounder, the other a twelve-pounder, and both swivels; also, three vessels, carrying, one of them, four six-pounders and some four-pounders, the other two vessels four-pounders and swivels.

We do not conceive this adequate to the importance of that great river, but we have three other rivers, to which we must extend the like care; and, as your Province is equally interested in the safety of Potomack-River, we could not doubt it would be the wish of your body to participate in its protection.

Our determination on this head is yet subject to alteration, and we shall cheerfully consult and advise with you on this, or any other subject conducive to the interest of both, and to our mutual defence.

We are, with great respect, your most humble servants,

JOHN PAGE, Vice-President.
DUDLEY DIGGES,
JOHN TABB,
P. CARRINGTON,
THOMAS WALKER,
JAMES MERCER.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety.

COLONEL SMALLWOOD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, January 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I observe the gentlemen of the Convention have allowed the soldiers as a uniform, hunting-shirts, but no spatterdashes, which renders the regimentals incomplete; this they certainly have not adverted to, otherways am persuaded they must have seen the impropriety of allowing one and not the other, for you must be sensible that clean spatterdashes as well as hunting-shirts, must cover a multitude of blemishes in the dress and appearance of the regiment, which I would most earnestly wish to appear as respectable, and to become as formidable as might be, under our present disadvantageous situation respecting military matters; this, therefore, I hope you will take under consideration. Flatter myself, as the expense will be trifling, you will be induced to purchase as much osnaburghs, or (what will be much better, if to be had,) Russia sheeting as will answer this purpose.

I know the publick business is very pressing, and that you will be much engaged, yet I must entreat you to purchase what cloths are to be had in Baltimore, suitable for soldiers' clothing; also, sail-duck, for tents. The men enlisted must be very bare, as the Captains are continually pressing me to know how they are to be furnished with clothes, urging that they cannot march them to their station till clad.

Intrenching tools, &c., imagine may be made here at any time.

I think you must judge it essentially necessary to request Mr. Johnson, or some other of our Congress members, to write General Washington to send us a good Adjutant or two, for the use of the Province in general, who, as an encouragement, might be allowed more than the common wages.

I am, with much diffidence, gentlemen, your very obedient, humble servant,

W. SMALLWOOD.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

COLONEL ST. CLAIR TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read January 31, 1776.]

Lancaster, January 27, 1776.

SIR: On my arrival here, I found the Committee of this place, and the officers of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, in some dispute, occasioned by one of my officers having enlisted a Sergeant and a Drummer belonging to that corps. The officers had applied to the Committee to order them to be dismissed, alleging that the enlisting them was a breach of the capitulation.

It is rather my sentiment that the enlisting the prisoners is improper; but, as we were much in want of sergeants and drums, and had no directions respecting these people, and as the thing was done, I put it on this issue, that I should write the matter to you, and if the enlistment was disapproved of, the men should be returned.

If you will please, sir, to inform the Committee of Lancaster, they will acquaint Captain Watson, with whom the recruits are.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ARTHUR ST. CLAIR.

To John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

LORD STIRLING TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Elizabethtown, January 27, 1776.

SIR: My letter to you of the 24th, from on board of the ship Blue-Mountain-Valley, off Amboy, I hope you received. The next day we got her into the Sound, near Blazing-Star, where she grounded; but, by lightening her, we got off again yesterday morning, and brought her up to Elizabeth-Point, where she now lies, under the care of Captain Rogers, in whose charge, for the use of the Continental Congress, I have put her, and is guarded by a detachment of my regiment. I thought it most prudent to unbend her sails, and to have her unladen as soon as possible, and have given directions to have the cargo and stores brought into this town as soon as possible.

Captain Rogers, who was recommended to me by the New-York Committee of Safety, has been very alert and steady throughout this whole affair, is well worthy of the confidence they placed in him.

I would now give a more particular relation of this transaction, but the cold and fatigue I have been exposed to for the last fortnight, has almost got the better of me; it is with difficulty I can set up to write this.

I shall enclose a copy of the manifest and bill of lading of the cargo of this ship. A strange cargo! And twenty-odd similar ones sailed about the same time. The Captain is a brother to George Dempster, Esq., a valuable friend to North-America, in the House of Commons; he is a sensible, genteel young man; all his property (about one hundred pounds sterling) is on board; a trifle, also, belongs to the Mates. I must beg it as a favour of the Congress to order me to restore it to them, for they have all behaved extremely well, and were very useful to us in working the ship, and the sailors are now assisting the soldiers in unloading her.

I have great reason to believe that more of these ships will come on this coast, and try to get into New-York. Four or six small vessels kept ready, and in good weather to run between Sandy-Hook and Egg-Harbour, might pick them up, and prevent their receiving any assistance from Captain Parker.

Major De Hart returned yesterday from Long-Island, with the detachment of my regiment, and has brought me four colours of the Long-Island Militia; the arms they took they have delivered up to Colonel Heard. I shall enclose a copy of Major De Hart's report to me.

I am your most obedient, humble servant,

STIRLING.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

SHIP BLUE-MOUNTAIN-VALLEY:—Manifest of her cargo.

October 2, thirty bundles hoops; October 3, porter, marked Calvert, seventy butts; October 4, porter, marked Calvert, thirty butts. Total, one hundred butts.

October 6, eighteen empty puncheons; October 9, two hundred and twenty-five bags beans; October 9, one hundred and fifty-six sacks potatoes; October 10, ten casks sour-kraut; October 10, eighty live hogs; October 11, seventeen empty puncheons.

October 13, completed ship's sea-stores and proceeded on the voyage to America.

STIRLING.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN NEW-YORK, DATED MONTREAL, JANUARY 27, 1776.

The remnant of our battalion are to hold themselves in readiness, and expect marching orders to-morrow.

I am, for some time, to be stationed at the Three-Rivers, some matters being necessary to be settled with the Tories, who, in different parts, begin to be insulting since our late misfortunes at Quebeck. This makes the third visit I have had amongst this kind of people. I expect soon to be called down to Quebeck.

Your old friend, Captain Mott, behaved well in the attempt to storm, and in the retreat brought up the rear with great reputation. Our blockade at Quebeck is yet maintained. On the 25th instant, Captain Seaborn, from Massachusetts, the first hero that has appeared to our assistance since the repulse at Quebeck, arrived, with twenty-seven men. His arrival had a very good effect, for on the morning of the same day was found, at the Church door, an anonymous seditious paper, very artfully written, calculated to stimulate the inhabitants to rise and cut us all off. However, I believe few of them had as much courage as the writer had ingenuity. They are now convinced the Lakes are frozen, and think the Bostonians are coming as thick as the trees in the woods. The Tories now seem quite crest-fallen.

Let not one small disaster, among so many noble deeds, discourage the Sons of Liberty; especially, considering how the small remnant of the Army left before Quebeck dare to stand their ground, and form a blockade against that almost impregnable fortress. But I perceive it is open over head, and with the help of God, and a speedy reinforcement, we shall yet catch the fox in his den.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Montreal, January 27, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 30th November I have just received.

To a man who engages in this glorious struggle from the pure principle of love to his country, if he meets with the applauses of his countrymen for any services, it must certainly give him very sensible pleasure.

My brethren, in America, were not only entitled to any little services I may have rendered them, but ever will be to my most strenuous efforts to serve them, and I shall always think myself exceeding happy, and most amply rewarded, if they prove successful.

Long before this reaches you, you will have received the news of the unhappy attack upon Quebeck. I most sincerely condole with you for the loss of the brave and most amiable General Montgomery, and the rest of the brave officers and soldiers who fell gloriously with him.

Colonel Arnold still keeps up the blockade. I have sent him all the troops that could possibly be spared from this garrison. I should have immediately gone there myself, but it was thought unadvisable for me, at that time, to leave this place, which it was necessary to secure as a retreat.

Troops now begin to come in from the Colonies, and, as I have got matters nearly settled here, I intend, in a little time, to proceed on to Quebeck.

We shall want every thing; men, money, heavy cannon, mortars, shot and shells, and a large supply of powder, as we have not more than four tons in the Province. I have wrote General Schuyler my sentiments fully, upon what may be necessary in carrying on the siege; also, the state of the Province, and what measures have been taken in it, which suppose he has communicated.

To remedy the evil of sinking so much hard cash in this country, I have advised that every article wanted in this country from the Colonies, especially all kinds of West-India goods, and liquors, and New-England rum, be brought over the Lakes, which I am convinced may be done, and sold lower than what we are now obliged to give. These articles may be then paid for in Continental money, and that, in my opinion, will go a great way towards giving it a currency.

I am, with the greatest esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, January 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 14th instant, with the money, was delivered to me by Captain Benson, and the other gentlemen. I was very happy to receive the cash, which was greatly wanted, and more so, to hear that a large reinforcement are coming on; a few have already arrived as volunteers, which adds fresh spirits to our men. With what assistance I have already supplied Colonel Arnold, and the recruits which I shall soon send him, I have great hopes he will be able to continue the blockade till we are prepared to prosecute, vigorously, different measures. By what information I have been able to procure, I fear that their provisions will last them till they can be relieved in the Spring; you will, therefore, see the necessity of forwarding heavy cannon, mortars, shells, and shot, with a large supply of powder. Colonel Ritzema, who will hand you this, will inform you how necessary a large supply of those things will be to us, in carrying on our operations.

We have, in this Province, many of the officers of the New-York battalions, who are desirous of continuing in the service, but their regiments are broken to pieces; many are returned home, and some, when their term of enlistments were out, inlisted into other corps. I could wish that those battalions could be speedily filled up, for which purpose I have consented that Colonel Ritzema should proceed to Albany, and there he will receive your directions.

I have called in most of the commissions which Carleton had given to the officers of Militia in this part of the Province, (that is, down as far as Three-Rivers), and given out new ones, under the Congress. Those who refuse to give up their commissions under Carleton, (and I expect some will,) I shall consider as enemies to us, and as such shall make prisoners of them. I allow each Parish to choose their own officers, which, I find, pleases them much. I hope it will be attended with happy consequences, as those who take commissions under the Congress will be afraid to desert our cause, and no principle operates so strongly upon the minds of the Canadians as fear.

I am, also, about establishing a Committee of Safety in this town, which will be, also, a Committee of Correspondence. They will, by settling a thousand trifling disputes, ease me of a very great burden. But I have something further in view: when it is once established in this town, perhaps other places in this country will be inclined to follow the example, and by degrees they may possibly be led to choose a Provincial Congress, and, of course, Delegates for the Continental Congress. I confess, to me there appears at least a plausibility in the scheme. What we wish, we easily believe.

I have already wrote you, that I think it of importance to send Sutlers into this Province. You are sensible that it will be next to impossible to procure hard money sufficient for maintaining an army here, and I am convinced that many articles may be brought over the Lakes, into this Province, to great advantage. Will it not, therefore, be well to give every possible encouragement for the bringing of every article wanted in this Province from the Colonies, not only for the use of the Army, but for the people of the country. Possibly, by that means, we may gain a currency for our Continental money.

I expect, in a little time, to get matters in such a way here as to be able to leave this place, when I shall immediately proceed to our camp before Quebeck, and can then be under better advantages to determine what measures to pursue.

Mr. Pelissier, of Three-Rivers, tells me that he shall not be able to cast any shells for us till the 1st of May.

Colonel Arnold has not, as yet, sent me General Montgomery's letters and papers. When they arrive, I shall forward to you all such as are not necessary for the rule of my conduct, and shall certainly take particular care of the baggage of the dear, deceased General, and of your worthy Aid-de-camp.

Major Lockwood and Captain Rensselaer desire me to present their respects to you. I have appointed Captain Rensselaer Deputy Mustermaster-General. I found that it was impossible, consistently for the good of the service, to do any longer without one. Hope it will be approved of.

I am, dear sir, most respectfully, your very humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To General Schuyler.

P. S. I could wish that the Paymaster may be sent over as quick as possible, as we shall be able to make some little use of Continental money in paying the troops here. As we shall be obliged to make use of a considerable part of the hard cash now received, in paying sums that we have borrowed for a few days only, we shall, in a very short time, be in very great need of more.

Colonel Campbell sent in to Governour Carleton, by the flag of truce which came out for the prisoners' baggage, that he would gladly pay the value of General Montgomery's watch, if it could be procured, the consequence of which was, they sent out the watch without requiring pay, and I now send it to you by Colonel Ritzema.

LEVI ALLEN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Salisbury, in Connecticut, January 27, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have rode some hundred miles in consequence of my brother Ethan Allen (commonly called Colonel Allen) being taken prisoner near Montreal, 25th September last, waited on your Excellency at Head-Quarters, in Cambridge, in December last; since that waited on General Schuyler, on the same business. He read me a paragraph of your Excellency's letter, directing him to inquire what was become of Colonel Allen, and desired me, if possible, to get some evidence of the treatment he met with after being taken prisoner. Accordingly have spared neither trouble nor cost to accomplish the same. One affidavit only have been able to obtain, which here enclose.

There is a number of the Ministerial troops in this and the neighbouring Colonies, prisoners, but few of them have seen my brother since a prisoner; only those taken on board the Gaspee, brig, and, it is next to impossible to get any of them to say Allen or any other prisoner was used ill, for fear of retaliation, besides they have been charged by Prescott, and all the officers, not to mention Allen's being put in irons on pain of death.

The soldier that made the affidavit here enclosed, was very loath, and I should not have obtained it, but he had previously dropped words to the same import of the affidavit. I then brought him before proper authority, and told him he must declare on oath whether Colonel Allen was put in irons or not; then he declared on oath what the affidavit says, at the same time begged none present would mention his name.

Have some thoughts of going to England, incognito, after my brother, but am not positively certain he is sent there, though believe he is. Beg your Excellency will favour me with a line, and acquaint me if any intelligence concerning him, and, if your Excellency pleases, your opinion of the expediency of going after him, and whether your Excellency would think proper to advance any money for that purpose, as my brother was a man blessed with more fortitude than fortune. Your Excellency may think, at first thought, I can do nothing by going to England; I feel as if I could do a great deal, by raising a mob in London, bribing the jailer, or by getting into some servile employment with the jailer, and over-faithfulness, make myself master of the key, or at least be able to lay my hand on it some night. I beg your Excellency will countenance my going; can muster more than one hundred pounds, my own property; shall regard spending that no more than one copper.

Your Excellency must know Allen was not only a brother, but a real friend, that sticketh closer than a brother. Have two brothers in the Continental Army, one a Captain, the other a Lieutenant—the latter with the army before Quebeck. Whether he is there now or with General Montgomery, in Heaven, cannot tell. We look up to your Excellency as our political father, and head of a great people.

Your Excellency's most obedient, ever faithful, and very humble servant,

LEVI ALLEN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

N. B. If your Excellency chooses I should wait on you personally, I only wait your commands. Cannot live without going to England, if my brother is sent there. Beg your Excellency will not discover this letter, lest the adverse party know my design.

ULSTER County, ss:

Peter Rammon, of lawful age, testifieth and saith, that sometime the latter end of September, or forepart of October last past, he, this deponent, was on board the Gaspee, brig, near Montreal, when a man called Colonel Allen was brought on board, and put in irons, and continued so for more than thirty days, not free from his irons one minute, day or night, to the best of this deponent's knowledge and belief, as this deponent see said Allen often every day, and often every night, during the thirty days and something more, and that said Allen was very sick during the whole time with the yellow-jaundice, and was attended by Doctor Huntley every day; and further, deponent saith not.

WILLIAM ELSWORTH, Justice of the Peace.

Levi Allen, of lawful age, testifieth and saith, that on the 19th day of January, 1776, this deponent was at Kingston, in Ulster County, and Province of New-York, when a soldier belonging to the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, (the No. 26 marked on his coat buttons,) named Peter Rammon, as he said, personally appeared before William Elsworth, Esq., one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and being duly deposed on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, made solemn oath to the truth of the above deposition, in the presence of this deponent; and further this deponent saith not.

Then personally appeared the above signer, Levi Allen, and made solemn oath to the above before me.

SAMUEL FORBES, Justice of Peace.

ULSTER County, ss:

This is to certify, that on the 19th day of January, 1776, a soldier belonging to the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, and taken prisoner at Montreal, appeared before me, Johannis Snyder, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace for said County, and declared upon his honour, that he saw one Colonel Allen, belonging to the Continental Army, and taken prisoner by the regular troops, and put aboard the Gaspee, brig, under guard, with a bar of iron fixed to one of his legs, and iron fixed to his hands, and was sent in that situation down the river to Quebeck. I then asked him whether he would be so kind as to make affidavit of the truth of the matter; he answered he could not undertake such, for these particular reasons: For if the officers should know that he had made affidavit, or even said so, (and undoubtedly they would hear of it,) they would punish him to death, and begged of me not to mention his name, for fear of severe punishment, and I promised him not to discover him.

Witness my hand the day and year above written.

JOHANNIS SNYDER.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Cambridge, January 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 22d instant, enclosing Colonel Arnold's letter of the 2d, explained the doubt we were in, respecting his detachment, is received. Happy would it have been for our cause, if that party could have got out of the city of Quebeck, as I am much afraid, from the complexion of the letters from that place, that there is little hope of Arnold's continuing the blockade without assistance from Wooster, which he is determined not to give, whether with propriety or not, I shall not, at this distance, undertake to decide.

The sad reverse of our affairs, in that quarter, calls loudly for every exertion in your power to restore them to the promising aspect they so lately were. For this reason, notwithstanding you think the necessity of troops from hence is, in some measure, superseded, I will not countermand the order and appointment of officers which are gone forth from this Government, Connecticut and New-Hampshire, for raising a regiment each, till Congress, (who are informed of it,) shall have decided upon the measure. I consider that the important period is now arrived, when the Canadians, and, consequently, their Indians, must take their side. Should any indecisive operations of ours, therefore, give the bias against us, it is much easier to foresee than to rectify the dreadful consequences which must inevitably follow from it. I consider, also, that the reinforcement under the command of Colonel Warner, and such other spirited men as have left the western parts of the New-England Governments, is only temporary, and may fail when most wanted; as we find it next to impossible to detain men (not fast bound) in service after they get a little tired of the duties of it, and home-sick. These, my dear sir, are the great outlines which good men use in this affair. If Congress mark them as strongly as I do, they will not wish to starve the cause at so critical a period. If they think differently, they will direct accordingly, and I must stand corrected for the errors my zeal hath led me into.

Colonel Porter, said to be an exceeding active man, is appointed to the command of the regiment from this Government; Colonel Burrell to the one from Connecticut; Colonel Biddle to that from New-Hampshire. The two last are represented to me as men of spirit and influence; so that, from these accounts, I have no doubt of their getting into Canada in a very short time, as I have endeavoured to excite the spirit of emulation. I wish, most ardently, that the state of your health may permit you to meet them there. The possession of Quebeck, and entire reduction of Canada this Winter, so as to have leisure to prepare for the defence of it in the Spring, is of such great and extensive importance to the well-being of America, that I wish to see matters under the direction — But I will say no more, you will come at my meaning.

I am a little embarrassed to know in what manner to conduct myself with respect to the Caughnawaga Indians now here. They have, notwithstanding the treaty of neutrality, which I find they entered into with you the other day, (agreeable to what appears to be the sense of Congress,) signified to me a desire of taking up arms in behalf of the United Colonies. The Chief of them, and whom I understand is now the first man of the nation, intends, as it is intimated to me, to apply to me for a commission, with assurances of raising four or five hundred men when he returns. My embarrassment does not proceed so much from the impropriety of encouraging these people to depart from their neutrality (accepting their own voluntary offer rather) as from the expense which probably may follow. I am sensible that if they do not desire to be idle, that they will be for or against us. I am sensible, also, that no artifices will be left untried to engage them against us; their proffered services, therefore, ought not to be rejected; but how far, under the little knowledge I have of these people's policy and real intentions, and your want of their aid, I ought to go, is the question that puzzles me. I will endeavour, however, to please them by yielding, in appearance, to their demands, reserving, at the same time, the power in you to regulate their numbers and movements, of which you shall be more fully informed when any thing is fixed. At present, what they have mentioned is a kind of out-door's talk. They expect and are waiting to see Colonel Bedel (who promised to meet them here) before they open themselves fully.

What can you do in compliance of Arnold's request of mortars, &c.? If Knox disfurnished you, I am almost sorry for it, as I believe I shall never get wherewithal to feed them here. I congratulate you upon the success of your expedition into Troy County. I hope General Lee will execute a work of the same kind on Long-Island, &c. It is high time to begin with our internal foes, when we are threatened with such severity of chastisement from our kind parent without.

That the Supreme Disposer of every good may bestow health, strength, and spirits to you and your army, is the fervent wish of, dear sir, your most affectionate and obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WOOSTER.

Cambridge, January 27, 1776.

SIR: On the 17th instant I received the melancholy account of the unfortunate attack on the city of Quebeck, attended with the fall of General Montgomery and others, and the misfortune of Colonel Arnold being wounded. This unhappy affair affects me in a sensible manner, and I condole with you upon the occasion.

Having received no intelligence later than the copy of Colonel Arnold's letter to you of the 2d, I would willingly hope, that he is in no worse situation than he then was, though I confess my fears have been great, lest these misfortunes should have been succeeded by others.

I need not mention to you the importance of Canada in the scale of our affairs—to whomsoever it belongs, in their favour, probably, will the balance turn. If it is ours, success will crown our virtuous struggles; if our enemy's, the contest, at best, will be doubtful, hazardous, and bloody. Government being fully convinced of these facts, will, most assuredly, send a strong and considerable reinforcement to Quebeck early in the Spring, which will render the reduction of it exceedingly difficult if not impracticable. The great and important work must, then, be accomplished in the course of the present Winter, or the rights of America may be lost forever. I must, therefore, entreat you, in case General Schuyler's indisposition should not permit him to act, to exert yourself upon the occasion as much as you possibly can, and to give every assistance in your power for completing our conquest in that quarter. Three regiments are raising in this and the Governments of Connecticut and New-Hampshire, with all possible expedition, and two from Pennsylvania and the Jerseys have been ordered by Congress for this purpose, besides a number of men under the command of Colonel Warner. When these arrive and join the troops already there, I confidently hope that, should the command devolve upon you, you will not only reinstate our affairs in their former pleasing situation, but will be the happy means of adding the only link wanting in the grand chain of Continental Union. You will then have an opportunity of employing your abilities for your country's weal, and rendering her services never to be forgotten.

I am, &c.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Wooster.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL ARNOLD.

Cambridge, January 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On the 17th instant I received the melancholy account of the unfortunate attack on the city of Quebeck, attended with the fall of General Montgomery and other brave officers and men, and your being wounded. This unhappy affair affects me in a very sensible manner, and I sincerely condole with you upon the occasion. But in the midst of distress I am happy to find that suitable honours were paid to the remains of Mr. Montgomery; and our officers and soldiers, who have fallen into their hands, treated with kindness and humanity.

Having received no intelligence later than the copy of your letter of the 2d, to General Wooster, I would faintly hope that you are not in a worse situation than you then were, though I confess I have greatly feared that their misfortunes would be succeeded by others, on account of your unhappy condition and the dispirited state of the officers and men. If they have not, I trust when you are joined by three regiments now raising in this and the Governments of Connecticut and New-Hampshire, and two others, ordered by the Congress from Pennsylvania and the Jerseys with the men already sent by Colonel Warner, that these misfortunes will be done away, and things resume a more favourable and promising appearance than ever.

I need not mention to you the great importance of this place, and the consequent possession of all Canada in the scale of American affairs; you are well apprized of it. To whomsoever it belongs, in their favour, probably, will the balance turn. If it is in ours, success, I think, will most certainly crown our virtuous struggles; if it is in theirs, the contest, at least, will be doubtful, hazardous, and bloody. The glorious work must be accomplished in the course of this Winter, otherwise it will become difficult, most probably impracticable. For Administration knowing that it will be impossible ever to reduce us to a state of slavery and arbitrary rule without it, will certainly send a large reinforcement there in the Spring. I am fully convinced that your exertions will be invariably directed to this grand object; and I already view the approaching day, when you and your brave followers will enter this important Fortress with every honour and triumph attendant on victory and conquest. Then will you have added the only link wanting in the great chain of Continental Union, and rendered the freedom of your country secure.

Wishing you a speedy recovery, and the possession of those laurels which your bravery and perseverance justly merit, I am, dear sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Arnold.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

Cambridge, January 27, 1776.

SIR: There were three accounts exhibited against the United Colonies, by different persons in your Province:

One by Jonathan Burnham for	£40	7	5
One for horse hire, &c., per Sam ^l Hobart,	8	5	0
One by yourself for sundry expenses,	26	2	5

£74 14 10

I think it will be more regular that the accounts above mentioned should be settled by Agents, that will doubtless be appointed by the Congress, to settle the accounts that are or may be depending with the different Provinces. This is the reason that I do not at present enter upon an examination of these accounts.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To William Whipple, Esq.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO THE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY AT NEWBURYPORT.

Cambridge, January 27, 1776.

I am commanded by his Excellency General Washington, to inquire from your Committee about two hundred and fifteen stand of arms which belonged to the Province, and were sent by General Sullivan to Portsmouth. As this Army stands much in need of good arms, the General would be glad to know from you, whether these arms are returned or not; if they are, it will be doing great service to the country that they be with all speed forwarded to this camp. I am, &c.,

To the Committee of Safety, at Newburyport.

THOMAS PALMER TO PHILIP LIVINGSTON.

Newburgh, January 28, 1776.

SIR: I cannot account for the conduct of our Committee of Safety with respect to the fortification to be erected at Pooploop's Point, in the Highlands. It was seven days after my return from Philadelphia before any letter was sent to the Commissioners; and when they received it, it contained only the resolve of the Continental Congress, without any instructions accompanying it. The Commissioner then at the post not judging proper to proceed, sent off a person express to the Committee for instructions. This express returned but yesterday, and (as I am informed) the instructions now are, to finish a piece of work now begun at Martelaer's Point, which, I suppose, will take up near a month. Whether the Committee of Safety has received any further advice from the Continental Congress which may justify their conduct, I know not. If they have not, I think their conduct most unaccountable. The season of the year is no argument why they cannot proceed, as there is now lying at New-Windsor the timber and other materials for a barrack; the boards already dressed, those for the floors grooved, and the shingles prepared for the roof. Besides, a more favourable season than the present cannot be, at this season of the year, for transporting the same down to Pooploop's Point, as the river is now so froze, that sleighs go frequently on the ice with great safety, and teams may easily be collected to carry it down in one day to the spot. And the carpenters can have lodgings in the neighbourhood of Pooploop's Point, while they may be putting this barrack up, which can be done in a very short time, and, when finished, will be a sufficient cover for one hundred and sixty men, (or more, if necessary.) And should the present opportunity be neglected until the river begins to break up, another chance may not happen until the middle of March or the first of April, and, by that means, all work at this important post must be neglected, until such a season as that we may be daily exposed to the enemy, with no other place of defence than that at Martelaer's Point, which I think nothing of, even with the little addition they are now erecting, for, when that is done, not a single gun can command the reach of the river. Moreover, if this barrack were carried down and covered, the season would not prevent throwing up the battery at Martelaer's Point; and a better season cannot be than the present, to collect, from the country back, such timber as may be necessary for carrying on the work. Another most material article, and that is, two and a half inch plank, for the platform of the fortification, which ought now to be engaged at the mills, to be ready early in the Spring.

If, therefore, a fortification at Pooploop's Point is of real importance for the security of part of this and the other Provinces, it ought by no means to be delayed; especially when there is no kind of difficulty in prosecuting of it. I gave my sentiments to the Committee before I left New-York; and have since mentioned it in the postscript of a letter to them on another occasion; and as nothing is yet done, and our time wasting, I thought proper to communicate my sentiments to you, and desire you will confer with Mr. Jay on the matter; and should you be of opinion with me, I think you ought to consult with Colonel McDougall, and some other principal gentlemen of the Provincial Congress now at New-York, that a matter of so much importance as this may happen to be, may not any longer be neglected.

I am, sir, with due respect, your most humble servant,
THOMAS PALMER.

To Philip Livingston, Esq.

EDWARD MOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Salisbury, January 28, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Since my last I have been through the town of Canaan, as well as in this town, and have had some opportunity with the inhabitants, and find that when I wrote to your Honour I had not the true and genuine sentiments of the people in these parts, as they inform me. They say that they had been taught to believe that I never held any commission till last year, and that I knew nothing of my duty without first inquiring of Captain Buel. I was surprised to hear the suggestion, as I am sure I never went to inquire after my duty from that quarter; and I find that the people are not uneasy, as I then supposed, but that a small dust hath been struck up by some designing persons. My rank is as I hinted to your Honour in my last, but still desire that things may be so conducted as shall be for the best good of the service. If I should go in the service, and Captain Buel should not, should be glad that Captain John Stevens might be thought of in Canaan. I should also think that Mr. Strong, the bearer of this, might be serviceable, if appointed to be an officer in the service. If your Honour should think proper to raise any more of the regiment in the eastward part of the Colony, there are Captain Belcher and Captain Witter, both of Preston, who would be glad of an appointment, and I should think would soon raise men for subalterns. Captain Throop will be able to advise. I mention this, as Captain Starr, and some others your Honour appointed, are in other service.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

EDWARD MOTT.

To His Honour Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut.

P. S. HONOURED SIR: I should have wrote more, but this is all the paper that I can obtain. Would just mention, that I never disputed rank with Captain Buel, last year, as General Schuyler gave me an appointment soon after his arrival, which was above any single Captain in the Army, so that I never did duty with him.

EDWARD MOTT.

JOHN FOWLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, January 28, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: In doing a good natured action to oblige one of my customers, I have been unhappily drawn in to be suspected of being unfriendly to the country that gave me existence, although what I did was without any other design than to serve my neighbour, and, therefore, innocent; yet, as I get my livelihood by keeping a publick house, and as this matter of my having been suspected of being an enemy to my country, will become publick, and spread abroad, even among my customers and country friends, and they, not knowing my innocence, may avoid me, and, therefore, it may become prejudicial to my business; I, therefore, entreat it as a favour, that whenever your honourable Board shall be fully satisfied of my innocence in the matter, that you will be pleased to give me such certificate, for me to publish to the world, of your being so satisfied, as shall restore me to the good opinion of the publick, at least, that I may be left as I was found.

Which would greatly oblige, honoured sir, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

JOHN FOWLER.

To the Chairman of the Honourable Committee of Safety, for the Province of New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO CAPTAIN MANLY.

Cambridge, January 28, 1776.

SIR: I received your agreeable letter of the 26th instant, giving an account of your having taken and carried into Plymouth, two of the enemy's transports. Your conduct in engaging the eight-gun schooner, with so few hands as you went out with, your attention in securing your prizes, and your general good behaviour since you first engaged in the service, merits mine and your country's thanks.

You may be assured that every attention will be paid to any reasonable request of yours, and that you shall have the command of a stronger vessel of war; but, as it will take up some time before such a one can be fitted out, my desire is, that you continue in the Hancock, until the end of the cruise. When that is out you will come to Head-Quarters, and we will confer together on the subject of the other ship.

I wish you could engage men at Plymouth to make your complement at least forty strong. It would enable you to encounter the small tenders that may fall in your way, though I would rather have you avoid an engagement, until you have a ship that will place you upon a more equal footing with your enemy. I need not recommend to you to proceed again and pursue your good fortune.

I wish you could inspire the Captains of the other armed schooners under your command with some of your activity and industry. Cannot you appoint such stations for them, where they may have the best chance of intercepting supplies going to the enemy? They dare not disobey your orders, as it is mentioned in the instructions I have given to each of them, that they are to be under your command as Commodore; and, as such, I desire that you will give them such instructions in writing, as to you will appear proper for the good of the service.

I am, sir, wishing you a continuance of success, yours, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Commodore John Manly, of the Hancock, Armed Schooner.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO COMMITTEE OF NEWBURYPORT, MASSACHUSETTS.

Cambridge, January 28, 1776.

SIR: The great need this Army is in for good arms makes it necessary to endeavour to procure them in any place where his Excellency thinks they may be had without great inconvenience; he has commanded me, to beg your consent that the arms you was pleased to lend General Sullivan, on his last excursion to Portsmouth, may be sent to this camp, for which the appraised value will be cheerfully paid. Colonel Parsons will deliver you this, and has the General's instructions to send them to Cambridge, provided your honourable Committee have no objections to parting with them. When they know that it will be of the greatest service to the glorious cause we are engaged in, that these arms should be put into the hands of our soldiers, I dare say they will readily comply with his Excellency's request, and give Colonel Parsons an order for them, which will very much oblige the General.

I have the honour to be, &c.

To Jonathan Jackson, Esq., Chairman, &c.

[GENERAL WASHINGTON] TO THE COMMITTEE OF PORTSMOUTH, NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Cambridge, January 28, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Parsons has instructions from his Excellency to get an order from the Committee at Newburyport, for the delivery of two hundred and fifteen stand of arms, which General Sullivan ordered in his name should be delivered for the service on which he last went to Portsmouth. It is the General's request that these arms be delivered up to Colonel Parsons. I am, &c.

To ———, Esq., Chairman, &c.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM WATSON.

Cambridge, January 28, 1776.

SIR: Your letter to his Excellency of the 26th, is come to hand, with the papers found on board the Norfolk, and Happy-Return, transports, taken by Commodore Manly. You will please to libel them immediately, and the sooner they are brought to trial the more agreeable it will be to the General. You will take notice that the private property of the Captains and crews are to be carefully guarded for them, and that his Excellency approves much of your precaution in getting the ships to the wharf in order to secure the small articles from pillagers.

I hope the Harrison is out on her cruise, and wish she may make a successful one. The General writes by this conveyance to the Commodore. If he is in port you will please to give him the letter. Yours, &c.

To William Watson, Esq., Plymouth.

SUSSEX COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

Committee Chamber, January 29, 1776.

This Committee from tender feelings for their poor suffering and distressed brethren of the Borough of Norfolk, (who, from their small possessions, and daily labour, were enabled to support themselves, their wives, and tender infants,) are by the tyrannical, cruel, and destructive executioner of Ministerial vengeance, Lord Dunmore, and his banditti of Blacks, and Scotch Tories, and Jacobites, reduced to the most affecting wants of every necessary support of life, have resolved to exert themselves (in which they have the pleasure to find their constituents zealously joining them) in providing houses for the reception of as many poor people as they can, with a sufficient quantity of land to cultivate; to which the Committee, in the most affectionate manner, invite them, hoping thereby, in some measure, to alleviate anxiety, and remove their distresses, in being thus provided for by their brethren beyond the reach of Lord Dunmore's oppressive hand, and the dreadful effects of his nocturnal design, and robberies, declaring at the same time, that this invitation does not proceed from those base, ungenerous, and selfish views suggested by his Lordship, in his late publication, but from motives that his Lordship and his abettors appear to be entire strangers to.

AUGUSTINE CLAIBORNE, Chairman.

HANOVER COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, on Monday, the 29th of January, the following gentlemen were chosen Officers to the Company of Regulars to be raised in this County, viz: Richard Clough Anderson, Captain; John Anderson, First Lieutenant; William Bentley, Second Lieutenant, and Robert Tompkins, Ensign.

Extract from the Proceedings:

WILLIAM BENTLEY, Clerk.

JOHN HANCOCK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, January 29, 1776.

SIR: The Congress have received your letter of the 19th instant, and highly commend your prudence and zeal, in applying to the Governments of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, and Connecticut, to raise forces for the service of Canada at this exigency. They have fond hopes, by the zeal and alacrity of those Colonies, troops will be forwarded with such expedition as will not only succour our friends, but in some measure retrieve our loss, and put us in possession of Quebeck before our enemies can receive reinforcements.

The Congress have agreed to add the Massachusetts Regiment to the forces they at first destined for Canada; this is the more necessary, as it is now uncertain whether two battalions, as was expected, can be raised out of the troops in that country; but they do not, by this, mean to weaken your Army. They have, therefore, ordered that the three regiments you applied for from Massachusetts-Bay, New-Hampshire, and Connecticut, shall be exclusive of the thirteen wanted for the Army at Cambridge.

By the latest advices from England, it appears that Administration are determined to exert themselves, and send a considerable force against us next Spring, though, at the same time, they pretend to say that they will offer terms of accommodation, and mean only, by their armament, to enforce their terms. It behooves us, therefore, to be ready to receive them; for, should an accommodation take place, the terms will be severe, or favourable, in proportion to our ability to resist.

The Congress highly approve your sending General Lee to the assistance of New-York, as a measure judicious and necessary, and have also appointed three of their body to repair to New-York, and confer with General Lee and the Committee of Safety of New-York, on the subject of putting that Colony in a posture of defence.

General Prescott arrived here last Thursday, and is this day ordered into close confinement in the jail of this city. I must beg leave to refer you to the enclosed resolutions.

I send, by this express, commissions for the Massachusetts battalion, and the money ordered, to the Assembly.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO ASSEMBLY OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

Philadelphia, January 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress highly approve the prudence and zeal of the General, in applying to you and the other Colonies, to raise forces for the service of Canada in the present exigency; and, at the same time, highly commend the ready attention you have shown to his application, and the alacrity with which you undertook, and the expedition with which you proceed in the business. These they consider as additional proofs of your meritorious attachment to the common cause, and may produce signal advantages.

There is the greatest reason to hope that the speedy arrival of troops in Canada will not only repair the losses our troops have met with there, but, in all probability, put us in possession of Quebeck before our enemies can send reinforcements.

It is easy to perceive how much this will advance our cause, and disappoint our enemies. It is, therefore, the earnest desire of the Congress that you would continue to exert your utmost endeavours, with all possible expedition, to raise and forward both the regiment and matrosses. That no time may be lost, I am directed to forward to you blank commissions, and to inform you that twelve thousand five hundred dollars are drawn for, and will be sent you, for defraying the expenses of raising, equipping, and paying the men, which you will please to despatch by companies as fast as they can be got ready. The Congress have adopted the recommendation of your House to the General, respecting the arms of the soldiers, as you will perceive by the enclosed resolutions.

I would just observe that, important as the service in Canada is, it cannot be carried on without specie. It is, therefore, earnestly recommended to the several Legislatures on the Continent to collect whatever silver and gold they can, and inform Congress thereof, that they may send Continental bills in exchange for it. In this business I trust your zeal will not be wanting.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay.

PETER T. CURTENIUS TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, January 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your desire, I have inquired about raven's duck, and found some at Mr. Grant's, for which he asks five pounds ten shillings per piece, which is forty-five shillings per piece higher than I gave for the same sort last Summer. Should be glad to have your orders how much to purchase, as Mr. Grant has had an offer for the whole he has, which is about twenty-five pieces.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER T. CURTENIUS.

To the Committee of Safety.

P. S. Enclosed is a calculation which Mr. Grant sent me, by which it appears it costs four pounds one shilling and six pence per piece.

WILLIAM PALFREY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Stamford, January 29, 1776.

SIR: General Lee, being unfortunately visited with the gout or rheumatism, has directed me to enclose to your Excellency the copy of a letter he has just received, by express, from the President of the Continental Congress. General Lee would have wrote you, but the position of writing is so very painful that he hopes you will excuse him. Notwithstanding his illness, he is determined to go forward to-morrow in a litter, which he has ordered to be prepared for that purpose. He begs his compliments to Mrs. Washington and the family, to which we beg leave to add those of Mr. Byrd, and your Excellency's most obedient and humble servant,

WILLIAM PALFREY, Aid-de-camp.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read February 9, 1776.]

Albany, Monday, January 29, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday, at four o'clock, I had the honour to receive your despatches of the 20th instant.

Congress will perceive by the copy of General Washington's letter, which I had the honour to enclose you in my last, that a regiment is raising in the Massachusetts-Bay; and yesterday I received a letter from Colonel Fellows, who was to have raised and commanded a regiment in consequence of my consent given to the Committee of Berkshire. I hope my answer to that letter will prove satisfactory to Congress.

On Sunday, January 14, I wrote to General Wooster. The following is an extract of my letter:

"DEAR SIR: At six last night, Mr. Antill delivered me your despatches. It is much easier to conceive than to describe the distress it has occasioned me. In the gallant and amiable General Montgomery the Continent has suffered a vast loss. May Heaven graciously be pleased to extricate you out of the perilous situation you are in. At this distance it would be presumption in me to direct what measures should be taken; these can only be determined by events as they turn up. May God guide your councils and bless your operations.

"Expresses are already gone to Congress and General Washington. I have proposed to the latter, to detach three thousand men to your assistance by the way of Number Four, Onion-River, and Missisque-Bay. I have furnished Colonel Warner with money to engage all the men he possibly can, and to send them on to you without the least delay. I am in great hopes from that gentleman's zeal, that he will be able to procure men.

"As I have by repeated letters observed to Congress the necessity of sending troops immediately into Canada, it is probable that some are on their march from New-Jersey; the moment they arrive here, I shall push them forward, or conduct them myself, if my health will permit. I shall arrange matters in such a manner that I make no doubt they will arrive in Canada in six or seven days from this.

"I am very happy that you have issued orders not to let any men depart, although the term for which they are enlisted is expired. You may rest assured, sir, that a conduct so prudent, will meet with the fullest approbation.

"By all means secure a retreat for Colonel Arnold at Montreal; and should Carleton follow you there, as you may certainly expect succours, I do not doubt but you will suffer every hardship before you will give up the town. Our cause, sir, is just, and I trust that Divine Providence will dispel this untoward cloud, and that we shall again receive its smiles."

As I have no return of the arrangement made in Ca- nada, I cannot fill up the commissions; I sometime ago wrote to General Montgomery for it, and should probably have had it, had we been so happy as not to have lost him. I have reminded General Wooster of it, and am in hopes I shall soon receive the proper returns.

I am making every preparation in my power to facilitate the march of the troops into Canada. Biscuit is baking here, at Fort-George, and Ticonderoga; and I have had a quantity of the most portable pork boiled, to be used on the march. I am much put to it to procure a sufficient number felling-axes, but hope to receive some from New-England, to which I have sent.

Permit me to observe, that intrenching tools of every kind will be wanted in very considerable numbers, whether we do or do not possess ourselves of Quebeck in the course of the Winter.

The hint General Wooster, has given of sending Sutlers to Canada, is a very good one. If I can get any good men to go, I will venture to assist them, on proper security, with money out of the military chest here, to purchase the necessary articles, and let them repay it in Canada.

From all the inquiries I have made, I have reason to conclude, that the want of a small circulating medium greatly distresses our people in Canada. Perhaps it will have a good effect, and tend to introduce the circulation of all our paper currency in Canada, if Congress was to furnish some persons, such as may be depended upon, with ten thousand pounds in specie, and send them to Canada with twice or thrice that amount in small bills, none exceeding a dollar, and a great proportion of them of one shilling only. When a soldier receives his pay in Continental money, he might go to those persons and get small change, and if it was then promulgated that any holder of such small bills might immediately receive cash for them, and that being punctually complied with for a little time, their credit, I fancy, would be so well established, that very few more would be brought in. The expense in emitting these bills would, I conceive, be compensated to the publick by the wearing out of the bills. I am the rather induced to believe that this plan would have the effect I expect from it, as the bills emitted last Spring by the Committee of this County, and which were small, are not brought in for redemption, although the Committee have repeatedly advertised for them. Many of the bills should be one shilling and six pence, two shillings and six pence, and three shillings and six pence, as with these six pence may be paid, where no more is due, by changing.

The expense that arises by the officers that are prisoners is extremely high. I have desired them to pay the bills, and promised to repay as much as Congress should allow. In future I shall allow only fire-wood, candles, and lodgings. I shall order the expense that has attended them to be made out, and transmit it as soon as I can. The transportation of the clothing should be charged to them, as also that of such women as are above what each company is allowed. It is even a great burden that we are to furnish these with provisions.

The six Highland chiefs will leave this next Monday. The others whom the Tryon County Committee have sent down, appear to me to have no influence. I have desired that the charges against them should be reduced to writing. If they should appear frivolous, which I suspect to be the case, I will take security for their forthcoming whenever Congress shall please to direct it.

I am, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., &c., &c.

P. S. Mr. Trumbull has delivered me the enclosed this moment, and as none of the Connecticut people have been paid, a considerable sum will be wanted for that purpose. What I have still in hands may amount to about twenty-five thousand dollars.

P. S.

Sheffield, January 27, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 22d, this instant by Tymothy Edwards and Theodore Sedgwick, Esquires, I received, with the money for paying the men their bounty and the officers their advance pay.

Being fully apprized of the importance of getting men into Canada as soon as possible, I immediately directed the officers, nominated by the Committee of this County, to enlist the men with all speed, and, agreeable to your orders, gave them money to pay forty shillings, lawful, to each enlisted soldier, as a bounty; and I find, by the returns made before this day, about two hundred and eighty-six men have been enlisted, one hundred and ten of which, I am informed, have marched and joined to Colonel Warner's Regiment, who had received part or all of their bounty, from the money sent to me. The remainder, I have ordered to march immediately to Albany, with a part of the officers, there to receive further orders from yourself.

While I was proceeding in this matter as fast as possible, I received information from Colonel Williams (who was nominated to be the Lieutenant-Colonel of this regiment now raising) that General Washington had applied to the Assembly of this Colony, to raise a regiment of men from this County and the County of Hampshire, to march immediately into Canada, (the men to be enlisted for a year,) with which requisition the Assembly have complied, and said Colonel Williams has received a commission for Lieutenant-Colonel in that regiment; upon the receipt of which information, I thought it my duty to give you notice thereof immediately, that I may have your further orders upon this occasion, whether I shall proceed and endeavour to fill up my regiment, pay the men their bounty, and march them forward, as fast as may be, or whether I shall forbear enlisting more men?

The speediest information of your orders, by the bearer hereof, will much oblige your most humble servant.

JOHN FELLOWS.

To Major-General Schuyler.

P. S. I conclude there are a large number of men enlisted of which I have received no return, as yet. I, also, would inform you, that our Assembly have directed that three companies be raised from this County, as a part of the regiment which they have directed to be raised as aforementioned; and if my regiment is raised, I apprehend those three companies cannot be enlisted in this County. I, therefore, beg leave to propose to you, whether the men already enlisted had not better proceed under Colonel Williams, and join with the other regiment when it shall arrive at Canada, and no more be enlisted. If so, I myself, and Major Cady, may stay at home, and thereby save publick expense.

I write this with the advice of several gentlemen of the Committee of this County. Yours, &c., J. F.

Albany, half after ten o'clock, A. M., }
January 28, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of yesterday's date was this moment delivered to me. I thank you for the information it contains, and am happy to learn that you have already enlisted so considerable a number of men.

As the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay have ordered a regiment to be raised, and the men to be enlisted for a year, it will supersede the necessity of raising any more in consequence of my directions to you; but I do not wish that those already enlisted (who, I suppose, will not serve beyond the 15th of April.) should be considered as part of the regiment to be raised by virtue of the act or order of your Assembly, unless they would, also, engage for a year. I, therefore, hope they will march without delay, and the whole to be under the command of Major Cady, as Major-Commandant of the corps, unless you should think proper to take the command of them.

It is with infinite satisfaction that I learn the alacrity with which my countrymen step forth on this occasion; it will at once redound much to the honour of the persons who engage in this service, and those who have been active in promoting it, and, also, evince to our enemies that no obstacles can deter Americans from prosecuting their righteous cause.

Your zeal, sir, on this occasion, merits the thanks of your country: if mine are worth accepting, you have them, most sincerely, and I shall not fail of doing myself the pleasure to mention you and the respectable Committee of Berkshire to Congress in honourable terms.

I am, sir, with much respect, your most humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Colonel John Fellows.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, January 29, 1776.

SIR: I must ask your Excellency's pardon for omitting, in my last, some very material circumstances relative to the capture of Commodore Manly's last prizes. I had not, when I wrote, got an exact account of the matter, since which the Commodore tells me that he had taken the prizes, and had put his people on board them some time before the tender came to their assistance; that there were two other vessels from Nova-Scotia, with stock, in company with these ships, and that the whole fleet, with the tender, would have been taken, had it not been for the cowardice of one of our Continental armed vessels, who was very near them, but dared not engage, and who made the best of his way off.

Commodore Manly fought in very disadvantageous circumstances, not having more than sixteen of his own people on board; but then he received considerable assistance from his prisoners, more particularly from the Captains, who did as much as they dared do in such circumstances.

Your Excellency will please to direct me in what manner I shall conduct with these Captains, relative to what they brought with them on their own account, memorandum of which is enclosed. If these people are indulged to return to Plymouth to take care of their effects, (provided their private adventures are given them,) will it be any disadvantage to the publick? However, your Excellency will much oblige our people, particularly the people belonging to the armed vessels, if you will permit the baizes and checks to be stopped here, as they are greatly wanted to make them shirts.

Commodore Manly is now in our harbour; has been puzzled with the ice, with which we are now blocked up, but has received no damage.

The Harrison, Captain Dyar, is now in the ice, has lost an anchor and cable, but we hope to find them again; we are now cutting the ice, and hope to get him out without further damage.

I shall do every thing in my power to forward getting these vessels to sea, as a large number of ships, from England, are expected, with provisions, and but one of them is of any force.

Captain Morton, of the Artillery, the bearer of this, takes charge of the prisoners, Captains Hall and Grindall, who would have been sent forward before, had not the extreme cold weather prevented.

I am, most respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient, much obliged, very humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq.

Tuesday morning, eight o'clock.—The Hancock, Manly, and the Yankee, Burnes, are now under sail, bound on a cruise.

*Memorandum of Sundries, belonging to the Captains
HALL and GRINDALL, viz:*

Twelve pieces checked lining, cost 36*l.* 12*s.* 2*d.*; ten pieces red baize, cost 14*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.*; four pieces coarse lining, cost 6*l.* 1*s.* 4*d.*; two ullages Jamaica ruin; one hand-gun; twenty barrels of beef; eight ditto pork.

The above on board the ships Norfolk and Happy-Return, at Plymouth, January 30, 1776.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN AT BOSTON TO HIS FRIEND IN EDINBURGH, DATED JANUARY 29, 1776.

I imagine, by being so long of hearing from me, you must think I had forgotten my promise of writing you from this place, as, at leaving Scotland, I expected to have been in Jamaica long before this; but I had a very tedious passage out, having only got here the 23*d* of December, and, indeed, I thought myself very lucky I got in at all, as I lost the convoy upon the passage, and the Rebels have a good many vessels cruising about, that have taken several ships bound to this place; besides, there has been such blowing weather, that I believe there are a good many vessels drove off the coast; which will be obliged to winter in the West-Indies; however, there are so many got safe here, that both army and navy have plenty of salt provisions.

They were a little short of firing when I arrived, which was attended with no other inconvenience than the trouble of pulling down some of the Rebels' houses to burn, which has thinned them a little; but now we have got a large supply of coals, which it is expected will serve the remainder of the Winter.

We are so close shut up here, that we know very little of what is doing any where. Fresh provisions are very scarce; but I hope it will not be the case long, as there are more troops and transports expected very soon.

The General has detained most of the ships that came with provisions for the army, and the Admiral those that came with provisions for the navy; so that we make up a large fleet, I believe the finest ever seen here. I imagine they will find employment for us all in the Spring, as it is reported we are to have three different armies in the field. At present, we have nothing to do but keep ourselves as warm and merry as we can.

The Rebels have been very quiet ever since I arrived.

They gave a small alarm about a fortnight ago, which occasioned a little confusion, but was soon over. The officers have fitted up a play-house, and some of them had wrote a farce, called The Blockade of Boston. The first night it was to be acted the house was very full. The play being over, the curtain was hauled up for the entertainment to begin, when a Sergeant came in and told the officers the alarm guns were fired at Charlestown, which made no small stir in the house, every one endeavouring to get out as fast as possible; and immediately we heard a pretty smart firing of small arms. It being dark, and the rascals making a great huzzaing, I did not know what to make of it at first, but it was soon over, so that I went quietly to sleep about eleven o'clock, and next morning found all the mischief had been done was three or four men taken, who had been among the old ruins of Charlestown, a mill burnt down, and the company disappointed of their entertainment.

CAROLINE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

January 30, 1776.

The Committee of the County of Caroline, averse to rendering any person a publick spectacle of contempt, except for a flagrant breach of the General Association, and having once excused a certain Rodham Kenner, of the said County, for deviating from the rules prescribed by the Congress, now find themselves under the necessity of publishing to the world the infamous behaviour of the said Kenner, who, forgetting the former clemency of this Committee, has a second time violated the Association, by continuing to game unlawfully, and to entice others, first by making them drunk, to become partakers of his guilt. These circumstances being fully proved to the Committee, they would be forgetful of their duty, if they did not advise the people of their own County in particular, and of the Colony in general, to avoid all manner of dealings with the said Rodham Kenner, and to treat him in future as every enemy to American liberty deserves.

ANTHONY THORNTON, *Chairman pro tem.*SAMUEL HAWES, JUN., Clerk.

CHARLOTTE COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, held for Charlotte County, January 30, 1776:

The Reverend Thomas Johnston presented the following concessions to this Committee, expressing his contrition for his former behaviour; which were approved, and ordered to be published in the Virginia Gazette, viz:

"GENTLEMEN: My having drunk success to the British arms, in company with Mrs. Tankersly and Mr. Edmund Read, as well as having continued to deal with Mr. McConnico, a then violator of the Association, which gave offence to the good people of this County in general, and to you in particular, gives me real concern. However, I solemnly declare it was done inadvertently. All my dependence, my nearest and dearest connexions, are in this country, and I expect to share with the Americans in the present unhappy contest, whether the event proves good or bad. If the most unfeigned sorrow for having made use of an unguarded expression, joined to the most determined resolution of promoting the interest, happiness, and prosperity of America, (according to the best of my power and capacity,) can obtain your forgiveness, I shall then think myself extremely happy in being re-established in the good graces of my country.

THOMAS JOHNSTON.

To Mr. ALEXANDER PURDIE:

SIR: Please to insert the above in your paper at the request of the Committee of Charlotte.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM JAMESON, Clerk.

STEPHEN WEST TO MR. BURGESS.

Woodyard, January 30, 1776.

SIR: I wrote to you pretty fully from Fredericktown, to the care of Mr. Sprigg and Mr. Hall, and wrote also to those gentlemen. I hope you, and your spouse and family have been happily situated this Winter. I have just received a letter from your brother-in law, Captain Robinson, who is gone out Lieutenant in an armed vessel in the service of the Province. I shall give you his words: "I have another request to make you about a matter I am very anxious for, viz: that you will please to countenance my brother-in-law, Mr. Burgess; he is come over at an unlucky time for himself, as to what he primarily intended, but he is remarkably ingenious, and well versed in drawing and in military matters; he may be a very useful hand at this time, should there occur any thing in which he could be employed. I am confident his conduct would give satisfaction."

So far your brother. Now, sir, in conformity to his letter, I have wrote to the honourable Council of Safety at Annapolis. If you have any desire of being employed, it will be your best way, I think, to wait upon them and offer your service; and if you have interest enough with Mr. Hall, either to go with you or unto the Council of Safety in your behalf, I think it might be of service. The small acquaintance between us prevents my saying further. My respect for Isaiah and all his friends is sincere.

And I am, with very good regard, sir, your friend and servant,

STEPHEN WEST.

To Mr. Burgess, at Hagerstown.

P. S. If you come this way, I shall be glad to see you.

STEPHEN WEST TO DANIEL OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER.

Woodyard, January 30, 1776.

MY GOOD SIR: Having occasion for some money this week, I have sent up my son with the agreement, order, and certificate, relative to my powder and lead, with the amount. I shall be much obliged to you for your favour in despatching him, as he proposes to return the same day. I have wrote to the honourable Council of Safety upon this and other matters. From my agreement with the Committee of Secrecy, the Treasurer, I think, ought to pay me at once; but you know best whether you or your clerk must first give an order. What is the highest exchange you give for good bills? Please tell Willy. I enclose the papers.

I am, with sincere respect, your faithful and obedient servant,

STEPHEN WEST.

To the Honourable Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

STEPHEN WEST TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Woodyard, January 30, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I think it my duty to acquaint you that I have received a letter from Captain Isaiah Robinson, Lieutenant of the Hornet, Captain Stone, dated off Annapolis, desiring me to recommend him to your favour. I know him to be a very honest, sensible, faithful man; it will be seen how he behaves in his present station. He writes to me on another subject. I shall give you his words:

"I have another request to make you about a matter that I am very anxious for, viz: that you will please to countenance my brother-in-law, Mr. Burgess; he is come over at an unlucky time for himself, as to what he primarily intended, but as he is remarkably ingenious, and well versed in drawing, and in military matters, he may be a very useful hand at this time, should there occur any thing in which he could be employed. I am confident his conduct would give satisfaction."

So far Captain Robinson; and as to the gentleman in question, Mr. Burgess, I have seen him; he is a sensible, clever, middle-aged man, from Ireland; brought her wife and children, and is now at Hagerstown. His intention was for Fort-Chartres, on the Illinois, in the view of a grant there, where he has friends. I believe he is both a sea and land officer—perhaps of the Marines. He appears to me to be a man of great spirit and understanding; and, if he was to engage in the American service, would be of use. Captain Stull, or some of the officers there, might sound him, but I would rather wish that the honourable Council themselves were to examine him. I enclose a letter to him, which may be forwarded or not, as you judge proper.

Last night, about eight o'clock, came here a drummer, engaged by Colonel Murdock for Captain Sims's Company, on foot. He had a letter for Colonel Sims, and being resolute to proceed, I sent a servant and horses with him to Colonel Sims.

The man informed me that one of the Minute officers from Alexandria had wrote to his wife that Lord Dunmore was on his way up to Alexandria, and would be up as soon as the river permitted, therefore desired her to remove; that thirty wagons were constantly employed at Alexandria, removing their effects, &c. Colonel Sims wrote me late last night, that John Murdock, from Georgetown, wrote him by the drummer that Dunmore was above or about St. Mary's, in his way up to Potomack, and that they were there preparing to receive him; but whether the there related to Georgetown or St. Mary's, I cannot tell; possibly Georgetown. This intelligence I thought it my duty to communicate.

When I was at Annapolis, in December, I received an order from the Committee of Secrecy to keep what powder and lead I had for their use, and they took an obligation from me so to do till they ordered a person to view it, when I was to have an order for my money. The Convention ordered Colonel Sims for that purpose, who sent here Messrs. Crawford and Lee. They saw it, took samples, sent them to Annapolis, were proved, and found good. Since then, the same gentlemen came here upon some disturbance on the Potomack, and desired, in the name of the Committee of Observation, that for safety it might be removed, under their inspection, to Marlborough. Accordingly, the next day I examined and weighed it all; had it put into good tight barrels, well coopered, carefully packed with hay, in trunks, well corded, and sent to Marlborough, according to the gentlemen's directions. There the whole lies ready for removal, and I desire to be paid, for which reason I send the necessary papers and authorities. I have an immediate occasion for the money, or I should not, just now, have sent. I apprehend the trunks and cording are absolutely necessary for the safe-keeping and transportation, but if thought otherwise, I will very readily keep them. I have been very exact and careful in this business, which I hope the honourable Council will approve of.

At a time when there is so much to be done as I think would employ every zealous man, I wonder to see so little stirring hereabouts, and my own busy head and fingers without a task—it is a very happy circumstance for me at this time, and I rejoice that matters are in other and abler hands. My good wishes and endeavours shall never be wanting on any occasion.

With the greatest esteem and respect, I am, honourable gentlemen, your most faithful and obedient servant,

STEPHEN WEST.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

P. S. Mr. Crawford this day examined the powder and saw the lead weighed, of which he has given a certificate annexed to this order of the Committee of Secrecy. My son will wait on you, and receive the money, and take in my obligation of delivering, if necessary. S. W.

ROBERT ALEXANDER TO THE COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF MARYLAND.

Philadelphia, January 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You have, enclosed, two resolutions of Congress, one respecting the collector of gold and silver for the pay of the troops in Canada, the other on the case of Mr. Juge, referred to Congress by the Convention of your Province.

In consequence of the resolve of the Convention, we made application to Congress to grant permission to consume the tea imported before the 1st of February last. The application was referred to a Committee of the Whole House, where the subject was debated for two days, and overruled by a majority of seven Colonies to five, (the last New-York, Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland;) and a report made by the Chairman that it was inexpedient to alter the Association. This report now lies on the table.

The loss of General Montgomery, with the particulars of his unfortunate attack on Quebeck, you will have heard. Measures are now taken by Congress which, I trust, will reduce Carleton and his few troops before the end of February. Had one-third of the succour been sent Montgomery, in all human probability the life of that brave and gallant officer had been saved, and Quebeck long ere this in our possession.

The instructions of the Convention are come to hand, but not as yet laid before Congress. I am much pleased with them. They entirely coincide with my judgment and that line of conduct which I had determined to pursue. The Farmer, and some others, to whom in confidence they were shown, say that they breathe that spirit which ought to govern all publick bodies, firmness tempered with moderation.

I am, gentlemen, with respect, your humble servant,
ROBERT ALEXANDER.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

GEORGE LEE TO COLONEL JOSHUA BEALL.

Gisborough, January 30, 1776.

SIR: Had I known on Sunday evening, when I received it, that the enclosed commission was intended for the Upper Battalion in this County, I should have then returned it. I was nominated by the officers of the companies of which the Lower Battalion is composed as a Field-Officer of that battalion; and as the gentlemen thought me unworthy of a commission there, I beg leave to return the one they sent me. I never aspired after a commission any where; but as the gentlemen officers aforesaid thought proper to mention me in their return, I should have done all in my power to render them satisfaction, had I been appointed.

I hope my refusal to act under this commission may not be construed into any disrespect shown to you and those under your command, as I can assure you nothing of the sort is intended.

I am, respectfully, your humble servant,
GEORGE LEE.

To Colonel Joshua Beall.

BERKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

Reading, January 30, 1776.

The Committee of Berks County being justly alarmed at the attempts of the enemies of America, in the different parts of this Province, to depreciate the Continental Currency, and having received information that Gaius Dickenson, a publick Friend, has been one of the instruments in propagating so fatal a measure, the Committee, being determined to support the said Currency, sent for the said Gaius Dickenson, who, being brought before them, made the following Declaration, which was voted satisfactory:

"Whereas, I, the subscriber, have unfortunately been guilty of endeavouring to depreciate the Continental Currency, but being now convinced and satisfied that such a conduct is highly unbecoming the duty of an American, and tends immediately to obstruct the measures calculated to preserve the liberties of this country from the cruel and unrelenting oppressions of the British Court, do most sincerely acknowledge the heinousness of such offence, do beg pardon of my offended countrymen, and do also hereby solemnly engage and promise not to be guilty of a like offence in future, but to conform to such measures as shall be adjudged necessary for the preservation of the rights of America, trusting and confiding that nothing will be expected from me inconsistent with the religious principles of the Society with which I profess. And as a further atonement for my misconduct, I request this acknowledgment to be made publick, in hopes it may deter others from committing the like offence.

"Witness my hand, this thirtieth day of the first Month, in the year of our Lord 1776.

"GAIUS DICKENSON."

At the same time, one William Gilliland, who had been some time in confinement by order of the Committee, was brought up and discharged, after subscribing the following Acknowledgment of his misconduct:

"Whereas, I, the subscriber, have been so very wicked and abandoned as to speak at sundry times disrespectfully of the honourable the Continental Congress, and also have endeavoured to depreciate their Currency, for which detestable conduct I have, deservedly, been confined in the jail of this County by the Committee of said County, but being now fully convinced of the heinousness and horrid tendency of such conduct, do hereby, in the fullest manner, most sincerely beg pardon of my justly incensed countrymen, and do promise hereafter never to be guilty of the like, but in all instances to conform to such rules and regulations as may be instituted by that very respectable body for the preservation of our invaluable, but invaded, rights and liberties; and do further request that this my acknowledgment may be made publick, that others may be deterred from following my shameful and wicked practices.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, this thirtieth day of January, in the year of our Lord 1776.

"WILLIAM GILLILAND."

By order of the Committee:

MARK BYRD, Chairman.

SAMUEL TUCKER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Road January 31, 1776.]

Trenton, January 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was last Saturday in Burlington; went to the Barracks to take a view of that part of Colonel Maxwell's Battalion, which I found in want of many necessities, which must be provided for them before they can march. They are really, generally, likely men. On examining, I found the four companies had arms about sufficient for one. On my return, I received, per Captain Scott, the four thousand dollars granted by Congress; on which applied to Colonel Maxwell, and informed him that any of his Captains might now be furnished with money to purchase arms for their company. The Colonel replied, it was now too late, that his battalion was under marching orders, unless the arms could be got at Philadelphia, to which place he would immediately go for that purpose, and to whom, for further information, I must beg leave to refer you.

I called at Bordentown, and endeavoured to procure quarters for the officers who are prisoners in this town, but was disappointed, for I could neither hire a house nor get them boarded on any terms in that town. So that, if Congress are determined to remove them from this town, which to me appears undoubtedly right, for too many reasons for me to enumerate.

I shall, if well, set off for New-Brunswick to-morrow morning, to meet our Provincial Congress, and shall pay due attention to your several letters and the resolutions therein enclosed, in particular the officers' baggage directed to be forwarded, &c.

If a quantity of arms are to be got, I have desired Colonel Maxwell to call on me for money to pay for them. I must beg leave to refer you to the Colonel for further particulars; and believe that I am, with great sincerity, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

To the Honourable the Congress of the Colony of New-York.

The humble Petition of sundry of the Militia of MARBLETOWN, in the County of ULSTER, sheweth :

That some time past they were formed into a company, consisting of about one hundred men, and pursuant to the resolves of the Congress, chose their officers, of which Cornelius E. Wynkoop was Captain, who accordingly had their commissions from the honourable Congress.

That since their being commissioned, the said Captain hath been promoted to be a Major, by which there is now a vacancy of the Captain's post in this company. That since the vacancy happened, we have requested election to fill up said vacancy; but the Committee of Marbletown have denied us the privilege of voting in a Captain, and appointed three of the Committee of Marbletown, to advertise, and call the company together, which accordingly was done, and requested the opinion of the company in this manner, to wit: That if the majority of the company were for choosing an Ensign, and the Subaltern officers to be preferred, they would allow election for an Ensign, but if the majority were for choosing a new Captain, then to allow them no election, and requested their opinion in this manner, whether they chose a new Ensign, and the Subaltern officers preferred, or whether they chose a new Captain? and the majority was for a new Captain, fifty-nine to twenty. We, therefore, pray the directions of this House therein, and we, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

WILLIAM BEDLOW TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

January 30, 1776.

SIR: I have taken the liberty of enclosing to you my accounts with the honourable Provincial Congress of New-York, as a Commissioner of Fortifications, at the rate the honourable House fixed the same, and beg you will lay the same before the Committee of Safety, humbly requesting they will favour me with an order for the amount. My health being restored, I propose to return to the fort in a day or two, and shall be glad to receive any orders the honourable Board may have to give me.

I am, with respect, sir, your humble servant,

WILLIAM BEDLOW.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress for the Colony of New-York, convened in the City of New-York.

The Memorial of the subscribers, being non-Commissioned Officers of the First Battalion of Minute-Men, of the City of New-York, in behalf of themselves and the Privates of said Battalion, humbly sheweth :

That the memorialists, for the defence of their invaluable rights and privileges, formed themselves into different companies, under different officers, whose commands they have at all times with cheerfulness obeyed.

That sometime after they had formed themselves into different companies, the companies to which they severally belonged were formed into one battalion, by the style and title of the First Battalion of the Independent Companies.

That after they had so formed themselves into a battalion, Field-Officers were appointed. That after the appointment of Field-Officers, pursuant to an order or recommendation of the honourable the Continental Congress, and of the honourable the Provincial Convention, for this Colony, they jointly and severally became Minute-Men.

That agreeable to their orders, as Minute-Men they have at all times been ready, and have actually turned out to do their duty as such, both by day and night, when so required to do by this honourable body.

That the memorialists have been at great expense, and loss of time, in equipping themselves pursuant to the aforesaid recommendations. That besides the loss of time, the expenses they have incurred in the purchase of regimentals, arms, ammunition, and accoutrements, is much more than their circumstances can bear.

That the memorialists have been informed, that this honourable Convention intend putting them on pay, to do the duty of soldiers in defending this Colony.

That the memorialists have already been at a great deal of expense and trouble in turning out as Minute-Men, for which they have not received any reward. That the memorialists are ready and willing to continue and remain in the service of their country, as Minute-Men, provided they are paid for their former services, and are allowed a sufficient pay, to enable them to do themselves and their country justice, and that their duty be confined to the city and County of New-York, only; many of them having wives and families, who they would choose to defend, together with their country, and think the proper place for them to do duty is in this city and County only, where their nearest and dearest friends and relations are.

Your memorialists, therefore, humbly pray, that this honourable body will take their case into your most serious consideration, and enable them to receive such reward as their former services entitle them to; and also, to put them on such footing, and suffer them to remain, and do duty in defence of their country, and of this city in particular, in this city and County only.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read February 9, 1776.—Referred to Mr. Chase, Mr. S. Adams, Mr. Penn, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Edward Rutledge.]

Cambridge, January 30, 1776.

SIR: Your favours of the 6th and the 20th instant I received yesterday, with the several resolves of Congress alluded to, for which I return you my thanks. Knowing the great importance Canada will be of to us in the present interesting contest, and the relief our friends there stand in need of, I should be happy, were it in my power, to detach a battalion from this camp, but it cannot be done. On the 19th instant I had the honour to write you, which will fully convey the resolutions of a Council of War, and the sentiments of the General Officers here, as to the propriety and expediency of sending troops from these lines, for the defence of which we have been, and now are obliged to call in the Militia, to which I beg leave to refer you. You may rest assured, that my endeavours and exertions shall not be wanting to stimulate the Governments of Connecticut and New-Hampshire to raise and forward reinforcements as fast as possible, nor in any other instance that will promote the expedition.

I shall, in obedience to the order of Congress, though interdicted by General Hove, propose an exchange of Governour Skene for Mr. Lovell and family, and shall be happy to have an opportunity of putting this deserving man (who has distinguished his fidelity and regard to his country to be too great for persecution and cruelty to overcome) in any post agreeable to his wishes and inclination.

I do not know that there is any particular rank annexed to the office of Aid-de-camp; generally, they are captains, and rank as such; but higher rank is often given on account of particular merit, and particular circumstances. Aids to the King have the rank of Colonels. Whether any distinction should be made between those of your Commander-in-chief and the other Generals, I really know not. I think there ought.

You may rely that Connolly had instructions concealed in his saddle. Mr. Eustice, who was one of Lord Dunmore's family, and another gentleman who wishes his name not to be mentioned, saw them cased in tin, put in the tree, and covered over. He, probably, has exchanged his saddle, or withdrew the papers when it was mended, as you conjecture. Those that have been discovered are sufficiently bad, but I doubt not of the others being worse, and containing more diabolical and extensive plans. I hope he will be taken proper care of, and meet with rewards equal to his merits.

I shall appoint officers in the places of those which are in Canada, as I am fully persuaded they will wish to continue there, for making our conquest complete in that quarter; I wish their bravery and valour may be attended with the smiles of fortune.

It gives me great pleasure to hear of the measures Congress are taking for manufacturing powder. I hope their endeavours will be crowned with success. I too well know and regret the want of it. It is scarcely possible to describe the disadvantages an army must labour under, when not provided with a sufficient supply of this necessary. It may seem strange, that after having received about eleven tons, added to about five tons which I found here, and no general action has happened, that we should be so deficient in this article, and require more. But you will please to consider, besides its being in its nature subject to waste, and whilst the men lay in bad tents, was unavoidably damaged by severe and heavy rains, (which could not have been prevented, unless it had been entirely withdrawn from them), and attack hazarded against us without ammunition in their hands,) that the armed vessels, our own occasional firings, and some small supplies I have been obliged to afford the seaport towns threatened with destruction, to which may be added the supply to the Militia, and going off of the old troops, have occasioned, and ever will, a large consumption of it, and waste, in spite of all the care in the world. The King's troops never have less than sixty rounds a man in their possession, independent of their stores. To supply an army of twenty thousand in this manner, would take near four hundred barrels, allowing nothing for stores, artillery, &c. I have been always afraid to place more than twelve or fifteen rounds at a time in the hands of our men, lest, any accident happening to it, we should be left destitute and be undone. I have been thus particular, not only to show our poverty, but to exculpate myself from even a suspicion of unnecessary waste.

I shall inform the Paymaster-General of the resolution of Congress respecting his drafts, and the mode and amount of them.

The Companies at Chelsea and Malden are, and have always been regimented.

It was not my intention to replace, with Continental troops, the independent Companies at Hingham, Weymouth, and Braintree; these places are exposed, but not more so than Cape-Ann, Beverly, Salem, Murblehead, &c., &c., &c.

Is it the intention of Congress that the officers of the Army should pay postage? They are not exempted by the resolve of the 9th instant.

The Congress will be pleased, I have no doubt, to recollect that the five hundred thousand dollars now coming, are but little more than enough to bring us up to the first day of this month, that to-morrow will be the last of it, and by their resolves the troops are to be paid monthly.

I wish it was in my power to furnish Congress with such a General as they desire to send to Canada. Since the unhappy reverse of our affairs in that quarter, General Schuyler has informed me that though he had thoughts of declining the service before, he would now act.

My letter of the 11th, will inform them of General Lee's being at New-York. He will be ready to obey their orders should they incline to send him; but if I am not greatly deceived, he, or some other spirited, able officer, will be wanted there in the Spring, if not sooner, as we have undoubted intelligence that General Clinton has sailed with some troops; the reports of their number are various, from between four hundred and five hundred to nineteen companies of Grenadiers and Light Infantry. It is also imagined that the regiments which were to sail the 1st of December, are intended for that place or Virginia. General Putnam is a most valuable man and a fine executive officer, but I do not know how he would conduct in a separate department; he is a younger Major-General than Mr. Schuyler, who, as I have observed, having determined to continue in service, will, I expect, repair into Canada. A copy of my letter to him on this and other subjects, I enclose you, as it will explain my motives for not stopping the regiments from these Governments.

When Captain Cochran arrives I will give him every assistance in my power, in obedience to the orders of Congress, but I fear it will be the means of laying up our own vessels, as these people will not bear the distinction; should this be the consequence, it will be highly prejudicial to us, as we sometimes pick up their provision vessels, and may continue to distress them in this way. Last week Captain Manly took a ship and a brig bound to Boston, from Whitehaven, with coals, chiefly, and some potatoes for the army. I have, for his great vigilance and industry, appointed him Commodore of our little squadron, and he now hoists his flag on board the schooner Hancock.

I congratulate you upon the recovery of Smith, and am exceedingly glad to hear of the measures Congress are taking for the general defence of the Continent. The clouds thicken fast; where they will burst I know not, but we should be armed at all points.

I have not succeeded in my application to those Governments for arms; they have returned for answer, that they cannot furnish any. Whether I shall be more lucky in the last resource left me in this quarter, I cannot determine, not having received returns from the officers sent out to purchase from the people. I greatly fear that but very few will be procured in this way, as they are exceedingly scarce, and but a small part of what there are fit for service; when they make their report, you shall be informed.

The Quartermaster-General has just received from General Schuyler clothing for the soldiery, amounting to about one thousand seven hundred pounds, York currency. It has come very seasonably, as they are in great want, and will contribute a little to their relief.

Since writing the above I saw Mr. Eustice, and mentioning that nothing had been found in the tree of Connolly's saddle, he told me that there had been a mistake in the matter, that the instructions were artfully concealed in the two pieces of wood which are on the mail pillow of his portmanteau saddle; that by order of Lord Dunmore, he saw them contrived for the purpose, the papers put in, and first covered with tin, and over that with a waxed canvass cloth. He is so exceedingly pointed and clear in his information, that I have no doubt of its being true. I could wish them to be discovered, as I think they contain some curious and extraordinary plans.*

In my letter of the 24th instant, I mentioned the arrival of thirteen of our Caughnawaga friends; they honoured me with a talk to-day, as did three of the tribe of the St. John's and Passamaquoddy Indians, copies of which I beg

* At Fredericktown, I was told that I need not expect to get clear, for I was a noted friend to Britain, and they had long endeavoured to get me in their power.

Here we were stripped and searched again, and examined separately before the Committee, where one of the most illiberal, inveterate, and violent Rebels, named Samuel Chase, (son of a respectable and very worthy clergyman of this Province,) a lawyer and a member of the Congress, presided.

At this place, we were not a little alarmed lest they should discover our instructions, papers, &c., as they examined every thing so strictly as to take our saddles to pieces, and take out the stuffing, and even rip open the soles of our boots, in vain, for the object of their search was not found, although they so frequently handled what contained it. However, by some neglect of Colonel Connolly's servant, an old torn piece of paper was found in his portmanteau, which discovered some part of our design; and then Colonel Connolly, to prevent our falling immediate sacrifices to a Frankish mob, acknowledged our commissions. The servant, however, who was faithful to his trust, being allowed to go at large from the first of our confinement, took care to destroy the mail pillow-sticks, containing the papers, commissions, and instructions, which we dreaded so much being discovered, as soon as he could effect it with safety, which put an end to our anxiety and alarms on that account.—Smith's Tour.

leave to enclose you. I shall write General Schuyler respecting the tender of service made by the former, and not to call for their assistance unless he shall at any time want it, or be under the necessity of doing it, to prevent their taking the side of our enemies.

I had the honour of writing you on the 19th November, and then informed you of having engaged two persons to go to Nova-Scotia, on the business recommended in your letter of the 10th, and, also, that the state of the Army would not then admit of a sufficient force being sent for carrying into execution the views of Congress respecting the dock-yards, &c.

I would now beg leave to mention, that if the persons sent for information should report favourably of the expediency and practicability of the measure, that it will not be in my power to detach any men from these lines; the situation of our affairs will not allow it. I think it would be advisable to raise them in the eastern parts of this Government. If it is attempted, it must be by people from the country.

A Colonel Thompson, a member of the General Court, from the Province of Maine, and who is well spoken of by the Court, and a Captain O'Brien, have been with me; they think the men necessary may be easily engaged there, and the measure practicable, provided there are not more than two hundred British troops at Halifax. They are willing and ready to embark in the matter, upon the terms mentioned in their plan, which I enclose you. I would wish you to advert to the considerations inducing them to the expedition, as I am not without apprehension, should it be undertaken upon their plan, that the innocent and guilty will be involved in one common ruin. I presume they do not expect to receive more than five or ten thousand pounds, mentioned in their scheme, and to be at every expense. If we had men to spare, it might be undertaken for less than either, I conceive. Perhaps, if Congress do not adopt their proposition, they will undertake to raise men for that particular purpose, which may be disbanded as soon as it is effected, and upon the same terms that are allowed the Continental troops in general.

Whatever may be the determination of Congress upon the subject, you will please to communicate it to me immediately, for the season most favourable for the enterprise is advancing fast, and we may expect, in the Spring, that there will be more troops there, and the measure be more difficult to execute.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble servant,
 GEORGE WASHINGTON.
 To the Honourable John Hancock.

The Talk of sundry Sachems and Warriors of the CAUGHNAWAGA NATION, with His Excellency General WASHINGTON, the 31st JANUARY, 1776.

Jean Baptist or Ogaghragighte, the Chief, present:

We were sent by the Five Tribes of Canada Indians, consisting of the Caughnawagas, &c., &c., to see General Schuyler, at Albany, and then to come to you, to inquire into the cause of the quarrel between the people of England and our brothers in this country.

This is a treaty of peace, entered into between General Schuyler, &c., and our people, and we shall be very glad if you will put your name to it, and certify that you like it, and the promise mentioned in it. [This being done.]

We are very glad that a firm peace is now made between us and our brothers. We now look upon ourselves to be free, and like our brothers of New-England. The rest of our people staid at home, to take care of our Castle and publick concerns, and sent us to do this work, which they will abide by, and hold as strong as if they had been all here.

I am now in my own country, where I was born, [being a New-Englander taken prisoner in his infancy,] and want liberty to raise men to fight for its defence. We wish that you would give us a letter to General Schuyler, and inform him that if he wants men to call upon us, and we will join him.

Another of the Chiefs:

St. Luke La Corne is a very bad man, and we shall be very glad if he was sent from Canada; he is always making mischief there.

A Talk of one of the St. JOHN'S TRIBE, attended by two of the PASSAMAQUODDY INDIANS, with His Excellency General WASHINGTON, JANUARY 31, 1776.

We are very glad to see you, and that we have met our Caughnawaga friends here. The English people are mad, and very cross, and want us to fight against the New-England people. God is on the side of our brothers, and they will beat them. There is a Providence in our meeting our Caughnawaga friends at this time, who have come so far from Canada.

We want to go home quick, to tell our friends what we have seen and done here, and next Spring many of our Nation will come and help the New-England people.

We are in much want of powder to hunt with. The old English people will not let us have any, unless we will fight against our brothers and countrymen.

PLAN PROPOSED BY COLONEL THOMPSON AND CAPTAIN O'BRIEN.

For the expedition purposed, one thousand men including officers, four armed vessels, and eight transports, the men to be raised at the Eastward, the fleet to be made up at Machias, and then proceed to Windsor, captivate the Tories, make all the proselytes we can, and then proceed to Halifax. If possible, destroy the King's dock-yard, and town, if thought proper. It may be undertaken for five thousand pounds, lawful money, and all that can be procured from the Tories, or ten thousand, and the one-half of what is taken from them. At Windsor, we understand, there is abundance of goods, which is the next capital town to Halifax. We are lately informed that there is not to exceed two hundred British troops in Halifax.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Cambridge, January 26, 1776.

(Parole, Detroit.)

(Countersign, Springfield.)

The Captains, or commanding officers of the Militia Companies, are to have their pay abstracts ready by the first of February, in order for payment, the General having borrowed as much money as will answer this purpose, rather than suffer them to return without. In making up the pay abstracts the following method is to be observed: Upon one side of an entire sheet of paper is to be the roll, (or names of the officers and men of the whole company,) on the other side (or back of this) is to be the pay abstract, in the usual form; at the foot of the abstract is to be a deduction of the money which has been advanced to any of the companies, and proof annexed of the justice of the demand; this being necessary for the General's satisfaction in drawing the warrants.

The Captains, &c., are to be particularly careful not to charge pay for any of their men who have enlisted into any of the regiments, after such enlistment took place, as the pay of those men will be drawn by the Colonel of the regiment they are now in, or respectively belong to. The form of the oath and warrant (as it would take too much time to draw the whole at Head-Quarters) may be had at the Adjutant-General's office, for each Captain to copy.

The New-Hampshire Militia are to be allowed (by the Commissary) one penny a mile, coming and going, in lieu of rations, as this allowance has already been made by the Massachusetts Government to their Militia.

Brigadier-General Thomas, with the three Colonels of his brigade, now at Roxbury, to wit: Learned, Bailey, and Ward, are to repair to Head-Quarters, to-morrow by eleven o'clock, to have the commissions for those regiments issued.

As the General is consenting to, and desirous of the Militia drawing the same pay as the Continental troops, the officers of those companies are hereby informed, that since the first of January, their pay will be the same as those officers of equal rank upon the new establishment, but before that date no more than what was drawn under the old establishment can be allowed them; of this, they are to take particular notice, that no mistake may happen.

When the Militia are discharged, the Colonels, or commanding officers of the regiments, with whom they have done duty, are to take especial care that every ounce of ammunition is received from them, (belonging to the publick,) as also such men as joined the regiments for a month. If any man attempts to carry off a single grain of ammunition, not known to be his own, he will be pursued, brought back and severely punished.

The Colonels, or commanding officers of regiments, are requested to buy any good arms, which the Militia may voluntarily incline to sell; they are also to make out pay abstracts for those men who joined their regiments for the month of January; confining it to that month, that warrants may issue accordingly.

Brigadier-General Heath, with the Colonels of his Brigade, to attend at Head-Quarters to-morrow for commissions to be filled up.

Some doubts having arisen amongst the Militia Companies, whether the two Subalterns are to be paid as Lieutenants, or as Lieutenant and Ensign, the General informs them that he cannot (where there are only two Subalterns to a company) consider the youngest of them as entitled to more than Ensign's pay, as they were all the last campaign, notwithstanding they are denominated Second Lieutenants, and desires the rolls may be made out accordingly.

The Colonel, or commanding officer of each regiment, is to make out pay abstracts for the month of January, and lodge them with the Adjutant-General, that proper settlements may be made. In doing this, they are to be exceedingly careful (by causing proper inquiry to be made into the matter of the Militia Captains) to prevent any mistakes happening with respect to the men, who have been enlisted by any of their officers out of the Militia Companies; that in the first place they may have their pay secured to them, and in the next, that it may not be doubly drawn.

Brigadier-General Spencer is to attend at Head-Quarters to-morrow, with the Colonels, or commanding officers of the regiments of his brigade, in order to obtain the commissions for their officers.

Richard Thompson, of Captain Nutting's Company, in Colonel Prescott's Regiment, tried at a late General Court-Martial for "theft and desertion," is found guilty of both those crimes, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes for each, and mulcted twenty-four shillings and eight pence out of his pay, twelve shillings thereof to be paid to the prosecutor, Samuel Keys, and the rest to the persons who brought the prisoner back to camp.

The General approves the above sentence, and orders it to be executed, at such time and place as the commanding officer of the regiment shall think proper.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LEE.

Cambridge, January 30, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you the 23d instant, and then informed you that General Clinton had gone upon some expedition with four or five hundred men. There is good reason to believe that Tryon has applied for some troops, and that he would join them with a great number of inhabitants, so that you will see the necessity of your being decisive and expeditious in your operations in that quarter.

The Tories should be disarmed immediately, though it is probable that they may have secured their arms on board the King's ships, until called upon to use them against us. However, you can seize upon the persons of the principals. They must be so notoriously known, that there will be little danger of your committing mistakes; and happy should I be if the Governour could be one of them.

Since writing the above, your favour of the 24th came to hand, with the sundry enclosures, which I have with attention perused, and very much approve of your conduct.

I sincerely wish that the letter you expect to receive from Congress may empower you to act conformable to your own and my sentiments, on this occasion. If they should order differently, we must submit, as they, doubtless, will have good reasons for what they may determine on.

The Congress desire I should send an active General to Canada. I fancy, when they made the demand that they did not think General Schuyler would continue in that station, which he has given me to understand, by some late letters from him, that he would. Should they not approve of the New-York expedition, and think another General necessary for the Northern Department, it is probable they will fix on you to take the command there. I should be sorry to have you removed so far from this scene, but, if the service there requires your presence, it will be a fine field for the exertion of your admirable talents.

There is nothing new here. Let me hear often from you, and believe me, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Lee.

GEORGE MASON AND JOHN GALTON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Fairfax County, Va., January 31, 1776.

SIR: Being empowered and directed by the Committee of Safety for this Colony to build two row-galleys, one to carry a twenty-four, and the other an eighteen-pounder, and provide three armed cutters for the protection of Potomack-River, we think it proper to inform your Board that this measure will be carried into execution with all possible expedition, and that we hope to have your co-operation in adopting some similar plan for the same purpose.

We beg the favour of an answer by the first opportunity, and are, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servants,

GEORGE MASON,
JOHN GALTON.

To the Honourable the President of the Council of Safety.

Baltimore-Town, January 31, 1776.

SIR: As we are desirous of knowing what number of muskets are in the hands of the Militia in your brigade, either belonging to the publick or to individuals, we request that you will furnish an account of them as soon as you conveniently can, distinguishing to what companies they respectively belong, and those which are good and serviceable from what are unfit for use; and that you recommend it to, and earnestly admonish those of your Militia, whose guns are out of repair, when circumstances will admit of it, to have them immediately put into good order; but, that if the owners of any such guns cannot, from their poverty, repair them, and they are only defective in the locks, that you have the same repaired and rendered fit for service at the publick expense.

Writing immediately to the Colonels and other inferior officers we recommend, as the best method of gaining information in the above particulars.

We are, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servants,

D. OF ST. T. JENIFER,
CHARLES CARROLL, Bar.,
JOHN HALL,
JAMES TILGHMAN.

Philadelphia, January 31, 1776.

Whereas, I, William Jarret, of Horsham Township, Philadelphia County, have refused Continental Currency, and was led thereto from an opinion of its value and legality, but, on mature consideration, and being showed the resolves of Congress, am fully of opinion such money is both legal and of equal value with any other currency now passing among us, and that I shall in future receive such money, and am heartily sorry for my past refusal of it.

WILLIAM JARRET.

COLONEL MAXWELL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Trenton, January 31, 1776.

SIR: I am favoured with yours of the 25th instant; I would have answered it sooner, but some of the Committee of this town was absent when I received it, and it was necessary to stay for them.

I do assure you I am not at all absent from the regiment, and although I cannot make arms and other necessities for the men, I am endeavouring to make them soldiers, as quick as I can. The Congress seem to think I have mistaken their orders with respect to marching them by companies. I have the pleasure to assure them I understood it perfectly, but, until the 8th instant, we had no thoughts of going to the northward, and of course got clothing accordingly. We have many frocks made, but nothing like half enough for the regiment. They might be taken for a Southern regiment, and cloth given to us.
